Am I the product of this corporation which, after my completion in December, is to be sold to the public? Physically that is not possible as Article XIII, Section 1 of the Constitution of the United States forbids any form of slavery except as a punishment for a crime. I do not think that attending Maryville College is a crime. According to Theodore Newcomb, college does very little for a person (Psychology Today, September, 1974), therefore my personality and attitudes might have developed in the same manner if I never went to college. In other words, I have become what I have willed for me and it is up to me to sell myself, as a person.

There is another form of corporation which exists under a legal charter. That is the social unit as a corporation. Such a corporation is known as a town, city, community, etc. A social corporation is headed by a Board of Aldermen, a mayor, a local government which establishes the local ordinances, a judicial system, and constituents. The names may vary among the nu-

continued on page 4

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson — Editor-in-chief
Kathy Kirkhart — Assistant Editor
Bill Walker — Business Manager
Jeff Draper — Distribution
Raymond L. Stanley Jr. — Technical Editor
Dr. Robert B. Braid — Faculty Advisor
Tom Fox — Photographer
Gwen Guba — Lay-out Assistant

Echo Philosophy

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

A Dean's Eye View

I have just finished reading responses to alumni questionnaires distributed last year by the Committee on Career Planning and Placement. They were designed to find out what alumni think of their preparation for careers, what changes they would have made, and what assistance they might offer present students.

Many alumni wrote long, revealing comments that in general expressed their satisfaction with the liberal arts; though most mentioned other courses that would have been useful, including accounting.

One exuberant response came from a member of the Class of '55, who has worked since graduation as a teacher, a director of Christian education. and an editorial and public relations assistant. She attached five single-spaced pages about her experiences at Maryville, ending with a comment on her peers, many of whom, she said, "came in as basket-cases." And she speculated as to what might have happened had they gone to a large university; but instead, she continued, "they are functioning not just adequately, but very well in a very confusing society."

Where to assign the credit she was not sure: the liberal arts, the extracurricular activities, the dormitory, or the church-relationships. "It's probably," she added, "the whole gestalt. But people who would have been marginal, at the very best, are teaching at the college level, are holding managerial level jobs in private industry and in government, are establishing healthy homes and serving in creative ways in their communities--many with personal loads and tribulations which would break far purportedly-stronger and better-equipped people."

She described the experience of Maryville alumni in graduate school where, she said, they feared their preparation would be weak, but "we knew the landscape and what to do with it. Given six weeks to acclimate, we were fine." These Maryvillians found that they were more than competitive with students from larger, better known schools.

"While a student at Maryville," she concluded, "I was told that the College always has turned out people who aren't so much interested in setting the world on fire as in holding it together. My generation, from what I have seen, has followed that tradition. We aren't well known, and not many have even heard of the school--but those who have met an MC graduate are always delighted to encounter me (how I leave them, I don't know--but that's another problem!)"

I found this analysis not only refreshing, but particularly significant after having read a few weeks ago The Invisible Colleges, one of a series of Carnegie Commission reports, which supports two points made by this alumna. On the basis of comparative studies of small little known colleges with state universities on the one hand and elite, selective colleges on the other, one conclusion was that "the common belief that an elite or 'high-quality' institution provides a superior environment for learning is so far not supported by the evidence." Even the superior student, according to the report, develops just as well intellectually in a less selective school.

The findings of the Commission regarding the effect of the size of the institution on student develop-

continued on page 4

Pathways To Change

by Michael Johnston

Many students returned to MC this fall and confronted several major changes in the structure of their P. E. activity courses. Questions about these changes arose during several dorm meetings and in the Oct. 2 C. I. V. on Campus Governance. The questions concerning underlying rationales for uniform rental have been answered both by Coach Baird during C. I. V. and by the HPER dept. in last week's Echo. It becomes necessary this week to postpone further discussion of committee structures and deal with the question of grading HPER activity courses on an ABCDF scale.

At the May 8, 1974 meeting of the All-College Council a proposal from the Instructional Program Committee recommended "a change in the grading system used for core courses (in Health, Physical Education, and Recreation) from the present S/U to ABCDF, with grades to be recorded on the transcript but not to be averaged into the GPA". The ACC was unable to reach a consensus and so returned the proposal to the IPC requesting a more detailed rationale from the HPER dept.

On May 22, 1974 the IPC presented a breakdown of criteria for the proposed grading system provided by the HPER dept. and recommended that the ACC consider it during the fall of 1974.

Through an oversight the HPER dept. instituted the new grading system, which was explained to all students enrolled in activities courses for Fall term. This was brought to the attention of the ACC which, through the IPC reminded the HPER dept. that no rationale had been received and thus no approval had been granted. On Oct. 2, 1974 the ACC did grant approval for trial use of the system during fall term. Under the stipulations of this approval letter grades may be computated for each student and made available at individual request, but entered on transcripts only as S or U. Based on the experience of this trial period the HPER dept. will present to the ACC, through the IPC, a new proposal and accompanying rationales for discussion sometime prior to the opening of winter term.

(Note: Space limitations prohibit a detailed description of the specific proposals. This information is in the hands of A. C. C. members, I. P. C. members, and the HPER dept. Those interested in more details or wishing to express opinions on the proposed grading system should contact anyone in the above-mentioned groups.)

Randy-Mac Stuns Scots 23-0

The Maryville College Fighting Scots had their problems last Saturday afternoon on their way to a 23-0 whitewashing at the hands of Randolph-Macon in a Homecoming contest for the Yellow Jackets at Ashland, Virginia. The victory upped the Randy-Mac season record to 2-1-1, while the Scots now stand at 1-2. For Maryville, it was their second loss in a row.

As was the case a week before against Franklin, the Scots offense was unable to build a strong attack while the defense fell prey to a strong passing game and overall successful offense. This is reflected in the game statistics which show 276 yards total offense for the Yellow Jackets as compared to 107 for the Scots. Randolph Macon also racked up 101 yards passing to Maryville's 20. Mike Owens was the only offensive spark for the Scots as he gained 50 yards while carrying the football ten times. Punter Donny Moore again saw plenty of action as he punted ten times for 411 yards.

Injuries have become a factor this past week. Bob Shumski, who started the year at Defensive Tackle, tore knee cartlidge in the Franklin game that required surgery earlier this week. He will be out for the rest of the season. Head Coach Jim Jordon has called him "one of our most valuable men." Additionally, Tailback Keith Goodwin suffered a knee casualty during practice last Wednesday and is through for the season. Doctors have yet to determine whether he will need surgery.

Tomorrow, the Scots travel to Georgetown, Kentucky to face the Tigers of Georgetown College. Last season, the Scots beat Georgetown, 21-6, in a rain-soaked game at Maryville. However, the Tigers are a much improved squad this season. As of last week, they were ranked number eight in the NAIA poll. They are probably the best team the Scots must face this season.

Homecoming Dance Announced

The Over Night Low

Only eight days 'til Homecoming– and there will be a dance!!

This year's event features The Over Night Low, a show band from Dayton, Ohio, and Chess recording artists. Not only does every member sing, but their instrumentation consists of guitars, moog synthesizer, drums, percussion instruments (vibes, kalimba, congas, misc.) and 10 horns (saxes, trumpets, trombone, flute, flugel horn)! Hear them do songs made famous by 'War,' 'Mandril,' 'Earth, Wind, and Fire,' 'Chicago,' 'Tower of Power,' 'Bread,' 'Buddy Miles,' 'Stevie Wonder,' and others. They also add versatility by doing some of their own works, both written and sung by The Over Night Low. In addition to all the musical ability exemplified by The Over Night Low, two professionally trained technicians operate a very elaborate lighting system and powerful Altec-Lansing sound system.

The Over Night Low has been rated No. 1 in college bookings in the National Entertainment Conference Showcase (Ohio, Michigan, and Pennsylvania unit), and has also been billed with top entertainers throughout the country. They are scheduled to release an album in November.

Tickets to the show and dance will be only $1.75 single, and $3.50 couple. The affair, which will be formal and semi-formal, will be held in Pearsons Hall, beginning around 10:30 p.m.

Letters continued

merous social corporations, but the structure basically remains the same. I doubt that anyone would say that Maryville College does not have such an organization. Often it is described as a "campus community." The main difference between this community and other communities exists in the office of our "mayor". As our mayoral equivalent is constant, our form of government could be labled a parlimentary-monarchy. However, if that constant power becomes misemployed, our government could become a dictatorial democracy.

Which am I? A member of a social corporation which should believe in democratic principles as an integral part of a community, or am I the manufactured product of a business corporation?

by Barbara Goedeke

Eye View continued

ment bear out what most of us have long recognized and what the alumna of the Class of '55 was emphasizing. The environment of a small college is cohesive and the student feels that he is an individual. Consequently he is more likely to realize his potential. The study showed, among other things, that the student who goes to a small college is more likely to go on to advanced degrees.

We still have a long way to go in ascertaining the ingredients of an ideal learning environment. It is comforting to know, however, that not all the odds are against us. In fact, it looks as if the important odds are in our favor.

by Carolyn Blair

Will A Good College Education Get You A Good Job

New York, . . . Too late, the majority of college graduates are discovering that it no longer pays for them to go to college. Most of them "aren't likely to get into graduate schools or find jobs," says investigative reporter Roger Rapoport, who reports that 24% of all American freshmen want to be doctors, lawyers or teachers because, "against all evidence," they believe these professions are "secure."

The cold facts of life after college are frightening. According to the Esquire study, 41,000 applicants are competing for 14,400 medical openings; 86,000 applicants are competing for 38,500 law-school openings (one top-rated law school had 3,800 applications for 290 places), "and equivalent proportions of applicants to many other graduate program places."

Presently, college graduates are glutting the job market. The American Bar Association reports that there were only "16,000 jobs for the 29,000 lawyers admitted to the bar last year." Teachers are even worse off. "Last year," reports Esquire, "there were 117,000 positions available to the 231,000 certified elementary and secondary-school teachers looking for work." One advertisement for an assistant English professor's job at Missouri Southern University drew 253 applications form candidates at 101 different schools. Apparently the worst is yet to come.

Government studies predict that for approximately 9.8 million college graduates entering the labor force during the 70's "only 6.6 million jobs requiring more than high school educations will be available to them." And according to The National Education Association, by 1980 only one out of every five Ph. D.s graduating annually can expect to find university jobs.

Because of the scarcity of jobs in their chosen fields, many qualified college graduates are forced to take any available jobs. For example, a number of Ph. D.s recently graduated from Berkeley are now "driving cabs, working in ski shops and even scrubbing floors," says Esquire. It seems that for most college graduates, a diploma is a ticket to nowhere.

Freedom Night

Remember...

Last year's Freedom Night? We're having another one!! Come to a Hymn-Sing/Folk Festival on Sunday, October 20th at 7:00 p.m. in the chapel. For suggestions or contributions, contact Colleen O'Shaughnessy at Box 2608 or Dr. Cropp at the Chaplain's Office. See ya'll there!

The Defense Rests It's (Objective or Subjective?)Case

"Murder! Murder!"

This urgent cry vibrated through the hollowed hallways, shattering the scholastic atmosphere of the English department late that afternoon. The squeaking and scraping of chairs being pushed suddenly back preceded the stampede of English professors who were rushing to the spot where the cry had come from.

Arriving at the scene, which usually by this time was a deserted classroom, the anxious group found an English department assistant confronting a defiant student. At their feet lay two books. The distraught assistant pointed a shaking finger at the student and cried excitedly, "He's the guilty one. Do something! He's murdering the King's English!"

A collective gasp was heard from the group, followed by looks of disbelief. "How can this be?" demanded the department head, a distinguished doctor who was visibly shaken by the accusation.

"This man, this heretic, has abandoned the English language to the confines of Webster's Intercollegiate Dictionary and the Harbrace Handbook. He refuses to abide by their rules, even though proper spelling and grammar can be found within their covers. He insists that he -and I quote- 'is doing his own thing.' and therefore has no need of these books. I've been trying to correct the errors in he's research paper, but just couldn't make myself finish. It's full of slander, just murderous slander...," and he chunked the alleged paper on the desk as evidence.

"Let the student speak for himself!" commanded the head professor, and all attention focused on the accused.

The student, a Joe-college-type anti-intellectual, normally found anywhere except English classes, glared at the group, then lowered his eyes, mumbling,

"What's the hassle, man? My scene is my business. I don't have no need of them books so lay offa me. Before I complain to the Dean." After uttering this warning, he stood insolently with hands shoved in hip pockets, smirkingly surveying the chaos that erupted.

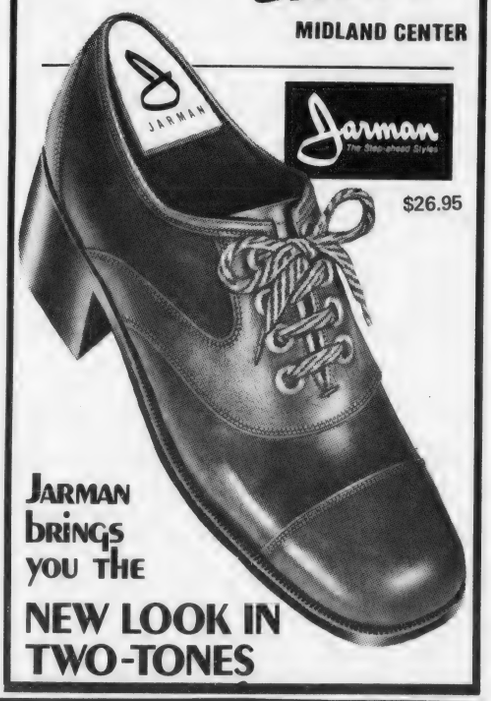
The distinguished doctor had succumbed to the shock and the assistant hovered anxiously over him, frantically fanning him with the handiest object he could find, which happened to be a copy of the "Manual for Outlining and Research." When the doctor had been revived and some semblance of calm restored, a stony-faced professor leaned over and reverently picked up the two neglected books.

"Young man," she said, while struggling to keep her voice under control," young man, you have perpetrated an unforgivable crime. You're going to be slapped with a 2, 3, 18, K, 22a, and 23 so fast your head will spin!"

And with that, she threw the book at him.

by Susan Leibundguth

WIN $100 IN OUR ANTIBODY BEAUTIFUL CONTEST



- ☐ Drawings once every month
- ☐ Join Plasma Program and ask for complete details
- ☐ $10 per donation win or lose

blood alliance

520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone 637-3171

Southern shoes

MIDLAND CENTER

$26.95

JARMAN BRINGS YOU THE NEW LOOK IN TWO-TONES

bank of maryville

Your Bank In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 6 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | October 25, 1974

News Briefs

Former President Richard M. Nixon filed a suit in federal court Thursday to retain custody of millions of documents from his administration.

Eighteen major West European airports are highly vulnerable to Arab guerrilla attack because of lax security or proximity to terrorist activity, according to a secret government survey.

President Ford vetoed Thursday for the second time a measure to cut off military aid to Turkey, and the House upheld the veto.

New rules have been drafted by the government to reduce the volume of defaults in federally insured college-student loans, which have cost taxpayers almost $252 million.

A Senate staff study says the Soviet Union is continuing a massive arms buildup and an intensive disarmament propaganda campaign aimed at weakening the U. S.

Home buyers should find mortgage money easier to locate as a result of an emergency housing credit bill passed by Congress.

President Ford has vetoed a bill giving the public wider access to government documents.

The trial of eight former Ohio National Guardsmen in connection with the 1970 fatal shooting of four Kent State University students has begun.

Officials of the nation's top defense contractors poured $2,875,723 into the warchests of political candidates in the 1972 presidential election year. They favored Republicans 8 to 1 over Democrats.

The U. S. can cut its enormous energy appetite from the current 4.5% annual growth rate to about 2% by 1985 by a more efficient use of energy.

Parade at 10:30

Pep Rally!

place: inside the gym time: 10:00 p.m. Friday night purpose: Homecoming '74 type: not the average Rah-Rah program: the band and twirlers
1974 Homecoming Court
added "surprises"
special bonus: we are in the process of providing door prizes.

Ya'll come!

Game at 7:30

Wyman To Present Concert

Dr. Laurence Wyman, saxophonist, will be presented in the second Maryville College Performing Artist Concert of the season Friday, October 25, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Dr. Wyman is a member of the music faculty at State University College, Fredonia, New York. An alumnus of Maryville College, he received the M. A. and Ph. D. degrees in music theory from the Eastman School of Music. He first studied saxophone at the age of twelve under Orville Kiltz. Later his teachers included Sigurd Rascher and William Willett.

Prior to joining the State University College faculty, Dr. Wyman taught at Community School, Teheran, Iran, and at Maryville College.

Active as a performer, clinician, researcher and composer, Dr. Wyman has given recitals, clinics, and performed with bands and orchestras in the eastern United States as well as countries in the Middle East, South America, and Southeast Asia.

The Fredonia Saxophone Ensemble, under his direction, has been an active performing and touring group. Their recording, "The Fredonia Saxophone Ensemble," is available from Mark Educational Recordings.

Dr. Wyman has done extensive work in the application of laser optics to mixed-media art forms. His composition, "Saxophone Abstractions for Laser Beam and Prepared Audience," was the first work to make use of a four-color Krypton laser in a live musical performance.

He will play selections from Benson, Macha, Wirth, Heiden, Komorous, Berg, and Husa. Phyllis East, also a member of the music faculty at State University College, will accompany him on piano. Ms. East has degrees from the Oberlin Conservatory and the State University of New York. She has been a student of Claudette Sorel and Theodore Lettvin.

General admission is $2; students $1. Maryville College students and faculty will be admitted by i. d. card.

Homecoming Dance

After you've watched the mighty Scots beat Bridgewater, c'mon over to Pearsons Hall and celebrate—both the victory and Homecoming—with the Over Night Low, who will be the featured artists of the Homecoming Show and Dance. Not only will there be good entertainment, but refreshments will also be served—finger sandwiches, chips 'n' dip, assorted cookies, and soft drinks on tap.

So, if you don't have your ticket yet, be sure to pick it up soon. Everything gets underway around 10:30 p.m. It's not a bad deal for $1.75!!

Roister Doister Postponed

"Ralph Roister Doister," originally scheduled for performance Oct. 24-26 at Maryville College has been postponed until Oct. 31-Nov. 2. Performance times will be Thursday, 8:15 p.m.; Friday, 6:00 p.m.; and Saturday, 8:15 p.m. All performances are free and will be in Wilson Chapel.

Homecoming Court

Maryann O'Neil

Maureen Meade

Christine D'Aquila

Jane Duffy

Marianne Harrison

from the editor's desk

New Parking Lot!

Park Service at the Great Smoky Mountain National Park has recommended to the park superintendent that a parking lot be made at the "Y" location near Cade's Cove. The parking lot would destroy what is now a beautiful grassy area. We feel there is no real need or demand for this parking lot. The problems this parking lot would create far surpass the benefits of this added parking space.

The entrance near the proposed lot is already one of the most popular, and additional parking space would only increase this traffic and lead to congestion at the intersection.

A parking lot at the "Y" location would also encourage public bathing in the park. Since there are not any life guards at the location, more serious swimming problems are bound to develop. Furthermore, new rest rooms would have to be provided to accommodate the increase in the number of swimmers and others using the parking facilities. Currently, there are no rest rooms.

Finally, the parking lot would demand more patrolling by the already overburdened park ranger.

We believe that the consequences of this proposed parking facility have not been weighed fully. Therefore, it should not be built without further study. Since many members of this community utilize and enjoy the Park's facilities, we should let the proper authorities know how we feel concerning this matter. Write immediately to Superintendent Ellis at the headquarters of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park in Gatlinburg.

"Our World In Minature"

Thelma Bianco

I would like to share with others the following lines by Henry Smith Leiper, entitled "Our World In Minature," for three rather specific reasons: (1) To encourage us to give thanks to God for what he has given us, (2) To move us to share out of the super-abundance of what we have in relation to others, and (3) To help us understand some of the basis for hostility which is increasingly manifested against the United States from throughout the world.

"If in imagination we compress the present population of the world, now over two and a half billion, into a group of a thousand persons living in a single town, the following is the picture of contrasts we would then vividly see.

"Sixty persons would represent the U. S. population; all others would be represented by 940 persons. The 60 Americans would have half the total income of the entire town the 940 share the other half.

"Thirty-six of the Americans in the town would be Christian Church members; and 24 would not. In the town as a whole, about 300 would be Christians and 700 would not. At least 80 persons in the whole town would be believing Communists and 370 would be under Communist domination. Possibly 70 in the whole town would be Protestant Christians.

"Three hundred and three persons in the whole town would be white; 697 would be non-white. The 60 Americans would have an average life expectancy of 70 years; all other would average under 40.

"The Americans would have 15½ times as much per person as the rest on an average. They would produce 16 per cent of the town's total food supply, eat up 14½ per cent of that total supply and keep most of the remaining 1½ per cent for their future use in expensive storage equipment. When it is remembered that most of the 940 non-Americans in the town would always be hungry and never know quite when they would get enough to eat, the situation created by this disparity in food supply and the existence of vast reserves becomes fairly apparent, particularly in view of the fact that the Americans already eat 72 per cent above the optimum food requirements. They could actually save money by giving away excess food because of the cost of storing it: but they think that would be a dangerous 'give-away program of soft-headed do goodders'

"The 60 Americans would have, of the town's total supply; 12 times as much coal; 21 times as much petroleum, 50 times as much steel and 50 times as much in general equipment.

"The lowest income groups among the 60 Americans would be better off than the average in much of the rest of town.

"Literally most of the non-American people in the town would be poor, hungry, sick and ignorant. Almost half would not be able to read or write.

"More than half would never have heard of Christ or what he stood for. But very soon more than half would be hearing about Karl Marx.

"In view of these facts it is interesting to think that the average Christian American family would be spending $850.00 a year for defense in force, and less than $3.50 to share with the rest of the people in the town the knowledge of why there is any Christmas."

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson
Editor-in-chief

Kathy Kirkhart
Assistant Editor

Bill Walker
Business Manager

Jeff Draper
Distribution

Raymond L. Stanley Jr.
Technical Editor

Dr. Robert B. Braid
Faculty Advisor

Tom Fox
Photographer

Gwen Guba
Lay-out Assistant

Echo Philosophy

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Letters to the Editor

In Defense of Football

To the editor:

I read last week's article entitled "Football, Football, Football..." and the only thing I received from it was a good laugh. The author made few valid statements and her article, at times, was one of infinite circles.

The first subject brought up concerned the dining hall and ID cards. Anyone can eat as much as he/she desires and many students, other than football players, walk away from the lines with more than one main dish. As for the ID cards, numerous students are admitted to the dining hall without proper identification.

The next subject introduced dealt with football expenses. This was the only statement which made any sense and it posed the question; "Can Maryville afford college football and still produce a championship contender." Conceded, football is an expensive sports program for a small school but in reality a well-organized football program, like ours, can do a great deal toward building a top flight ball club with the limited amount of money it is allocated. The only other element required is time, after all, Rome wasn't built in a day and the football program here will, in all probability, not jell till next season.

Another subject brought up by the author concerned the soccer team. It is not subisidized by the school and this is not the fault of the football team or its budget. It would be great if soccer was financed through school funds. This would increase its popularity and aid school officials in recruiting since extracurricular activities play a major role in luring students to Maryville and I for one would not be here if it was not for intercollegiate football.

One subject of the young lady's article dealt with academics. There she stated that "academic standards here have fallen" and then she paradoxically says that library hours and study halls seem "absurd for mature college students." Now, if the academic rating of this school has fallen, then how is studying going to bring the rating down further? Another point is that this study period is mandatory for all freshman regardless of academic standing. It was established to aid the frosh in their transition from high school to college and to help Maryville College keep her lofty academic rating.

It is my opinion that the author of whom I am speaking should herself attend these study halls so that she might become a mature college student and possibly learn how to write a sensible and coherent article.

Sincerely,
Keith Goodwin

An Open Letter to the Student Body:

There will be a Pep Rally this Friday night at 10:00 p.m. in the gym. This will not be an average run-of-the-mill "Rah-Rah" pep rally. We want this week to be something that everyone will enjoy and walk away from feeling as though they had a good time, along with helping to spark up the teams excitement.

Our team needs the support of the entire student body. Have you ever played in a varsity sport or any team game for that matter? If you have, remember how much the crowd meant to you, not only by just being there but also by yelling and showing a little enthusiasm. When a team knows that they are supported and can hear it at the game, they try and play for their fans as well as for themselves. Granted, the crowd cannot follow all of the chants the cheerleaders throw at them, but try and shout a few. The sounds more than the words does wonders.

There are quite a few men on that team working hard together for a purpose. They are trying to better their athletic skills and knowledge, learn to work as a team, and make a name for Maryville in sports. This holds true for any sport that MC has. Each sport and individual needs the student support. Start attending all the athletic activities MC offers throughout the year. All the people involved in these activities whether it be football, soccer, wrestling or girls basketball, need to know that they are using their time and energy for someone other than just the team and coaches. This week's football game is a good place to start. Do something nice for your fellow students. Come to the Pep Rally and the game. Make this Homecoming something you will remember!

The 1974 Football Cheerleaders

Choir Off To Great Start

As the 1974-75 academic year gets underway at MC, the 1974-75 Maryville College Concert Choir is also off to a running start.

The MC Concert Choir made its first appearance at Vespers on October 6, 1974 in Wilson Chapel in a World Wide Communion Service. This was the first time that the new choir robes were worn and dedicated. The new choir robes were a gift by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bunge, whose son Allen, a former member of choir, was in the 1973 graduating class.

With informal and formal candlelight initiation taking place a few short weeks ago, it is interesting to note the different factions that compose the choir. New members of the MC Concert Choir total 26 out of 66, and include both the President and Secretary of the Freshman class. There are 22 states represented along with 2 foreign countries. Some of the larger groupings include 17 Tennessians, 7 New Yorkers, 6 Floridians, 5 New Jersians, 1 from the Virgin Islands, and 1 from Dordrecht, Netherlands.

Special plans for the MC Concert Choir in the near future include the special presentation of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," written by Weber and Rice, well known for J. C. Superstar This will be presented as a CIV on November 6, 1974 and will be one CIV you will not want to miss! On December 14, 1974, a special presentation for advent vespers will be performed.

During Spring Break, the MC Concert Choir will be on tour of the Northeastern Atlantic seaboard, including stops in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and New York.

MC Debates The Issues

Campaign Platform 1974; MC Debates the Issues, will be Wednesday morning's CIV on October 30, 1974. Basic issues of major concern will be presented as our own MC students take on such topics as busing, amnesty, campaign reform and inflation. Two students will be discussing the pros and cons of each issue. However, CIV will not be entirely left up to the student debators presenting the program. Following the debate session, the floor will be open to audience participation. This method has proved successful in the past, and it is hoped that MC will once again see an envigorating debate and discussion between those presenting the program and the audience. Following the program a ballot will be handed out to the audience in order to see just where students at MC stand.

Don't miss this CIV! It will be one where you will be able to voice your opinion! That's Wednesday,

A Dean's Eye View

In recent faculty workshop discussions of curriculum projections, we have talked about ways of educating more effectively for international, intercultural understanding. We would like to see within the next few years progress toward a more varied representation of races and nationalities. We are also concerned with providing a stronger intercultural emphasis in the curriculum.

Some positive steps have already been taken in that direction. During the past summer Dr. Parker and Dr. Walker spent six weeks in West Africa participating in the Ethnic Heritage Summer Seminar Program. One or two other faculty members will have a similar opportunity during the summer of 1975, and we have the prospect of having on campus next year African scholars under the sponsorship of the Foreign Curriculum Consultant Program. These people will be active in the organization of an interdisciplinary African Studies course.

A more immediate projection is a pilot course in African Studies to be offered during the winter term. Dr. Donald Wyatt, who was introduced in a feature article in the Echo earlier this fall, will teach the course. Dr. Wyatt has had twelve years of experience in Africa in addition to varied educational and professional experiences in this country. We could not have found a better qualified person.

The African Studies course will be listed as Non-Western Studies 30 lb (to distinguish it from the China oriented course). It can be used to fulfill the Non-Western core requirement, or for those who have had the China course, it may serve as an elective. We hope by next year to be able to offer on a rotating basis courses in China, Africa, and India, encouraging those with an interest in intercultural relations to take all three.

Since the African Studies was not planned in time to be included in the schedule of courses for the year, it would be helpful if all those interested in taking it during the winter term would indicate that interest by leaving their names and winter term schedules with the Registrar. Dr. Wyatt has agreed to schedule the class at the time most convenient for the greatest number. Since he would like to limit the class to twenty-five, it may be necessary to fill it on a first-come, first-served basis. Those handling the scheduling would appreciate a prompt response.

Scots Lose Close One 28-21

Maryville College suffered its third consecutive defeat last weekend as Georgetown handed the Scots a 28-21 loss in a game played at Georgetown, Kentucky. The Scots now stand with a season record of 1-3, while the Tigers are 5-2. Although Maryville went into the contest as a decided underdog, the Scots struck early on the scoring. The first touchdown came on the third play of the game when Troy Bowman recovered a fumble in the end zone. Scott Brandenburg's extra point was good as the Scots lead 7-0. Georgetown managed to tie it late in the first period when Rudy McIntyre scored the first of his two touchdowns on a one yard plunge. Bill Hatchell's conversion was good to make it 7-7. With 8:07 remaining in the first half, McIntyre scored his second touchdown. This again was a one yard run. Hatchells kick made it 14-7. Wayne Jackson scored on a five yard run for Georgetown with 1:38 left in the half. Hatchell's conversion gave the Tigers a 21-7 lead which they took into the locker room at halftime. Maryville kicked off to Georgetown to start the second half. On their first play from scrimmage, a Tiger fumbled the ball. Maryville linebacker Steve Howard picked it up and galloped 52 yards for a touchdown, however Brandenburg's conversion kick was wide as the Scots now trailed 21-13. Georgetown's John Hillman scored for what proved to be the winning touchdown when he took the football three yards in for the score with 5:38 left in the third period. Hatchell's extra point was good as the Tigers now lead 28-13. Maryville's final touchdown came on a wild play that fooled everybody at the game. Bobby Fitzgerald completed a pass to Jim Lester with five defensemen converging on him. Somehow, Lester got through the deluge and raced 65 yards for a touchdown. Very few people sitting in the stands could believe what they saw. The Georgetown coach was still wondering about it later. Following the touchdown, Fitzgerald connected with Mike Owens for a two-point conversion to close out the scoring. Maryville did have possession of the ball twice after the touchdown, but was unable to score. Time ran out before the Scots got the ball again. Punter Don Moore continued to sparkle for the offense as he racked up six punts for a 45 yard average. Moore is ranked first nationally in the NCAA Division III statistics with 28 kicks for a total of 1,222 yards and a 43.8 average. Statistically in the Georgetown ballgame, the Tigers gained 304 yards total offense to 154. Maryville gained only 74 yards rushing as compared to Georgetown's 244. Maryville's passers completed four of 10 passes for 83 yards, while Georgetown completed six of 11 for 60 yards.

Bloy To Perform Art of Fugue

The final work of J. S. Bach, "The Art of Fugue," will be performed by Dr. James Bloy, organist, at Maryville College Friday, November 1, at 8:15 p.m.

The "Art of Fugue" is considered one of the supreme masterpieces of musical composition. It consists of eighteen gugues and canons ingeniously based upon various versions of a single musical theme. The final triple fugue was left unfinished at the composer's death in 1750.

In the two centuries since its composition, "The Art of Fugue" has served as a continuous source of inspiration and instruction for generations of composers. But as a composition for performance it is rarely heard. At Maryville College it will be performed as music to be heard, rather than just studied in score.

Dr. Bloy, professor of music at the college, has been heard in numerous recitals in the Knoxville area. He was an organ student of Catherine Crozier, Robert Baker, and Helmut Walcha.

The recital will be in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center. There is no admission charge.

JWL

A journey thru fences, images clear of three.
Life within and life without.
Shades of green & touches of orange.
Trees full with the beauty of life.

Inside and between, pairs number three.
Caged from the world
it's man against man,
aware of life but not of me.
Backs bared and tired muscles glisten with presperation.

They try and miss and try again.
It's a game for two,
but like life you only play against yourself.
Tennis anyone?

T. Noack

Former Student Killed

Don Scott, former student-athlete was killed last week in an automobile accident in Virginia. An out-of-control car crossed a median and hit Don's car headon. Cash contributions can be made at the Dean of Students Office, at the receptionist's desk in the Administrative suite of offices, and at the office in the Physical Education building, through October 30. The collected funds will be sent in check form to Don's wife, Mary and the children.

Vespers

Vespers this Sunday will be a slide presentation by Dr. Larry Driskill entitled "Japan - The Country, The People, The Church" in the chapel at 7:00 p.m.

Where Have All Th The Streakers Gone?

Those people who were here last year remember very well that Maryville College, at one point, came to have some of its worst days. The campus was over-ridden with monotony and the atmosphere was heavy with dullness. The students were desperately looking for something new and something exciting. There was very little hope since they had tried everything - everything from a kind of malt liquor that is known to provoke a hostile bull to a wild ceremony known as 'Panty Raids.' But nothing seemed to work. Then all of a sudden there was a good news for everyone. It came all the way from Gainesville, Florida. The news was about a new kind of activity, wilder than all those known before and in it everybody could participate. People could 'be themselves.' It wasn't too long before MC students streaked across campus. So much so that for the first time in the history of Maryville College, there was a CIV that should have been rated X. Soon afterwards, there was no more dullness, no more monotony, no more boredom. Every face was a smiling face.

I have a rather imbecilic companion named Simpleton. I always keep him around, because that way I feel smart. I had him with me during the days when streaking was common. I remember when Simpleton first saw people running out of a dorm with no clothes on. He thought the building had caught fire and the people did not have chance to put their clothes on before they ran for safety. I explained to him that it was a new activity called Streaking. Simpleton has a habit of asking dumb questions. He said, "But why do they have to run around naked?" I said, "You should be ashamed of yourself, calling them naked. Don't you see they have their Birthday suits on?" He said, "Yeah, but I still don't understand." I said, "Alright, look at it this way - they are trying to be themselves without fearing what others might think." Simpleton was still not satisfied. He said, "But they have masks on. How do I know who's who? And besides, why are they running?" "That is very elementary, my dear Simpleton," I said," and you should know that this is a busy society and they are busy people. Whatever they do, they do it fast." Simpleton then said, "Why is it that only college students streak and nobody else." I said, "You have to be smart to know a thing like that, like I am. You see, college education stop you from being yourself. It empties your wallet, makes you read books you don't want to read and things like that. And when you have finished college, the chances of getting a job are so slim that you cannot be sure whether or not you will be able to buy clothes. So by streaking, not only can you be yourself, it also helps you get used to living without clothes. If you are still not satisfied, I can give you another rationale for streaking. You know that being human we are all nostalgic about the past. So by streaking we just try to re-create our past. Remember when we used to be cavemen and cavewomen? Did we worry about clothes at that time? We all used to be ourselves then. It's time that we return to that more simpler and natural time." After giving him this explicit intellectual speech, I congratulated myself. I looked at Simpleton, he was scratching his head, puzzled as ever, still looking like a question mark.

The days of streaking seem to have become the bygone days. It is said that good things don't hang around for too long. That definitely goes for streaking. The campus atmosphere is tense again. People are once again looking for excitement and action. Streaking just might do the thing. It will clear the air and make everybody happy - the football team, the critics of the football team, the ACC, the optimists, the pessimists - everybody.

by Shahbaz Ahmed

If you're not sure what's out there, how can you know where you're going or how to get there?

The Christian Science Monitor can help.

It keeps you squarely in the center of the bold and exciting, the important trends of thought. It gives a firsthand, close-in view of the world's struggles and achievements. You see where you fit in — things you can do.

The Monitor doesn't do your thinking for you. In a quick readable style it gives you the facts to form your own decisions.

News, commentary, the arts, politics, science, fashion, sports, business: the Monitor is an exciting daily newspaper (Monday – Friday). Less than 10¢ a copy on your special rate.

Yes, I'll invest $8.25 in my future, for 4 months of The Christian Science Monitor.
Payment enclosed Bill me later

Name (Please print)
Street Apt.
City
State ZIP

The Christian Science Monitor
Box 125, Astor Station
Boston, Massachusetts 02123

GIVE BLOOD FOR SIS BOOM BAH.

$10 per donation to celebrate homecoming.
Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks.
Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

blood alliance

520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone: 637-3171

AMHH
BICYCLE SHOP INC.

CEASAR BRAND Bicycle Tire SALE

Buy the first tire or tube and get the 2nd one for ½ PRICE!

1519 E. Broadway 983-7921

The Cheese Shoppe

ANNOUNCES

Homecoming Specials

SANDWICHES

	REGULAR	SPECIAL
HOAGIE	1.50	.99
REUBEN	1.50	.99
ROAST BEEF	1.30	1.10
PEPPERED BEEF	1.20	.95
CORN BEEF	1.20	.95
PASTRAMI	1.20	.95
HAM	1.20	.95
TURKEY	1.20	.95
BALOGNA	.85	.65
SALAMI	1.05	.85
KOSHER DOG	.55	.40

PARTY NEEDS

Cheeses of all varieties, Mixers

Cheese Balls	2.98	1.98
Tuc Crackers	.79	.59

THE CHEESE SHOPPE
MIDLAND CENTER, ALCOA
PH. 984-6511

HOURS

MON - SAT. 9 AM - 9PM
SUN. 12 - 6 PM

eat in or carry out service

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 7 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | November 1, 1974

Homecoming 1974

To the Student Body:

Just felt like jotting down a short note of thanks to the student body, not to mention the faculty, staff, and administration for showing such enthusiasm this past weekend. This past Homecoming Weekend just shows what we can do when we're all working together. When you sit down and think about it, we're not such a bad lot here at Maryville!

"The Scottie Dog"

Professors Solo In Messiah

Two Maryville College professors will step out of their usual roles to sing solo parts in the 43rd annual Maryville College-community performance of Handel's "Messiah." They are Dr. Charlotte Beck and Dr. Dan Kinsinger.

Dr. Beck is assistant professor of English. Although her two advanced degrees are in English, she received the Bachelor of Music degree from U-T Knoxville where she majored in voice. Dr. Harry H. Harter, director, said, "Her rich alto voice will add to the beauty of the performance."

Dr. Kinsinger, assistant professor of music, has served as a member of the chorus and frequently as tenor soloist for the past 21 years. His unique, extreme range has made it possible for him to be selected to sing baritone arioso and air "For Behold Darkness Shall Cover the Earth" and "The People that Walked in Darkness."

The fifteen other soloists include students and members of the local community.

The performance will be Sunday, November 17 at 3:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

Bloy To Perform Art of Fugue

Dr. James Bloy, professor of music, will perform the rarely heard "The Art of Fugue" tonight, November 1 at 8:15 p.m. in the college Music Hall.

The final work of J. S. Bach, "The Art of Fugue" is considered one of the supreme masterpieces of musical composition. Dr. Bloy is one of the few organists in the country who performs it as music to be heard, rather than just studied in score.

Dr. Bloy, who is also organist at the Church of the Ascension in Knoxville, has been heard in numerous recitals in the area.

The Queen
Christine D'Aquila

The Copelands

Homecoming

MC Board Elects New Chairman

Dr. Dan McGill, native Blount Countian and national expert on pension plans, was elected chairman of the Maryville College Board of Directors in its October 24-25 meeting. Dr. McGill replaces outgoing chairman Dr. James N. Proffitt of Maryville.

Dr. McGill is Ecker Professor of Life Insurance at Wharton School of Business, University of Pennsylvania. He also is chairman of the school's insurance department and chairman of Wharton's Pension Research Council, a program he helped form.

Dr. McGill, a Maryville alumnus, received the M. A. from Vanderbilt and the Ph. D. from the University of Pennsylvania. He has served on the Maryville board since 1971.

Jack D. McSpadden of Birmingham, Ala., recently retired executive vice-president of the Liberty National Life Insurance Co., was elected vice chairman of the board.

Mr. McSpadden, active in business, church, and civic affairs, has served as member and chairman of numerous committees of life insurance associations and of community groups.

Mr. McSpadden is a graduate of the University of Alabama. He has served on the Maryville board since 1966.

The board approved a covenant relationship between the college and the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church U. S. A. and between the college and the Synod of the South whereby the church and college have mutually agreed to certain objectives of service to each other. The church was asked to recognize the college's official statement of purpose and objectives.

During its meeting, the board drew up a resolution of appreciation for Agnes Henry, who died earlier this week, for her 48 years of service to the college. Mrs. Henry retired last year as assistant in the college dining room.

Choir Presents CIV

"Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" will be presented by the Maryville College Concert Choir on Wednesday November 6, 1974 as a CIV program. The music to "Joseph" was composed by Andrew Lloyd Weber and the words were written by Tim Rice. Weber and Rice are also responsible for J. C. Superstar.

"Joseph" is the biblical story of Joseph and his family "way, way back many centuries ago." Not strictly a straight vocal production, the audience will enjoy a lively dramatic variety as the choir engages in non-conventional unity.

Soloists include Randy Hunter as Joseph; Frederick Frost as Pharaoh, along with Daniel Bergner, Belinda Chiddie and Marikay Sanders as the narrators. Non-singing roles will be played by the following: Jacob, Robert Sturge; two of Joseph's brothers, George Lundy and Stan McCleave; Brother Benjamin, Ralph Thomas Brackbill; Ishmaelites, Charles Closz, Michael Jacobus, Peter Vial, and Howard Welsh. Peggy Leatherwood will be the pianist for the performance.

For a change of pace, excitement, variety and just pure fun, come to CIV, Wednesday, November 6, 1974 and see what amazing colors Joseph's technicolor coat really are!

"Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat"

MINORS MAKE MAJOR ROBBERY

(CPS/CUP)—Bank officials in Fabens, Texas are still pretty embarrassed over a recent robbery.

They say that four young boys, aged 10, 13, 15 and 16, wandered into the local bank and started asking the officials all about banking—things like what's in the vault, where's the money kept, and what's behind the teller's cages.

Officials say they sounded as if they just wanted to become bankers when they grew up, but after a while they became a nuisance and were asked to leave. The boys returned, however, and poked around the bank for a few minutes before leaving again—this time with $6000.

So far, three of them have been apprehended but the 10-year-old is still at large—studying banking, no doubt.

from the editor's desk

Library Or Student Center

The library has become the center of campus social life at MC. No longer can you enter the library with intentions of studying in a very quiet atmosphere. A quieter atmosphere can be found in the student center—even with the music-box playing. Also, your chances of finding a seat are very, very slim. A near capacity crowd each night has almost made it necessary to make reservations in advance to guarantee a seat. Any outsider who visits MC might very easily upon entering the library mistake it for the student center.

There are several reasons for this deplorable situation in our library. There is little doubt that the required study hall for freshmen has contributed greatly to this new atmosphere. Guys who are required to study at night in Thaw Hall have found a way to beat the system. Instead of going this time without their friends, they simply have them to come over to the library to see them. As a result, many students are coming to the library to socialize rather than study.

Another reason for the tremendous amount of socializing that is taking place in the library is that since some students are forced to be there, they often find themselves there with nothing really to do. In other words, their assignment does not require research and they are just there because they have no other choice. Thus, they talk, socialize and enjoy themselves.

Finally, the main reason for the "zoo-type" atmosphere in the library is due to the lack of respect on the part of some, of others' right to study in an environment that is conducive to studying.

If so many students continue to make the library the "student center," maybe we should make some very large signs reading:" This Is Lamar Memorial Library" and "This Is The Student Center," and place in front of the respective buildings.

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson
Editor-in-chief

Kathy Kirkhart
Assistant Editor

Bill Walker
Business Manager

Jeff Draper
Distribution

Raymond L. Stanley Jr.
Technical Editor

Dr. Robert B. Braid
Faculty Advisor

Tom Fox
Photographer

Gwen Guba
Lay-out Assistant

Pathways To Change

By Michael Johnston

One of the most widespread questions on the Maryville campus this year is what relationship exists between recruiting priorities and athletics? A report presented to the All-College Council by Dr. George Kramer may help answer this question.

At the Oct. 16 meeting of the council Dr. Kramer outlined present recruitment policies. In brief, they are:

1) Establishing contacts with interested students who meet MC's standards for admission is the top priority. These contacts are made in secondary schools and through church youth organizations.
2) Encouraging faculty participation by
   a) Urging departments to correspond with prospective students who have indicated interest in a specific discipline, and
   b) Allowing prospective students to meet with faculty members during campus visits.
3) Using campus facilities for events attended by prospective students, such as
   a) Band clinics, athletic tournaments, and
   b) Special "days" (i. e. History Day, Science Day) emphasizing specific aspects of the college's academic life.
4) Emphasizing career opportunities in all major fields.

Some problems exist which tend to exaggerate the influence of Athletics on recruiting practice. Foremost these problems is the difficulty faculty members have getting freed of on-campus responsibilities to make recruiting trips. Another is a general "hands off" policy about entering students' decisions regarding majors. Very little pressure is exerted on prospective students to choose a specific major. Thus, departments without strong extracurricular programs do not have "drawing cards" comparable to the HPER department may present to any student, regardless of plans for major. A final problem facing faculty is the lack of an "underground" in academic areas equivalent to that in athletics. (Did you ever hear of a high school English teacher calling a college professor about a potential Phi Beta Kappan?)

The Admissions staff is well aware of these problems and are attempting to find solutions. They are open to suggestions from all corners of the campus.

To summarize and interpret (liberally)... Yes, Virginia, academic standards do exist. They are the primary criteria for evaluating prospective students. The ability to look good in a football helmet is secondary, on par with attractiveness in a choir robe, artist's smock, theatre mask, etc., etc.

NEXT WEEK: A look at Financial Aid and Athletics. More eye-openers yet to come.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

The purpose of the library and its other internal facilities is to meet the student's need to achieve academic satisfaction here at our institution. Lately the purpose of the library has changed to meet the student's social and entertainment needs. Many large groups and individuals tend to have loud conversations and quite amusing entertainment. These people do not realize they are infringing upon the rights of their classmates in their pursuit of an education.

I believe this problem can be overcome by the students if they use common sense and respect the rights of others. Think about it?

Sincerely,
Ric Rodney Ruffner

To the editor:

"Because we at Maryville College want to recognize the maturity and responsibility that most college students possess, we are striving for a system which allows for more individual responsibility and self-discipline." This is the opening sentence of the "Code of Conduct" section in Cues, a Maryville College publication. Not always are words and actions as consistant.

In the A. C. C. the freshmen are represented by their class president who has been elected by each freshmen as an individual, part of a collective body which is their class. This election conformed to the practice which has become the college electoral process. Even though the class president has been duely elected, he is unable to express what he feels to be the opinions of his class in a concrete manner – with a vote in the A. C. C. In view of the opening statement, one is forced to wonder about the justification for this condition. Does this mean that it is felt that freshmen lack the maturity to elect a responsible person as their class president, or do they lack the overall capacity to make a responsible decision?

As it has been adequately pointed out by various members of the administration, the constituents at M. C. change every four years. That seems to supply a good reason for permitting the freshmen full representation in the college government as soon as possible. They have completed their financial affairs and registered as have the rest of the student body. When will they be granted all their rights as an equal and be permitted to become a full-fledged Maryville College student and not a "second-class citizen"?

Barbara Goedeke

Saga's Corner

Students:

The Ecology Awareness Program has now covered two area's of waste control: paper and meat and vegetables.

During paper week, food service employee's handed out one napkin at a time. This gave us some measure of what napkin usage would be if all students took one napkin at a time.

I determined through close inventory that the students at Maryville College could reduce their napkin usage by one half through cooperating in the paper ecology program.

This represents about $100.00 a month that could be used elsewhere. Since we have stopped issuing napkins, usage has risen to the previous levels and there are indications that many napkins are being wasted - "taken, but not used."

The paper that could be conserved through such a program would represent about 250 pounds a month or 2250 pounds during a nine month school year. This would mean the conservation of about 18 trees.

The second area of Ecology was meat and vegetables or "serving line week." During this period, I have tried to moniter the amounts of waste that is being taken out of the dishroom each meal. I have not been able to detect a real change in the volume of waste; however, I do believe that many students are trying to be clean platers, take one serving at a time, and in general be Food Ecologists. There are many clean plates and trays being taken to the dishroom each meal.

I thank you for your efforts and will put your savings to work this Wed. night with an Ice Cream Sundae table.

Keep up the good work! Take all you want, but eat (use) what you take.

Thank you.

Paul Fraedrich
Food Service Director
SAGA

P. S. This week will be "salad week" in the Ecology Program; an area of great waste. Lets see what you can do as Food Ecologists and clean platers.

Notice

Because of the lack of student participation, the food committee meetings will be suspended. Meetings will be held as called by the committee chairman. Anyone interested in problems that involve the food service should contact Charlie Cox.

Vespers

Mr. Glen Bays, Minister of Christian Education at New Providence Presbyterian Church, will give a slide presentation entitled "Christian Life and Education in New Guinea" at vespers Sunday, November 3, at 7:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. Mr. Bays was formerly coordinator of communications for the World Literacy committee in New Guinea.

Soccer Club Squeeze Big Orange

The Maryville College Soccer Club exploded for four quick goals to rip the Tennessee Vols, 10-3, Wednesday.

The Scots, sparked by a tremendous defense lead by Scott Cook, jumped on the Vols early by scoring four goals within the first five minutes of the game. From this point on the Scots controled the game. The offense kept pressure on the Vols goalie the entire game and for the first time this season was able to capitalize on the mistakes of the opposing team.

The Vols who defeated MC a week ago here, seemed too relaxed and not mentally ready, for the hustling booters. Paul Viggiano had another excellent game as goalie for the Scots making numerous saves.

Dan Bergner lead the offense with 4 goals. Also scoring goals for the Scots were: Coach Dave Young; Laurie Hill; Gary Elrod; Geoff Lang; Will Way; and Emerson Henderson.

en route: Nashville bus station

Bodies in transport.
Shadowed faces half revealed, fading into darkness.

A hunched boy-man with a face maybe I knew from another dream;
matted and tiredly angry hair; withdrawn eyes and the always blue jeans and scuffed boots.

a rising dylan?

the case tucked protectively under one arm—what mysteries...

toothbrush and socks or a flute and bone-of-his-soul papered score.

the texture of the air feels life,

muted excitement.

what grains of mystery and magic stand hidden in busplaces, hunched and waiting to sing.

Gean Hyden

Scots Down Bridgewater 24-7

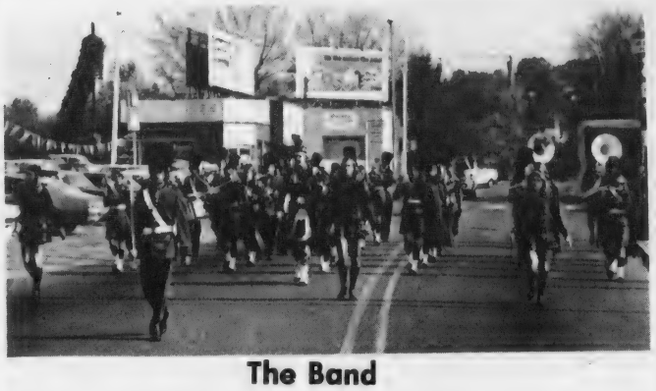
After losing three straight games on the road, The Maryville Fighting Scots got back into the victory column with a 24-7 Homecoming win over Bridgewater College last Saturday night before a near-capacity crowd at Honaker Field. The Scots' triumph increased their season record to two wins and three losses, while the Eagles came out of the contest with a 2-4 showing so far.

Sophomore Running Back Joe Genualdi was the Maryville offensive spark as he carried the ball 33 times for 142 yards and a 4.3 yards per carry average. Overall, the Scots displayed their finest offensive performance this year with 305 total yards and 18 first downs. The Eagles were only able to generate 143 total offensive yards with 112 of those coming on the running of Chris Sizemore, the second ranked rusher in Division III of the NCAA. Maryville gained 228 yards rushing to Bridgewater's 122. As for passing yardage, the Scots gained 81 yards to the Eagles' 21. Bobby Graham quarterbacked most of the game for Maryville, completing seven of 12 and two interceptions. Two of the seven completions accounted for touchdowns.

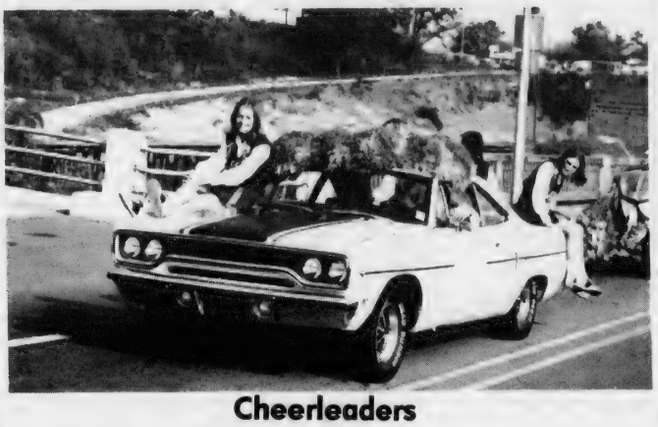
Neither team scored in the first period, but Bridgewater drew first blood with 3:50 remaining in the first half when Jim Cummings connected with Steve Austin for a six yard touchdown pass. The extra point made it 7-0. Two minutes later, however, the Scots tied it up when Graham hit Jim Lester with a 30-yard touchdown pass as Tim Kelly's conversion knotted the proceedings at 7-7, which is what the scoreboard read at Halftime. The only scoring in the third period came on a 30-yard field goal by Kelly on the Scots' first possession of the half. After that, with the Scots leading, 10-7, the Maryville defense got tough and held Bridgewater at bay the rest of the night. Graham connected for another touchdown in the fourth period. This was a four-yard pass to Mike Owens. Kelly's kick made it 17-7. Maryville's last score came in the last second of the game as Steve Wright snuck into the enzone with Kelly's conversion making it a 24-7 final.

Punter Donny Moore, currently leading the NCAA Division 111 punting statististics, had another great game as he booted four punts for 200 yards and an average of 50 yards. His best punt of the evening was good for 65 yards.

Tomorrow afternoon, the Scots are at Honaker Field again as they play host to Milsaps College of Jackson, Mississippi. The Majors beat the Scots in Jackson last year, 7-6. Game time for tomorrow's ballgame is 2:00.



Sharon Brown



Brown Elected To TCWSF Post

Sharon Brown, Maryville College instructor in physical education and women's basketball coach, has been elected East Tennessee representative for the Tennessee College Womens Sports Federation.

The announcement was made at a recent meeting of the organization in which Ms. Brown participated. Bylaws and the constitution of TCWSF were revised and a code of ethics established. The organization also established policies regarding sponsorship of women's sports competition.

The Band

Cheerleaders

Winning Float

Carnegie's Float

Lower Grass Penalties, Says New Jersey Committee

by John Byrne

(Editor's note: John Byrne is the editor of the William Paterson Beacon in Paterson, NJ.)

(CPS)—A special New Jersey legislative study commission has recommended a proposal to sharply reduce criminal penalties for possession of small amounts of marijuana.

If the state legislature enacts the proposal, New Jersey would become the second state in the country to lessen penalties for possession of marijuana. Oregon eliminated penalties for marijuana possession last year.

Last summer, a similar commission of the California State Senate recommended that penalties for possession also be relaxed that state. Governor Reagan vetoed a bill introduced before the Commission's findings were announced. No specific action has been taken as a result of the Commission's work.

"Marijuana has become a popular and accepted form of recreation for a large segment of the national population, including residents of New Jersey," the report states. "Marijuana does not pose a serious threat to the user or society."

Commission's chairman and state senator Alexander Menza's six-month investigation showed there is no worse long term effect on marijuana than on persons who enjoy other recreational activities.

"You can get a heart attack going to bed with a woman," said Menza, "or die from lung cancer after years of smoking or liver problems from drinking too much."

Existing marijuana penalties in New Jersey carry prison terms of up to six months for first offenses and as much as five years for subsequent ones. A judge, however, can suspend sentence for first offenders who possess 25 grams or less of marijuana and for five grams or less of hashish.

Under the proposed law

—Possession of an ounce or less of marijuana or six grams or less of hashish would be a nuisance offense, subject to confiscation of the drug and a $50 fine payable without a court appearance.

—Possession of from one to two ounces of marijuana or from 6 to 12 grams of hash, would be a disorderly person offense subject to imprisonment up to six months and a $500 fine.

—Possession of more than two ounces of marijuana or more than 12 grams of hashish would be a misdemeanor, subject to imprisonment up to three years and a $1000 fine.

The state attorney general has already said he will support legislation that would decriminalize drug addiction and the personal use of marijuana. But Menza foresees "an uphill fight all the way" to get the bills through both the state assembly and senate.

"I'm fearful the bills will get bottled up in some committee because most legislators and their constituents who grew up believing as I did, that marijuana was dangerous, will oppose the legislation," said Menza. A vote on the measure is not expected until sometime next year at the earliest.

If you're not sure what's out there, how can you know where you're going or how to get there?

The Christian Science Monitor can help.

It keeps you squarely in the center of the bold and exciting, the important trends of thought. It gives a firsthand, close-in view of the world's struggles and achievements. You see where you fit in — things you can do.

The Monitor doesn't do your thinking for you. In a quick readable style it gives you the facts to form your own decisions.

News, commentary, the arts, politics, science, fashion, sports, business: the Monitor is an exciting daily newspaper (Monday – Friday). Less than 10¢ a copy on your special rate.

Yes, I'll invest $8.25 in my future, for 4 months of The Christian Science Monitor.

Payment enclosed Bill me later

Name (Please print)

Street Apt.

City

State ZIP

The Christian Science Monitor
Box 125, Astor Station
Boston, Massachusetts 02123

17 SEA

GIVE BLOOD FOR BOB DYLAN.

$10 per donation for "It's Alright, Ma, I'm Only Bleeding."

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

bloodalliance

520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone: 637-3171

See the Smokies with

Mountain Supply Sporting Goods

YOUR BACKPACKING HEADQUARTERS

DUNHAM BOOTS-COMPLETE LINE STOCKED, FROM LIGHT HIKING BOOTS TO HEAVY DUTY BOOTS

FIBERFIL SLEEPING BAGS FEATURING THE McKINLEY MODEL, COMFORT RATED TO -10 DEGREES

MIDLAND-CENTER, ALCOA

The Candlelight Restaurant

Specializing in Italian Spagetti Pizza

Closest to Campus

The Candlelight

320 Court Street Maryville

Medical Arts Pharmacy

For all your medical Supplies of any kind

Next to Blount Memorial Hospital

— Store Hours —
8:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m.

FOLLOW YOUR HEART TO TIPTON Jewelers

982-0141

113 E. Broadway
Maryville, Tenn. 37801

HOUSE OF DIAMONDS

- ROLEX WATCHES
- BULOVA WATCHES
- ACCUTRON
- GIFTS

"EASY CREDIT TERMS"

C. R. TIPTON, owner

- DIAMONDS REMOUNTED
- ASK ABOUT OUR NEW RING OF RADIANCE THAT WILL INCREASE THE VISUAL SIZE OF A CENTER DIAMOND 6 TIMES.

Easy Curb Market

8-11 Market

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

Hoagies 75¢

8:00 a.m. -
12:00 p.m.

Open All Holidays

BEVERAGES OF ALL TYPES

PICNIC SUPPLIES

715 East Broadway
Maryville

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 8 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | November 8, 1974

News Briefs

American oil men are expressing quiet elation over their latest oil discoveries off the coast of South Vietnam.

The United States has announced it will contribute another $1 million toward the restoration of the Philae Temples in Egypt.

Most developed countries seem headed for a recession, although not a slump of the 1930's type dimensions, United Nations economists are saying.

Venezuela may cut oil production by as much as 300,000 barrels daily next year, says a well-informed government source.

A federal judge has denied a move by a prominent Jewish civil rights group to bar representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization from entering the United States to take part in the United Nations Palestine debate later this month.

Former President Richard Nixon is off the critical list after complications from phlebitis surgery.

Nevada Police have ticketed comedian Jerry Lewis after he stopped at the scene of an accident near Las Vegas and allegedly triggered a three car crash.

Inflation has cut deeply into public school budgets and forced widespread cutbacks in programs and services, according to the Commission of States.

Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, ended his flight back from his historic African fistic triumph by hinting at retirement from the ring.

Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) has told President Ford that he no longer feels bound by his earlier decision to support ex-Gov. Nelson Rockefeller for Vice President.

The director of the Ford administration's Council on Wage-Price Stability advised Americans to bring down high sugar prices by eating less sweets.

Israel is hardening its stand against the Palestinians in the wake of the Rabat Arab summit decision to recognize the Palestine Liberation Army as their sole representative.

There is no end in sight to the continuous rise in supermarket sugar prices, government economists and sugar refiners say.

Gallup Polls report that 51% of the American People believe we are headed for another depression.

The Saigon regime of President Thieu has drawn up a secret contingency plan for declaring martial law and crushing the anti-Thieu movement.

MC Students In Who's Who

Fifteen Maryville College seniors have been selected to appear in this year's edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. They are: Melinda Ann Lucas, biology major, Maryville; Sheila Mae Moore, biology-pre-med major, Maryville; Arthur Fowler, chemistry major, Knoxville; James Joseph Batchler, psychology major, Amelia, Ohio; Christine Elise D'Aquila, Spanish major, Edison, N. J.; Pam Gnagy, music major, Rochester, N. Y.; Melanie Schroeder Kohn, fine arts major, Columbia, S. C.; Susan Ann Leibundguth, psychology major, Evansville, Indiana; Thomas Carlisle Marton, science major, Gallatin, Indiana; Geneva Leah Parker, science major, Rockport, Mass.; Anna Ruth Prochazka, education major, Franklin, Ill.; John Michael Sortino, chemistry major, Pompano Beach, Fla.; Lyn Stanley, English major, Hightstown, N. J.; Paul Viggiano, chemistry major, Seldon, N. Y.; Mike Wenkstern, biology major, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

City Officials Speak To Bicycle Club

The Blount Bicycle Touring Club is holding a meeting November 11, 1974 at 7:30 p.m. in room 101 of the Fine Arts Center of Maryville College. Alcoa's City Manager Gary Head and Police Chief Harry Hammontree and Maryville's City Manager Don Peterson, Police Chief John Bluford and Mr. Ken Faulkner, Director of the Chamber of Commerce have agreed to meet with the group in the hope that the following questions might be resolved and positive action initiated.

a) How can the club members help provide area cyclists with safe cycling and can a cooperative program for marking bike routes be established?
b) What is the local authorities' interpretation of the Tennessee code governing bicycles?
c) What funds (federal/state) are available for bike lanes and what red-tape has to be cut to obtain these funds?
d) What can this bike club do to help educate the public that bicyclists do have a right to the road and the automobiles cooperation is needed to make cycling safe?

If these goals are to be achieved, the club needs your support and your help. This program is relevant to you as a bicyclist, and as an automobile driver. Please find the time to attend this important meeting.

Playhouse Presents Fantasticks

The musical comedy "The Fantasticks" will be presented at the Maryville College Theatre Nov. 14-16.

The harlequinade was written by two young men from Texas, Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, on the basis of a half forgotten old French romance. The original was "Les Romantiques" by Edmond Rostand, the man who wrote "Cyrano de Bergerac."

The plot is merely about a boy and girl in love, but it is the mockingly sophisticated style of telling their romantic story that seems to captivate the show's audiences around the world. The boy and girl are separated by a wall which their seemingly hostile parents have put up. The necessity to climb trees on each side of the wall to have their secret meetings, the need to plot behind the backs of their feuding fa-

continued on page 4

Harvard Law Professor At MC

Raoul Berger, from the Harvard Law School will speak on "The President and the Constitution" at Wednesday morning CIV.

Having received his A. B. from the University of Cincinnati, a J. D. from Northwestern University and a LL.M. from Harvard University, Mr. Berger has served with the SEC in charge of appellate matters, special assistant to the Attorney General, and General Counsel to the Alien Property Custodian in World War II.

Between 1962-1965 Mr. Berger served as regents professor at the University of California at Berkley. He then left to devote himself to study and writing. Several of his works include Congress v. The Supreme Court (1969), Impeachment: Some Constitutional Problems (1973), and Executive Privilege: A Constitutional Myth (1974). Mr. Berger is also the author of many articles in legal periodicals.

A very interesting man, don't miss CIV Wednesday, November 13, 1974 at 9:20 a.m.

MC Chemistry Group Named Outstanding

For the second consecutive year, the Maryville College Chapter of American Chemical Society Student Affiliates has been named as one of the outstanding chapters for the 1973-74 academic year.

The chapter, led by Arthur T. Fowler, president, and Paul Viggiano, vice president, is one of 42 chosen by the ACS Council Committee on Chemical Education for overall excellence of their programs as judged by annual reports on chapter activities.

from the editor's desk

ACC Is On The Move

The All-College Council in its October 16th, meeting examined at length the chairmanship as presently constituted and possible alternatives and by consensus declared its ability to function effectively with the present chairmanship arrangement. The Council was responding to criticism of its present structure by several members of this community including myself. In another consensus action the Council recognized no manipulation or conscious misuse of power on the part of the present chairman, Dr. Copeland.

The ACC should be commended for its prompt and decisive action on this very controversial subject. The Council proved that it can discuss "touchy" issues and arrive at definite decisions. The consensus reached shows how the ACC can respond as a legislative body to the pressures applied by its constituency. Even though I still feel that structural changes are needed to prevent the permanent Chairman of the Council from acquiring potentially dangerous and dominant powers, I believe the Council has done the best possible thing to resolve the issue in the current emotional atmosphere. Any action taken by the Council in the opposite direction would have been interpreted as a direct personal charge against Dr. Copeland. This atmosphere I speak of was created by the misinterpretation of both written and spoken statements made by this editor. This was the reason for the second consensus. I have not attempted to clarify my arguments for fear of them being only further misunderstood by many and the personal frustrations felt when one's integrity is constantly challenged by those he attempts to serve.

The All-College Council is moving with all deliberate speed to close the "credibility gap" that exists between it and the student body. However we must realize that unless we continue to apply pressure and make our opinions known through the various channels available to us, the ACC will not be the responsive college government that it has demonstrated lately it is capable of being.

The ACC has openly discussed issues raised in its town-hall meeting earlier this year and the issues raised in this newspaper by members of this community. Therefore, the ineffectiveness of the ACC can no longer be placed on the Council's unwillingness to deal with issues that we raise. I am convinced that the effectiveness of the ACC will be determined by our own involvement in its meetings and the continued expression of ideals and opinions freely within this community. I hope the Echo can continue to provide a media for which these ideals and opinions can be freely expressed.

e. d. h.

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson — Editor-in-chief
Kathy Kirkhart — Assistant Editor
Bill Walker — Business Manager
Jeff Draper — Distribution
Raymond L. Stanley Jr. — Technical Editor
Dr. Robert B. Braid — Faculty Advisor
Tom Fox — Photographer
Gwen Guba — Lay-out Assistant

Echo Philosophy

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

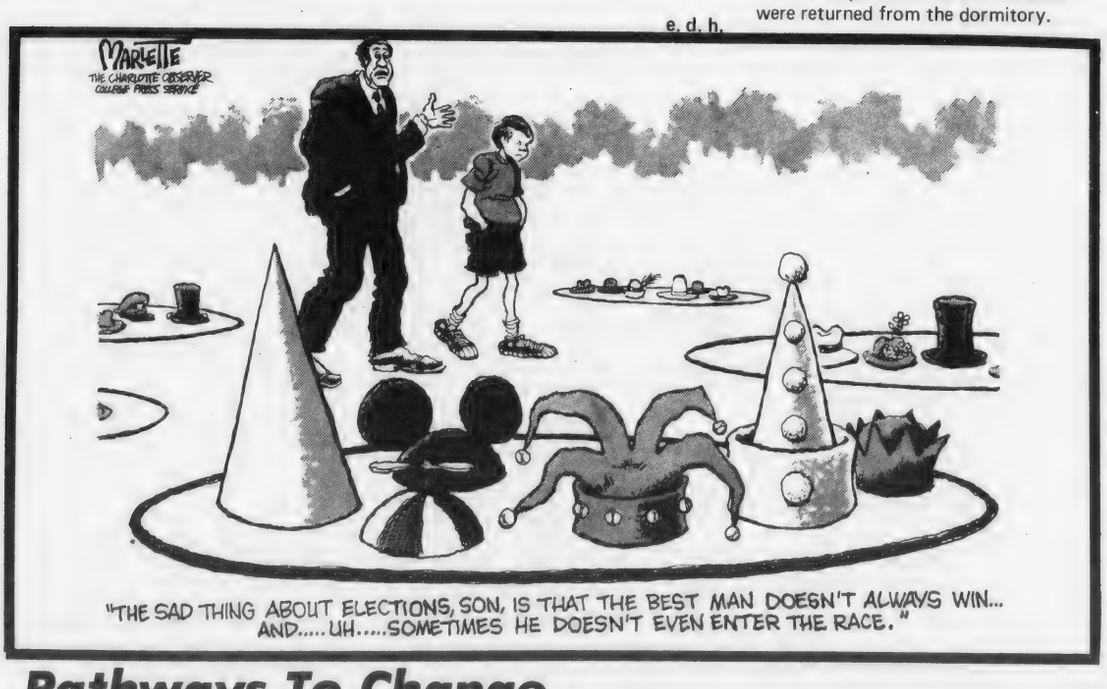
Murder Is A No-No, Says Jackson State Verdict

(CPS/ZNS)—A federal appeals court panel in New Orleans has ruled that Mississippi local and state police grossly over-reacted when they fired at students on the Jackson State College campus four years ago killing two students and wounding seven others.

That same three-judge panel ruled, however, that the surviving victims of the shootings may not sue any of the police who were responsible.

The Jackson State killings occurred several days after the Kent State shootings in May of 1970. Testimony at a Mississippi trial established that 43 local and state police fired their rifles into a dormitory of black students after several officers allegedly saw a sniper lurking inside.

The shooting, according to some witnesses, went on for more than a minute despite the fact that no shots were returned from the dormitory.



The appeals court panel ruled that although the police were responsible for the killings, they are protected by Mississippi state laws and the US Constitution from being assessed for any damages that resulted.

Good News For Drinkers

(CPS)—According to Professor Alexander Guiora of the University of Michigan, moderate amounts of alcohol can help students pronounce foreign languages.

Guiora and his research associates primed 87 students with alcohol and drilled them on certain Thai words they heard on tape. The team discovered that the effect of alcohol produces a rough bell-shaped curve in the ability of the students to pronunciate the strange words.

In other words, students who were given no alcohol had a different time overcoming what Guiora calls "lanaugee ego," an inhibition that makes it difficult for persons to pronounce words of a foreign tongue. Students with moderate amounts of alcohol were able to overcome this inhibition more easily, while the students who received large amounts of alcohol were less adept because of impaired learning and speech ability.

Newly Wed Party

Welcome Wagon is having a "Newly Wed Party" for all local engaged girls! There will be free gifts for each girl present, door-prises, style show, and refreshments. You are welcome to attend! The date is November 19, at 7:30 at the Sky Chef Restaurant at the Airport! All MC girls are invited!!! For further information you may call Mary Shumate at 983-3374.

Pathways To Change

Last week this column considered the relationship between Recruiting/Admissions policies and Athletics. This week our focus will be on a closely related area—Financial Aid. Questions have been raised about the legitimacy of naming certain grants "Leadership Grants" rather than "Athletic Scholarships". Mr. William Ribble, director of financial aid for the college, outlined the philosophy behind Leadership Grants at the Oct. 16 meeting of the All-College Council.

According to Mr. Ribble, Leadership Grants were established to provide tuition grants to incoming students who had shown specific leadership qualities. As defined in 1968, these qualities are measured by several criteria:

1) That the student has made outstanding contributions to his high school in the areas of Student Government, Debate, Drama, Athletics, or Publications.
2) That these contributions be acknowledged by the student's high school principal.
3) That the student has achieved a score of 22 or above on the ACT and a composite score of 1000 or above on the SAT.

Leadership Grants may be continued throuout the student's college career provided:

1) That the student continues to exhibit leadership qualities in the specific field for which the Grant was initially made.
2) That the student maintains a grade point average of 2.0 for the freshman year and 2.2 for each year thereafter.

Leadership Grants are also given to students already enrolled at Maryville based on their specific achievements. (For example, the editors of The Highland Echo and The Chilhowean receive them.)

continued on page 4

Rhodes Elected VEEP Of Chemistry Group

Dr. W. Gale Rhodes, chairman of the Maryville College chemistry department, has been elected vice-president of the South Central Independent College Association of Chemists.

At the annual meeting of the group, Dr. Rhodes discussed the National Science Foundation Student Originated Studies research project at Maryville College this past summer and offered assistance to area student groups attempting to obtain funding for such a project.

SCICAC is an organization of small college chemists in eastern Kentucky and Tennessee, western Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia. The purpose of the association is to encourage and support research in small colleges and to provide an opportunity for sharing new developments in chemical education.

Council Rejects Toker Sign-In Plan

(CPS)—A controversial proposal tentatively passed by the city council of Madison Heights, MI, has been defeated.

The council was comtemplating establishment of an ordinance that would require all persons buying cigarette papers to be 18 years of age or older and to sign a city log book.

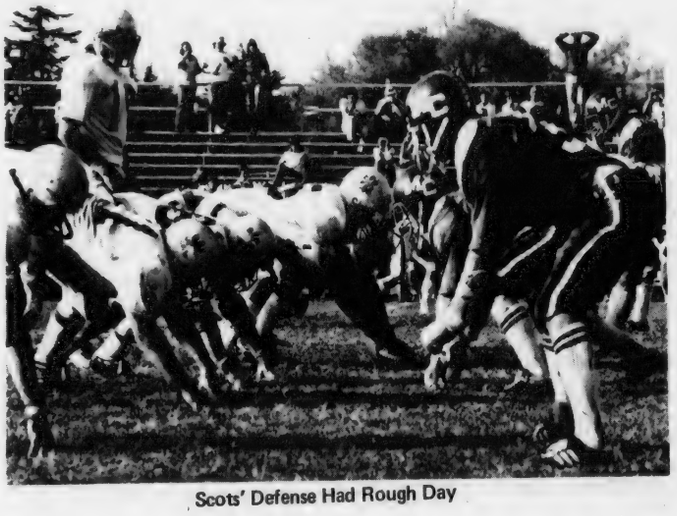
The ordinance was suggested by Councilman Loren King, who said he got the idea after watching some young people "who were obviously high on something" buy papers in a store.

"I was pretty sure they hadn't bought them to roll tobacco," King declared.

After a first reading in early October, the bill was passed by the council 4-3. In order to become an ordinance the bill had to be passed a second time.

Yet a strong protest against the proposal was made by the uhnl source of the Madison Heights Chamber of Commerce when the bill came up for a final reading.

The Chamber members felt that the new law would encourage people to simply buy papers somewhere other than in Madison Heights, since the city log books would be available to the police. The Chamber, however, was not opposed to the ordinance on civil liberties grounds.



The second reading was postponed for two weeks, and when it was finally voted on, the entire city council, including Councilman King, voted against it.

According to Peter Meyers, a spokeman for the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), the legality of such an ordinance would have been subject to challenge if it had passed.

"Other paraphanalia laws where possession of drug paraphanalia (such as pipes and cigarette papers) has been declared illegal have been struck down on the grounds that the law can't make a presumption of illegal use" of such times, Meyer explained. He indicated that restrictions on purchase of such items might be challenged on similar grounds.

HALFTIME

Scots' Defense Had Rough Day

MC Loses To Millsaps 21-7

The Maryville College Fighting Scots dropped their fourth decision of the 1974 season last Saturday afternoon to Millsaps College of Jackson, Mississippi, 21-7. The Majors' victory made their season record 4-2. The Scots, who have two wins under their belt so far, have three games remaining and must win all three in order to equal last year's record of 5-4.

Saturday's game was a defensive battle during the first half as neither team was able to cross the goal line. Maryville was only able to churn out four first downs at halftime and make good on only three of nine third down conversions. Millsaps broke into the scoring column first with 10:20 remaining in the third period when Running Back Frank Shaw burst over from the one-yard-line culminating a long drive downfield. The extra point by Doug Drindley made the score 7-0 in favor of the Majors. On the kickoff, however, Maryville was able to tie the score as Mike Osborne took the ball 95 yards for six points. It was a beautiful run-back as Osborne got good protection from Don Surrency, Lee Taylor, Troy Bowman, Ricky King, and Gary Gallant. Tim Kelley's extra point made it 7-7.

Millsaps Quarterback Ricky Haygood set up the Majors' second touchdown of the day on a 22-yard run that placed the ball on the Maryville two. On the next play, Shaw took the ball in for six points with only 24 seconds remaining in the third period. Drindley's kick made it 14-7. Late in the fourth period, Maryville was attempting to get a scoring drive started when a Bobby Fitzgerald pass, intended for Jim Lester, was intercepted by Dan Richards who scampered 26 yards for the score and killed all hopes for the Scots. Drindley's extra point provided the final 21-7 score. Maryville did make another drive as John Drake completed a succession of passes to Ricky King, Jim Lester, and Tom Hyne. A pass interference penalty put the ball on the Millsaps 22, but time ran out before the Scots could score.

Statistically, the Scots amassed only 107 yards on offense that included 64 rushing and 43 passing. Joe Genualdi and Don Grout were the leading Maryville ground gainers as they had 20 yards each. Moon Thompson checked in with 18. The Scots also had 11 first downs. Millsaps gained 288 yards offensively with 223 rushing and 65 passing along with 17 first downs. The Scots play host to Southwestern College of Memphis tomorrow night in a 7:30 start at Honaker Field.

The Alcoholic Engine

(CPS)—Henry Ford, move over.

Parisian Jean Chambrin claims he has invented an engine which runs on water mixed with alcohol, and he has been invited to publicly test his invention on the Le Mans race circuit.

The invention took him 18 years to produce. At present he drives a modified Dodge engine using a mixture of 60% water and 40% alcohol.

He says that in early May this year, he traveled from his home to the city of Perigueux and back, a distance of some 660 miles.

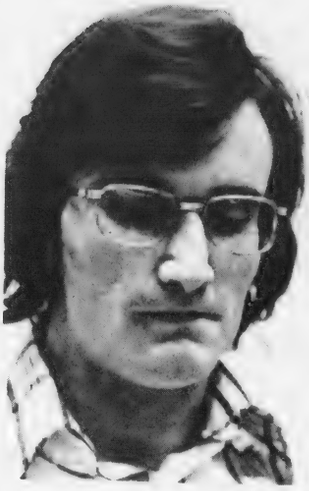
Chambrin says that he starts the engine with pure alcohol, then cuts off the supply and turns on a flow of the water-dominated mixture. Somehow the engine keeps running, presumably by isolating the hydrogen in the water.

This is accomplished by something called cracking, which usually requires very high temperatures. Wizard Chambrin says he has found a way to do this using relatively low temperatures generated by an ordinary engine.

He declines to reveal more, but French experts have eliminated the possibility of a hoax or fraud. They have seen the engine at a demonstration and they agree that it is the water that is cracked, not Jean Chambrin.

WHAT IS LOVE?

(CPS/ZNS)—Two university of Toronto psychologists report that persons who quickly fall head-over heels in love are apt to be people who believe that the fates, the stars or cosmic forces guide their lives.



On the other hand, say psychologists Kenneth and Karen Dion, people who are highly rational or pragmatic almost never fall in love at first sight.

The Dions, writing in the Journal of Clinical Psychology say they have also discovered a difference between the way men and women deal with their emotions when they are in love.

Women, they report, are more likely to be elated and euphoric when in love: men, on the other hand, often find love disruptive and uncomfortable and commonly lose sleep over it.

Vespers

Dr. Tom Fuhr, former Dean of Students and present minister at Baker's Creek Presbyterian Church will speak at Vesper's this Sunday evening. His topic will be, "Sensual Experiences in Religion." Come and join in this opportunity for worship and discussion at 7:00 p.m. Sunday evening in the Little Chapel.

Fowler Will Serve On Science Panel

Arthur T. Fowler, has been invited to serve on a review panel of the National Science Foundation. The panel will advise the Foundation on the relative r..erits of research proposals submitted to the Student Originated Studies Program.

Mr. Fowler is a senior pre-med student and chemistry major at Maryville College. He was director of a student originated studies research project at Maryville during the past summer and has served as president of the college chapter of the American Chemical Society Student Affiliates.

Murray Appointed To Publication Board

Dr. Roderic L. Murray, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church and part time instructor at Maryville College, has been appointed to the board of the Anglican Theological Review.

He also will serve as the National Coordinator for Diocesan Representatives of the Review which will focus on research projects in theological thought within the Episcopal Church throughout the U. S. A.

The Review is a scholarly theological journal designed for clergy and inquiring laymen.

Dr. Murray's latest publication, "Criteria for Evaluation on Theological Pedagogy," will appear in Aware, an Episcopal journal.

An instructor in sociology and non-western studies, Dr. Murray has been on the Maryville faculty since 1971.

continued from page 1

thers, only adds piquancy to their romance.

Actually their fathers are the best of friends who fondly hope their children will marry. They have forbidden meetings of their progeny out of the certainty that youngsters will be contrary.

Linda Boehm and Randy Hunter will be seen as the sweethearts. Fred Frost will be the narrator, El Gallo. Director of the play is Thomas E. Jones.

come to MC. It is an area where faculty try to insure that those students who need financial aid to continue their education will receive it. It is, perhaps, an area that should be seen as an example of what a healthy departmental program can be, rather than the target of constant criticism. (Or is someone out there really jealous?)

continued from page 2

The only connection that may be noted between Athletics and Leadership Grants is that perhaps the faculty in the HPER dept. work harder at finding students that qualify for the grants.

Another interesting point made by both Mr. Ribble and Dr. George Kramer is that while over 10% of Maryville's student body participate in varsity athletics, less than 10% of financial aid money goes to those students. Coupled with the fact that less than one sixth of the college's grants are specifically Leadership Grants, the total amount given to athletes is proportionally very small. In addition, all financial aid monies are expanded on the basis of need as determined by an analysis of the Parents' Confidential Statement.

To summarize the broad area we've examined for two weeks, it seems that Athletics is not the primary focus of Maryville College. It is an area where faculty take an active part in encouraging students to

If you're not sure what's out there, how can you know where you're going or how to get there?

The Christian Science Monitor can help.

It keeps you squarely in the center of the bold and exciting, the important trends of thought. It gives a firsthand, close-in view of the world's struggles and achievements. You see where you fit in — things you can do.

The Monitor doesn't do your thinking for you. In a quick readable style it gives you the facts to form your own decisions.

News, commentary, the arts, politics, science, fashion, sports, business: the Monitor is an exciting daily newspaper (Monday – Friday). Less than 10¢ a copy on your special rate.

Yes, I'll invest $8.25 in my future, for 4 months of The Christian Science Monitor.

Payment enclosed Bill me later

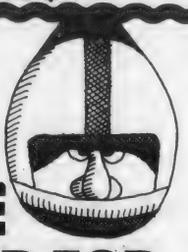
Name (Please print)

Street Apt.

City

State ZIP

The Christian Science Monitor
Box 125, Astor Station
Boston, Massachusetts 02123



17 SEA

We Invite You to Visit Us at Seven Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Downtown
Alcoa
Airport
Broadway
McGhee Tyson
Seymour-Chapman Hwy.
Townsend

Tallest And Closest To The Campus

GIVE BLOOD FOR THE TEAM.

$10 per donation to buy tickets to The Game.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks.
Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee

blood alliance

Phone: 637-3171

COIFFURE VILLA
Hair Salon
for Men and Women

COIFFURE VILLA
MIDLAND-CENTER, ALCOA

COIFFURE VILLA
COIFFURE VILLA
COIFFURE VILLA
COIFFURE VILLA

bank of maryville

Your Bank
In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 9 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | November 15, 1974

News Briefs

More than 50 calves were given away in Nashville this week by cattlemen who say they can't make a decent profit in the livestock market.

The U. S. divorce rate increased as much in the past four years as it did in the entire previous decade, according to a new Census Bureau report.

Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn is planning to visit the United States, Sen. James Helms (R) of North Carolina has announced. No date has been set for the visit.

It was politics as usual in Chicago last week. Nearly 300 complaints of vote fraud and voting machine malfunction were reported during the first six hours of voting.

The Ford Administration has signed a tentative agreement giving the special Watergate prosecutor ready access to tapes and papers left by Richard Nixon.

The price of a five-pound bag of sugar at Louisiana refineries soared to $3.06 Tuesday with predictions of still higher prices.

Former President Nixon will be unable to testify in the Watergate cover-up trial of five formal aides for at least two to three months.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon conceded in a speech in Chicago that the United States was in a recession.

U. S. corporate expenditures for new plants and equipment next year won't do much to prevent the recession from deepening according to the Christian Science Monitor.

South Vietnamese President Thieu's government again cracked down on protesters accusing the Thieu regime of dictatorship and repressing civil liberties.

Three-fourths of the British public want to stay in the European Community at least for the time being a Louis Harris opinion poll indicates.

An unemployed truck driver and his wife have been arraigned in federal district court in connection with the bombings of 11 power transmission line towers and a threat to black out the city of Portland unless $1 million in ransom was paid.

Members of the Pennfield Church of the Nazarene in Battle Creek, Mich., figured out one way to combat "sinful" television programing. They burned their television sets.

Forty-three firms in Kawasaki, Japan, agreed to pay $11 million compensation to more than 2000 persons whose deaths or infirmities have been traced to industrial polution.

The soils of Vietnam remain fertile and capable of producing food despite nearly a decade of military herbicide spraying, a Michigan State University scientist stated in East Lansing.

Inflation has cut deeply into public school budgets and forced widespread cutbacks in programs and services, according to the Commission of States.

Thompson Named MC Comptroller

E. L. "Pete" Thompson has been named to the new position of comptroller at Maryville College. Thompson comes to Maryville from Walters State Community College in Morristown where he was business manager for four years.

In announcing the appointment, Neil McDade, administrative vice-president, said the new position would include bookkeeping, accounting, budgeting, and internal auditing. Most colleges are now using a comptroller instead of a treasurer, he said.

Prior to Walters State, where he helped open the new community college, Thompson worked in the auditing department at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville.

He holds the B. S. in business education from Appalachian State University and the M. S. in educational administration from Union College.

He and his wife, Barbara, have two children, Wynndel, 13, and Mark, 10. They are still living in Morristown, but plan to purchase a home in Maryville.

Duo-Piano Concert For Kidney Foundation

An invitation is cordially extended to the entire Maryville College community to attend a benefit concert November 20th, at 8:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. Performing works of Vivaldi, Bach, Rachmaninoff, Copland and Gershwin will be duo-pianists Florie Cartlidge (of Maryville) and Emilie Williams (of Frankfort, Mich.). The college community is urged to support the creation of a Continuing Fellowship and Professional Education fund within the Kidney Foundation of East Tennessee, an affiliate of the National Kidney Foundation.

Any advance contributions to this fund can be sent directly to the East Tennessee offices of the Foundation at 1409 Magnolia, Knoxville. Please specify "Continuing Fellowship and Professional Education." Contributions will also be received at the concert.

It is hoped that this concert will generate interest in the Foundation, and enlist substantial support within the Maryville area in the field of kidney disease and its treatment. The help of any within the college community would be greatly appreciated.

Handel's "Messiah" On Sunday

The Maryville College Choir and Community Chorus will combine forces for the presentation of the 43rd annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" Sunday, November 17 at 3:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. The 43-member Chilhowee Choral Society will also participate in the presentation.

The Messiah tells of Jesus Christ's coming, his life, and the life hereafter with no specific characters or narrator, though the selections are both opera and oratorio. Handel first performed the Messiah in 1743. Since then, this masterwork probably has been performed as much as any other piece in the history of music.

Among the soloists, two Maryville College professors, Dr. Charlotte Beck and Dr. Dan Kinsinger will be singing leading roles in the performance. Dr. Beck, assistant professor of English, holds a Bachelor of Music degree from U-T Knoxville. Dr. Kinsinger is assistant professor of music and has served as a member of the chorus for the past 21 years. The fifteen other soloists include students and members of the local community.

The Chilhowee Choral Society joining in the performance for the first time, is a group of non-professional singers from the Maryville-Alcoa area. Directed by Don Brakebill, the Society joined with the mass chorus presentation of St. Matthew's Passion by Bach last spring and were also featured as guests at the Maryville College Concert Choir's home concert.

Dr. Harry H. Harter will be directing the production.

MC Students Receive Presser Scholarships

Seven Maryville College music students have been selected by the music faculty as recipients of Presser Foundation Scholarships.

They are: Melanie Kohn, senior from Columbia, S. C.; Pamela Gnagy, senior from Rochester, N. Y.; Lynn Yeatts, senior from Kingston, Tenn.; Celeste Gourdin, senior from Andersonville, Tenn.; Linda Sutton, senior from Southfield, Mich.; Peggy Leatherwood, junior from Mt. Airy, Maryland; and Jan Roper, junior from Kingsport, Tenn. All are music majors except Melanie Kohn who is an interdisciplinary major in art and music.

Presser Foundation Scholarships are made possible by an annual grant to the college for music students of good character with satisfactory academic ratings. Preference is given to those who expect to become teachers of music.

At MC the requirement for academic standing is an accumulative grade point average equal to a B or better for the year prior to the awarding of the scholarship in December.

Don't forget! The musical comedy "The Fantasticks" is being presented tonight and tomorrow night at 8:15 p.m. in the Theatre by the MC Playhouse.

Young To Speak At Seminar

Dr. David Young, professor and director of the Project on Futuristics at Maryville College, will participate in a seminar on "Health Care: Human Values and Public Policy" Nov. 15-16 at U-T.

The seminar is a public forum project of the Bioethics Committee, Knoxville Urban Ministry, sponsored by the Tennessee Committee for the Humanities. The purpose of the project is to promote discussion of some of the principal ethical and public policy issues arising from contemporary medical knowledge and service.

Dr. Young has had articles published recently in The Tennessee Churchman, The Futurist, and The Journal of College Science Teaching.

MC FACULTY ATTEND SAMLA MEETING

Four Maryville College faculty members attended the recent South Atlantic Modern Language Association meeting in Washington, D. C. recently. They were Dr. Ralph Collins of the Foreign Language Department and Dr. Charlotte Beck, Mrs. Herma Cate, and Dr. Elizabeth Fowler of the English Department. The meetings were held at the Washington Hilton and the Folger Library.

Newly Wed Party

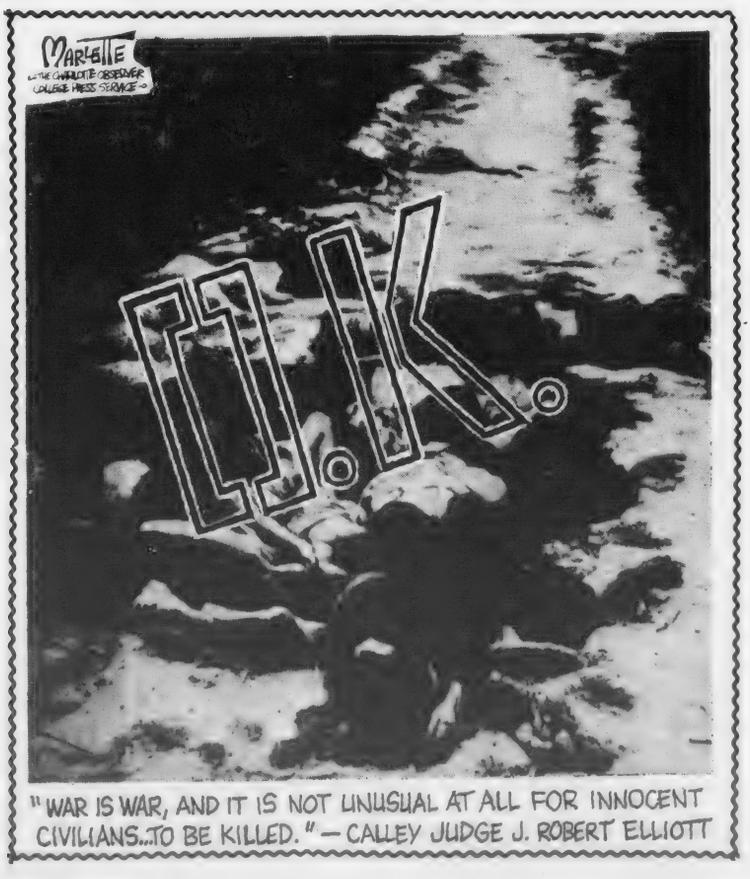
Welcome Wagon is having a "Newly Wed Party" for all local engaged girls! There will be free gifts for each girl present, door-prises, style show, and refreshments. You are welcome to attend! The date is November 19, at 7:30 at the Sky Chef Restaurant at the Airport! All MC girls are invited!!! For further information you may call Mary Shumate at 983-3374.

from the editor's desk

Kent State and Jackson State

In Cleveland, Ohio, a federal judge dismissed the case against the eight former Ohio National Guardsmen charged with depriving Kent State Students, killed or wounded during the 1970 anti-war demonstration, of their civil rights. The trial judge while dismissing the case said: "It is vital that the state and National Guard officials not regard this decision as authorizing or approving the use of force against unarmed demonstrators."

In New Orleans, a federal appeals court ruled that Mississippi local and state police grossly overreacted when they fired at students on the Jackson State College campus four years ago killing two students and wounding seven others. The same appeals court panel ruled that although the police were responsible for the killings, they are protected by Mississippi state laws and the U. S. Constitution from being assessed for any damages that resulted.



These two decisions even though in both cases the court implied that it was wrong to use firearms against demonstrating students, set frightening precedents in the area of civil liberties. "The right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances" is guaranteed by the first amendment of the United States Constitution. Yet, when these rights were violated by law enforcement officers, the courts have refused to hold the officers responsible for their actions.

In the Kent State case the judge ruled that there was insufficent evidence to prove that the defendants intended to deprive any Kent State student of his civil rights. One does not need a law degree to judge the merits of this case. Four students were killed, including two who were not even involved in the demonstrations. Many more were wounded. How much more evidence is necessary to prove that the civil rights of these students guaranteed by the first amendment were violated. Unarmed civilians while demonstrating against the continued insane violence of war abroad, were the victims of violence here in their own country by law enforcement officers. Yet, until this day no one has had to answer to the deaths of those four students.

In the Jackson State case, the Court even after ruling that the Mississippi local and state officials over-reacted when they fired at students, ruled that they were protected by Mississippi state laws and the U. S. Constitution from being assessed for any damages that resulted. Can the State violate the constitutional rights of its citizens and never have to answer to its gross violation? Of what use are civil rights if the State officials can not be held fully responsible when they violate them?

The Kent State and Jackson State decisions reflect poorly on our system of justice. Six students were killed and no one has had to answer to their deaths.

Six more civilians must be added to the number of civilians killed as a result of the most insane war in the history of this nation — Vietnam. Kent State. Jackson State. My Lai. No one has had to answer to these killings of civilians.

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson
Editor-in-chief

Kathy Kirkha
Assistant Editor

Bill Walker
Business Manager

Jeff Draper
Distribution

Raymond L. Stanley
Technical Editor

Dr. Robert B. Braid
Faculty Advisor

Joe Showalter
Photographer

Gwen Guba
Lay-out Assista

Echo Philosophy

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Pathways To Change

At the October 2, CIV on campus governance, a question concerning policies for use of campus facilities by outside groups was raised. A report by Mr. Raymond Brahams, Executive Assistant to the President may serve to answer that question. Mr. Braham's report is as follows:

Maryville College follows a policy of sharing its facilities with off campus groups and organizations whenever the projected use is not in conflict with major college programming or college policies.

Reasonable use fees are charged, and are intended to recover out of pocket costs incurred by the college in offering the facility used. On a very few occasions there is no charge made if an outside organization is providing a significant public service for which no admission is charged. In these cases the college joins in the effort by offering its facilities at no charge.

Major facilities used by the community are: Theatre, Chapel, Fine Arts Center Music Hall, Fine Arts Center Lounge, Sutton Science No. 113, Margaret Ware Dining Room, Proffitt Dining Room, the Health and Physical Education Building including the pool, and a number of individual classrooms. In addition the residence halls and other facilities are used in the summer program by conferences.

Records show that use is made by off campus groups on the average of about 250 days per year, and that the number of uses averages two per day. The total number of persons using the facilities most years ranges from 55,000 to 60,000 with many individuals coming to the college more than once. This past summer the total income from the conference schedule was $60,000.

Benefits derived by the college from the program are many, including the following:

1. The college partially fulfills its public service responsibility.
2. Relations with community organizations, groups and constituencies are improved.
3. There is better utilization of facilities and staff.
4. Additional income from outside sources is derived to meet fixed costs, many of which are incurred whether there is a facilities use program or not.
5. As a result of extra business going to SAGA, the college and its students receive a more favorable and more reasonably priced regular year food service contract.
6. Concession and dining hall income from outside use results in a percentage being paid to the college by SAGA to meet administrative over head.
7. Many groups and organizations using the campus involve prospective students and their families and give us an excellent opportunity to recruit.
8. Most uses require Maryville College student labor, thus expanding from outside and additional sources our student financial aid resources.
9. The college is able to support worthy community program such as local swim teams, the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet, and Community Night.
10. The program helps meet community needs, social, cultural, religious and recreational.

Almost every scheduled use of our facilities by outside groups requires some adjustment of campus schedules and some inconvenience. In every case, however, use of a facility is cleared with the person responsible for its scheduling, and only in rare and compelling cases do we otherwise schedule any facility. It is our hope that the college community will look upon these uses as opportunities to share our fine campus with the larger community in which it is located, to become better acquainted with the larger community and have them become better acquainted with us, and to meet some of the needs of that larger community.

Sue Hedlund

CIV
"The Art of Gymnastics"

Scots-Southwestern Fight To 7-7 Tie

For the first time since 1968, a Maryville College football team played to a tie as the Fighting Scots finished in a 7-7 deadlock with Southwestern College of Memphis last Saturday night at Honaker Field. It was the third tie of the year for the Lynx to go along with three wins and three losses, while the Scots' record stands at 2-4-1. With only two games remaining on the schedule, the best Maryville can hope for is a .500 season at 4-4-1.

Neither team was able to score during the first period, although Southwestern did drive to the Maryville 11 before Tim Mulkey's attempted field goal failed. Mulkey also missed one in the third period which could have put the Lynx in front. The Maryville scoring came on a one-yard plunge by Quarterback Bobby Graham with 7:10 remaining in the first half. It culminated a 70-yard drive that was highlighted by a 30-yard pass play from Graham to Rick Treece that put the football on the one. Graham scored on the following play. Tim Kelly's extra point was good as the Scots lead 7-0. Southwestern's lone touchdown was a 60 yard drive in nine plays. Mike Hanna scored on a one-yard run on the first play of the fourth period. Mulkey's conversion attempt was good as the score read 7-7 which is how it finally ended as neither team could sustain a scoring drive after that.

Donny Moore, MC's punter

Statistically, Maryville had 201 yards total offense to Southwestern's 229. The Lynx had an advantage in first downs with 13 as compared to only eight for Maryville. The Scots continued to keep the ball on the ground as they rushed for 157 yards on 52 carries. Southwestern gained 101 yards on 39 carries. Graham completed five of seven passes with one interception, while the Lynx hit on 13 of 29 and one interception. The Scots had 54 yards in the air while Southwestern gained 128.

Maryville punter Don Moore went to work nine times and gained 377 total yards for an average of 41.9. His best punt of the evening was for 58 yards. He also got off boots of 56, 55, and 51 yards. Linebacker Joe Lombardo was the Scots' defensive standout with 14 tackles. Also making strong showings defensively for Maryville were defensive ends Ken Hanna and Tom Duling. Tomorrow afternoon, the Scots play their final home game of the season as they entertain Emory and Henry College of Emory, Virginia. The Wasps beat the Scots at their home field last season, 28-0. Game time tomorrow is 2:00 p.m.

Student File Law In Limbo

by Paul Feroe

(CPS)—As the date nears when students will be allowed to see their confidential school records under a new federal law, educational organizations around the country are attempting an 11th hour stay of implementation.

The most recent attempt is an appeal by college and university administrators urging Congress to delay implementing the law for one year while they establish procedures for handling student requests.

When Congress reconvenes on November 18, it will have one day in which to amend the law, which was signed by President Ford, before it goes into effect on November 19.

Barring a dramatic reversal or delay of the bill on November 19, which seems unlikely, schools of higher education will technically have to begin processing student requests to examine their files. However, because schools have 45 days in which to respond to such a request there is a good chance that a change in the law will occurr during that time.

Sen. James Buckley (C-NY), who first introduced the private records disclosure bill, plans on the 18th or 19th of November to introduce amendments to clarify parts of the bill that are causing administrators the most worries.

Buckley's amendment will seek to exempt from "full disclosure" confidential materials that went into the record earlier than 30 days after the enactment of the law (August 21, 1974). A legislative aide to the senator said the amendment, a response to pressure from higher education circles, would also provide a means for a student to "waive his right of access to specific statements," like letters of recommendation.

Educators fear that without such a clause the privacy of those who write letters of recommendation would be violated and that in the future such letters would be difficult to obtain.

Administrators feel the bill contains several ambiguities including:

—Which records are included in the right of access provisions? Does this refer to psychiatric records and parent financial statements?

—Does the law apply to former students as well as current students?

—What records can a student challenge in his file?

Because of these unanswered problems, educators say failure to postpone the bill's enforcement may create chaos for school administrators. The Office of Education which is in charge of issuing regulations says that guidelines won't be established before next spring.

A spokesman for Senator Buckley admitted that "there have been one or two legitimate questions raised... about oversights in the amendment;" but he criticized attempts to "delay" implementation of the law as "unreasonable, unjustified."

Failure of a school to comply with the new law could mean a cut off of federal aid.

Miss National Teenager Recruits For Six Flags Over Georgia

Betty Nightingale, the 1974 Miss National Teenager and Recruiting Specialist for Six Flags Over Georgia will be visiting the Maryville College campus on November 20 to talk with students about the many employment opportunities at the 276-acre family fun park in Atlanta.

After her one year reign as the 1974 Miss National Teenager, 18 year old Betty Nightingale moved from her home state of Maine to Atlanta to manage the recruiting efforts for Six Flags. Presently touring throughout the Southeastern United States, she is visiting college and university campuses discussing employment prospects and exciting special events being offered to young people who will work at the amusement complex next summer.

Over 2,000 host and hostess positions are available for the 1975 operating season at Six Flags Over Georgia. College-age young people actually operate Six Flags and man the over 125 rides, shows and attractions. Now approaching its ninth year of operation, Six Flags has provided employment for over 20,000 high school and college age young who have worked during their summer vacation months. Six Flags is recognized as the largest employer of young people in the state of Georgia.

Betty Nightingale will be discussing park wages, housing availability in the Six Flags area, special park activities being planned for 1975, college scholarships and all-expense paid cruises offered to hosts and hostesses. She will be at Fayerweather Hall from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wed., Nov. 20th.

PRIVATE COLLEGES FEEL THE PINCH

(CPS)—Since January 1, 1970, a total of 71 private colleges have closed or merged, according to a survey by the National Council of Independent Colleges and Universities.

The council found 50 colleges had closed, 15 had merged with other institutions and six had been converted to public ownership.

During that same 4½-year period, only 26 new schools opened.

Soccer Club Ends Season

by James Dewhirst

After thrashing U. T. 10-3, the M. C. soccer club closed out the season by losing its last 2 games.

M. C. played Tennessee Wesleyan close, but a freak goal gave the visitors the advantage. They went on to score 3 more times in the closing minutes, making the final score 5-1. Dan Bergner scored the only Scots goal.

Last Saturday M. C. also played a close game with Walters State, as a powerful Geoff Lang shot kept the Scots in the game. But that was all as Walters State scored once again for a 3-1 victory.

The soccer club ended its season with a 2-10 record. Although losing key seniors Geoff Lang, Mike Saunders, Willy Vidal and Paul Viggiano—lead by high scorer Dan Bergner (11 goals), the team feels it will have a much better season next year.

European Job Cards Available

Temporary paying jobs in Europe are available to students with European Job Cards. The card entitles you to a paying job, with free room and board, in a resort, hotel, office, restaurant or factory in Switzerland, Austria, France or Germany. Standard wages are paid which will earn back most or all of the trip costs. Of equal value is the experience itself, as it will give you an overseas job experience to list on any future job application. Also, by picking up a few words of French or German you will have a worldly-wise edge in reading anything from a sophisticated magazine to a menu or cookbook.

The European Job Card system does two things for you. It puts your name on a job list, and it initiates processing of your job and the necessary working papers. As this is an advance planning system, students interested in earning their way in Europe should obtain their European Job Cards well in advance of their antitipated departure. Job cards and jobs are given out on a non-profit, first come, first served basis.

The service is provided by Student Overseas Services. SOS has placed thousands of students in temporary paying jobs in Europe during the past ten years. Throughout the year SOS conducts orientation periods in Luxembourg Europe, to make certain that every student who wants a job gets off to a good start. Large numbers of students from all over the U. S. converge in Luxembourg to attend these orientations.

Any student interested in making it on their own to Europe may obtain complete information, including job listings and descriptions and an application form, by sending their name, address, the name of their school as only students are eligible, and $1 for mailing and printing costs to: SOS, Box 5176, Santa Barbara, California 93108

Congress Committees: Cozy For All

by Peter Gruenstein

(CPS/CHNS) — It is human for both people and institutions to see the need to reform others, but not themselves. This is doubly true in the case of Congress.

Considering Congress' historical and ingenious efforts at resisting reform of itself, it is hardly surprising that it recently recoiled at attempts to push through a comprehensive proposal from a committee headed by Rep. Richard Bolling (D-MO) to alter the House's committee system.

Instead, it accepted a next-to-meaningless proposal made by an ad hoc panel of Democrats headed by Rep. Julia Butler Hansen (WA). The most significant thing contained in the Hansen proposal was a long-overdue reform that gives the minority party in Congress (presently the Republicans) control over one-third of each committee's staff.

The Bolling proposal would have eliminated two unnecessary committees, taken some clout away from several excessively powerful panels and eliminated much overlapping jurisdiction. It would have shaken things up a bit, which explains why it lost by a comfortable margin.

But neither the Bolling nor the Hansen proposals contained the one reform that is essential to revitalizing the moribund House committee system: require members to periodically move from one committee to another—that is, rotate committee assignments, say, every four or six years.

The way the committee system operates now, it makes one suspect that it was originally designed by a lobbyist for a special interest group. Here's what happens.

When a member is first elected to Congress, his primary concern is almost always to stay in Congress. So he seeks assignment to committees on which he can do the most good for his district and, of course, receive the greatest political benefits. For example, if he comes from a district where there is a large number of important military contractors or military bases, he will most likely seek assignment to the Armed Services Committee, where he will be a strong proponent of defense spending.

In return for his support, he can expect the Pentagon to go out of its way to make sure that his district is regarded with more than its fair share of military spending. And he can also expect large contributions from defense contractors at election time.

Likewise, new members from rural states want to get on the Agriculture Committee, those from cities want the committees which deal with money for urban areas, the ones from coastal areas are attracted to the Merchant Marine Committee, and the ones from districts with large NASA facilities want the space committee.

The congressional committee system was designed to insure that each legislative area would receive close, balanced scrutiny and oversight by a small number of members expert in the given area.

What has happened, however, is that most committees have become composed largely of unbridled advocates of spending rather than skeptical scrutinizers. Congress' committees too often resemble most federal regulatory agencies, which were designed to act as a check on excesses in a given industry but have become the industry's advocate.

The present committee-advocacy system is a very cozy one for all concerned, except the voter. And often the voter is deceived. With praise and reelection he rewards his congressman's use of committee assignments to bring federal pork into the district. But what the voter often doesn't see is that the vast majority of the 535 members of Congress are doing precisely the same thing for their districts.

If you're not sure what's out there, how can you know where you're going or how to get there?

The Christian Science Monitor can help.

It keeps you squarely in the center of the bold and exciting, the important trends of thought. It gives a firsthand, close-in view of the world's struggles and achievements. You see where you fit in — things you can do.

The Monitor doesn't do your thinking for you. In a quick readable style it gives you the facts to form your own decisions.

News, commentary, the arts, politics, science, fashion, sports, business: the Monitor is an exciting daily newspaper (Monday – Friday). Less than 10¢ a copy on your special rate.

Yes, I'll invest $8.25 in my future, for 4 months of The Christian Science Monitor.

Payment enclosed Bill me later

Name (Please print)

Street Apt.

City

State ZIP

The Christian Science Monitor
Box 125, Astor Station
Boston, Massachusetts 02123

17 9EA

GIVE BLOOD TO A TURNIP?

$10 per donation to buy your vegetables.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking.

blood alliance

520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone: 637-3171

Jack Coker's House of Hair is open and ready to serve you. Located at 321 High Street in their newly remodeled twelve operator salon, Jack and his staff remains ready to cut your hair to give it a more natural look. Starting at $4.50 for men's cuts, you can't go wrong — your hair will look and feel healthier, and remember, healthy hair is happy hair. So call for an appointment at 982-4384 and take the five minute walk to House of Hair. You'll be glad you did.

-Advertisement-

Easy Curb Market

8-11 Market

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

Hoagies 75¢

8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.

Open All Holidays

BEVERAGES OF ALL TYPES

PICNIC SUPPLIES

715 East Broadway
Maryville

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 10 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | November 22 , 1974

Recital Cancelled

Nuanthip Bunnag's senior recital scheduled for Friday, November 22 has been cancelled and rescheduled for Saturday, December 7th. More on her recital will be printed later.

Vespers

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes will have charge of vespers Sunday at 7:00 p.m. in the Little Chapel.

Knoxville Symphony To Appear At MC

The Knoxville Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Arpad Joo will appear in concert at Maryville College Saturday, November 23 at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. Guest soloists will be Sallie Warth Schoen, Mary Farley Johnson, and Peter Horodysky.

Each soloist has a long list of professional credits and critical acclaim for their performances here and around the U. S. and Europe.

Mrs. Schoen, a member of the music faculty at Maryville College, received her music education at Marshall College, Oberlin Conservatory, Indiana University, and Mozarteum of Salzburg, Austria.

Her solo appearances include performances at universities throughout the Southwest and Southeast and elsewhere around the U. S. She has appeared with the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra on previous occasions.

Ms. Johnson is principal cellist of the Symphony Orchestra. She came to Knoxville in 1966 after graduation from Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Juillard School of Music and Longy School of Music. Before accepting a position as associate professor of music at U-T she taught cello at Oberlin and toured as soloist with the Oberlin Wind Ensemble. She also has made a European tour with the Oberlin Baroque Ensemble.

Horodysky has been concertmaster for the orchestra for five years. He received his bachelor and master's degrees in music from Manhattan School of Music where he studied under Samuel Applebaum, Stanley Badnar and Lilian Fuchs.

He was a member of the prize-winning string quartet of the University of Southern California in 1965. In 1963 he participated in a Yehudi Menuhin master class.

He is a teacher of the Suzuki method of violin instruction, a member of the UT Storioni String Quartet and a member of the UT music faculty.

The program will feature Beethoven's Concerto for Piano, Violin, Violoncello, and Orchestra in C Major, Opus 56 (Triple Concerto). Also included will be Sensemaya by S. Revueltas and Roman Festivals by O. Respighi.

Admission is $3; students $1.50.

Sallie Schoen

McCleary Win; MC Forensics Underway

Nancy McCleary, senior Speech-Theatre major, won second place in Interpretation of Prose at the 34th Annual Appalachian Mountain Forensics Tournament held in Boone, N. C. at Appalachian State University on Nov. 15-17.

Ms. McCleary used as her selection a cutting from Gail Parent's Sheila Levine is Dead and Living in New York, an hilarious novel about a young Jewish girl unsuccessful at life, finding a husband, and even a failure at suicide.

The tournament marked this year's competitive premiere for the Maryville College Forensics team. Students from MC participating were Nancy McCleary, Esther Yardumian, and Mary Story in Interpretation of Prose; Ed Loper in Persuasive Speaking and T. V. Commentary; Michael Johnston in T. V. Commentary; and the dynamic dues of McCleary/Yardumian and Story/Johnston in Duo Interpretation of Dramatic Literature.

While Ms. McCleary was the only participant from MC to gain a spot in the final round, the other contestants came dangerously close. All involved received written critiques of their performances. These are presently being used as the basis for adding further 'polish' to the selections in preparation for upcoming tournaments.

The Forensics team functions under the auspices of the MC FORUM for Speech and Debate, led by Mr. Blair Beasley. The team has received invitations to compete at tournaments from all across the nation. At present, plans are being made to attend tournaments at Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C., in January, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, in February, and the Pi Kappa Delta National Convention and Tournament in Philadelphia during late winter.

Participation in FORUM and intercollegiate Forensics is open to any student. Those interested and wishing more information may contact Mr. Blair Beasley or Michael.

B.S.U. Is Active

The Baptist Student Union has gotten off to a great start this year. With most of last year's members back and many new members, the first B. S. U. activity for the school year was supplying free cokes during registration. This was followed by an introductory dinner at the First Baptist Church for all interested students. Four MC students attended the State Convention at Murfreesboro two weekends ago.

Bible studies are scheduled for 7:30 each Tuesday night at the First Baptist Church of Knoxville, which is just down the road from the college, across from the courthouse. The Baptist Student Union wants to invite everyone to come join them at this time.

Glamour's Top Ten College Contest

Maryville College students are invited to participate in GLAMOUR Magazine's Top Ten College Contest for 1975. Young women from colleges and universities throughout the country will compete in GLAMOUR's search for ten outstanding students. A panel of GLAMOUR editors will select the winners on the basis of their solid records of achievement in academic studies and in extracurricular activities on campus or in the community.

The Top Ten College Winners of 1975 will be photographed by leading New York photographers and featured in Glamour's August College Issue. During June, the ten winners will be invited to New York to meet the Glamour Staff and will receive a $500 cash prize.

Anyone who is interested in entering the search should contact Miss Frances Massey, Dean of Students, for more information. The deadline for submitting an application to GLAMOUR is February 15, 1975.

What Is This?

ACC Gives Frosh President Vote

At the Oct. 30, 1974 meeting of the All College Council, it was decided by way of consenous to give the freshman representative a rioting status.

This issue has come up several times in previous years, but no definite action was taken. In the past, the main argument against the proposal has been the inexperience of the incoming freshman in regards to the workings of the ACC. This problem was taken into consideration during the discussion, and the final decision of the Council resulted in a structural change of the present student representation. It was agreed that the freshman representative should be enfranchised, and in order to maintain the 6-6-6 ratio of students, faculty, and staff, the student membership should be changed to two seniors, two juniors, one sophomore, and one freshman. The freshman representative will continue to serve 10 weeks into the following academic year, then a new representative will be decided on by a class nominated-community voted election. The procedure will apply this year (though the student, faculty, staff ratio will be 7-6-6) and all years hereafter. Dr. Copeland plans to present the structural change to the Administrative Committee of the Board of Directors as soon as possible for approval.

Notice

Help! Help!

Some student or faculty member can be extremely helpful to the Foundation Office in the Development Department by returning:

The Foundation Reporter (with many reference notes in it) and

The 4th Edition of American Foundations

These are very important to our foundation program.

from the editor's desk

Behind the Food Crisis: The Agrigovernment Deathgrip

(CPS)—As the World Food Conference opened in Rome, two things were happening:

—Farmers in the US and Canada slaughtered hundreds of cattle to protest the high cost of feed which they said made it impossible for them to maintain their stocks to maturity.

—Each day 60,000 people died of starvation.

Behind the bizarre irony of these two events loomed an infinitely larger demon, popularly called the food crisis, and an infinitely more shadowy figure, popularly called the American Farmer.

As developing third world nations in Rome lashed out against the US for refusing to take the lead in establishing a system of world food reserves, Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, a self-styled free marketeer, noted that such a system "means less chance for profit for farmers."

"We are not stating that we expect starving people to pay for food before they are fed," Harold Steele, president of the Illinois Farm Bureau, continued in the same vein. "But we are saying that neither farmers nor American taxpayers should be expected to carry the burden alone."

But what Butz and Steele both neglected to mention is that the American farmer no longer trods the picturesque fields of his family farm each morning, but rather huddles in the board rooms of the riches and most powerful corporations in the world.

BEHIND THE GREEN DOOR

These new farmers have names like Ralston Purina, Del Monte, General Foods and Safeway. Often they hide behind aliases you wouldn't connect with agriculture: ITT (Smithfield Ham and Wonder Bread); Greyhound (Armour Meats); Dow Chemical (lettuce, poultry and fish) and Boeing Aircraft (potatoes, wine and fish).

As small farms fold at a rate of 2000 a week, many are swept into larger farms ten times their size. In 1935 there were 6.8 million farms in the US; by 1969 there were 2.7 million. And Fortune magazine has predicted that in a few decades there will be only about 100,000 to 200,000 farms left.

The result is that the small farmers left must fight a losing battle in a market monopolized by large corporations.

As long ago as 1966, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) reported that although there were 32,500 food manufacturers, the largest 100 of those firms took 71% of the profits.

Today four firms control 80% of the canning market, 87% of the cereal preparation market, 85% of the chocolate cocoa products, 75% of the bread and prepared flour and 60% of the fluid milk to name just a few, according to Dr. William Shepherd in a study of economic concentrations.

The inevitable has resulted. In 1972 a confidential FTC staff study found that 13 food lines were overpriced by $2.1 billion because of monopoly power. And while Butz et al were grabbing the headlines in Rome, Attorney General William Saxbe announced that the Justice Department has begun investigating the possibility that recent food price increases may have resulted from price-fixing and other violations of the anti-trust laws.

Understandably enough, food industry profits were up 15-20% last uear, according to a study by the First National City Bank of New York. Food has become a $150 billion a year business—eclipsing automobiles, steel, oil and even the defense establishment.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS

Monopoly power in agribusiness developed through a number of methods including vertical integration, interlocking directorates and government cooperation.

Through vertical integration one company begins to control its product from field to store—growing, processing, transporting and marketing. About one-fourth of US agricultural production is vertically integrated, a process that has rapidly squeezed out the family farmer.

Corporate middlemen have begun to control the cooking as well as the production of food. Even the corner hamburger stand is part of the agribusiness scheme: Pillsbury controls Burger King, Ralston Purina controls Jack-in-the-Box, Shakey's Pizza is a subsidiary of Great Western Surger and Burger Chef belongs to General Foods.

Agribusiness power has become even more concentrated through a series of interlocking directorates, in which a board member of one corporation joins with another in the same industry on another corporate board. Where big interests gather in such a way, price fixing has been rife.

For instance, at the boardroom of the Bank of America the following interests meet: Producers Cotton; Di Giorgio (a processing conglomerate); Getty Oil; Kaiser Industries (holder of diverse lands); Consolidated Foods; Von's Grocery Company: American Potato; Standard Oil of California (another large Western land owner); Lucky Stores; Foremost-McKesson (a dairy conglomerate) and Newhall Land and Farming.

Despite his "free market" proclamations, Agriculture Secretary Butz (a former paid board member of Ralston Purina and Stokely Van Camp) has consistently acted to consolidate agribusiness power.

Over the first five years of the Nixon administration, Butz increased farm subsidy payments (money paid farmers not to grow food) to a record $3.6 million a year. But the largest five percent of the farms got more cash subsidies than the smallest 60% according to the Popular Economic Press.

In addition, the potential food sacrificed through farm subsidies over the Nixon years would have easily met world food needs, according to a recent study by the National Farmers Union (NFU).

Over this period taxpayers invested $4 billion more in money not to grow food than it would have cost them to buy food produced on the land that was put to rest, concluded the NFU.

The only effect this $4 billion had was to keep prices high for agribusiness corporations. Viewed in this light, who pays for world hunger becomes a different question.

Outright collusion between government and business became most apparent during the 1972 Soviet wheat deal.

The government withheld information about the deal to everyone but the giant grain dealers, allowing them to buy up wheat supplies cheaply and hold them for delivery to the USSR when prices were higher.

"Some money has been made in the deal," admitted Butz at the time, "some trading companies have made it. But it's the name of the game."

PROFFITT WILL HEAD MC COMMUNITY DRIVE

John W. Proffitt, president of Proffitt's Department Store, has accepted chairmanship of the Maryville College community campaign to be held during the second week in February.

A director of the college, Proffitt is enlisting members of the community steering committee who will also serve as chairman of the several divisions.

Active in business, civic, and church affairs, Proffitt serves on a number of boards and committees in the local community and at the state level.

ACC On Alcohol

To the editor:

It is contended by some people that the ACC distinguishes very little between ideals and realities. They point to the fact that there is a law that prohibits the use of alcohol on campus. This law has hardly ever been properly enforced

Everyone knows that alcohol use on this campus shows any signs but of disappearing. Some people proposed that either the law should be properly inforced or it should be done away with so that the farce that exists now can be eliminated. The ACC has been reluctant to do away with this law-on-paper perhaps because it makes our bulletin look sober. Whatever the reasons may be, but the fact remains that the students are continuing to get high.

I find it hard to understand what ACC has against the use of alcohol by the students; in fact there seems to be a great need for it. The way liberal arts education is these days, it makes you feel as if you are going around in circles, and going around in circles gets to be very monotonous after some time. So there has to be a change in direction, and what could be a better direction than upward. This is where alcohol serves its purpose and helps people get high. The use of alcohol does not involve any immoral objectives, merely the desire for a change . I will not, by any means, give entire credit to alcohol because there are other things also, by virtue of which you can literally "take a trip and never leave the dorm." No technological accomplishment can match this stupendous achievement.

I think its about time the ACC realized the importance and need of getting high. The ACC should consider the prohibition of alcohol once again, and this time, I would suggest, a little more soberly.

Shahbaz Ahmed

Pathways To Change

Questions about the entry of rooms may be answered by this policy paper presented by Mr. Don Elia to the A. C. C.:

Maryville College recognizes the student's right to privacy in his own room. At the same time, the College is responsible for the health, safety, and welfare of all students and the hazard-free maintenance of college buildings. Since limited access to student rooms is at times necessary, a consistent policy must be established.

Except in cases of extreme emergency, no one should enter a student's room unless accompanied by a representative of the Student Personnel Office, or their agent, or the student living in that room. This procedure would be followed during the periodic safety checks which take place during break periods, especially between Interim and Winter Term and during the spring break. These checks are made to avoid problems in electrical wiring, animals left in rooms, and other potentially hazardous situations.

During the school year, when it seems necessary to enter a student room for cause, a student personnel officer or staff member should go to a student's room when he is there. Those wishing to enter the room should knock and identify themselves to the student in order to gain access.

Head Residents, as a part of their responsibility, have access to any part of the building. They too are required to knock and identify themselves in order to gain access to the room. Should the occupant of the room not be there, they must also be accompanied by a second person, usually a student, except again in the case of emergency.

When local law enforcement officials have reason to seek out a student, they should contact the head resident in order to interview a student. The head resident should stay with the student during this interview (unless the student requests that he not do so).

In such cases where there is reasonable evidence that a room should be checked for cause and the occupant refuses admittance, the only course of action may be to obtain a warrant to enter the room. These warrants would originate through the Student Personnel Office.

Basketball Team Prepares For Season

Head Coach Boydson Baird is preparing his 1974-75 Maryville basketball team for the Washington and Lee Tip-Off Tournament next weekend as the start of what he hopes will be an improved season for the Scots continue to rebuild their way back to respectability in basketball. Coming off a 1973-74 season record of 5-21, Maryville achieved one more victory last season than they did in 1972-73 when they were 4-20.

Baird has pretty much the same team back this season lead by Seniors Co-Captains Randy Schauer and Jerry Spicer. Returning Juniors include Randy Lambert, Bruce Guilliame, and Mike Morton, while Kevin McKinstry, Matt Lawless, and Jeff Draper are Sophomores returning for their second season of play. In addition, John Liebrock, who has been in the Service the past several years and who last played basketball for Maryville College in 1969-70 is back. Liebrock is a Senior.

Coach Baird is also welcoming some newcomers to the squad this year. They include Ty Limbaugh, a Sophomore from Mountain Brook, Alabama who previously has played both baseball and football at Maryville, and is now giving basketball a whirl. Larry Walko is a Transfer from Hazelton, Pennsylvania. His tall height is expected to help the Scots. Joe Beals is a Freshman from Knoxville where he played basketball for Doyle High School. He is small, but quick and could be a very valuable commodity.

The Scots have scrimaged a couple of neighboring schools during the preseason in the likes of Tennessee Weslyan and Knoxville College. They looked improved over last season in those two scrimages, although they were only able to beat Tennessee Weslyan while dropping one to Knoxville. However, Maryville basketball fans can expect to see an improved team on the court this season.

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson
Editor-in-chief

Kathy Kirkhart
Assistant Editor

Bill Walker
Business Manager

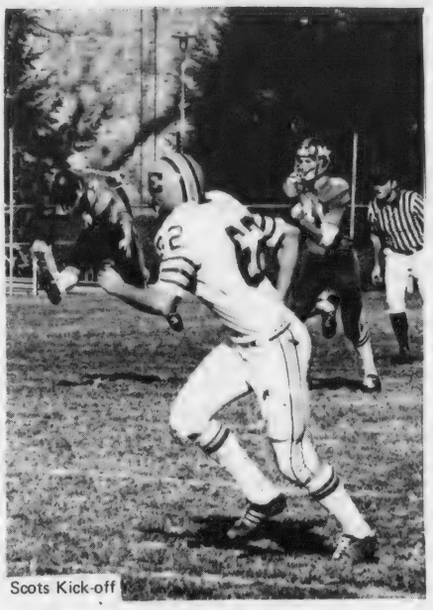
Jeff Draper
Distribution

Raymond L. Stanley Jr.
Technical Editor

Dr. Robert B. Braid
Faculty Advisor

Joe Showalter
Photographer

Gwen Guba
Lay-out Assistant



Echo Philosophy

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Scots Headed For Losing Season

Scots Kick-off

The Maryville College Football team concluded its 1974 home season last Saturday afternoon as the Scots dropped a disappointing 20-15 decision to Emory and Henry College of Emory, Virginia. The Wasps finished their season on a positive note with a 3-8 record, while the Scots stand at 2-5-1 with one game left. The loss assures Maryville of its first losing season in football since 1970 when that squad finished with a 3-6 docket.

Tim Kelly set a Maryville record of five field goals accounting for all of the Scots' 15 points. They were good for 26, 27, 31, 24, and 37 yards respectively. The Maryville offense was unable to get across the goal line all day as the Scots used their usual strategy this year of keeping the ball on the ground and using little of the pass. Offensively, the Scots accumulated 228 yards total offense with 151 of those coming on rushing. Passing wise, Maryville gained 77 yards as Quarterback Bobby Graham completed four of eight. Joe Genualdi was Maryville's offensive star as he gained over 100 yards for the second time this year. The Miramar, Florida Sophomore gained 103 yards on 25 carries. Nobody else came close. Maryville's one big pass play was a 49-yard connection from Graham to Tom Hyne midway through the second period. Jim Lester was on the end of the other three completed passes as he gained 28 yards.

It was a close ballgame all the way. The winning margin for the Wasps came with 1:32 left in the game when Quarterback Mike Roberts hit Reggie Palmer in the endzone for a 14-yard gain. The Scots did have one more shot at a score after that, Ron Marbry intercepted a Graham pass with :18 left that sealed the Maryville defeat.

Maryville scored first as Kelly hit from 26 yards to give the Scots a 3-0 lead early in the first period, but on the following kickoff, Kermit Crockett streaked 92 yards for a touchdown on a beautifully executed return. Kent Garrett's extra point made it 7-3. Kelly hit his second field goal with 4:08 remaining in the first period from 27 yards making it 7-6. Early in the second period, Maryville's Skellie Morris blocked an Emory and Henry punt that set up the third field goal for Kelly after the Scots gained excellent field position only to lose it on two quarterback sackings and two penalties for illegal procedure.

Penalties were a problem for Maryville all afternoon as the Scots lost 182 yards on 18 penalties. Kelly's third field goal was good from 21 yards and gave the Scots a 9-7 lead which is what they took to the dressing room at halftime. The only scoring in the third period came on Kelly's fourth boot from the 24 yard-line with 5:59 left in the period. With the Scots now leading 12-7, the Wasps started a nine play-84 yard drive that culminated with Jeff Stanley bursting across the goal line on a two yard run. Emory opted for the two-point conversion, but failed as the Wasps lead, 13-12, with 8:32 left in the game. Maryville's final score came on Kelly's 37-yard field goal with 4:13 to go as the Scots now lead 15-13. It appeared at that point as though the Scots had it wrapped up. Troy Bowman recovered an Emory fumble with 2:07 left, but the Scots' offense was unable to sustain a drive. Don Moore, who punted five times for 196 yards was forced to punt to the Wasps in this situation which set up the eventual winning score.

Defense was again a salvation for the Scots as they held Emory to 152 yards total offense. Both teams had an equal number of first downs with 14. Joe Lombardo was the Scots' defensive standout. Tomorrow afternoon, the Scots conclude their season against Livingson College at Salisbury, N. C.

Administrators Shudder As Law Opens Student Files

(CPS)—College students now have complete access to all confidential school files kept on them, under the terms of a new federal law.

An amendment to the Education Act of 1965, sponsored by Conservative Sen. James Buckley of New York, gives college students access to their own files, including high school and college personal recommendations. For students who haven't reached 18, the same rights are transferred to their parents, The law goes into effect November 20.

The material open to student inspection includes everything in his or her record: identifying date; scores on standardized intelligence, achievement and aptitude tests; academic work completed; level of achievement, including grades and test results; attendance data; interest inventory results; health data: family background information; teacher or counselor ratings and observations and vertified reports of "serious or recurrent" behavior patterns.

Requests to see the material must be honored within 45 days.

Students may then request a hearing to challenge the content of

continued on page 4

continued from page 3

school records and to request deletion of "inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise inappropriate data contained therein."

The law furthermore forbids third parties—including most federal agencies—access to student records, unless the student has given written consent.

A school may lose its federal aid if it "permits the release" of personally identifiable records or files of students to anyone except: school officials and teachers "who have legitimate educational interests"; the officials of a school to which a student is transferring (if the student approves), and federal and state education officers if the records are necessary to audit and evaluate federally supported education programs.

Schools can also lose funds for failure to inform students of their rights concerning student records. HEW has set up an administrative office and a review board to investigate and settle complaints of violations.

The Buckley amendment has drawn shudders from most college administrators who envision bureaucratic overload and serious ethical and practical problems in regard to students' letters of recommendation.

"Letters of recommendation may tend to be worthless if faculty know that students may read them," commented Charles Whitlock, Dean of Harvard College. "There will be a tendency for them not to be as honest as they were previously," he said.

Stanford President Richard Lyman has written Sen. Buckley that his amendment is causing "considerable anxiety" among members of the American Association of Universities, noting that "obviously a personal recommendation is not likely to be candid if the writer knows it can be read by the subject."

Lobbyist John Morse, director of government relations for the American Council on Education, said the concerns for educators were multifold: "Should records written two or three years before the law was enacted be opened?" he asked, "considering the violation of privacy of the persons who in good faith wrote confidential reports. And what is an official file? Are notes of an interview made by a school's staff psychiatrist to be made available to a student?"

Morse said he feared that schools will probably have to rely more and more "on mathmatical, objective, non-interpretable statistics—namely, grades and test scores."

Meanwhile, most schools have been reviewing their policies on record-keeping and are developing standards as to what should be in cumulative student folders in the first place. According to Higher Education Daily school administrators are being advised to "purge their cumulative files of materials which do not appropraitely serve the student and the school."

If you're not sure what's out there, how can you know where you're going or how to get there?

The Christian Science Monitor can help.

It keeps you squarely in the center of the bold and exciting, the important trends of thought. It gives a firsthand, close-in view of the world's struggles and achievements. You see where you fit in — things you can do.

The Monitor doesn't do your thinking for you. In a quick readable style it gives you the facts to form your own decisions.

News, commentary, the arts, politics, science, fashion, sports, business: the Monitor is an exciting daily newspaper (Monday – Friday). Less than 10¢ a copy on your special rate.

Yes, I'll invest $8.25 in my future, for 4 months of The Christian Science Monitor.
Payment enclosed Bill me later

Name (Please print)
Street Apt.
City
State ZIP

The Christian Science Monitor
Box 125, Astor Station
Boston, Massachusetts 02123

House of Hair

The House of Hair wants you! Jack Coker invites all college students to visit his newly remodeled shop at 321 High Street for the ultimate in stylish hair cuts. Starting at $4.50 for men's cuts, you can't go wrong – your hair will look and feel healthier, and remember, healthy hair is happy hair. Call for an appointment at 982-4384 and take the five minute walk to House of Hair. You'll be glad you did.

advertisement

GIVE BLOOD FOR A TURKEY.

$10 per donation to celebrate Thanksgiving.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

blood alliance

520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone: 637-3171

A BICYCLE WHEEL THAT ISN'T TRU...COST'S MONEY!

- Prevent Adnormal Tire Wear
- Prevent Worn Brake Pads

Wheel Alignment Special

$2.00 ea.

OFFER EXPIRES NOV. 23, 1974
1519 E. BROADWAY

AMLETT BICYCLE SHOP INC.

Baskin-Robbins Announces

Holiday Ice Cream Turkey Raffle

Enter Now - No Purchase Required
Midland Center

Mountain Supply Sporting Goods

Reduction Sale

McKinley Fiberfil Sleeping Bag rated to -10°, was $75.00, now $65.00

Alpine Expedition Pack was $75.00, now $65 - while they last

We also have Famous Woolrich Jackets

Midland Center, Alcoa

Mens Siladium - $47.50
Ladies Gold - $69.00
Ladies Plain - $62.00
Ladies Diamond $79.00

Today Is The Day To Order Your Class Ring!

You don't have to wait! You can order your class ring right now and wear it proudly for years to come. Just stop by and select the style you want, tell us when you plan to graduate (it can be next year or years from now), and we'll do the rest. Start ahead of the class by ordering your class ring today!

We've got what you want.

JEWEL BOX
DIAMOND SPECIALISTS FOR OVER 50 YEARS

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 11 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | December 13, 1974

Cigarette Machines On Campus?

by Mike Wenkstern

Over the past couple of decades, many a nicotine fit has been satiated only by a purposeful trek from within the bounds of the campus, which is dry with regard to cigarette sales, to an establishment outside its periphery, where these instruments of pleasure for many people are sold. As do many of the issues with which the ACC deals, the absence of and desire for cigarette machines on campus has its own history, which will be briefly recounted here. Sometime during the year 1969, when the committee structure was slightly different, a proposal was made to the ACC that a cigarette machine be placed on campus. This proposal was referred to the Social, Cultural, and Recreational Coordinating Council, which considered it at length, and rejected it in light of news releases made public at that time by the U. S. Surgeon General, the gist of which can be read on the side of any standard brand of cigarettes. Also influencing the council's decision were actions of several local hospitals in removing cigarette machines from their premises, the motivations for which were noble and certainly quite obvious. Moving to more contemporary history, the issue was exhumed at the recent Town Hall meeting, at which time it was placed on the ACC's "to be discussed" list, which was lengthening madly. At the November 20 meeting of the All-College, Mr. Elia, Dean of men, presented a report on the cigarette machine question, with regard to the College's present policy and its justifications, which are based on the firmly established relationships between smoking and many diseases, most notably lung cancer. This report was followed by a widely represented and diversely opinionated discussion on whether or not cigarette machines should be placed on campus. This discussion was premature, since there was no real proposal to be decided upon. The discussion focused on the many answers to the questions "Why" and "Why not" with regard to installing

continued on page 4

Enforcement of Rules?

By Peg Leonard

In the Oct. 2 Town Hall Meeting many questions were raised pertaining to the enforcement of school policy. More specifically – "Who is responsible for the enforcement of the various policies concerning the residential life of the students?"

The Community Standards and Residential Life Committee has, on a very limited basis, been dealing with these questions. Realizing the immensity of the task we decided to deal with the issue a stop at a time. Consequently we started by calling a meeting of the committee members and all Resident Assistants and Senior Counselors on Wed., Nov. 13, 1974. This was done because the job description of the R. A.'s was not entirely clear. We focused on the question "Are the R. A.'s and Senior Counselors primarily counselors or are they enforcers of school policies?"

During this meeting, Mr. Don Elia, Dean of Men, offered his interpretation that the R. A.'s are primarily counselors, not policemen. This interpretation relieves them from feeling responsibility to 'police' the halls, thus damaging the relation ships they try to develop with those living around them.

Certainly, on a much larger basis, this does not resolve the various issues that have been presented to this committee since September (i. e. entry of student's rooms, use of alcohol, problems with visitation standards, etc.). It should be noted, though, that the meeting of Nov. 13 wasn't called in hope of finding easy solutions or workable answers to these problems within the two hours allotted. This meeting was intended as a starting point. Since then we felt it imperative that College policies be made clear and available to each student so that the student can respond to the policy in regard to what is or is not occuring within his or her dorm. Consequently Dean Massey

continued on page 4

Special Interim Edition

This issue of the Echo has been prepared by members of the All-College Council in response to questions raised during the Oct. 2, 1974 CIV-Town Hall Meeting. Space limitations have prevented this from taking place up to now.

The regular staff of the Echo has only helped in the technical aspects of this issue. The content of this edition is the sole responsibility of the ACC who has provided the finances necessary for this issue and not the editors of the Echo.

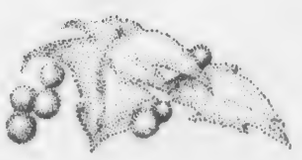
In all answers printed, an attempt has been made to present a clear explanation of information provided by the numerous persons reporting to the All-College Council during Fall Term. These answers are not intended as justifications of the status-quo. Rather, they should be seen as the information necessary to begin informed discussion of the problems facing Maryville College. As the All-College Council looks ahead to the remainder of the academic year our hope is that the results of these discussions will take form as specific proposals and alternatives to present policy aimed at enhancing the life of the College and all its members.

Michael Johnston



Town Hall Meeting On Wednesday

The second regular Town Hall Meeting of the year will be held Wed., Dec. 18, 1974 at 9:20 a.m. in Wilson Chapel. CIV credit will be given.

The program, under the direction of ACC members Tom Martin and Michael Johnston, will follow the same basic format as the previous Town Hall on Oct. 2. Several short presentations will be made, followed by an opening of the floor for questions.

Many administrative officers of the College will be present to provide clarification and additional information on the issues faced by the ACC during Fall Term if such questions arise. The Council will also request from the community new questions and areas of investigation for consideration during Winter Term.

By popular demand, the engaging duo of Wenkstern and Sortino will again grace the stage with their own brand of new and stimulating insights into the workings of campus government.

Curtailing Use of Energy

by Tom Martin

The entire country is in an energy crunch or energy crisis depending on who you talk to or where you live. Maryville College is no exception. Last winter the problem was the availability of heating oil. Maryville asked for a 20% reduction and was able to conserve that much. This year the problem is electrical energy and the situation promises to be worse than last winter's. The gist of Maryville's plight has been spelled out in the letter to all students, faculty and staff from Mr. Crawford and Mr. McDade. Maryville is attempting to make a voluntary 30% cut in electricity. If we do not we will be faced with mandantory penalties and possible shutdowns. Because of the rise in coal-thus-electricity prices of over 30%, Maryville will still be paying the same or more while receiving 30% less electricity.

Many measures have already been taken on the campus in general and more will be forthcoming. The thermostats in all buildings have been set at 65 degrees. All compressors in water fountains have been disconnected. Air handlers have been shut off completely where possible and at night in other buildings. Much corridor lighting has been disconnected and flourescent lighting in all areas has been cut down as much as possible (up to 50% in some areas). Other measures have been taken in specific buildings across the campus.

There is a great deal that the students can do individually and situations where students gather for one reason or another. Mr. Charles Merril, the CIV speaker of Oct. 16 stated that this generation will be the first generation to have a lower standard of living (materially) than their parents. This winter may mark the first real evidence of that fact. The grim part is that we have very little choice in the matter. We must all become conscious of our individual usage of electricity and cut down. Many possibilities are obvious; turning off lights, cutting down on appliance use, using less hot water and running heaters less are all ways individuals can help. We may (or perhaps should) get to a point where collective measures will be necessary (or beneficial). These could range from closing certain campus facilities earlier or on certain days to the rescheduling of some activities. Though no measures of this type are now planned we need to begin thinking about them.

This will be a major topic for discussion at the upcoming CIV/Town Hall meeting Dec. 18. Bring your ideas to that meeting and begin to increase your own awareness and that of those you come in contact with as to the energy dilemma.

"PEACE. IT'S WONDERFUL."

Use of Damage Money For Dorm Repairs

by Michael Johnston

Students returning to Maryville College each year often comment on a lack of noticeable repairs in the dormitories. Having paid damage fees the previous spring, questions about the use of damage money have justifiably been raised.

Mr. Neil McDade, Administrative Vice-President of the College, has offered some clarification of present policies regarding the use of money collected for dorm damages. This information was presented at the Oct. 16, 1974 of the All-College Council. Additional information was provided by Mr. McDade during the preparation of this article.

Maryville College at present follows a flexible policy in maintaining its facilities. Yearly damage reports from the head residents in each dormitory are given monetary value by the Treasurer's office. This valuation becomes the basis for assessment of fees to each dormitory resident. Whenever possible, residents are charged for damages they have caused (i. e. damage to individual rooms). When individual responsibility for specific damages cannot be determined (as is often the case with damage to bathrooms, lounges, and common rooms) the cost is split among the residents of a particular quad, floor, or dormitory.

Money received in payment for damages goes directly to the College's General Income. From the General Income comes money to meet the operating expenses of the College as a whole. Based on costs for the preceeding year, a certain amount is projected for use in maintenance of the dormitories.

As expenses are incurred they are paid for out of the General Fund. These expenses include routine maintenance (replacing lightbulbs, servicing heating and air conditioning systems, etc.), preventive maintenance (refinishing the window frames and ledges in Carnegie to prevent rot) and emergency repairs as they become necessary. Money spent repairing damages also comes from the General Fund. Periodic inspections of dormitories are made to locate specific maintenance requirements (see "Pathways to Change" in the Nov. 22, 1974 Echo for policy regarding entrance of student rooms during the academic year). As needs for repairs are noted, they are assigned priority in terms of immediate need. Minor repairs may be authorized directly by Mr. Hugh Crawford, College Business Manager, for attention by the maintenance staff. Larger repairs (such as replacing carpets or damaged furniture) may necessitate consultation with Mr. McDade. They may also be assigned priority by an informal administrative committee composed of Dr. Copeland; Dean Blair; Dr. George Kramer, Dean of Student Relations; Mr. Milton Smith, Resident Counselor in Development; Mr. Raymond Brahams, Administrative Assistant to the President, and Mr. McDade.

This system of priorities and assessment allows for a flexible approach in meeting the maintenance needs of the College, giving areas of greatest need first attention. Mr. McDade indicated, however, that the College attempts at all times to maintain its housing in a manner acceptable to those living in it. He also recognizes that the present policies do have some drawbacks and that suggestions for improvements in policy and dormitory conditions are most welcome.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

It is difficult to express my disappointment in the letter to the editor concerning the ACC on Alcohol in the Nov. 22, 1974 issue

The question of alcohol use is a very real issue and I resent it being taken lightly. I submit that it is the person who wrote the letter that is unable to distinguish ideals from realities, not the ACC. Further, I cannot see that such irresponsible statements as, "I think its about time the ACC realized the importance of getting high," even in jest, will in any way help resolve the discrepency between rule and practice. Shahbaz, jokes such as this can do much more harm than good. Please try to write letters on serious matters "a little more soberly."

Signed,
Pete Xiques
Bruce Hill

To the Editor:

As a freshman, I have many school regulations and policies to learn. While I learn these, new ones and admendments are constantly being made. The changes come from the All-College Council. I find that it is hard enough to learn the present policies much less trying to learn the many changes. The best way to learn both has been to attend the ACC meetings and forums.

At the ACC meetings, I can keep up with the future plans, policies, and changes the college has in mind. I have attended four of the ACC meetings. At these meetings I have heard discussions on campus security guards, the freshman's class president voting power, the school's interpretation of the Buckley admendment, the school's policy on student's room privacy, and I have heard committee reports on future plans. The meetings are boring because the Council does follow strict parliamentary procedures. Yet, it is evident that if they were not strict about these procedures they would accomplish very little.

The ACC forums have a guest from part of the school's administration as often as possible. At some of the forums the guest list included: President Copeland; Dr. Kramer from Student Affairs. At these forums I have learned some of the school's policies in admissions and in the dorms. The forums act as a catalyst for the people who attend to start thinking of ideas, suggestions, and complaints they have for the college.

continued on page

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson
Editor-in-chief

Kathy Kirkhart
Assistant Editor

Bill Walker
Business Manager

Jeff Draper
Distribution

Raymond L. Stanley Jr.
Technical Editor

Dr. Robert B. Braid
Faculty Advisor

Joe Showalter
Photographer

Gwen Guba
Lay-out Assistant

Echo Philosophy

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Notes On The Ordering Of Textbooks

(Editor's note – Miss Margaret Hennemuth, manager of the MC Bookstore, prepared the following outline in response to questions about Bookstore supplies. The outline, sent to Dr. Blair is indeed self-explanatory and has been printed with only minor revisions.)

A. Sources of information
1) teacher's estimate
2) class rolls in Registrar's Office
3) previous years enrollment
4) estimate of enrollment from Admissions Office

Process
1) The teacher's estimate of the class enrollment is used. This figure is checked against the figure obtained from class rolls in the Registrar's Office.
2) If no estimate is given by the teacher, the number of books ordered is the number on the class roll in the Registrar's Office plus three (sometimes more depending on past experience as to which classes are more popular).
3) In ordering books for classes in which freshmen may enroll, last year's enrollment is a guideline as to how the new students might enroll. The estimate as to the number of new students might enroll. The estimate as to the number of new students expected is obtained from Admissions' Office.
4) Textbook orders are placed with the publisher 6-8 weeks before the beginning of the term.

Results
1) Books are short in some classes because
a) they are "out of stock" at publishers – obtain books from used bookstore if possible
b) Overstock of books in other classes because
a) of schedule changes
b) students bought books from – other students
– book exchanges on campus
– bookstores in Knoxville

D. Some thoughts
1) The student does not feel obligated to purchase his textbooks at the Book Store. He will get them elsewhere if he can. The Book Store has an overstock of hundreds of dollars each term because of this.
2) Item 4 under B should perhaps be discussed sometime– i. e. should we buy more used books?
a) book orders from teachers would need to be turned into Book Store earlier
b) some used books received are badly marked up
c) some students do not want used books
3) The Book Store is aware that the access to textbooks at the beginning of the term is essential to the student and teacher, but at the same time the college does not have thousands of dollars to tie up in overstock and the Book Store lacks shelf space for them.
4) Returning books is an expensive process and not always possible
a) example: in the fall of 1973, 150 of a certain text were ordered for a particular core course. After the books were here, it was decided to use it in another core course instead (a much smaller class). This resulted in an overstock of 104 books, 30 of which were returnable. This left the Book Store with 74 copies of a $3.95 book.

No Money Available for Band Uniforms

by Mike Wenkstern

Among the many and various questions which were raised at the October 2 Town Hall Meeting was one of very thoughtful concern on the part of the individual from whom it came, and one for which the answer is readily available and easily understandable. The answer is "money" and the question was "why not buy new uniforms for the Maryville College band." When asked for information concerning this question, Dr. Harter explained that money was simply not available at the present time for the purchase of new uniforms, which are quite expensive, and said further that it was his wish that a kind and wealthy benefactor would donate money for such a cause. For the time being then, and perhaps for an additional length of time, in view of the current economic scene, we will have to appreciate our band for what they are and how they sound, rather than for the newness of their uniforms.

Pearson Is Open To All

by Mike Wenkstern

"Living in Pearson's Hall is great. It's the nicest and surely the most quiet and comfortable dormitory on campus." Such are the opinions of many who live and have lived in the "new" Pearson's Hall, although at least one case exists in which a student moved out of Pearson's and into Carnegie because he felt that the former resembled an institution of some sort, an insane asylum or a nursing home perhaps. As is true of all dormitories on campus, Pearson's has both good and bad points, with regard to the quality of life obtainable there. Another point which is held in common by all dormitories is the methods by which rooms are selected and assigned. This involves the prerogative of students to live in the same room from one year to the next. When drawings are held for rooms in Pearson's during the spring term, the occupants of each room have the option of keeping the same room, or participating in the drawing for another room with an advantage over students from other dorms who are seeking a room. In short, equal opportunity is indeed a principle in action for rooming in Pearson's Hall, the only exception being that the cost is slightly higher, and justifiably so.

Cuts In Federal Education Aid

(CPS)—To those who are looking for stable or increased federal spending on education in 1976, one government budget specialist has some simple advice: "Don't."

Most federal aid to education is best described as "income distribution," according to Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Director Roy Ash, and such programs will have to be cut to achieve a balanced 1976 budget. Ash sees the alternatives to program cuts as deficit spending or higher taxes.

The OMB director differentiated "income distribution" programs like education funding from the cost of "running the government" and said. "The main role of government is no longer governing; it is redistribution of income and wealth."

Despite Ash's warning, proponents of increased aid to higher education have pointed out that while it is the executive branch which recommends budget figures, it is Congress which does the actual appropriating.

In recent years Congress has regularly increased federal funding to higher education over the recommendations of the Nixon administration.

Opens Student Files

esident Ford has signed into law amendment sponsored by Senator ckley of New York entitled the mily Educational Rights and vacy Act of 1974. Known as the ckley Amendment, this legisla- n grants to college students the ht to inspect, to challenge and a degree control the release of ormation about a student in his lege file.

rtain sections of this legislation not clear and it is anticipated t changes and amendments to law will be made by Congress s month.

aryville College is following sely these developments and will tline the rights of students under s legislation as classifications made. A college committee, nsisting of Professor Braid, Mr. hams, Mr. McDade and Dean mer, are following these develop- nts and students should feel free consult with any of these commit- members if they have any ncerns about current status of Buckley Amendment.

Weekend Buildings Hours

by Tom Martin

At the Oct. 2 CIV/Town Hall concerning campus goverance the issue of extending the open hours of various campus facilities was raised. This issue had been under discussion last year. Following the CIV, this matter was referred to the Learning Resources Committee—Dr. Young Chairman, Suzanne Phillips Co-Chairman. That committee has begun the search for student preference by distributing a questionnaire to students. The purpose of the questionnaire was to establish the hours that students who used certain facilities wanted them open and the possible number of students who would be using the buildings during possible extended hours. The exact results of the questionnaire are not available at this writing but there are several factors involved in extending the open hours of any of the campus facilities. The most important factor is the present energy situation and the complications it is causing (to be handled in another article in this issue.) Maryville must either voluntarily cut its energy use or face mandantory fines or shutdowns. The financial straits that the college finds itself in are also an important influence. In view of these present reasons it is unlikely that it will be possible to extend any operating hours (in fact some further reduction may be necessary). The Learning Resources Committee is trying to establish the student's preferences so that these can be given further evaluation if and when these limiting factors are removed. The operating hours of all facilities are listed in the college calendar/handbook and special situations can possibly be arranged by talking with people in charge of each building, Dr. Young Suzanne Phillips, or Dean Blair.

Open Letter To College Students

Here are a few facts you may or may not be aware of:

* The U. S. military budget is 60 times greater than the budget for overseas economic aid. During a 14-hour period, the Defense Department spends more than the entire annual budget of the United Nations food program.

* Only about 40 percent of Americans eligible for food stamps currently receive them.

* The ad budget of General Foods is almost three times bigger than the budget of the Food Bureau of the U. S. Food and Drug Administration.

* The American meat-based diet deprives the world of 18 million tons of cereal protein, an amount almost equal to the world's protein deficiency.

* President Ford, during the recent World Food Conference, denied the U. S. delegation permission to increase emergency grain shipments from one million to two million tons to India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Pakistan, and Tanzania.

* Americans consume, on the average, about one hundred pounds of sugar each year. Some foods—sugar-coated cereals, for instance—contain up to 50 percent sugar.

* 40 million Americans are overweight; almost half die of heart disease.

Soaring food prices, increasing world food shortages, and mounting evidence of the dangerous health effects of the overly processed and refined American diet indicate that, if left to its own devices, the Federal government will not take the steps necessary to develop a responsible food policy. The food industry—the corporations that bring you Cool-Whip and Twinkies—have sold Americans on a diet of sugar-laden, fat-rich "convenience" foods that are contributing to a national epidemic of heart disease, diabetes, hypertension and obesity. While encouraging unhealthy eating habits through advertising and availability, these corporations are also contributing to high food prices. A Federal Trade Commission study estimated that consumers were overcharged $2 billion in 1972, because of the monopolistic structure of several segments of the food industry.

As government and corporate decision-makers allow the food situation to deteriorate further, it becomes clear that individuals and organizations in communities and campuses across the nation will have to begin a massive education effort—an effort aimed at changing personal eating habits; improving food welfare programs; reforming corporations that promote the sale of billions of dollars worth of nutritionally-empty, resource-squandering junk foods; investigating the energy-and resource-intensive practices of agribusiness that are forcing small farmers off the land; and developing national policies which recognize the needs of hungry people at home and abroad.

This job requires a national organizing effort. The non-profit Center for Science in the Public Interest, inconjunction with dozens of other groups and individuals, is building a movement to take on this task, a movement that will blossom on FOOD DAY, a national day of action on the food crisis. FOOD DAY is set for April 17, 1975.

We hope that college and university students will take part in FOOD DAY, using their campuses as organizing focal points for both campus- and community-oriented activities. As a first step in accomplishing this, we urge students and faculty to set up joint committees to investigate what can be done at your campus, such as creating a campus-community garden or food coop, initiating sweeping changes in university food-buying policies, or planning massive teach-ins for April 17th.

Students at the Universities of Michigan and Wisconsin are already planning teach-ins for next Spring. At Yale, a student-faculty committee has planned a six-week lecture-discussion series on world food problems and has already organized a fast in which over 2000 students participated.

The food problems which face the nation and the world demand immediate action, and there are dozens of things you can do now. These include:

* Write to President Ford and urge him to make additional food aid available to needy nations as soon as possible. Urge your university to needy nations as soon as possible. Urge your university president or student council to do likewise.

* Find out how much fertilizer your university uses to keep its lawns green, and request that such wasteful use of this critically-needed resource be halted.

* Request that at least half the selections in vending machines on campus contain wholesome snack foods—fruit, fruit juice, yogurt, unsalted nuts and seeds, etc.—instead of junk foods.

* Contact local consumer, environmental, or Public Interest Research Groups (PIRG) to find out what activities can be undertaken in your community.

Initial FOOD DAY actions may not make headlines or immediately change Federal or corporate policies, but they will put decision-makers on notice that the American public is no longer willing to participate in the wasteful use of food resources.

The rise of the environmental movement and the end to direct American involvement in the Vietnam War are directly traceable to campus activity. The students of America can once again make a commitment to actions that can result in long-overdue changes in the way in which the Federal government, corporate America, and individuals decide how and to whom food will be allocated.

FOOD DAY national offices are open at 1785 Massachusetts Ave. NW, Room 206, Washington, D. C. 20036 (202-462-8510). If you are interested in organizing FOOD DAY teach-ins or other activities, contact the office for further information and organizing suggestions.

Sincerely,

Kathy Kelly
President
National Student Association

Frances Moore Lappe author of Diet for a Small Planet

William Sloane Coffin
Chaplain
Yale University

Michael Jacobson
FOOD DAY coordinator
Center for Science in the Public Interest

continued from page 1

has been combining Cues for Residence Hall Living 1974-75 and A Handbook on Residence Hall Policy and Practice 1972 in the hopes of compiling a more specific school policy to be made available at the earliest possible date.

In regards to entry of student rooms, Dean Elia presented before the All College Council (Nov. 20, 1974) a outlining administration guidelines for entrance of student quarters (See "Pathways to Change" the Echo, Nov. 22, 1974 for the text of this paper). The Residential Life committee will be calling a meeting of students who still have questions concerning this issue. The meeting will be held during the first week of Winter Term, time and place will be announced.

In response to the questions the committee has received about the alcohol problem we are in the process of considering proposals submitted by several students, writing other schools of similar philosophy and structure, and going tediously into the proposals that have failed to try to discover their weaknesses. This process will take a lot of time, work and respect for the differences in outlook on this problem.

We encourage any questions, proposals, or ideas that each of you have that would be of help to the committee. Those interested in responding to these issues before the committee or who would like a meeting called to deal with a specific problem concerning the residential life at Maryville College may contact either Peg Leonard (Box 2482) or Dr. Gale Rhodes (Box 2896).

continued from page 1

the machines, and it was concluded that the matter might be most effectively dealt with when and if a proposal is submitted. Anyone who desires to submit such a proposal may check his governance manual or ask a member of the ACC what steps need be taken to do so. Meanwhile, it appears as though if you want to smoke, you'll have to walk.

Between the forums and m
the students could learn abou school's policies and what thi governs the new policies. Yet, few people attend. Therefore,
Council plans on reducing the ums from once a week to onc month. The ACC has made a effort in trying to gain recogn from the students with their Hall-CIV, their forums, and th
"Pathways To Change" colum the Echo. Now is the time for students to give an honest effo go to the forums, at least, and of one of the committees unde ACC.

Joe Wh

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 12 | Maryville College | January 24, 1975

oprano Beatty To Appear Here

Sarah Beatty, soprano, will be pre-ented in a Performing Artist concert t Maryville College Friday, January 4 at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Hall of he Fine Arts Center.

Ms. Beatty performs as a soloist in he Chicago area and has appeared with the Music of the Baroque Series, he Elgin Symphony and Choral Un-on, and the Joffrey Ballet, among thers. Last summer she participated n the Santa Fe Opera's apprentice rogram.

The Kentucky-born soprano made er solo debut with the Chicago Sym-hony Orchestra last season when, n one hour's notice, she was chosen rom the Chicago Symphony Chorus o substitute for ailing Wendy Fine in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" under he direction of Sir Georg Solti.

The performance was impressive nough for Sir Georg to allow Ms. Beatty to sing the following evening nd critics hailed it as a "brilliant erformance."

World-famous soprano Brigit Nilsson was in the audience and later congratulated and toasted Ms. Beatty on her performance.

Ms. Beatty, a Maryville College graduate, studied at the Manhattan School of Music and received her master's degree from Northwestern University.

She will be assisted by Sallie Schoen at the piano for the Friday performance. The program will include:

Happy, Iphis, Shalt Thou Live
. . . . . G. F. Handel

Four Songs
. . . . . Joseph Marx

Fulvia's Recitative and Aria (Act III, Ezio)
. . . . . W. A. Mozart

Five Greek Folk Songs
. . . . . Maurice Ravel

Cycle of Holy Songs
. . . . . Ned Rorem

General admission is $2; students $1. Maryville College students and staff will be admitted free with advanced tickets from the college service center.

ightfoot Retires

Dr. Viola M. Lightfoot has retired s Maryville College registrar, a posi-on she has held since 1957.

Dr. Lightfoot, a native of Chattan-oga, was graduated cum laude in nglish from Maryville College in 934. As a student she worked in the egistrar's Office. Following gradua-on, she remained in that office as n assistant until she was appointed egistrar.

At a recent luncheon in her honor t the college, Dr. Frank McClelland, ean Emeritus of the college, cited r. Lightfoot as a "courageous guard-n of scholarly achievement and cademic integrity."

He recalled that President Emeri-us Ralph W. Lloyd once said of Dr. ightfoot: "Her service as a student as so valuable, her ability so super-r, and her disposition and persona-y so acceptable, that we decided keep her on the college staff if pos-ble.

Dr. Lloyd said that no other per-on in the college had known so many tudents by name, face, mind, and asic character as Dr. Lightfoot. "Vio-Lightfoot has given more good ad-ce and counsel to college students han has any professional counselor this part of America," he said.

In addition to her duties at the col-ge, Dr. Lightfoot has always been ctive in church and civic work. She an elder in New Providence Presby-erian Church and an active member

continued on page 4

Echo Editor Sought

Applications are now being accepted for the editorship of the Highland Echo. Candidates must have a grade point average of 2.0 or higher and submit a trial issue before the end of winter term. Interested students should contact Mr. Blair Beasley or Emerson Henderson before February 7, 1975.

Buckley Law Clarified

(CPS)—Thank-you cards and letters have been flowing in from college administrators to Sen. James Buckley's (C-NY) office, following the passage of a clarifying amendment to the controversial privacy law allowing students access to their school files.

The final stage in the complex and often dramatic history of the Buckley law was played last week when President Ford signed the amendment into law and the department of Health Education and Welfare (HEW) issued guidelines and interpretations.

The amendment was signed January 2, just two days before colleges were required to begin honoring student requests to see their files.

Four days later HEW published its guidelines, allowing for a 60-day period, instead of the usual 30, for public comment. No major complaints against the regulations are expected, according to those close to the law.

The primary complaint against the original law was that confidential letters, such as letters of recommendation, would be open for student inspection, violating the privacy of letter writers and discouraging frank and honest evaluations in the future.

With the passage of the amendment, the law exempts such confidential letters and recommendations placed in student records prior to January 1, 1975, and provides that a student may waive his right to examine future letters having to do with admissions, job placement, and receipt of awards.

Other major clarifications allow students to copy their files and permit "directory information" (such as a student's name, address, telephone number, and date and place of birth) to be made public without specific permission.

According to the amendment, college students are not to see their parents' confidential financial statements, law enforcement information from college security offices can be excluded from student records if the information is used only for enforcement, and grades and bills can be sent to parents of dependent students without student consent.

Students have the right to be provided a list of the types of education records which are maintained by the institution and relate directly to students. In addition, students have the right to obtain copies of those records, which may be at the expense of the student, but should not exceed the actual cost to the college of reproducing them.

In sum, students don't have access to: parents' financial records; confidential letters of recommendation placed in files before January 1; law enforcement records; physician, psychiatrist, or professional records, and other "reasonable exceptions," such as private notes a teacher may keep for his or her own use.

Students do have access to files, documents and other materials which directly relate to the student and are maintained by the school. Students are defined in the law as being both those currently enrolled at the school and former students, but not those who applied and weren't accepted.

Third parties who have access to student records besides the student include: officials with legitimate interest at the school, officials of other schools to which a student seeks to transfer, and parents of dependent students.

The privacy law permits the government to withhold federal funds from any school which fails to allow students access to their files or fails to allow students an opportunity to contest inaccuracies.

The law will be universially applicable to both state and private schools as almost all secondary educational institutions receive some sort of federal funding through the Office of Education.

Vespers

A traditional post-Christmas Festival of Lights service, celebrating through the lighting of candles the manifestation of the light of Christ, will be held in Wilson Chapel Sunday, January 29, at 7:00 p.m.

Hess Named Registrar

Martha Hess of Knoxville, a former faculty member at Farragut High School, has been named registrar of Maryville College. She replaces Dr. Viola Lightfoot who recently retired.

Miss Hess served as chairman of the Mathematics Department at Farragut and later as chairman of the English Department. She has had extensive experience in curriculum and calendar planning, having served on the committee to plan the year-round operation for the Knox County School System.

Maryville College dean, Dr. Carolyn Blair, said, "An effective college registrar must have a rare combination of talents and experience. We think we have found that combination in Martha Hess. From her student days at Maryville College she brings an understanding of the small liberal arts college. From her more recent experiences in administration and as a teacher of English and mathematics, she brings to this position the necessary breadth and perspective on the total educational process."

Miss Hess, who is a 1967 Maryville

continued on page 3

Guest Viewpoint

Memorial: A Memorable Dorm

by Shahbaz Ahmed

After careful consideration, it has been declared by the ACC that Memorial Hall, almost certainly, will be closed down next fall. To some who live in this dorm, this news is a heartbreaking one. Others don't really know much about Memorial Hall except that it is mostly occupied by joks or atheletes. But there is more to Memorial than that and now that this monumental building approaches a point whereafter it will be out of use indefinitely, it's time we had a better insight into Memorial Hall.

It is known correctly that most of the residents of Memorial are athletes. But it will be a more accurate statement that two kinds of people reside in Memorial: athleletes and nature-lovers. The office of student personnel prefers to assign athletes to this dorm, and understandably so. One has to have the strength and endurance of an athlete to live in this dorm. Memorial is well-equipped for athletes. Athletes need to stretch out from time to time. The halls of Memorial are ideal places to fly frisbies or hit baseballs, unless you hit a light bulb. When that happens, it gets a little darker in the hall but you can always look at the bright side. And as the old axiom stands: wins some lose some; you may lose a few bulbs, but you save a lot of electricity.

Some people like Memorial because it is a more natural dorm than others. It has wooden floors, wooden ceilings and doorless bathrooms. It's like living in the woods. It is cold in winter, hot in summer, and wet in rain. An ideal place for nature-lovers. They complain under no circumstances. as love conquers all. I am a resident of Memorial not because I am an athelete or a nature-lover, I am both.

The students in Memorial do their interior decorating themselves. In some rooms the pages of men's entertainment magazines are used as wallpaper. Reason? Looks good and saves money.

Memorial Hall has a lot more stories than can be told and it is a fact that anyone who has lived here even for one day has loved it dearly.

The history of Memorial dates as far back as 1871 A. D.; the year of its completion. When it closes, it will touch the hearts of all its residents. Everyone agrees that more than anything else, it's the kind face of Mom Harrison which will be missed most.

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson — Editor-in-chief
Kathy Kirkhart — Assistant Editor
Bill Walker — Business Manager
Jeff Draper — Distribution
Raymond L. Stanley Jr. — Technical Editor
Dr. Robert B. Braid — Faculty Advisor
Joe Showalter — Photographer
Gwen Guba — Lay-out Assistant

Pathways To Change

Freshman Year: What Should It Be?

Freshman year got you down? Or is it more exciting than you expected? Or if you have already survived a freshman year: Was it barely with boredom or greatly with gusto?

If you teach freshmen, is it simply routine or a call to burn the midnight oil of creativity? Or do you not teach freshmen but wish you could?

Whatever your answers, you should know that the Instructional Program Committee (IPC) has formed a subcommittee to look into the possible revision of the freshmen year curriculum. We are starting our thinking with two broad questions: (1) What experiences should students have during their freshmen year? (2) How do we arrange things so they have those experiences?

The nature of these questions should be a clue to the fact that we are trying to think at this stage in terms other than the standard patterns. We believe that if we can answer these questions with the kind imagination and creativity that a freshmen year itself should have, the pattern of involvement with student and faculty learners will come with less difficulty.

We are beginning three lines of information gathering: (1) a questionnaire to the faculty, (2) a series of formal meetings with students in dorms and (3) a survey of what is happening in the freshmen year at other colleges. As these sources of information begin to come together we will do other things, such as form a few shall groups to brainstorm a freshman year curriculum.

By the end of February we plan to submit to the IPC a report that suggests a number of possible freshman year curricula, each with a list of strengths and weaknesses. Then the IPC will begin the process of critical examination to see which proposals should be studied in depth, particularly in terms of the resources we have at present and those we would profitably obtain in the future.

The question has been raised: what should the freshmen year be like? You can participate in the answer if you think the question is an important one needing a new answer.

The subcommittee:
Marja Hanson
Randolph Shiel
Lisa Wilson
David Young

Letters To The Editor

Dear Cold-Hearted Administrators

Dear Cold-Hearted Administrators:

In spite of running the risk of losing my 49 degree living quarters in Lloyd, I feel I must write this letter of complaint and question to those of you in Anderson. I am presently sitting at my desk chilled to the bone anxiously awaiting A-hour and a warm classroom. Although it is 8:30 at night, whether or not our rooms will receive even our 2 hour allotment of warmth, remains to be seen. Not surprisingly, in searching for a warm building today, I found Anderson Hall to be the coziest escape from my iceberg of a dorm. In truth, however, I do not begrudge you your vitally needed heat; I only request that, you provide my dormitory with enough heat to stop my hands from trembling. It is quite impossible to study under these conditions or even to remain healthy.

If by any chance you feel my statements are an exaggeration, I invite all of you to spend even 30 minutes in this dorm and discover the unbearable conditions here. Because I never expect to see any of your faces over here in the future, however, by informing you that every breath I take and exhale in my room can be seen before my eyes in the form of smoke, I will assuredly consider my statements proven.

Please take immediate action in this matter.

Sincerely Yours,
Arlene Ignico

ACC Meeting

Energy Problem Dominates Meeting

A called meeting of the All College Council was held at 7:00 p.m. on Monday, January 20. The purpose of the meeting was to clear up some issues and answer questions concerning the students return to campus.

Needless to say, the main question the students brought up centered around the heating of the dorms. President Copeland gave a report on the status of our fuel allocation, and said that a lot of fuel had been saved by the two week shut down. He also explained that it will take three or four days for the dorms to warm up to the normal operating temperature.

Other business of the meeting included a welcome to Dave Young as the new faculty coordinator of religious life and a report from the Administrative Committee acknowledging the enfranchisement of the Freshman representative.

After a brief discussion of the upcoming Town Hall meeting, the meeting was adjourned.

CAREER EXPLORATION FOR SENIORS

Seniors who are interested in identifying possible future careers and in becoming actively involved in the job hunt process are invited to become part of the "Career Exploration Group for Seniors". This group will be meeting on Wednesday afternoons from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Lounge beginning Jan. 28th. Topics to be covered in the group include the following: career decision making, writing resumes, the job interview, identifying possible employers, and future life planning. If you feel a need to discuss these topics or others, please come by the Career Planning Office in Fayerweather to sign up for the group. There will be some work involved in being a group member, but we will also have a lot of fun.

Registration Lines Are Hell!

continued from page 1

College graduate, is working toward a graduate degree in continuing and higher education at the University of Tennessee.

She is soloist with the Second Methodist Church Choir in Knoxville and a member of the Knoxville Choral Society. She also is active in East Tennessee YWCA and Girl Scouts and has served as director of Camp Tanasi for three summers.

Miss Hess's father was the late J. P. Hess who served as secretary of the University of Tennessee Board of Trustees for 35 years.

Jackson State Case Goes Before Supreme Court

by Curt Koehler

(CPS)—Although it charged Mississippi highway patrolmen with using "excessive" and "deadly" force to quell the students' May 1970 campus disturbance, a federal appeals court nonetheless denied damages to students killed and wounded at Mississippi's Jackson State College.

This seemingly contradictory ruling is the keystone for an upcoming appeal of the case to the US Supreme Court, a lawyer close to the case has revealed.

The action came in a $13.8 million suit filed on behalf of the next of kin of two dead and three wounded students against members of the Mississippi Highway Patrol and the Jackson Police Department plus the State of Mississippi, the City of Jackson, and various other officials.

The law firm that handled much of the earlier appeal work is expected to file a bid to argue the case before the Supreme Court.

The appeals court decision had noted that two black students died and 12 were wounded when 38 patrolmen aimed at the students and opened fire—30 with shotguns, five with their personal military carbines, two with submachineguns, and one with a .308 rifle—for 29 seconds.

During those 29 seconds the officers discharged from 121 to 153 rounds of ammunition containing between 793 and 1001 separate projectiles, the court said.

Yet the appeals court upheld both the trial jury's decision exonerating the lawmen from liability and the trial judge's ruling that the city and state were immune from suit.

"Having found wrongful conduct," the CPS source said, "the Court of Appeals failed to find anybody liable."

A second basis for the appeal to the Supreme Court is the 14th Amendment, which holds that persons cannot be deprived of life or liberty without due process of law.

The 14th Amendment was originally passed in order to prevent capricious action by states in civil rights matters, like Jackson State, some have observed.

But the original trial and appeals court noted that states have traditionally been immune to suit under the 11th Amendment, even though agents of the state may be guilty of wrongful conduct.

The appeal to the Supreme Court will argue that states should be held accountable to the federal government for the protection of an individual's civil rights.

The Mississippi shootings occurred after two nights of rock-throwing and minor confrontations between law enforcement officers and students on the virtually all-black campus.

As a force of 69 police and patrolmen confronted a crowd in front of a dormitory—estimated variously at between 40 and 400 students—a sharp sound was heard, several of the lawmen cried "Sniper," and the officers opened fire.

While many involved in the case have concluded that there probably was a sniper, the appeals court nonetheless said "the barrage of gunfire far exceeded the response that was appropriate."

"This conclusion is not judicial second-guessing of officers faced with danger, rendered from the quiet and safety of judges' chambers," the appeals court said. "It is what the evidence shows . . . the fire was excessive in volume and intensity, and the size of the area subjected to fire was beyond the physical limits of justifiable response."

One of the dead students was found behind the police line across the street from the dormitory where the sniper was supposed to be. Another student was shot while sitting in a TV lounge. A reporter on the scene said it appeared that the police fired "systematically" into the dormitory from the top floor down to the bottom.

The President's Commission on Campus Unrest reported that "the physical evidence and the positions of the victims indicate that the officers were firing indiscriminately into the crowd, at ground level, on both sides of the street."

The President's Commission also concluded that "a significant cause of the deaths and injuries at Jackson State is the confidence of white officers that if they fire weapons during a black campus disturbance they will face neither stern departmental discipline nor criminal prosecutions or convictions.

So far both a local and federal grand jury have held deliberations on the tragedy, though neither indicted any l aw officers. The local jury did, however, indict a black man for arson and inciting a riot.

The local jury also issued a report stating, "When people. . . engage in civil disorders and riots, they must expect to be injured or killed. When law enforcement officers are required to reestablish order."

Jackson Scholarships Established

An endowed fund to provide awards known as the Jackson Scholarships has been established at Maryville College by Mrs. Robert C. Jackson and her children, Frances Irene Jackson, Robert C. Jackson, Jr., Nanci Jackson Gardner, Peggy Jackson Maher, and William Andrew Jackson.

The fund was given in memory of the late Robert C. "Bob" Jackson, Blount County civic and business leader.

The fund will be invested along with the rest of the Maryville College endowment and the annual income used for scholarships. Awards will be made to student athletes who are proceeding satisfactorily toward a degree. In line with policies of the National Collegiate Athletic Association for Division III colleges and Maryville's own student financial aid policies, all awards will be granted on the basis of financial need as determined by the Student Financial Aid Committee of the College.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Jackson attended Maryville College. Mrs. Jackson graduated in 1946. Mr. Jackson eventually transferred to the University of Tennessee and received a B. S. in Business Administration.

Jackson was a native of Louisville, Tennessee, and a graduate of Everett High School. He twice lettered in football at Maryville College. The designation of this scholarship fund for student athletes id due both to his own interest and participation and to his father's association at Roanoke College with former Maryville coach Lombe S. Honaker.

Jackson's leadership in Blount County civic and business life included responsibilities as president and chairman of Harrison, Inc., director of Blount National Bank, member of the boards of Friendsville Academy and Greenmeadow Country Club, and president of the Blount County Chamber of Commerce. In addition, he served on the boards of a number of organizations related to road building.

Scholarships will be granted from the fund for the first time in the fall of 1975 upon application to the Student Financial Aid Office.

Wanted:

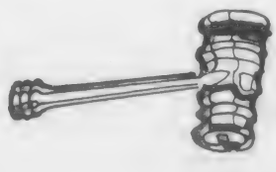
Apply NOW

New Editor

Job Opportunities In Europe

Job opportunities in Europe this summer. . . Work this summer in the forests of Germany, on construction in Austria, on farms in Germany, Sweden and Denmark, in Industries in France and Germany, in hotels in Switzerland.

Well there are these jobs available as well as jobs in Ireland, England, France, Italy, and Holland are open by the consent of the governments of these countries to American university students coming to Europe the next summer.



For several years students made their way across the Atlantic through A.E.S. Service to take part in the actual life of the people of these countries. The success of this project has caused a great deal of enthusiastic interest and support both in America and Europe. Every year, the program has been expanded to include many more students and jobs. Already, many students have made application for next summer jobs. American-European Student Service (on a non-profitable basis) is offering these jobs to students for Germany, Scandinavia, England, Austria, Switzerland, France, Italy, and Spain. The jobs consist of forestry work, child care work (females only), farm work, hotel work (limited number available), construction work, and some other more qualified jobs requiring more specialized training.

The purpose of this program is to afford the student an opportunity to get into real living contact with the people and customs of Europe. In this way, a concrete effort can be made to learn something of the culture of Europe. In return for his or her work, the student will receive his or her room and board, plus a wage. However, student should keep in mind that they will be working on the European economy and wages will naturally be scaled accordingly. The working conditions (hours, safety, regulations, legal protection, work permits) will be strictly controlled by the labor ministries of the countries involved.

In most cases, the employers have requested especially for American students. Hence, they are particularly interested in the student and want to make the work as interesting as possible.

They are all informed of the intent of the program, and will help the student all they can in deriving the most from his trip to Europe.

Please write for further information and application forms to: American-European Student-Service, Box 34733, FL 9490 Vaduz, Liechtenstein (Europe).

How To Prepare Successfully For Examinations

The key to both success and enjoyment in college lies in your ability to use time wisely. In order to have fun while getting the most out of these years, you need to establish a pattern of good study habits and skills. Such habits and skills will help you get the necessary work done as the months and years go by, and you will handle exams with a minimum of stress and a maximum of achievement.

Authorities in education generally agree that successful preparation for an examination starts in the beginning of each term and continues throughout.

Six overall steps are suggested:

1. Make a term study plan
2. Use good review techniques
3. Develop a confident attitude
4. Organize pre-exam hours
5. Pace the exam carefully
6. Reassess your work

MAKE A TERM STUDY PLAN

At the beginning of each term develop a daily schedule that allows time for class preparation, study, review, recreation, eating and sleeping. Your ability to adhere to the plan will be a measure of your success.

A study area, conducive to learning, is important. Make sure it has good light and all the tools you will need. Before the term starts, have on hand the texts, study guides, outlines, dictionaries and reference books, paper, pads, notebooks and pens that will allow you to concentrate without interruption.

Study and review differ from each other. As they are equally important, allocate time for both in your daily schedule. Study refers to learning new material for the first time. Review is critical because it strengthens the retention of this new knowledge.

Forgetting takes place most rapidly immediately after learning. Review and recall, therefore, is more effective soon after study. Following each class go over the main points for 10 to 15 minutes to reinforce them in your memory. This makes reviewing for exams later a quicker, simpler task.

Don't overtax your memory or stamina. Research shows that most people can absorb and retain just so much knowledge at one time. It's important to learn day by day, week by week. But each period of study scheduled into your work plan should be no longer than 1 or 1½ hours, followed by some kind of recreation, meal or other activity.

Take legible class and study notes. Mark the margins and underline your textbooks throughout the term and you will be able to review for weekly quizzes or final exams with a minimum of strain.

USE GOOD REVIEW TECHNIQUES

If you have applied yourself during the term, then preparing for exams is largely a question of review. The time needed is not as extensive as some students think — provided you have been working consistently. Review for weekly quizzes should take no more than 15 minutes, a mid-term hour exam 2 or 3 hours, and a final examination 5 to 8 hours.

Your preparation for a final should be carefully scheduled into the two weeks prior to exam day. Organize a schedule that does not interfere with your regular study for on-going classes. Beware of racing your motor. Make sure you still allow time for rest and relaxation, with no longer than 1 or 1½ hours of review at one time. Your mind needs breaks.

Plan your review systematically and consistently. Go from main idea to main idea, using the textbook chapter headings or your instructor's term outline as a guide. Go from chapter notes to chapter notes or from class notes to class notes, recalling the important headings and ideas in each. If certain points are difficult for you to remember, THEN reread the textbook. Otherwise stick with your notes. Don't plan to learn something for the first time.

Making summary notes is often helpful, depending on the amount of the material to be reviewed. In 4 to 8 pages you can outline the main points of your detailed class and text chapter notes. Headings with indented numbered points under them make relationships more obvious. This procedure will also help reinforce the major ideas and important details.

Summary notes can also serve as a self-test toward the end of your preparation for exams. Put a sheet over each page and slowly uncover the first heading — see if you can remember the main points under it. As you go, ask yourself what, when etc.

Try to predict the exam questions. Be alert throughout the term to the emphasis instructors put on certain topics, aspects or ideas. They often give clues to points that are important or particularly need review.

Ask your professor what he recommends for pre-examination work. Use his comments as a guide but don't try to outguess him.

Group reviewing can be helpful. But it shouldn't take the place of working on your own. Limit discussions of significant points and possible test questions to 30 or 45 minutes, with no more than 4 or 5 people.

Avoid cramming. If you have followed a regular schedule of study and review, you should not have to cram the last day. Remember, forgetting takes place more rapidly right after learning. If you do have to cram, be selective. Don't attempt an exhaustive review.

(to be continued next week)

Scots Even At 6-6

The Maryville College Fighting Scots basketball squad is having its best season in several years as this 1974-75 edition has posted a season record to date of six wins and six losses. The Scots have not won that many games in one year since the 1971-72 season when they were 11-15. Two years ago, Maryville posted a 4-22 log while they gained one more victory last year in producing a 5-21 mark. The improvement that this team has made during that period of time shows that Maryville College does have the potential for a good basketball team. This was evidenced clearly on Tuesday evening when the Scots took on an impressive Sewanee team on the latter's home court and won, 59-56. The Tigers went into the contest with a record of 11-1, but the Scots, still upset over a one point loss to Emory and Henry on Saturday night, were able to prevail this time. Maryville took a 30-20 advantage at halftime. Randy Lambert, who has shown tremendous improvement this year, was the leading scorer for the Scots. His 17 lead the way with Captain Randy Schaurer following right behind with 16. Bruce Guillaume, another player who has been involved with the overall improvement pumped in 11, while Mike Morton was credited with 10. Injuries have been a problem since Christmas. Kenny Talbott, who would normally be starting at forward, suffered a sprained ankle during practice on January 7 and will not see action until next week at the earliest. Kevin McKinstry has replacedTalbott in the starting lineup. Tomorrow night, the Scots take on Covenant College at home beginning at 7:30. They will be home again on Tuesday vs. King College followed by Bryan on Thursday night.

continued from page 1

in the local branch of AAUW.

In recommending Dr. Lightfoot for the Doctor of Humane Letters in 1972, the Maryville College Doctoral Committee commended her for her "outstanding dedication to the college, her personal commitment to the highest of Christian standards, and the skill and wisdom with which she carries her work."

Dr. Lightfoot said that her retirement plans include travel and working with her flowers.

bank of maryville

Your Bank
In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

We Invite You to Visit Us at Seven Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Downtown
Alcoa
Airport
Broadway
McGhee Tyson
Seymour-Chapman Hwy
Townsend

Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Personal Reasons Sighted

Wenkstern Resigns As Co-Chairman

Mike Wenkstern resigned as Co-Chairman of the All-College Council earlier this week stating that his resignation was "long overdue." A letter of resignation explaining why he was stepping down was submitted to President Joe Copeland on January 26. Wenkstern was elected Co-Chairman in the spring elections by receiving the largest number of votes among the senior candidates.

Wenkstern, a senior biology major, stated in his letter of resignation that he never really aspired to be Co-Chairman of the Council but he had "been indecisive and reluctant to take action on this for reasons which include such personal and often confusing aspects as my sense of pride and responsibility, my knowledge of what is right for me in relation to its effects on those around me, and my desire to maintain a happy and contented state of being."

In resigning, Wenkstern sighted the conflict between the ACC Chairmanship and his personal priorities as a major reason for his decision to resign. He stated: "my participation in and responsibilities to the All-College Council have seriously limited both my ability to maintain peace of mind and to uphold strong academic standards."

Wenkstern also suggested that he was not elected for his "leadership potential" but for his "sense of humor" and his ability "to relate to a wide variety of people." He stated that the chairmanship had made him uncomfortable and frustration had resulted due to his inability to identify the position of Co-Chairmanship.

Dr. Copeland had this to say about Mike's resignation: "Mike's leadership was marked by his sensitivity to other human beings, his academic motivations, and deep integrity. He was a very comfortable person with whom to work."

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 13 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | January 31, 1975

Inflated Grades Devalue Grading System

(CPS)—Food, gas and tuition prices aren't the only victims of inflation these days. Enter the new martyr: grades.

Across the country, a high grade glut has spread. At many schools, the normal bell curve distribution has been jarred out of whack as B has replaced C as the average grade.

At Yale, almost half of the undergraduate spring term grades were A's. And at Stanford University the average grade point accumulation has spiralled to 3.4. In the last ten years, the University of North Carolina has doubled the percentage of A's it handed out.

"A few years ago, a C would put you in the middle," said Douglas Hobbes, a political science professor at UCLA. "Today it puts you in the bottom third of the class.

A number of educators have voiced concern over grade inflation—and the resulting devaluation. Graduate school officials, they have warned, have begun to dismiss the grade transcripts of their applicants as plainly misleading, and are concentrating instead on test scores.

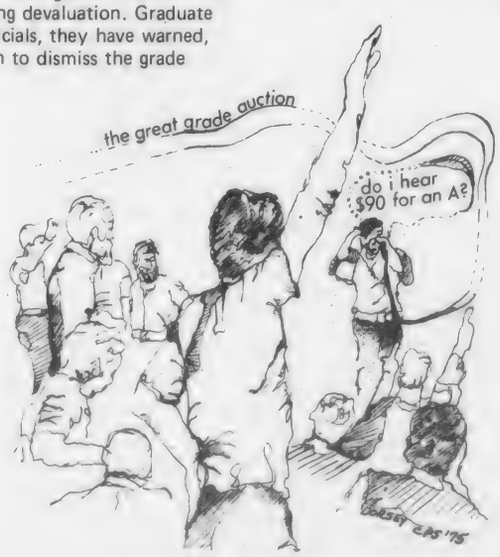
And since everyone seems to be getting A's and B's, graduate schools and employers have begun resorting to elitism in their selections: better a Princeton A, they reason, than an equal mark from a less familiar school.

Grade grubbing has been cited as a prime factor behind the soaring grades. The tumultuous 60's are over and students are again hitting the books. With the depressed job market and the increased number of undergraduates, competition has toughened for graduate school admission, particularly to medical and law schools.

In a broader sense, students may be grasping for grades as a token of their own worth. "A 'B' is saying to students that they're only "B" persons," one Stanford University professor said.

In any case, competition has become the name of the game. "Its moved beyond mere grades," Jerome Kagen, a Harvard psychologist, said of the phenomenon in a recent New York Times report. "It's moved to a point where the anxiety and the concern is unrealistic, and it's approaching a phobia on the part of the students. It has the characteristic of a small neurosis."

If students are afflicted with a grade nerosis, the disease is rooted within the academic grading system, some observers believe.



"Students have been taught since grade school that good grades are where its at," says one professor at University of Wisconsin-Madison. "How can they be expected to dismiss this idea when they reach college?"

The Preface, student newspaper of Indiana University at South Bend offered this analysis: "Professors. . . tell students at the beginning of class that learning is more important than grades. Most students are not influenced by this argument. They have already been convinced that grades are important, often more important than learning."

Back in the 60's, however, anti-grade fever hit academia, resulting in what is believed to be the second major cause of inflated grades: non-punitive grading procedures.

Many professors gave high grades then to help students avoid the draft. Dissatisfaction with traditional marking spread, pass-fail options came into vogue and some schools completely eliminated failing grades.

(continued on page 4)

Wilderness '75 At Tremont

Tremont's summer program has a different emphasis than the regular school year. Wilderness '75 is designed to help campers become more at ease living in a mountain environment. The program is for young people from 11-15 years of age. There will be five-one-week sessions (Monday through Saturday) at a cost of $55.00 per week. The staff is made up of school teachers, college students and regular Tremont staff.

Tremont will provide most of the necessary camping equipment. At the first of the week the campers will take a few hikes to become familiar with the area, then they will go out on an extended three day hike. Survival camping will be taught but the campers will never be placed in stress situations and will always have adult supervision. We are hoping to have forty participants a week. . If you know of any children who might be interested, please have them contact the center at the following address:

Wilderness '75
Rt. 1, Tremont
Townsend, TN 37882

There are still two openings for male staff members. If interested contact Hardy DeYoung at the above address, or call 448-2211 for an interview.

Wanted:

Applications are now being accepted for the editorship of the Highland Echo. Candidates must have a grade point average of 2.0 or higher and submit a trial issue before the end of winter term. Interested students should contact Mr. Blair Beasley or Emerson Henderson before February 7, 1975.

New Editor

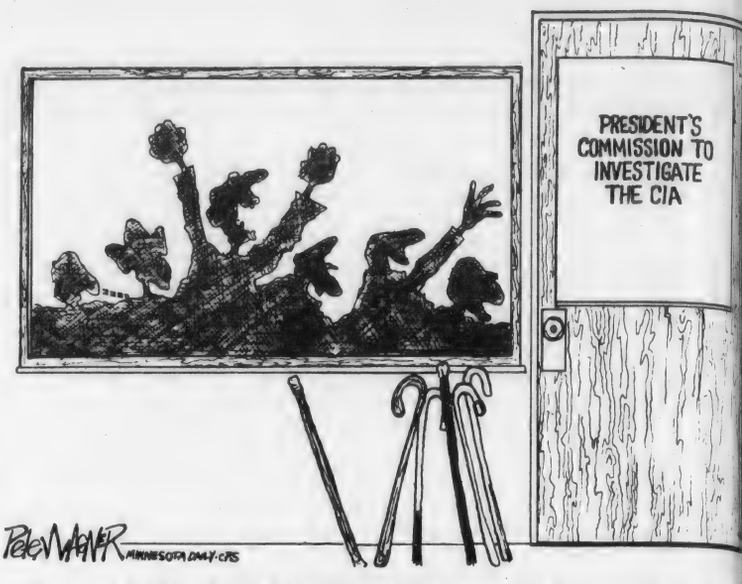
Apply NOW

from the editor's desk

Wenkstern's Resignation

The unexpected resignation of Mike Wenkstern as Co-Chairman of the All-College Council is deeply regreted by most of us. Yet, we must respect his personal motivations for making such an important decision. He should be commended for his sincerity and honesty to the electorate of Maryville College for we are sure there are others on the Council that feel the same as Mike, but have not had the courage to act in a matter similar to his.

I do not wish to use Mike's resignation as a basis for lashing out against the effectiveness of the ACC. However, the implications of his resignation are disturbing. Does the position of Co-Chairman need to be re-defined or clarified? Mike stated that he had become "frustrated and despondent" as a result of not being able to identify the position he occupied. Is the position of Co-Chairman like that of the Vice-President of the United States in which the occupant has no real duties except those assigned by the President? Is the position of Co-Chairman so frustrating that it leads to what Mike called the lack of "peace of mind?" Will Mike's resignation scare others away from the ACC elections in the spring? In other words, are the hassles involved in being Co-Chairman worth it to the individual? These are very serious questions that must be answered by the ACC before the spring elections. Some will inaccurately interpret Mike's action as one of a guitter for they lack understanding as to what makes a winner in the realm of human relations. An individual must do what his conscience and convictions tells him – And it takes courage to follow them. Mike has taken this courageous step and all the reasons we attach to his resignation are useless. There is only one reason for his resignation and he stated it well: "I have been unhappy and . . . not altogether myself in recent months."



Thanks Mike for your service! I wish more of us possessed your honesty and courage.

P. S. Enjoy your last year here!

e. d. h.

Action Needed

The Social Committee needs to know what you want to do. Thanks to you the ski trip this past weekend was a success, but other events—movies, dances—have not fared so well. Part of this is due to poor advertising, which will be improved, and in part to concurrent activities, such as athletics and recitals. To improve the campus social atmosphere we will welcome any and all suggestions and ideas. Box 2341 or 2685.

'LET'S GO OVER THE PART ABOUT THEM TRIPPING UP ALL THEM NO GOOD, PINKO, HIPPIE RADICALS!!'

other views

The Old Double Standard

by Tim Rahn
Layout Editor

Other than a Saga dinner with such adeptly named food as UFO's, little has happened on campus that qualifies as "interesting." Except for the heat issue, which was little more than a brief flicker of an issue and quickly passed when we began to toast in our rooms, nothing has happened.

But something has happened. One needs only to look at the Dorm III parking lot—it is filled with cars. This is rather unique when one considers the fact that it is a freshman residence hall: freshmen are restricted in their use of their vehicles yet each day someone of non-restricted status says "A damned restricted car is where I normally park."

In other words, the cars that are restricted from leaving the campus until the return trip home at term's end must be making more than their share of excursions off the MC campus. The outcome is the proverbial musical chairs game to the tune of "Who is that in my parking space?"

These non-restricted drivers are further placed in jeopardy when they are forced to park on the grass—a place where fines are available. While this possibility exists these non-restricted drivers are wondering to what end their payment of a $20. permit fee is going. Where ever, it is certainly not used in the development of better parking methods and facilities. (Admittedly there is a protection percentage, but $20?)

The restricted drivers are not entirely to blame—they only sing the tune, leaving somebody else to play it. Anyhow, it is the old standard—double standard that is—easily traced up and down the avenues of MC. It is the same double standard that says student alcoholic use on campus is forbidden and then turns its back, and it is also . . . well, we are getting off the subject.

Several plausible solutions can be proposed for this cacophony in the parking lot at Dorm III. One would be stricter enforcement of the existing rules, but this should be the case now. As it is, it would not really solve the problem. There are always ways to avoid restrictions, no matter how well they are enforced.

No matter how you look at it the problem is one of harmonization. For now, the possibility of fine should be removed until the two parts can be united thus eliminating another doubie standard.

Tennessee Certification for Teachers

All students working for Tennessee certification must file two applications in the Education Department Thaw 205. The first application is for admission to the Teacher Education Program and should be filed during the freshman or sophomore year. The second application is for admission to Student Teaching and should be filed during the junior year. Applicants are admitted only upon the recommendation of the Screening Committee of the Teacher Education Council.

February Meetings

"Survival" Alone or Together?"

Dr. Clinton Marsh, Associate Executive, Synod of the South, Atlanta, Georgia and Dr. George Edwards, professor of New Testament at Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary are coming to Maryville College February 5 and 6 to lead the 1975 February Meetings, which are to discuss "Survival" Alone or Together?" (The Christian and Global Consciousness)

During the five-day meeting here each will lead discussions on "Survival" Alone or Together?" and on "Realistic solutions to questions of survival in today's world. What changes can we make that would directly affect the quality of life?"

Dr. Marsh was born in Annemanie, Alabarna and graduated from Knoxville College. He has a Th.B degree from Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary. He also has several honorary degrees from colleges and universities, among them, the University of Dubuque and Waynesburg College. In 1973, Dr. Marsh was elected Moderator of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, USA.

Dr. Marsh spoke at Maryville last year for a CIV program and was well received by the student body.

Dr. Edwards was born in Memphis and graduated from Southwestern College and the Louisville Seminary. He has a Ph.D. from Duke University. After preaching in North Carolina and Kentucky churches, he joined the seminary faculty in 1958.

Dr. Edwards has come to Maryville College before to address the students. He is well known for his courageous stand on issues of war and conscience. He readily discusses issues of conscience with students and others.

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson
Editor-in-chief

Kathy Kirkhart
Assistant Editor

Bill Walker
Business Manager

Jeff Draper
Distribution

Tim Rahn
Lay-out Editor

Dr. Robert B. Braid
Faculty Advisor

Joe Showalter
Photographer

Kimberly Darden
Lay-out Assistant

Wenkstern's Letter of Resignation

Dr. Joseph J. Copeland, President
Maryville College
Maryville, Tennessee 37801

Dear President Copeland:

The purpose of this latter is to announce and perhaps to explain my long overdue resignation from the All-College Council, overdue because I have felt it to be a necessity from nearly the day on which I was elected. Regrettably, I have been indecisive and reluctant to take action on this for reasons which include such personal and often confusing aspects as my sense of pride and responsibility, my knowledge of what is right for me in relation to its effects on those around me, and my desire to maintain a happy and contented state of being. It may surprise you to learn that the Co-Chairmanship is a position to which I never aspired, enjoyed, nor took much more than a half-hearted interest in. I would like to be able to blame this situation on the inherent ineffectiveness of the system whereby the Co-Chairman is elected, which involves someone "ending up" with the position, rather than being awarded it as a result of his desire for it, but I cannot. I cannot since, of course, I had the option of denying the position at the outset, which would also have amounted to resignation. Having been uncomfortable and insecure in the position, try as I might I have been unable to execute what I consider to be a good or even adequate performance of the tasks and duties required of the Co-Chairman. This conviction necessitates my resignation out of respect for the electorate of Maryville College, which is entitled to the assurance that the Co-Chairman of the All-College Council takes a genuine and active interest in the issues which confront the Council.

If this last sentence seems to imply that my interest in campus government is less than genuine and active, then its intended meaning has been successfully communicated. You may recall that at the Town Hall meeting of last spring, wherein the candidates for the ACC election were introduced and questioned, that I recounted my historical state of apathy towards campus government, and expressed my desire to attempt to substitute it with interest and participation. In retrospect, this was an honest assessment of my position at that time, and I can now sincerely assert that I have, to the best of my ability, participated and endeavored to gain and to maintain an interest. The fact is, Dr. Copeland, I do have an interest and a concern but, of necessity, I also have a set of priorities which contributes a measure of order and a degree of sanity to my life. Logically, peace of mind is my most potent priority. Also, and nearly tantamount, is my dedication to the academic realm of my college experience, which constitutes by far the most prominent justification for my being here. To be sure, my participation in and responsibilities to the All-College Council have seriously limited both my ability to maintain peace of mind and to uphold strong academic standards. This has, I think, something to do with the large amounts of time that are involved, but the main reasons can be found elsewhere.

Elsewhere, in this case, happens to be in my head. Having occupied a position with which I could not come to identify, I have become both frustrated and despondent. To feign total interest and commitment, and to construct a facade of contentment and satisfaction has proven to be a task beyond my powers of theatrical performance. I have been unhappy and, I think, not altogether myself in recent months. It is my suspicion that I was elected not as a result of my leadership potential, but as a result of my sense of humor and ability to relate to a wide variety of people, both of which have suffered because of my uneasiness.

My resignation is not something to which I have failed to give lengthy consideration and very careful thought. I am well aware of the problems and hardships which may result. None, however, are such that they cannot be dealt with effectively and efficiently, and it is my belief that the Council can continue to function with no serious impairment. You might suggest that I merely resign my duties as Co-Chairman, and continue as a senior representative on the Council. I would rather not, and therefore will not. In effect, my complete resignation from the All-College Council results in the attainment of the scheme of representation that we have recently approved for next fall, making the addition of a senior replacement unnecessary. While not now officially involved with the Council, I plan to keep abreast of what is being accomplished, and hope to work with you and other members on some ideas which I have. Your cooperation and assistance in finalizing and announcing my resignation will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,
Michael G. Wenkstern

Baskin-Robbins

Special

Banana Split

75¢

with this ad

And Remember Your Sweetheart
On Valentine Day
With A Baskin Robin Coupon Book

offer Good Jan. 31-Feb. 2

Scientists Issue Statement on Energy

The following statement on energy problems was issued January 16 in Washington by a group of 32 of the country's most eminent scientists, 11 of them Nobel Prize winners.

"We, as scientists and citizens of the United States, believe that the Republic is in the most serious situation since World War II. Today's energy crisis is not a matter of just a few years but of decades. It is the new and predominant fact of life in industrialized societies.

"The high price of oil which we must now import in order to keep Americans at their jobs threatens our economic structure—indeed, that of the Western World. Energy is the lifeblood of all modern societies and they are currently held hostage by a price structure that they are powerless to influence.

"In the next three to five years conservation is essentially the only energy option. We can and we must use energy and existing energy sources more intelligently. But there must also be long range realistic plans and we deplore the fact that they are developing so slowly. We also deplore the fact that the public is given unrealistic assurances that there are easy solutions. There are many interesting proposals for alternative energy sources which deserve vigorous research effort, but none of them is likely to contribute significantly to our energy supply in this century.

"Conservation, while urgently necessary and highly desirable, also has its price. One man's conservation may be another man's loss of job. Conservation, the first time around, can trim off fat, but the second time will cut deeply.

"When we search for domestic energy sources to substitute for imported oil, we must look at the whole picture. If we look at each possible energy source separately, we can easily find fault with each of them, and rule out each one. Clearly, this would mean the end of our civilization as we know it.

"Our domestic oil reserves are running down and the deficit can only partially be replaced by the new sources in Alaska; we must, in addition, permit off-shore exploration. Natural gas is in a similar critical condition; in the last seven years new discoveries have run far below our level of gas consumption. Only with strong measures could we hope to reverse this trend.

"We shall have to make much greater use of solid fuels. Here coal and uranium are the most important options. This represents a profound change in the character of the American fuel economy. The nation has truly great reserves of these solid fuels the earth. Our economically recoverable coal reserves are estimated to be

(continued on page 4)

Scots Drop Below .500

Coach Boydson Baird's Fighting Scots split last week with one win and one loss as they dumped Covenant College of Lookout Mountain, Tennessee on Saturday night, 74-67, before sucumbing to King College of Bristol, Virginia on Monday evening, 81-68. Both games were played in Maryville. The Scots were scheduled to meet Bryan College of Dayton, Tennessee last night in a home contest. The Scots went into that ballgame with a season record of 7-7.

Saturday's game was a matchup of Scots as that school also uses the nickname. Maryville gained control during the first few minutes and never trailed after that. The Maryville five took a 37-30 halftime lead. Bruce Guillaume was the game's leading scorer as he pumped in 24 points. Mike Morton (12), Randy Lambert (10), and Larry Walko (10) were the other Maryville players placing in double figures. John Tudor lead the Covenant scoring with 19.

Monday night's meeting with King was a chance for the Scots to avenge a 109-68 slaughter that the Tornado did to Maryville on December 4 in Bristol. This time it became a much closer affair, although the Scots did have shooting problems in the first half as they trailed 44-25 at halftime. They were able to keep better pace in the second half and were able to cut into the King lead for a while. However, the Tornado got hot in the last few minutes and put it away for good. Despite the loss, Maryville did not play that badly. Randy Schaurer was the leading home team scorer with 20. Guillaume's 18 and Lambert's 12 also sparked the Maryville effort. Maurice Harrell was the leading King scorer with a game high of 25. Budd Lett (21) and Bill Berta (15) followed in that team's scoring colume.

Thursday night, the Scots travel to Lookout Mountain for the return meeting with Covenant. Their next home game will be Saturday night with Centre College. Tipoff time will be 7:30.

Movie

Friday Night
9:30 p.m.
After the Wrestling Match

Chapel

"Executive Action"

Starring
Burt Lancaster

Admission — $1.00
What really happened to J. F. K. in Dallas??

Bombs and Books

(CPS/HED)—What will President Ford's plan for sending $300 million in supplemental foreign aid to the tottering military governments of South Vietnam and Cambodia cost the average student?

One educator said the money could be used to allow 600,000 students to participate in the College Work-Study program and another 400,000 to receive Basic Educational Opportunity Grants.

American Association of University Professors General Secretary Joseph Duffey,in a letter to the association's membership, said such an investment would be "significantly more productive" than shipping "war materials" to Indochina.

New Reading Room In Library

The library has a new room: the fiction room. Located on the first floor behind the 900's stacks in the back, this room was renovated during the Christmas break. The former place for fiction in the reference room has been used for more reference space. The shelves are no longer as crowded.The children's literature collection has been moved to one corner of the reading room.

The new fiction room is bright and attractive. Comfortable chairs and a convenient study table make this area a good place for realaxing or studying.

The library invites you to come by and take a look.

FOLLOW YOUR HEART TO TIPTON Jewelers
982-0141
113 E. Broadway
Maryville, Tenn. 37801
"EASY CREDIT TERMS"
C. R. TIPTON, owner
• ROLEX WATCHES
• BULOVA WATCHES
• ACCUTRON
• GIFTS
HOUSE OF DIAMONDS
• DIAMONDS REMOUNTED
• ASK ABOUT OUR NEW ..... RING OF RADIANCE THAT WILL INCREASE THE VISUAL SIZE OF A CENTER DIAMOND 6 TIMES.

continued from page 3

250 billion tons and exceed the energy of the world's total oil reserves. Our known uranium ores potentially equal the energy of 6,000 billion tons of coal; lower grade ore promises even more abundance.

"The U. S. choice is not coal or uranium; we need both. Coal is irreplaceable as the basis of new synthetic fuels to replace oil and natural gas.

"However, we see the primary use of solid fuels, especially of uranium, as a source of electricity. Uranium power, the culmination of basic discoveries in physics, is an engineered reality generating electricity today. Nuclear power has its critics, but we believe they lack perspective as to the feasibility of non-nuclear power sources and the gravity of the fuel crisis.

"All energy release involves risks and nuclear power is certainly no exception. The safety of civilian nuclear power has been under public surveillance without parallel in the history of technology. As in any new technology there is a learning period. Contrary to the scare publicity given to some mistakes that have occurred, no appreciable amount of radioactive material has escaped from any commercial U. S. power reactor. We have confidence that technical ingenuity and care in operation can continue to improve the safety in all phases of the nuclear power program, including the difficult areas of transportation and nuclear waste disposal.

"The separation of the Atomic Energy Commission into the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission provides added reassurance for realistic management of potential risks and benefits. On any scale the benefits of a clean, inexpensive, and inexhaustible domestic fuel far outweigh the possible risks.

"We can see no reasonable alternative to an increased use of nuclear power to satisfy our energy needs.

"Many of us have worked for a long time on energy problems and therefore we feel the responsibility to speak out. The energy famine that threatens will require many sacrifices on the part of the American people, but these will be reduced if we marshal the huge scientific and technical resources of our country to improve the use of known energy sources."

Book Trade

At a loss of what to do with used paperback books?

Need used textbooks for reference materials?

This Saturday, February 1, 1975, Beta Beta Beta will sponsor a book trade and sale in Sutton Science Center, room 137. Bring your used paperback books and trade with us for one of comparable size for (15¢). just 5¢. Used textbooks will also be available for purchase. The sale will be from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Medical Arts Pharmacy

For all your medical Supplies of any kind

Next to Blount Memorial Hospital

— Store Hours —
8:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m.

(continued from page 1)

At many other schools, the effect of D's and F's were minimized by extended time periods for class withdrawals. Students who were in danger of failing a course could simply drop it, often late into the semester, and escape a low grade.

Explained Pittsburgh University Dean Robert Marshall: "We've gotte away from the old concept that people should be required to jump through hoops."

But the gradual extinction of failing grades has been termed "lucicrous" by at least one professor. "There is this idea going around that any grade other than an A has to be explained by the professor," complained Stanford history professor David Kennedy.

"It's gone too far," said Kennedy "The whole purpose of grades is being destroyed."

In such an event, not everyone would be disappointed.

NOVEMBER ISSUE MC BULLETIN

IF you still have a copy of the November 1974 Maryville College Bulletin (magazine with owl on the cover) the Development Office has need of them and would greatly appreciate any you would be willing to donate. They could be left at the receptionist's desk in Anderson Hall.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 14 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | February 7, 1975

newsbriefs

John W. Dean is tentatively scheduled to speak at U. T. April 18 as part of the U. T. ISSUES program of speakers.

39 Menominee Indians who had taken over a Wisconsin religious estate and held it for 34 days, surrendered Monday.

The unemployment rate is expected to average 8.1% this year and 7.9% in '76.

Robert Groden, a New York photographer, claims that 2 men Shot President Kennedy, that Lee Harvey Oswald had nothing to do with it, and that he has the film to prove it.

A heavy earthquake was reported Tuesday, near the Russian-Chinese border in Asia.

The stock market is continuing to gain, mostly due to declining of interest rates and its own technical strength.

North Dakota became the 34th state to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment; however Nebraska rejected a resolution supporting the amendment.

A child-health panel has criticized commercial baby food as expensive and unnecessary. Also, 58 Congressmen said that baby food is often deceptively labeled.

The liquor industry says that repeal of Tennessee's fair trade law on liquor could cost taxpayers some $5 million a year.

Senator Baker has announced that he may run for President in '76, even if Ford runs.

United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock says that car sales will be back to 1973 levels before 1980, but that the growth rate is slowing.

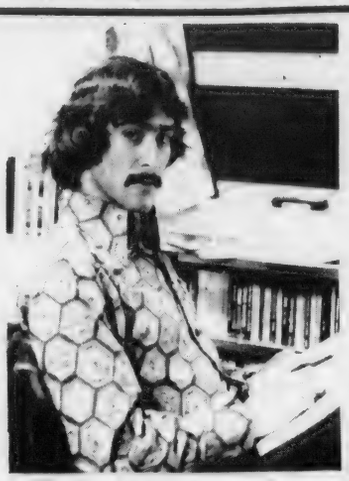
Eight southern governors have given their support to President Ford in his opposition of gas rationing.

Sonny Bono has asked for $24 million in damages from his estranged wife, Cher, and her companion, David Geffen.

Hospitals are facing major problems, including rising unemployment, soaring malpractice insurance rates, recession and inflation, and millions of unpaid bills. Hundreds of hospitals are being forced to operate in the red or barely break even; many may simply not survive.

Sugar prices were lower in January, causing reduced grocery bills.

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted an $8.1 billion tax cut for low and middle income persons.



President Ford asked Congress to vote a record peacetime budget deficit of $52 billion for the fiscal year of '76.

Wanted:

Applications are now being accepted for the editorship of the Highland Echo. Candidates must have a grade point average of 2.0 or higher and submit a trial issue before the end of winter term. Interested students should contact Mr. Blair Beasley or Emerson Henderson before February 7, 1975.

New Editor

Apply NOW

Martin New Co-Chairman

Tom Martin, assistant-secretary of ACC, was selected by the Council to fill the vacancy of Co-chairman created last week by the surprise resignation of Mike Wenkstern. Tom will serve for the remainder of this year.

After expressing appreciation to Mike for his service, the Council decided that the assistant-secretary of the Council should be asked to assume the responsibilities of Co-chairman. Thus, leaving the office of assistant-secretary vacant. Melanie Kohn, the other senior member of the Council was asked to assume the assistant-secretary position.

A 24-Hour Fast

The theme of the 1975 February Meetings is Survival: Alone or Together? (The Christian and Global Consciousness). As one way to explore the meaning of survival for those who are left out in terms of food, there will be a 24-hour fast from 8:00 p.m. Saturday, February 8 to 8:00 p.m. Sunday, February 9.

All those who wish to participate in this fast should register at one of the posters placed around campus (dining hall, post office, library, Anderson). There will be an initial meeting of fasters at 8:00 p.m. Saturday in the Little Chapel for the purpose of sharing in worship.

In addition to the fasting we are asking that contributions be given in support of the fasters so as to raise money to help bring about relief to the hunger situation caused by the extended drought in the six Sahelian nations in Africa.

VISIT GREECE MARCH 21-MARCH 29 HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE GROUP HAVE A FEW VACANCIES REMAINING, GROUP RATE FROM KNOXVILLE ON SCHEDULED AIRLINE (not charter) ALL INCLUSIVE FARE. FABULOUS ITINERY. FOR MORE DETAILS CALL EVENINGS - KNOXVILLE—688-4165.

CIA Funded League of Women Voters

(CPS)—In a story certain to send more shock waves through the already shell-shocked Central Intelligence Agency, a group of intelligence-watchers in Washington has revealed documentation to prove that the CIA has secretly funded an overseas project of the League of Women Voters in order to spy on emerging women leaders in Third World countries.

The CIA has exerted its influence through the Overseas Education Fund (OEF) of the League, said the Organizing Committee for a Fifth Estate in a news conference held January 24 in the nation's capital.

The Fifth Estate is an independent organization formed several years ago to keep track of the encorachment of the government intelligence community into the lives of private citizens.

The first hint of CIA involvement came through an OEF employee, Ann Roberts, who became concerned when she noticed the group was receiving funding through the Asia Foundation, a conduit the CIA admitted it used in funding the National Student Association from 1951 to 1967.

Roberts also noticed that OEF reports contained large amounts of biographical data on women's leaders in South America and Asia. She investigated further and found that 70% of the group's budget came through the State Department and the Agency for International Development, agencies that the CIA has used in the past to mask its financial involvement with a group.

From documents provided by Roberts and other OEF employees, the Fifth Estate showed that the OEF Asian representative and the Latin American program director both regularly consulted with known CIA case officers in Panama, Malaysia, Korea and Kuala Lampur.

"In practice, the operation is a carbon copy of the CIA/NSA activity in the mid-60s," said the Fifth Estate. During that period, the CIA secretly provided funds to the international desk of NSA, in return for reports from NSA overseas travelers and representatives on student activists around the world.

"On the basis of interviews with OEF staff members, it is evident that knowledge of this CIA operation is limited to a very small number of people within the organization," continued the report. "It is now the responsibility of the women at OEF to root out the CIA cooperatives with in their midst."

In a related report the Fifth Estate revealed the names and addresses of 100 CIA station and base chiefs operating in 85 countries.

The presence of these agents is well known to foreign governments, claim-

(continued on page 3)

MC To Present "Cat"

Tennessee Williams' vivid and powerful drama, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," will be presented for three performances by the Maryville College Playhouse February 27-March 1.

Belinda Chiddie and Paul Kersey are cast as the restless "cat" and the alcoholic husband she nearly doomed and then struggles to rescue.

Steve Yuhasz will be seen in the major role of "Big Daddy," the wealthy cotton planter whose home on "28,000 acres of the richest land this side of the valley of the Nile" is the setting of the play.

Tennessee Williams has described this play as dealing "with human extremities of emotion." Against his favorite background of the Mississippi Delta region, he is telling about members of a family who have been lying to each other and are all brought up harshly to face the truth.

Thomas Jones is directing the production. Stage manager is Mary Story.

From the editor's desk

Maryville College And Black History

Beginning Sunday, February 9, 1975, many colleges and universities will recognize the contributions of 23 million Americans of African descent to American society. This week (February 9-15) has been designated as Black History Week throughout the nation. I know that some will argue that because of the tremendous progress that has been made that there is no longer a legitmate reason to distinguish between "black" and "white" contributions, and to a certain degree I would agree. However, I would like to take advantage of this occasion to reflect back on the history of Maryville College as it relates to black students and suggest some present implications that might be interpreted from the College's present relationship with black students.

Maryville College was founded on the Christian doctrine of "equality of all men before God, regardless of wealth, race, or color." Maryville was founded in 1819 when slavery still existed in the United States. However, there are records that show that there were several students of African descent that attended Maryville during this time. This is amazing considering Maryville was located in the South where prejudice was very strong.

After the Emanicipation of the slaves in 1863 and the Civil War ended, Maryville which had been closed for five years, reopened, reaffirming its policy of intergration. One of the main reasons for this action was that prospective donors from the North would not be willing to give to a college that did not accept Blacks. As a result, contributions from the North poured in. William Thaw donated thousands of dollars to Maryville because of its open-door policy of admitting Blacks. Anderson Hall was built as a result of a United States government grant made through the Freedmen's Bureau which was established by Congress to help the newly freed slaves.

Maryville held steadfastly to its policy of intergration admist public pressures to half its admission of Blacks. A strong and courageous administration and faculty can be credited with this courageous stand.

In 1901, a new state law was drafted by a white graduate of Maryville that made it illegal for Black and White students to be educated together. This law was supported by the 1896 Supreme Court case of Plessy v. Ferguson which established the "separate, but equal" doctrine. Thus, Maryville had to stop its policy of admitting black students. However, the commitment to equality was still there and as a result, the college established a fund that would aid black students in a preparatory school.

In 1954, the Supreme Court struck down the "separate, but equal" doctrine in the case of Brown v. Board of Education. Maryville immediately resumed its policy of intergration.

And that brings us to today.

Maryville College took some very heroic stands during those difficult years. Dr. Anderson, William Thaw, Professor Lamar, and many others provided MC with strong, affirmative leadership. They did what they felt was right, realizing that the consequences might be severe financially, as well as, educationally for Maryville College. Maryville's Black enrollment averaged about five a year up until the 1880's, and then around ten a year between the mid 1880's and 1901. Ten black students in 1890. Thirteen in 1975. Thirteen minus Ten equals three. Simple arithmetic! Is this really all the progress Maryville has made in this area of intergration in over eighty years? If it was possible for Maryville to enroll as many as ten black students during the end of the 19th century when racial discrimination was very much apart of society and the economic condition of Blacks was worse than it is now, surely Maryville can do better than thirteen in 1975, now that discrimination has decreased tremendously and the economic condition of Blacks has also improved.

The leadership of the "early Maryville" provided strong, affirmative action in quaranteeing intergration against all odds. Where are our Dr. Andersons, William Thaws, and Dr. Lamars. The commitment is still there on paper, but does it exist in the hearts of our leaders as it did in these courageous gentlemen? If it does, then, the only thing we lack that the "early Maryville" possessed is strong, affirmative action. There are no excuses for Maryville's failure in this area, except, maybe its leadership or lack of it.

e. d. h.

Echo P

Letters to the editor must be s
Box 2820 before dinner Mond
All other items for publicatio publication that week.

The editor reserves the right t words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Ech the staff, and/or the College A

February Meetings

Provoative Movies To B

The following two movies will be shown on Friday as a part of February Meetings:

SURVIVAL OF SPACESHIP EARTH — 7:00 p.m.

The environmental crisis brought about by uncontrolled technological progress is endangering life on a global scale. At the core of the threats to the planet - wars, overpopulation, pollution, and the depletion of natural resources - is the inadequacy of the nation state to come to terms with the surmounting problems of 20th Century living. What is urgently needed is the kind of international cooperation where nation states relinquish part of their sovereignty to a world body entrusted with the management of mankind's affairs. Commentator, Raymond Burr. Featuring Hugh Downs, Margaret Mead, John D. Rockefeller III, Rene Dubos, Barbara Ward, and others.

Break at 8:15 for snack in dining room.

JOHNNY GOT HIS GUN — 9:30 p.m

On the last day of World War I, Joe Bonham was hit by an artillery shell. As the great struggle in Europe ended Joe Bonham's personal battle for survival began. Dalton Trumbo's "John Got His Gun" is the chronicle of this battle.

Massively wounded, it is miraculous that Joe lives at all. His brain damage is so severe he is thought to have all the mental capabilities of a vegetable. But the doctors are wrong. Joe can think. Bit by bit, he manages to comprehend the full horror of his situation, to realize that he is a medical curiosity. He has lost both arms and both legs. His face is a scooped-out hollow - yet he lives and thinks.

Joe refuses to collapse in the face of the horror that has become his life. He devises a way to keep track of time, to distinguish between the people who care for him and, finally, to

letters to the editor

Poor Job, Editor!

Letter to the Editor:

I feel that the resignation of Mike Wenkstern from his position of co-chairman of the ACC was a tragedy. I was grateful for the magnified coupon about a banana split at Basken-Robbins.

However, was it necessary to publish three articles, each stating the same identical things, about Mr. Wenkstern's resignation? These three articles occupied as much space as is found on one page of the Highland Echo. Also, why did the Basken-Robbins advertisement need to be so large? I am sure just as many people would have read a much smaller advertisement. Too, why was it so important to include both the articles, "Inflated Grades Devalue Grading System" and "Scientists Issue Statement on Energy", in last week's publication? Could not they have been used later this term at a time when exciting campus news is at a minimum and when the editor expounds on the already hackneyed issues of drinking on campus, SAGA food, late keys for women, etc. just to fill up space in the Highland Echo?

As a result of poor planning, poor spacing, and the editor's apathetic attitude toward most athletic events, no information was included in the last issue of the Highland Echo on the first four games the Maryville College Intercollegiate Girls Basketball Team played. Even more disappointing was the fact that as of January 29 I had not read in our campus newspaper how our superb wrestling team faired in their last four matches. Surely Jim Batchler who has tied the school's record for pins deserves some publicity. Finally, does anyone beside the players and their close friends know how the handball club, men's intramurals, and women's intramurals are progressing this term (or how these events progressed during interim)?

As the Highland Echo is a campus publication, should not campus events (Fine Arts Concerts, Student Recitals, Science Seminars, ACC decisions, intramurals, intercollegiate activities, etc.) be covered and published first and then space-fillers on articles from other sources and other campuses be included only if they are important and space is available?

Name withheld

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson — Editor-in-chief
Kathy Kirkhart — Assistant Editor
Bill Walker — Business Manager
Jeff Draper — Distribution
Tim Rahn — Lay-out Editor
Dr. Robert B. Braid — Faculty Advisor
Joe Showalter — Photographer
Kimberly Dar — Lay-out Assistant

Dumb, Dumber, Dumbness: The Extent of Functional Illiteracy

(CPS)—What's it like in a world papered with books, newspapers, magazines, forms and notices not to be able to read? What do you do if you can't understand your college textbook, figure out your income taxes or follow the qualification requirements in a help-wanted ad?

According to a number of recent surveys more and more Americans, much to their disadvantage, are finding out.

"Functional illiteracy," or the inability to communicate and accomplish tasks within a basic level of competency and clarity, has won a prominent place in the lexicon of contemporary American education.

And unfortunately its applications have been widespread, stretching across all levels of education and not confined to one race or family income:

—One study, due for release in a few months, found that 36% of its sample, given an income tax form and information about dependents were unable to read, write or compute well enough to enter the correct number of exemptions in the appropriate block.

—Another study of adults with 10.5 years average schooling found that their average reading and computation level equaled a fifth grade education.

—A third survey of college department chairpersons found widespread, though not universal concern that "students are coming from high school with a far less firm grasp on fundamentals than before—middle class as well as disadvantaged students."

Results from this last study coincided with remarks from the executive secretary of the Modern Language Association, who stated, "My impression is that on a national level we have failed—have continued to fail—to meet the challenge of illiteracy among college-level students."

At Maine's Bowdoin College, increasing concern that students were "incapable of expressing a coherent train of thought in written form" led the school to request a written essay as part of its student application process.

The college's faculty and administration singled out athletes, middle class students from progressive schools and the poor from deficient high schools as those who most frequently comprised the group of inept writers.

"One third of the papers and exams I receive," said one history professor, "are written by students whom I consider functionally illiterate. I simply cannot correct for both the historical content of the work and for grammar."

In a similar move the College Entrance Examination Board recently included a "Test of Standard Written English" as a regular part of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT).

The bid to more specifically and accurately analyze writing skills came after a general ten year decline in SAT mathematics and English scores.

Concern over poor writers and readers has extended beyond academia. Textbook manufacturers, for example, are encouraging college textbooks to be written at lower than previous reading levels.

McGraw-Hill now asks authors to write college textbooks at the eighth and ninth grade levels of reading.

A spokesperson for the book publishers defended the move, saying, "We're not talking so much about just lowering the (reading) level of the books as we are (about) making the points a little clearer."

For many Americans outside of college, though, "clarity" isn't so much the issue as is the lack of basic reading, writing, speaking and listening skills.

According to US Commissioner of Education Terrel Bell only 56% of American adults are able to match personal qualifications to job requirements when shown a series of newspaper help-wanted ads, and one fifth cannot read an "equal opportunity" notice well enough to understand it.

In addition Bell said that about 39 million Americans could not locate the deduction for social security on a monthly earnings statement.

The study cited by Bell is the first national assessment of the performance of adults on a number of objective skills judged necessary to "survival in American society."

Bell expressed particular concern for those on the bottom of the "survival skills" ratings. "If they cannot cope now," Bell said, "the next decade will find them lower on the survival scale, and with them their families."

Think "how it must feel," the education commissioner said, "to be 25 years old and unable to fill out a work application, open a savings account or read instructions for using an electrical appliance."

(continued from page 1)

ed the report.

"The United States and the Soviet Union, for instance, regularly swap names of intelligence personnel assigned to each other's countries for 'area familiarization' purposes," said the Fifth Estate.

"Since foreign intelligence services, host countries and other interested parties have an awareness of the CIA's world-wide clandestine presence, the American people have a right to know as much as those outside the US do."

losophy

ed, preferably typed and turned in to Names may be withheld upon request. ould be turned in by this time to insure lit and abridge all submissions over 300 re not necessarily those of the editor, inistration.

Shown

come in contact with the world again.

As a devastating indictment of the game called war, "Johnny Got His Gun" is the most shocking and powerful argument for peace you'll ever see.

Personnel Admin Opportunities

"Career Opportunities in Personnel Administration" will be the topic of a symposium presented by Dr. Steve Laser from the Employee Development Division of the Tennessee Valley Authority. The symposium will be located in Room 208, Thaw Hall on Thursday, Feb. 13 at 7:30.

Dr. Laser will be talking specifically about the academic requirements for a career in the area of personnel administration. Graduate catalogues for schools with programs in this area will be available for your inspection during the symposium. Other areas to be covered by Dr. Laser are the job outlook and salaries for people in this field.

If you have any interest in a career in management, industrial/organizational psychology, or general business administration, please come and talk with Dr. Laser.

Archaeology?

This past interim the students in the archaeology project (among other things) located and surveyed a prehistoric Indian site in Blount County. The artifacts discovered were said (by experts in the field from the University of Tennessee) to date back to 5200 B. C. This collection of artifacts will presently be displayed in the S. S. C. lobby.

The students in this interim have been challenged to form an archaeology club (or to establish a chapter of the Tennessee Archaeological Society) on campus with two objectives: (1) to educate the community about its responsibilities and obligations regarding archaeology, and (2) to complete the survey of the area where we discovered the pre-historic site. One purpose of this article is to invite all interested students and faculty to join the club and participate in this project.

The second purpose of this article is to announce the opportunity for students to learn about archaeology first hand (and at the same time earn college credit) by participating in a summer field project sponsored by the University of Tennessee Anthropology Department. If you are interested in either joining the club or the summer project, contact Dr. Nichols in the math department.

BSA Recognizes Black History Week

by James Yancey
Secretary-Treasurer of BSA

"Up you mighty race, for you can accomplish what you will." In this statement by Marcus Garvey, a black nationalist of the early 1900's, he exhorts the black race to come to its feet amid oppression and discrimination and "accomplish what you will."

In the realm of American history, the black man's accomplishments did not start in the 1900's, but over 400 years ago. Today those contributions are virtually ignored in the history books, leaving the annals of America's largest minority in oblivion.

In view of this historical wrong, Carter G. Woodson formed the Study of Negro Life and History in 1916. A leading black educator of his time, Woodson saw that not only the black man but America also was being deprived of some of the world's richest recorded history because its makers' skin was black.

Since the inclusion of these black archievements into America history books continued to be forbidden by the dogma of racism, Woodson felt a week of study should be set aside in celebration to focus on them. This would guarantee that ignorance would no longer rub our historical annals of a complete study of our nation.

This event, usually recognized as

continued on page 4

We Invite You to Visit Us at Seven Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Downtown
Alcoa
Airport
Broadway
McGhee Tyson
Seymour-Chapman Hwy.
Townsend

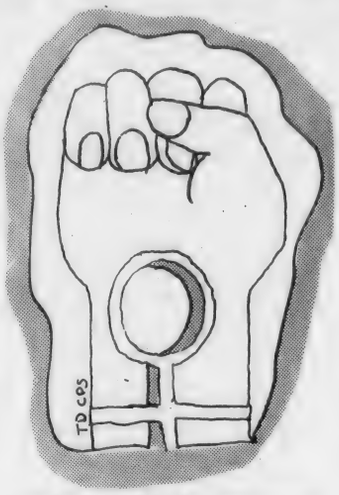
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

NCAA Slouches Toward Women's Athletic

(CPS)—After a controversial false start the nation's most prominent student athletic association voted to consult with a women's athletic organization before deciding to conduct pilot programs for national women's intercollegiate athletic championships.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) had earlier opted to establish test programs on its own for women's championships in track and tennis for this spring, followed by pilot championships for as many as ten other sports in the next four years.

The change was seen as a minor victory for women's sports groups, because the earlier resolution failed to provide for consultation or cooperation with women's athletic organizations, notably the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW).



The action came during NCAA's 69th annual convention in early January in Washington, DC and was prompted by complaints from the convention floor and stiff criticism by AIAW officials.

Dr. Lee Morrison, AIAW president, expressed shock and disappointment when informed of the original NCAA proposal to press ahead alone with women's championships.

"We have been trying to work with the NCAA to iron out some of the problems common to women's athletics," she said. "If this program is intended to replace ones women have developed, I would be very concerned and upset."

"I would say they are trying to infringe upon opportunities women have provided for women," Morrison said.

The revised resolution called for a joint AIAW-NCAA committee to study the issue of women's intercollegiate athletics and to report back in time for the 1976 NCAA convention.

The resolution then calls for the NCAA Council, the organization's policy-making body, to suggest whether or not "it would be desirable or legally necessary" for the NCAA to conduct women's championships.

The action bars any pilot programs for this year.

According to NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers the two sports associations have been in close, though unfruitful contact on the simmering issue of women's championships already. Byers was quoted by Higher Education Daily as saying the women's group did not seem to be interested in cooperating with the NCAA.

In a move destined to further heighten tensions between the sports groups, the NCAA Council in its report to convention delegates underlined what it felt was the value of having a single association control both men's and women's intercollegiate athletics.

"The only satisfactory approach... to the necessary institutional control of all its intercollegiate athletic programs," the council said, "is to place men's and women's programs under the same administration, the same legislative body and the same eligibility rules."

continued from /page 3

Black History Week will be celebrated by Maryville College throughout next week, February 9-15. The guiding theme for this year is "Black Leadership: Who and Why?"

On Wednesday morning, February 12, at 9:30 a.m., the BSA will present a program entitled, "Prospectives on Black Leadership in America." This presentation will center around the black leader and what it takes to make a black leader. This program will be held in Wilson Chapel and is a CIV credit.

Smoky Mountain Passion Play

Auditions and technical interviews for the 1975 season of the Smoky Mountain Passion Play will be Saturday, February 22 in the Fine Arts Building at Maryville College. The time will be 12:00 Noon to 3:00 p.m., with call backs to follow until 5:00.

The outdoor drama in the life of Jesus will present its third consecutive season at the Passion Play Amphitheatre in Townsend, Tennessee from June 20 through August 31. Performances will be nightly except Wednesdays and Thursdays. Rehearsals start June 1.

Producer and author is Robert E. Temple, of Maryville. The drama will be directed by C. Edward Steele, director of the Little Theatre of Charlotte, Inc. in Charlotte, North Carolina. Steele was also production coordinator for the 1973 season of the Passion Play. Stage manager-technical director is David F. Behan, in his second year with the drama. Behan is chairman of the theatre department at Tusculum College in Greeneville, Tennessee.

The Passion Play cast will number 45. February 22 auditions are being held primarily for 11 principal and 14 supporting roles. Tech positions available are lighting technician, sound technician, costumes and make up director and three crew people.

The Passion Play will audition also at the Southeastern Theatre Conference in Birmingham, Alabama March 6 and 7 for any positions not filled through the auditions at Maryville College February 22.

RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER

Scots Are On The Move

The vastly improved Maryville College Basketball team brought its 1974-75 season record to 9-7 this past week as they downed Bryan College of Dayton, Tennessee last Thursday night, 79-61, in a home contest, then went to Greenville, Tennessee on Monday evening to defeat Tusculum College, 88-72. The Scots have not won as many games in three years when they produced an 11-15 mark in 1971-72. During the 1972-73 campaign, they were only 4-22, while last year the Maryville Five were only able to improve to 5-21. This season, the squad have really come into their own. Including last night's scheduled contest with Covenant College at Lookout Mountain, Tennessee, Coach Boydon Baird's team have six games left and need only two more wins to break even at .500.

Last Thursday's win over Bryan saw Maryville control all the way through the ballgame. The Scots took a 32-20 lead at halftime that was never challenged by the Lions during the second half. Bryan's Center, Jerry Cline, was the game's leading scorer with 21 points, but in a losing effort. Kenny Talbott, who is now fully recovered from last month's ankle injury, lead the Scots with 19. Bruce Guillaume chipped in with 18.

Monday evening's game in Greenville once again saw the leading scorer play in a losing effort as Walt Stokely pumped in 24. Randy Schaurer lead Maryville with 23. Also hitting in double figures for the visitors were Talbott (20), Mike Morton (14), and Guillaume (12). Maryville enjoyed a 40-32 halftime advantage.

The Scots play host to Centre College of Danville, Kentucky tomorrow night beginning at 7:30. These two teams met once before this season at Danville which the Colonels won, 99-83, back on December 7. Tuesday night, the Scots travel to Wise, Virginia to play Clinch Valley College. Their first encounter on December 1 saw the Scots victorious, 81-69.

bank of maryville

Your Bank
In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60, No. 15 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | February 14, 1975

News Briefs

President Ford is not ruling out the possibility that Sen. Edward Kennedy will be drafted by the Democratic Party as his opponent in 1976.

The United States imports more oil from Arab countries now than it did before the embargo, according to The Conference Board's latest Road Maps of Industry charts.

Thieves stole three Renaissance masterpieces worth up to $11.5 million from the Ducal Palace in Urbino, Italy.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson formally announced his 1976 White House bid asserting that he was the "little man's" candidate.

President Ford says he is willing to terminate all military and economic aid to South Vietnam within three years, if Congress agrees to a formula for appropriations in the meantime.

Shag of Iran's emerging army is receiving combat helicopter assault training from scores of retired U. S. army aviation officers working for private company run by their former commanding officer.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield left Bethesda Naval Hospital and is now resting at home.

The government paroled former West Virginia Gov. William W. Barron, after he served nearly four years of a 12-year sentence for conviction of conspiracy.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy filed papers in federal court in a further effort to declare presidential use of the pocket veto unconstitutional.

The U. S. Naval Academy announced that seven of 10 midshipmen accused of using marijuana submitted resignations.

Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall was reported in satisfactory condition at Bethesda Naval Hospital with a respiratory condition.

The government reported Wednesday that the nation's welfare rolls inched upward last October for the fourth straight month.

Assisted by a man costumed as Abraham Lincoln, a group called "GASP" gathered on the capitol steps to proclaim a nonsmokers Bill of Rights.

Treasury Secretary William Simon has been asked by several party leaders to run for governor of New Jersey in 1977.

Tutors Needed by COC

The Community Outreach Committee has initiated a tutoring program each Tuesday and Thursday night from 7:15-8:00 p.m. in Sutton Science 101 for the children from Parkside (a government housing project behind Midland Center) grades 1-5. Last week there were 28 children and 6 tutors present. In order for this program to continue, more interest on the part of the MC students must be generated. Can you help? If so, please contact Art Fowler (2243), Peggy Maher (2257) or Mrs. Wilson in the Chaplain's Office.

Smooth Talkers At T.I.F.A.

The Maryville College Forensics Team made an exceptional showing during the Tennessee Intercollegiate Forensics Association tournament at Vanderbilt University, Feb. 6-8, 1975.

In Junior Debate competition, Laura Dance and David Lundell, M.C.'s "A" team, compiled a 3-3 won-lost record. All 3 wins came when the team took the affirmative stance on the national topic, "Resolved: That the power of the presidency should be significantly curtailed." Ms. Dance and Mr. Lundell's case centered on the harm of presidential secrecy and the need for swift Congressional action.

During competition in Oral Interpretation of Prose Literature, Ellen Bercovitz was one of 6 finalists out of 41 entries. Ms. Bercovitz's selection was "The Highway", a science fiction short story by Ray Bradbury.

The entrants, all in their first intercollegiate tournament as members of the M. C. Forensics Team, competed against students from many other Tennessee schools, including U. T., Carson-Newman College, M. T. S. U., Austin-Peay, E. T. S. U., and Vanderbilt University.

Upcoming activities by the Forensics Team include a demonstration debate for C. I. V. on Feb. 26 and a trip to the Eastern Kentucky University Forensics Tournament on Feb. 27-March 1.

The M. C. Forensics Team functions under the auspices of the M. C. Forum for Speech and Debate. All students are welcome to participate. Those wishing more information should contact Mr. Blair Beasley in the Speech-Theatre department or Michael Johnston.

Future Thoughts

FUTURE THOUGHTS: What would you like to do with your time and how would you like to enrich your college experience December 1 to December 19, 1975?

The Interim Committee invites the campus community to share ideas for group and individual projects. Faculty and students should talk about possible group projects. Students interested in individual projects should submit proposals to the Interim Committee through a Faculty Advisor.

A list of group projects will appear in a tentative brochure which will be distributed April 15. Proposed individual projects should be submitted to the Interim Committee by May 15. Students interested in an employment/experience program should contact Mrs. Spurlin, Director of Career Planning, for information.

MC Presents Blackearth Percussion Group

The Blackearth Percussion Group, a professional new music ensemble dedicated to experimental music and the intermedia of percussion with electronics, visual elements, and theatre as a tool for communicative artistic expression, will appear in the M. C. Chapel Friday, February 21th at 8:15.

The group consists of four young musicians from diverse backgrounds dedicated to "furthering the acceptance and understanding of music of our own time." The group has recorded for Opus One records and has performed to critical acclaim for universities, concert series, and symphony orchestras throughout the United States and Canada. Jazz vibist Gary Burton had this to say about the group: "Pioneering a new field of performance that is fast becoming popular in modern music, the Blackearth Percussion Group is a first-rate group of musicians, capable of exploring the most challenging areas of music, and always helping the listener to feel welcome and informed."

The ensemble is currently presenting educational programs of various types, including workshops, seminars, young people's concerts, and short term residencies. The group is presently artists in residence at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois. The ensemble's repertoire includes Albright, Bertoncini, Bruin, Cage, Foss, Harrison, Ishi, Johnston, Rzewski, Stockhausen, and compositions by members of the group.

CIV credit will be given for this performance.

Sarc for '76

Plans for the King Arthur Interim in 1976 are being made by Mrs. Herma Cate and Dr. Elizabeth Fowler. A number of students have already indicated their desire to participate in this trip to England and Wales in search of the historical and legendary British King. Basically the interim is similar to the one which 16 M. C. students took in 1970 and 28 in 1973.

E. T. F.

VISIT GREECE MARCH 21-MARCH 29 HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE GROUP HAVE A FEW VACANCIES REMAINING, GROUP RATE FROM KNOXVILLE ON SCHEDULED AIRLINE (not charter) ALL INCLUSIVE FARE. FABULOUS ITINERY. FOR MORE DETAILS CALL EVENINGS - KNOXVILLE–688-4165.

Vespers

The Rev. Charles B. Hoglan, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church in Knoxville, will be the guest speaker at vespers Sunday, February 16, at 7:00 p.m. in the Little Chapel.

from the editor's desk

One Year Later

I was selected editor one year ago. I entered this position with all the excitement of a child entering a new amusement park. I was eager to try new things and wanted to change the Echo tremendously. I was willing to spend many hours perfecting the newspaper because I saw the editorship as a challenge. I saw it as a chance to truly help Maryville realize and solve some of its problems.

But as I write my final editorial for the Echo, there is a very familiar feeling inside of me. It is the same feeling I had after serving two years on the All-College Council. It is a feeling of no accomplishment after spending many hours attempting to help MC reach its full potential.

The enthusiasm I possessed when I expected this position died rapidly as the community refused to respond to the issues raised constructively. I soon began to realize that the "community" for which I wanted to help really did not exist. What existed were three separate communities: the administration; the faculty; and the students. The administration is basically concerned with maintaining the status-quo. The faculty is basically concerned with academic freedom and economic security. The students are basically concerned with two things: 1) getting good grades (an education) and 2) getting drunk or high by any means necessary to alleviate the boredom in their lives. However idealistic we may want to be, these are the three separate realities of MC.

The result of this situation is that it is impossible to edit a "campus community" paper that can meet the needs of these three realities whose motivations are totally different, without a great deal of conflict. And conflict is what we all fear the most. Instead, we are so preoccupied with the notion of reaching a consensus that is so watered down, that it accomplishes nothing. (Knock! Knock! "Hey Emerson, you want another beer." "Yeah man! Maybe it will help me finish this editorial. Thanks a lot! I'll see you later.) Thus, the concept of a "community" paper is ridiculous. The different "communities" just do not have the same interests and each wants to avoid conflict even when it's in their favor to have it. Thus, the "real" issues are "phony" issues to project the image that we are a "community" – "we're all in it together."

Well, I have been "in it together" with you for over two years in as many different positions as you can name. I have been hung up on this "community" concept like everybody else. But now I would like to drop that "campus community" concept and pick up the "student community" concept and become concerned with their interests: getting good grades and getting drunk.

e. d. h.

"ARE WE DREAMING OR ARE YOU REALLY THINKING OF

The Great Book Explosion

by Shahbaz Ahmed

It seems as if each term the number of books required for various courses is increasing and their prices are steeply mounting. There are some courses that require as many as a dozen books or so and for some students the books for a single term cost as much as sixty or seventy dollars. By the time of graduation a student finds such a large accumulation of books that it has been reported that some graduating seniors had to rent U-Haul trailors to move their books to another place.

I have seen some students getting somewhat disgruntled on having to buy a large number of books at very high prices. Not too long ago many questions came to my mind as well and I could not find answers to those questions in any of my books.

Whenever I have questions regarding books, I eventually see my old friend named Aldrich Bookworm. Faced with such puzzles once again, I decided to see him. I met him within the stacks in the fiction section. I asked, "Tell me Bookworm, why do we have to buy so many books?" Wiping dust off his glasses, he scholastically said, "You must know that the quintessence of education is aquisition of knowledge and books are a major source of knowledge." I said to him, "Yes, I know that. But the thing that baffles me is that many times very small portions of books are required to be read, and also, a lot of times they are read cursorily and forgotten quickly. Do you think the books are serving their purpose?" Aldrich said hastily, "You have a very narrow view of books my friend. You see, whether or not books are read and learned from, there is a big purpose they serve, and that is, at graduation each Maryville College student practically possesses a library of his own. Isn't that terrific?" I said, "I am not convinced Bookworm. I still think we can have some sort of arrangement by which the number of books can be reduced or their availability be made easier, like a book-lending system or something." Aldrich Bookworm said, "I don't think you realize that reducing the purchase of books will be a serious blow to our economy. If we start buying less books we will be worsening the recession. There is a large number of people involved in making their living through writing, paper-making, printing, binding, distributing and selling of books. If we lower the purchase of books, many of those people will be affected and unemployment will rise. Now that we are buying more books, we are helping fight recession and also helping keep unemployment down. That's just what President Ford wants us to do. Now tell me, are you convinced?" "Convinced?" I asked. "The fact is Bookworm, I am overwhelmed."

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

If Maryville College is to be a college, it can do so only through the efforts of the faculty and students. They are "where it's at." When you peel away the peripheral activities, from athletic teams to forensities, you find at the dead center of the college (any college) purpose the interaction of scholars. This is, of course, not to say that the peripherals are unimportant.

The interaction of scholars is the dead center. Unfortunately, "dead" seems an apt description of this aspect at M. C., in too many cases.

A number of students and professors have complained of this, in my presence, over the past few days. The general query seems to be: what can we do about it? Several faculty and students are now trying to revivify a part of the "dead" center with a restructuring of the Freshman year. This may or may not be helpful.

There is, however, a more basic issue accompanying curriculum. Guts. I take as my text the number of unsigned letters which are printed in the Echo. This is a symptom of the same disease which debilitates argument in classes, which was killed investigative reporting in the student newspaper, and which makes reading 90% of term papers and blue books a task of unbelievable boredom.

It takes courage to search for truth. You must lay your data, concepts and new formulations naked on the table. Then you endure the pain which accompanies their dissection, internalize it, and try again. It is, as one of my teachers says, like assisting in the murder of your own babies.

When we engorge data as food for thought and then vomit it forth unmetabolized, the intestinal tract does not come into play at all.

Shalom,
David R. Cartlidge

Echo Philo

Letters to the editor must be signed, p
Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Nam
All other items for publication should publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit
words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not the staff, and/or the College Administra

Beginning next week, the Echo will beg applicants for the editorship. Please fee suggestions to the Communications Co

A MC Ori
A Nice Way To Sa

A Nice Way to Say Thank-you, an original musical comedy revue, will premiere on March 3, 1975. The script is written and directed by S. Michael Ayers. Assistant director and stage manager is Trish Damon.

The show, a multi-media musical revue, features a wide variety of American music along with some excellent choreography.

Included in the cast are Ed Fort, Bonnie Holsinger, Cindy Murane, Steve Yuhasz, Mary Story, Janet Cunningham, and Randy Hunter.

The production's funding and coordinating body is the Development Committee. It is their suggestion that initiated and perpetuated the production. The show will be presented for a community appreciation night to

Staff

Emerson D. Henderson — Editor-in-chief
Kathy Kirkhart — Assistant Editor
Bill Walker — Business Manager
Jeff Draper — Distribution
Tim Rahn — Lay-out Editor
Dr. Robert B. Braid — Faculty Advisor
Joe Showalter — Photographer
Kimberly Darden — Lay-out Assistant

THAT?'

sophy

erably typed and turned in to may be withheld upon request. turned in by this time to insure bridge all submissions over 300 ecessarily those of the editor, on.

the publishing of trial issues by ree to offer your criticism and mittee on a particular issue.

inal Thank-you

p off a fund raising campaign, and ill potentially be presented on two ther occasions.

Not only does this show boast of talented cast, but an excellent back- band consisting of Carolyn Phibbs, avid Williams, and Ray Crabtree.

RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER

Ron Hendren
IN WASHINGTON

Student Loans Threatened

WASHINGTON – A recent study has concluded that more and more young people are defaulting on their federally guaranteed student loans, and that report has provided new and potent ammunition to congressmen, senators and White House aides who want an excuse to disembowel the program. More than half a million students have obtained college educations with the help of these loans.

The study projects that the government will likely lose some $20 million annually in defaulted notes, about one half of one percent of the total amount guaranteed, and about half the cost of a single C5A transport aircraft.

But never mind, $20 million is $20 million, and in these perilous times a lot more people are spending a lot more time looking for ways to tighten other people's belts. And rightly so, although the fiscal admonishers would do well to start at home.

The problem is that those who are strangling abdominally are the ones who are asked, or forced, to be the first to take in still another notch. Thus it is that Social Security and medicare and medicaid recipients, students, and others living on slim, fixed incomes are the first to be asked to sacrifice still more.

And that brings us back to the recipients of guaranteed student loans. The four volume study (which, incidentally, cost the Office of Education $180,000) found what most educators already knew: that the recipients of these loans tend to be students from families in middle and lower income brackets, and are people who for the most part would not receive formal education beyond high school were it not for this program.

The study also shows that defaulters tend to be lower income persons, are more likely to be black than white, and attended poorer, less prestigious schools. Many attended trade schools.

Richard L. Tombaugh, executive secretary of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators fears that "some banks will be more careful now in making loans to the kinds of students who could default." Federal officials are already suggesting higher loan standards, and similiar "solutions" will come from state officials you may be sure.

The result: those who need help the most could become those to whom help is denied.

A carefully reading of the $180,000 study, however, suggests a different course. The study shows that defaults for students attending public and private schools decreased about threefold between 1968 and 1972, while claims from so-called "proprietary" schools increased a whopping 700 per cent in this same period. This latter category includes trade schools, secretarial schools, management training schools, and a host of other generally small institutions.

Could it be that many of these schools are fly-by-night operations, the kind which often are advertised on matchbook covers, the same slick operations which bilked so many veterans in an attempt to siphon off G. I. benefits? Could the high default rate be because these schools often ask students to sign a full contract before the recipient has a chance to spend a semester determining whether the institution is able to further his or her career?

This is one of the points raised to me recently by Robert M. Pickett, legislative director of the National Student Lobby. But Pickett goes further. "Because it is generally the poorer students who default, it is generally the larger loans which the government gets stuck with," Pickett says. "I don't believe that any student, however poor, should be put in the position of hocking himself up to his neck to meet educational expenses. Before a student should be allowed to borrow more than $1000 a year, we should be certain that all other sources—part-time work opportunities and the like—are exhausted."

Pickett also feels that not enough information is provided to students about their obligations and rights under loan agreements. "Most of these people are borrowing for the first time, and the kind of information they get, both about their new financial obligations and the kind of education they can expect to get for that money, is often dreadfully poor—particularly at trade schools and the like."

The outcome of the legislative battle that is sure to ensure over the future of the guaranteed student loan program will hinge on how effectively these arguments are made, for the program though successful is by no means sacred cow immune to congressional slaughter. If it dies, as that expensive study made clear, there are quite literally hundreds of thousands of your Americans who will never have the chance to get beyond high school in pursuit of formal education.

Alone . . . or Together?

Sitting in my room alone,
alone, alone, alone. . .
Hours pass
Yet unfulfilled and alone
I remain.
I think ahead, into my future, and wonder what aloneness would be like -
Real aloneness
With no alternative,
No one to turn to,
No one to cry to,
No one to pray to.

I feel anger at myself inside,
Sitting here alone
Rapping with a book -
A boundary of words staring back,
Blank, meaningless words;
Damn it, what can I do?

Decidingly, I quickly shut my books, turn off my lamp, and grab my coat.
I must do something;
I feel this strongly inside.
I must find someone to help me decide-what I can do . . .

Walking out my door,
I almost bumped into someone.
Then, I heard music and voices all around.
I suddenly realized I was not alone after all.
It is only a matter of 'getting together'.

 I know not where my* thoughts stemmed from,
Possibly from our recent topic posed in the February Meetings, but more likely from my state of mood-that of aloneness, so common among us M. C. students today. For this latter reason, I thought it to be worth sharing -

Amy Wynn Lancaster

Flavor Tree Delicatessen

Hot and Cold Sandwiches

.90 - $1.90

404 Church Ave. Professional Building

Open 10 a.m. - 11 p.m.

Phone 983-7914

Scots Assured Of .500 Season

The Mens' Basketball team assured themselves of at least a .500 season record Tuesday night when they defeated Clinch Valley College at Wise, Virginia, 84-69. The victory gives the Scots an 11-8 record with three games left on the schedule. In the only other game played this week, Maryville bowed to Centre College of Danville, Kentucky on Saturday night in overtime, 66-60, in a home contest.

Tuesday's game with Clinch Valley saw the Cavaliers come out hot, while the Scots took some time to get untracked. However, the Scots eventually did get moving midway into the first half and never lost the lead after that. In the second half, Maryville lead by as many as 15 with seven minutes to play when the Cavaliers began to move and closed the gap to six, but Maryville was able to regain control and ice the victory.

Coach Boydson Baird, who has not had a winning basketball season in four years, expressed enthusiasm with the prospect of a .500 season or better and said "anything we get now is a bonus."

Bruce Guillaume was Maryville's leading scorer with 18. Randy Schaurer 16, Mike Morton's 15, Randy Lambert's 13, and Kenny Talbott's 10 all helped in the winning cause. Clinch Valley's Jerry Meyers lead all with 21, while Al Johnson pumped in 20.

Saturday night's loss to Centre was disappointing for the Scots after they had come back to tie the game in regulation time and send it into overtime. Maryville had trouble containing the Colonels during the first half, but only trailed 30-28 at halftime. The Scots outscored their opposition 26-24 during the second half, but were unable to break the tie. Talbott tried a shot with five seconds that was no good, while Lambert's rebound shot at the buzzer bounced off the rim as the scored stood 54-54. The Colonels were in control during the five-minute overtime as they outscored the Scots, 12-6, to provide the difference. Centre's Steve Richardson was Centre's high scorer with 22, while teammate Al Williams contributed 21. Lambert had a game high 23 for Maryville with Talbott and Schaurer following with 12 each.

Afterwards, the Cheerleaders gave the team and coaches a delicious spaghetti dinner in the Proffitt Dining Room that everybody appreciated.

The Scots play host to the University of the South of Sewanee, Tennessee tomorrow evening at 7:30. The Scots upset them on January 21, 59-56, and this should be another good one. Maryville's last road game is Tuesday night vs. Bryan College at Dayton, Tennessee. It was originally scheduled for February 22. The Scots beat Bryan on January 30, 79-61, at Maryville, but the Lions beat Centre by 17 last Friday. The Scots will conclude their 1974-75 season on Thursday night by hosting the Lincoln Memorial University Railsplitters of Harrogate, Tennessee. The Scots won the first game on January 14, 82-81.

Guillaume Shoots Two

Football Players Are Normal

(CPS)—Remember Moose of Archie comics—brawny but dumb? Now the traditional Moose stereotype of football players may be faltering.

"Football players as a group do not differ in general personality makeup from the regular population," reported Dr. Bob Titley, associate professor of psychology at Colorado State University (CSU).

In his research on athletes, Titley has conducted personality tests on the CSU Rams. The tests were designed to study the players' leadership potential, need for achievement and recognition, control and poise, maturity, degree of independence, aggressiveness, fear of injury and self confidence.

"The results of the test have served a useful purpose," said CSU Coach Sark Arslanian. "In the past, I had always found it hard to understand why a player could not achieve a certain goal or complete an assignment. Now, with the test results, I am able to understand an athlete's hang-up and approach his problem differently."

Football players certainly differ from one another in emotional and physical makeup. But as a group, affirmed Titley, "they are very normal people"—not "mooses" or computerized robots bent on destruction.

Lambert sinks it!

If you're not sure what's out there, how can you know where you're going or how to get there?

The Christian Science Monitor can help.

It keeps you squarely in the center of the bold and exciting, the important trends of thought. It gives a firsthand, close-in view of the world's struggles and achievements. You see where you fit in — things you can do.

The Monitor doesn't do your thinking for you. In a quick readable style it gives you the facts to form your own decisions.

News, commentary, the arts, politics, science, fashion, sports, business: the Monitor is an exciting daily newspaper (Monday – Friday). Less than 10¢ a copy on your special rate.

Yes, I'll invest $8.25 in my future, for 4 months of The Christian Science Monitor.
Payment enclosed Bill me later
Name (Please print)
Street Apt.
City
State ZIP
The Christian Science Monitor
Box 125, Astor Station
Boston, Massachusetts 02123
17 SEA

GIVE BLOOD FOR A LARK.

$10 per donation to have some fun.
Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks.
Mon.-Sat. Free Parking
blood alliance
520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone: 637-3171

Easy Curb Market
8-11 Market
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
Hoagies 75¢
8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
Open All Holidays
BEVERAGES OF ALL TYPES
PICNIC SUPPLIES
715 East Broadway
Maryville

Echo symposium

How effective is the ACC?

The following question was posed to various members of the campus community. The answers follow.

Judging by recent actions, how effective is the All College Council as a decision making body in dealing with the problems of the campus community?

How effective is the All College Council as a decision-making body? Judging by its reactions since the first of this year, I would say Yes, it seems to be effective at reaching decisions on matters brought to it. The council carries on its business.The other question is – does the council's business deal with the problems of the campus community. Definitely not, as I see it. Real problems or issues are seldom, if ever discussed. The council is sorely deficient in asking the right questions. The council merely reacts to imput from the outside, and very little of that is original. At no point has the council been able to generate innovative plans or synergistically find good ideas either in reaction to the real problems or in action of its own toward mutually agreed goals. It is about time the council opened its eyes, dropped its defenses, learned to communicate, be open to growth and broaden the definition of what is its business.

Tom Martin

To the extent to which the All-College Council has helped to maintain an optimum atmosphere for learning, it has been effective. To the extent to which it has been allowed to become an end in itself and a source of distraction from the chief purpose of a college community, it has been ineffective. Especially on a college campus, that government governs best which governs least, freeing its constituents for creative living and learning. I see hopeful signs that the ACC is maturing into a body that understands its purpose. It is of course not perfect and not likely to be as long as it must select its membership from homo sapiens (including homo sapiens administrators), but I know of no better form of campus governance.

Dean Blair

Up and about

A Boston doctor has been found guilty of manslaughter of a 20-24 week old aborted fetus creating more controversy concerning the rights of the unborn.

Iranian and U. S. Government officials in conjunction with Pan American Airways are close to finalizing a deal that would have the oil-rich Irarian government bailing out the financially troubled airline.

Tennessee Senator Bill Brock (Rep) in an interview with The Knoxville Journal stated that "If we – as a society – are going to survive, we have got to personalize government." Brock went on to say that "there has been a lack of real leadership in this country for some time."

Three rapes occurred in Knoxville on Monday, including the rape of a four year old girl while her mother was visiting a neighbor.

Cadillac has recalled all of its 1974 models, a total of 234,000 cars, because of a misaligned secondary latch on all car hoods.

Henry Kissinger has returned from his latest trips of shuttle diplomacy. Most of the time was devoted to the politics of oil.

pa

The Maryville College Community Campaign has already passed the halfway mark of its $105,000 goal. Campaign director William Mooney said the college has received 75 gifts and pledges totaling almost $60,000.

Futurist Robert Theobald will speak at CIV on March 5.

The Blackearth percussion group will present a community concert this evening for CIV credit in the Chapel. The group's initial performance at MC was very well received two years ago.

Play rehearsals continue for both Cat on a Hot Tin Roof (Feb. 27-Mar. 1) and A Nice Way to Say Thank You (Mar. 3)

HIGHLAND ECHO

a politician is an arse upon which everyone has sat except a man

e e cummings

Vol. 60, No 16 | Maryville College | February 21, 1975

At Vespers

Luce to speak on post-war Vietnam

In December 1974 an interdenominational team of five US church leaders visited North Vietnam upon invitation from that country. One of those persons, Don Luce, Executive Director of Clergy and Laity Concerned, will be in the Maryville area to make observations on the visit and to suggest what help US churches can be to the process of reconstruction of that war-torn country. Mr. Luce is a journalist and agricultural expert who has spent most of the last 16 years in Viet Nam.

On Sunday February 23, Mr. Luce will speak at the 9:00 a.m. worship service at New Providence Presbyterian Church. Later that same day he will be at Maryville College at the Fine Arts Center lounge and at the 7:00 p.m. vespers in the Little Chapel. All meetings are open to the public.

Among the observations Mr. Luce will talk about are the following:

(1) "Bomb damage was incalculably worse than Americans imagine. Not only roads, bridges and factories were destroyed, but also in great numbers, churches, hospitals, schools, residential areas, even farm villages. The reconstruction task in North Vietnam is immense, and we believe that Americans, and particularly American Christians, should share in it."

(2) "The churches – both Catholic and Protestant – are alive in North Vietnam, though hampered by shortage of clergy. Those churches that we attended were full on Sunday mornings."

(3) "The Vietnamese believe we, the United States, have never attempted to implement the Paris Agreement. They look to us to implement its promises—withdrawal of military and political support from Saigon, convening of a unification committee. The members of this delegation agree with them."

ACC meeting

On next Wednesday, the All College Council will hold its regular biweekly meeting. The topic of long range planning will be discussed by the council. Co-chairman Tom Martin along with junior representative Mike Johnston will lead the discussion.

From various reports, the ACC has gradually become wrapped and tangled in its own language with several of the members stating their disappointment in the recent actions of the Council. (See Symposium on page three.) This meeting, led by Martin and Johnston, is an attempt to alliviate any such problems before they become too big to handle.

The ACC meetings are open to the campus community.

Ice skating party

Skating: The Social Committee is sponsoring an Ice Skating Party March 1 from 12:00 a.m. - 2:00 a.m. at the Ice Chalet in Knoxville. The price, including transportation, admission, refreshments and skate rental, is $3.50 per person. (If you own skates there will be a $.75 reduction.)

Sign-up is either during supper hour at Pearsons or at Dorm III between 10:30 a.m. until 10:00 p.m.

MC To Present "Cat"

editor's opinion

MC community needs to realize potential

People without vision perish.
Proverbs 29:18

With that thought in mind, what will happen with people with vision? Will these people with vision ever obtain the end of their vision? Is the thought of a vision itself enough? And then, what of all those with a vision that is frustrated and stymied?

It is the last of these questions—that of people frustrated and stymied—that deserves a quick once over. These are the people who have established within themselves a dream that would not only benefit them, but the predictiment of others, also. And these are like the people that met together two weeks ago on a Thursday evening.

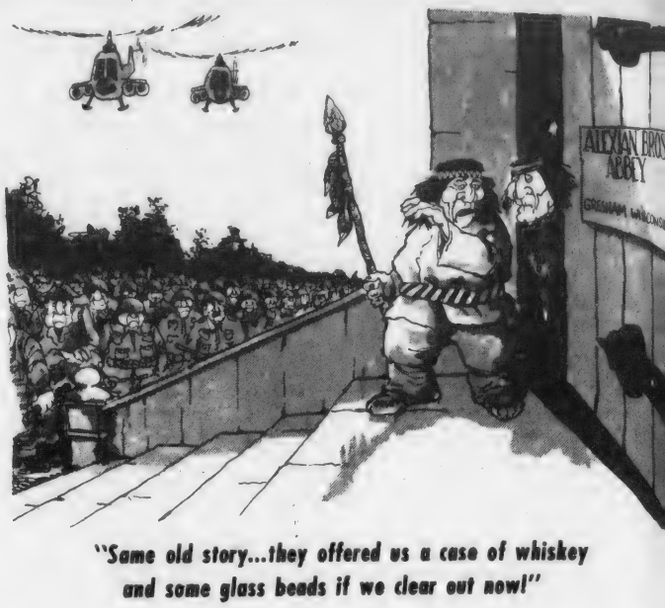
Following a February Meeting covocation address by Dr. George Edwards, a group of students and faculty gathered in the FAC lounge for discussion. The outcome of that group meeting has now brought about the formulation of a group of students that meets on a very informal basis just to talk.

The group is as informal as possible: no leader or spokesman, no name, no structured procedure, and no particular cause other than the betterment of the community. It is merely meeting under the premise that they are a group of students looking for a way to broaden their educational experience in relation to both MC and the world.

In this respect, these people have taken a big step in realizing the potential of MC. Each has their own designs for the campus/campus community and many have had these designs for quite some time, but now it is different. Different because they know that they are not alone, but a group with basically the same idea for realizing the MC potential.



Already this group has discussed many ways in which they would like to incorporate their ideas and ideals into the campus. Throughout these discussions, however, the underlying thought is not to tear down but to develop. The action is slow, positive and neccessitates a great deal of commitment and sincerity for those that are involved.

It is an ideal that the entire campus community needs to adopt. But first, the community needs to feel the commitment and become sincere in attempting to reach the visions of this college. We all need to reach down inside of our hearts and ask the question over and over again: Are we really heading to the right place as an educational institution?

Only when we take these steps, as this group has, in realizing the individual and community potential will the vision of the true educational experience at MC unfold before us.

Tim Rahn

"Same old story...they offered us a case of whiskey and some glass beads if we clear out now!"

guest view

Full-time chaplain needed

For nearly a year now, Maryville College has been without a full-time chaplain. A question has been raised asking whether this office is necessary or vitally relevant to the campus community.

Some think not. Changing student attitudes and religious values have made the role of a chaplain defunct and empty. Its just not the same as it was twenty years ago.

True, things are never the same as they were, and rightly so, but that does not mean the role of a chaplain is any less vital. As values and ideals change so must our institutions; the role of Christianity on campus is no different. The time is past when Vespers, February Meetings and Chapel can be the primary emphasis of a college chaplain; although they are important aspects of his work. Tradition should not be held on to just for the sake of tradition. The needs of the majority have to be met.

Emphasis of the modern religious life programs should and must center around human relations. The single most important role a chaplain can carry out is that of counseling: knowing students and their needs. This involves getting totally immersed in the community and identifying with students and their problems. This is what college chaplaincy is all about. It is a vital and important function in any college community.

We need a full-time person. It is much too big a job to be carried out on a part-time and limited basis. Dr. Cropp took the job of acting Chaplain with the idea of working only a few hours a week; this was not to be. At freshman orientation Dr. Blair remarked that "what started out as a part-time voluntary position has developed as a full-time voluntary position." It cannot be any other way. If the job is to be given justice, the chaplain has to totally immerse himself.

The job is not easy. It requires a very special person with very special skills and, above all, perseverance. A chaplain cannot give up and just sit in his office. Dr. Cropp put it this way

"If I just sat in my office all day I would see no one. I suppose they would come if I put a beer keg in one corner and the water fountain in the other. They would be there for the wrong reasons: Half would come to see if it were true and the other half would come to drink my beer; none would come to see me. I have to go to them, that is what the job is all about."

Maryville claims to be a Christian community. If she phases out the office of the chaplain on campus, she has taken another step away from her ideal. Serious consideration ought to be given to again having a full-time religious leader on campus.

Ed Loper

Trial

Contributers and writers: G
Loper, Kimberly Darden, Eme
Joe Showalter (photos).

Philosophy: By its Editorial terviewing or questioning or fe Maryville College campus comm both those who believe in the need for a creative outlet.

Letters to the editor must be s Box 2820 before dinner Mond All other items for publication publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Ech the staff, and/or the College A Letter shows a stu

Dear Editor for the Week:

After reading last week's Highland Echo, I realize that there are three groups of people (according to pay scales) on the campus: students, administrators, and faculty. However contrary to statements made by the editor in his editorial, I feel that most students are not only interested in good grades and in good times but are also interest in: improving Maryville College, helping themselves and each other by developing interactions within the student body, and developing and participating in interactions between scholars. I also feel that if students knew how to entertain themselves (without a T. V. or a stereo), the need to get drunk would be partially squelched for those who drink because there is nothing else to do.

Perhaps the real problem on the M. C. campus, as David R. Cartlidge suggested, is the lack of interaction between scholars, I assume he means interactions between the scholars commonly known as faculty members and the scholars commonly called students. But could not this lack of communication arise because some faculty members feel so superior to the students (both in class and out of class) that only the topics of the course must be discussed or else the conversation must center upon the weather? I have seen other faculty members turn their heads or alter their direction somewhat to avoid speaking to a particular student they may dislike. With students occasionally seeing faculty members (Ph.D's acting so, is it no wonder that students out of fear that a grade may b altered because of a previously state opinion or a name: (1) write unsigned letters to the editor of the Highland Echo, (2) request unsigned ter papers and blue books, and (3) hesitate to ask a professor for personal help or for aid in a course? Even David R. Cartlidge inferred that reading term papers and blue books would b much more interesting if they were signed. How many times does a student open a conversation with a professor only to have the professor immediately close the conversation (or vice versa)? How many faculty members make an effort to know a stude other than through gossip, or by clas attendance, or by term papers? Also how many faculty members prefer o allow certain cliques of students to monopolize much of their free time How many professors realize a student may need help with a course, y do nothing?

cont. from page 1

n response to the question you handed me yesterday morning, I find the uery impossible to answer. It is a ifficult question, surrounded by many variables. As such, it cannot be nswered simply and in brief. This is articularly the case if one is to try o put his answer in a form suitable or publishing in a campus newspaper.

I tried to answer the question, filled the page with garbage, and threw he whole mess away. I do not have he literary skill, I'm afraid, to answer he question as I would wish to in uch a short space.

If anyone from the paper wishes
o interview me in regard to your quesion (which would be proper newseeking procedure), I will be most illing and happy to respond for the ecord.

Sincerely,
David R. Cartlidge

n Rahn

Fred Strohl, Paul Parsons, Ed nderson, Jeff Swain (art) and

s ECHO is attempting -- by ino examine the basic issues of the s designed to be a forum for their ideas and those who have *rably typed and turned in to may be withheld upon request.

urned in by this time to insure* ridge all submissions over 300

cessarily those of the editor, n.

view

Most faculty members care deeply ut their students, I must add, and se incidences are exceptions but do occur. I feel that students just as major a part as the fay do in creating the lack of inter-on between scholars. However, positive the faculty will be able ee this side of the situation much er than I do.
erhaps instead of restructuring reshman year, the campus could me "revitalized" if each faculty ber and each student examined votes to see what is expected then tried to fulfill these expectas.

Melinda Lucas

David R. Cartlidge - I also wrote nsigned letter (2-7-75 issue of ighland Echo) to the editor n criticized the lack of campus covered in the school newspaper.

RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER
RECYCLE THIS PAPER

My experience with the ACC has been that it is not an effective decision making body. The council, as a representative group, is comprised of individuals with widely divergent philosophical outlooks. While this is necessary for any decision-making body if it is to offer creative alternatives to problems placed before it, at no time has a non-judgemental atmosphere of respect and trust been generated within the Council. Thus, individual differences remain unspoken, leaving no possibility for constructive synthesis. At the same time, the consensus system of agreement insures much time wasted on rhetorical avoidance of matters-at-hand. The Council is easily sidetracked, often to avoid confrontation; it also avoids mutual growth in understanding between its members. Little attempt is made to reconcile the Maryville College Purpose to each decision; the Council is unable to view any particular problem in a broad perspective and cannot effectively envision the future implications of its action or inaction on the total life of the college. The Purpose is left unclarified, irrelevant, in effect, nonexistant.

The Council is effective in at least one area: defending and maintaining the status quo long after the time for necessary change is past. I hope the Council and all its members can, in time, prove my observations incorrect.

Michael Johnston

The effectiveness of ACC decisions depends in my view as much on the nature of the community response as on the specific action. Since I am unaware of any community response, I am unable to comment on the effectiveness of the ACC as a decision making body.

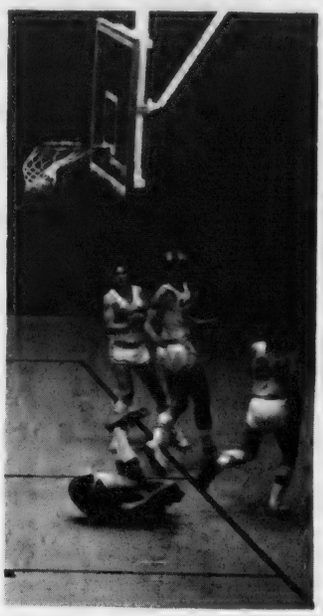
Individual members of ACC have made me aware of issues such as alcohol, smoking, long range planning, etc. but I would submit these are not community issues (why kick a sleeping status quo?).

It seems to me a more important question than the effectiveness of ACC in taking actions is the question of how the community identifies problems. What is a problem in our community? Maybe we didn't have any and the status quo is a good place to be. If we do have problems, what are they and how can they be expressed so a large segment of our community decides to do something about it? We have a large number of individual problems and concerns, but judging by recent actions of the campus community I would say the campus has no problems.

This could mean the ACC is quite effective; if it doesn't, what's the problem?

David P. Young

Roddenberry — 'Trek'



Gene Roddenberry, creator of the extremely popular Star Trek and considered by his avid fans as pure genius, is presently planning to write and produce a Star Trek movie using the original television cast.

Roddenberry who spoke before a jammed audience at UT Tuesday evening says that if the film proves successful he would like to evolve the show into a series of 90 minute shows for television once each season.

Scots show improved record– close season above .500

Maryville College is assured of its first winning basketball season in four years by virtue of the Scots 86-72 victory over the visiting Sewanee Tigers on Saturday night. Coach Boydson Baird's hoopsters were set back on Monday evening, however, as they bowed to an improved Bryan College team 87-79, in a ballgame played in Dayton, Tennessee. The Scots came out of that game with a 12-9 record and were scheduled to conclude their 1974-75 season last night by hosting Lincoln Memorial University.

Saturday night's contest with Sewanee saw the Scots go against one of the higher ranked teams nationally Division III of the NCAA. However, the Scots showed that their earlier victory over the Tigers on January 21 was no fluke. Maryville took a 35-32 lead at halftime and then blew the Tigers practically out of the building in the second half as they scored 51 more points. With five minutes left to play, it was clear that the Scots had iced their twelth win of the season and their first .500-plus campaign since 1970-71 when they were 15-11. Randy Schaurer was the leading scorer in the game with 20 points. Randy Lambert, Bruce Guillaume, and Mike Morton were the other Maryville double figure scorers with 17, 14, and 11 respectively.

When Maryville last played Bryan on January 30, the Scots won rather easily, 79-61. However, the Lions have improved tremendously since then and proved it on Monday night in Dayton. The first half ended in a 30-30 standoff, but Bryan broke it open during the second half, although the Scots

cont. on page 4

Gym schedule altered

Due to the District III High School Tournament being held in the Physical Education Building during the next two weeks, the following are the hours students may use the building on tournament dates:

Friday, February 21
..... up to 4:30 p.m.
Saturday, February 22
..... 1:30-4:30 p.m.
Monday, February 24
..... up to 4:30 p.m.
Tuesday, February 25
..... up to 4:30 p.m.
Friday, February 28
..... up to 6:00 p.m.
Saturday, March 1
..... 2:00-5:00 (usual hours)

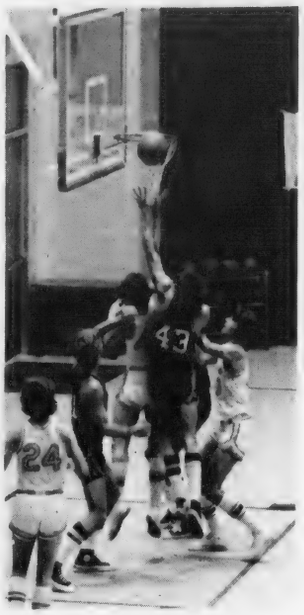
Students with ID cards may enter the right front entrance (next to stairway) to use the handball courts and weight room during tournament hours.

WIN $100 IN OUR ANTIBODY BEAUTIFUL CONTEST

Other prizes: T-Shirts ☐ Dinner for Two ☐ Concert Tickets
☐ Theater Tickets ☐ Frisbees ☐ Gift Certificates

☐ Enter anytime. Drawings for all prizes once every month.
☐ Donate plasma 6 times in 4 weeks to become eligible.
☐ Earn $10 per donation win or lose.
☐ Come in for complete details.

blood alliance



Bauer leads big win

The Maryville College women's basketball team rolled to its 5th victory in 12 games Wednesday night on their home court, beating the St. Mary's Nursing school 56-28.

Maryville scored first and was never behind in the game. With Terri Topham running the offense the Scots continually found open shots and took them. The Big gun for Maryville was center Betsy Bauer who scored a game high 28 points and pulled down 27 rebounds. Sandy Chambers did a good job replacing the injured Chris Curran. She only scored two points but pulled down 18 rebounds, half of them off the offensive boards.

For St. Mary's, Bev Barnett displayed good ball-handling and a good shooting eye from long range, hitting several shots from beyond 25 feet. But the Scots defense presented them from getting the ball inside for the good shot.

The girls last game was Wednesday night against the Scots of Covenant College which they won by the whopping score of 75-25 to finish their regular season at 6-7. Today the women travel to UTC for a tournament.

cont. from page 3

still had a chance to pull it out until there was a minute to go. High scorer in the game was Dan Begley of Bryan with 29 points. Schaurer lead the Scots with 20, followed by Guillaume's 16, all scored during the second half, and Lambert's 13. Morton contributed 10.

Grapplers win invitational

The Maryville College Fighting Scots Wrestling team captured the Mid-South Invitational Wrestling Tournament here last weekend with 133 points on their way to the title. Other participating teams and their final scores included Middle Tennessee State with 100, Western Carolina (92), Southern Tech (87½), Georgetown (54), and South Carolina (16). The Scots went to Boone, North Carolina on Tuesday for a dual match with Appalachia State and will meet Middle Tennessee State tomorrow at the latter's home fieldhouse.

Maryville wrestlers who took championship honors over the weekend included Paul Naylor in the 126-pound division, Tom Biamon (150), Joel Arvidson (158), Wayne Dunn (167), and Bob Von-Mitch (Heavyweight). Other weight-class division honors went to Jim Scott of MTSU (142), Paul Sevrris of Southern Tech (134), Scott Read of Southern Tech (118), Jerry Toy of Western Carolina (177), and Mark Hooker of MTSU (190). Toy was selected by the coaches as the meet's outstanding wrestler.

Athletic eligibility

(CPS)—Athletes with poor grades cannot participate in regulated intercollegiate competition, according to a recent court decision.

Several basketball players from Centenary College, LA challenged the National Collegiate Athletic Association's (NCAA) "1.6 rule" which prohibited students with less than a 1.6 grade average from engaging in NCAA sponsored competition.

The 5th US Circuit Court of Appeals, in ruling against the athletes, said no "property" or "liberty" interests were violated because of the 1.6 rule, and that constitutional due process offered the students no protection.

In a preliminary issue the court found that the NCAA operates as a quasigovernmental body and was consequently liable to federal civil rights suits, even though the court found no deprivation of the student's civil rights in this instance.

Student jobs

(CPS)—In an effort to help students find jobs amidst a sagging economy one New York college paper has begun offering free help wanted ads to businesses.

The CW Post Pioneer has carried over 400 ads during the last two weeks in the start of what it hopes will become a national "Jobs for College Students" campaign.

The editor of the Pioneer explained that local papers cooperated with the effort by providing publicity for the free want ads offer.

"College students need as much help as they can get to find jobs," the college editor said, adding that he hoped other papers would pick up the idea.

For information on the "Jobs for College Students" program, contact the CW Post Pioneer, CW Post College, Greenvale, NY 11548.

The mighty pen

(CPS/CUP)—A Forestry student at the Kelsey Institute of Arts and Sciences in Saskatchewan who had his marks lowered because of an article he wrote in the campus paper has won an appeal to have the marks upgraded to their original level.

The student, whose article appeared in the January 16 issue of the Scanner, condemned US control of the Saskatchewan forestry industry and criticized the school for not teaching students anything about who controlled the forest industry.

As a result of the article, one of the student's teachers deducted marks from his forestry class. The student protested to the Student Representative Council president who spoke to the school's assistant principal.

Within a few days the student was informed his marks would be readjusted.

Sports shorts

Buffalo Bill's running back O. J. Simpson won the Superstars 75 championship over Bob Seagren, former Olympic pole vaulting champ.

Johnny Bench signed a $175,000 contract with the Cincinati Reds while Ferguson Jenkins has signed a pact with the Texas Rangers for $200,000. Sal Bando of the World Champion Okland Athletics has entered arbitration for a $25,000 anty to his $100,000.

Mountain Supply Sporting Goods

407 Washington Ave.

Rugby Shirts

Snow Line Sleeping Bags

Alpine Design Camping Gear

Dunham Jogging Shoes $19.95

407 Washington Ave.
Easy Walking Distance from Campus

Intermurals redux

The men's intramural basketball program is going into the final part of the season. There are 10 teams involved and Eugene McSpadden's team, N.O.-R.M.L., is leading the pack with a perfect 6-0 record. Close behind are the Hackers and Medium Point, both 5-1.

The play this year has been typified by a lot of roughness, technical fouls, and a few outstanding individual performances, such as Steve Wright's 30 point performance against S. S. C. A few of the games have resembled football practice, complete with Flying tackles and head hunting defense. The refs are finally fed up with taking so much crap from the players, so it doesn't take much to get called for a 'T'. As far as team scoring goes, there seems to be plenty of it with such scores as 85-47, 70-41, 64-15, etc.

Besides Wright's outburst many players have gone over the 20-point plateau.

Starting late in February all teams, regardless of their records, will participate in a single elimination tournament to decide who will be champs.

THE
FLAVOR TREE
DELICATESSEN

For Your Favorite Deli

Sandwiches - Hot or Cold

Philadelphia - Style Hoagies

Our Specialty -

Imported & Domestic Cheeses

Call Ahead - 983-7914

Church Ave. Professional Building
404 Church
Just Past Gilbert's

MC PRESENTS "CAT"

Belinda Chiddie

A former football star purposely headed for self-destruction, his beautiful wife desperately trying to claw her way back into his life, and the domineering father of the disintegrating young man are the principal characters in Tennessee Williams' shattering drama, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," being presented at the Maryville College Theatre Feb. 27-Mar. 1.

The Pulitzer Prize play concerns an avaricious group of people gathered to celebrate the 65th birthday of a hard-bitten, profane, self-assured owner of a huge Mississippi Delta plantation.

All his gathered family know that he is dying of cancer. and the plot partly tells of the disastrous impact of this news when one of his sons cruelly breaks it to him in a scene of exchanging of unpleasant truths.

Belinda Chiddie will have the title feline role of the frustrated young wife, whose lying has its seed in love rather than greed.

Paul Kersey will be seen as her anguished, self-doubting husband. Steven Yuhasz will portray Big Daddy, the Rabelaisian padrone of the great cotton-growing estate.

Patricia Damon will play the millionaire's garrulous, truthfearing wife. Carl Swenson and Suzanne Schoen will have the roles of the malicious elder son and his wife. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. Admission $2; Students $1.

Paul Kersey and Steve Yuhasz

the Highland ECHO

A stairway to oblivion is better than no stairway at all. —Kehlog Albran

Vol. 60, No. 17 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | February 28, 1975

arlie Hurt, Jim Gray, Steve Lowry, and Trip Ziegler

New Jazz Quartet At MC

M. C. has added a new and promising addition to its musical repertoire n the form of a Jazz Quartet. Jim Gray on drums, Charlie Hurt on trombone, Steve Lowry on bass, and Trip Zeigler on piano bop their way through hours of entertainment.

Mr. Hurt, the new band director, who organized the quartet, considers azz as important as any other style of music. Previously there was no opportunity for students to participate in jazz, other than the recent jazz interim. A mutual learning experience describes the casual class that is held nce a week for the quartet.

The quartet is booked for several high school concerts in the surrounding area. This is a means to bring jazz to the public schools and at the same ime to advertise M. C. Good entertainment in an informal atmosphere is what they hope to bring to M. C.

Mr. Hurt hopes to eventually expand the quartet into an 18 to 20 piece tage band. This will be done by simply adding interested and competent eople, as they are found.

With enough interest, the Jazz Quartet will soon be swinging its way rown a road of success.

What's On My Mind

As a new part of the CIV format re will be an opportunity for an ividual to make a brief statement ut some issue, value or concern that mportant to him/her to share. These statements will be made un- the title of What's On My Mind. e nature of the issue or value or ncern is up to the person making statement. There are no limits to e—prose, poetry, music, panto- me, etc. There is a limit to length— ut 3 minutes.

What's On My Mind is not intend- as a new forum for griping. It is intended as an opportunity to say publicly what you think is right or wrong in such a way so as to encourage others to consider the issue or value, and if need be, to join together in a way to respond to it.

What's On My Mind can be a celebration of the good ways in which we meet issues and express values. It can also be a prophetic voice of challenge to call attention to something being overlooked or misused. It is an opportunity to tell us what's on your mind.

Echo Interview

Tom Martin Speaks On Campus Change

by Kit Williamson

As a graduating senior, Tom Martin has become involved in various aspects of Maryville College, among them being an individualized major in Science, Values, and Society, futuristics, and the co-chairman of the All College Council. This blend of endeavors has resulted in a great deal of reading into society and its problems, and also education.

Asked about his views on the present state of society, Tom replied: "We're at a point where drastic changes and our entire lifestyles will either be forced upon us by deteriorating social structure or we can choose to bring about the changes we want in order to produce a more desirable future. Some of the difficult things about these changes is that they are totally intermeshed with human values and must take place probably within one generation."

How does this apply to Maryville College?

"Maryville College is affected by the same problems and deficiencies as society in general. Even though Maryville is a small educational institution, it is still plagued with trying to solve new problems with outdated skills. The alienation and meaninglessness of modern life is just as prevalent on this campus as anywhere. Indications of this helplessness are found in the growing lack of fulfillment, the number of personal problems, and frustrations in either finding personal satisfaction or methods to make contributions to society in general."

Can the present set up of Maryville College attempt to correct any of these problems?

"I think not. With its traditional perspective it is not the place of an educational institution to deal with these situations."

What changes in the present structure need to be made before we can begin to make changes?

"I think it is a matter of how we look at things. Recently, an official of this college stated that Maryville is maintaining an optimum atmosphere for learning. My personal point of view is that this statement is erroneous. Though in its purpose, Maryville College has held the ideal that all aspects of the community life are educational, Maryville is failing in all areas other than the strictly academic. I feel that college can no longer be a place where students come to learn facts and a few isolated skills while delegating experience in living, decision making and working for com-

continued on page 3

MC Enlists

A new concept in education has encouraged Maryville College to join hands with the United States Army.

The cooperative program, called Project AHEAD, promises to be a solution for college bound young men and women who choose to join the Army and begin their education simultaneously.

Maryville College agreed to take part in the program January 25. This means that a soldier can complete about half the requirements for a college degree while serving a three-year tour with the Army. The government has agreed to pay up to 75% of all tuition costs for college credits earned during that time. For the soldier-student, this means a savings of $5000 that he would normally pay for school tuition. In addition, the

continued on page 4

mc forum: issues and values

CIV Ignores Real Issues

It is possible to make yourself believe in something through rationalization and logic. It is possible to make yourself enjoy something totally unenjoyable through dissonance and repetition. Since coming to Maryville there has been a part of my life that has been rather unbelievable and unenjoyable. To alleviate this I have tried the psychological methods mentioned above. I will like C. I. V. I will enjoy C. I. V. C. I. V. is lots of fun! My friends go to C. I. V. so it must be good! C. I. V. is here for my benefit so I will go to it and benefit from it!

For some reason, no matter how hard I try, it just does not seem to work. I disguise it many ways but C. I. V. still looks ominous. Furthermore the program is only half of what it pretends to be: issues and values of our community. All that we actually receive is the values end of the deal. Those that are interested obtain them from the various speakers while the other six hundred collect their token credits. As far as issues go the ones that are presented usually are not the issues of concern. The most prevalent and mundane issues remain virtually ignored; for example Alcohol, Dorm Visitation, and building hours. These are the issues, not the constitution and the President, the power of the presidency or the essence of a revolutionary. These answers can be found in books, magazines or on television, while Maryville's issues cannot. Hats off to the idea proposed by Dr. Young last week to allow people to air three minutes worth of issues at the beginning of each program. "What's on my Mind" is a step in the right direction. However, it's too small of a step. The entire program needs to be reconstructed. Since quantity does not breed quality in this case, the number of programs should be reduced to ten or fifteen a year. The low number of programs if handled correctly, should mean better quality. The money used to pay ten Kokomo Joes to speak could be used to pay someone of national importance such as John Dean, Ron Zeigler, or Masters and Johnson. They would serve not only as exciting enlightening speakers, but they would also put Maryville on the map. These people are more expensive than the college might like to spend. John Dean for example is $4,000 per lecture while the other Watergate lecturers range anywhere from $750 to $2500. However, money spent on these men by other educational institutions have proved to be wise investments. As stated in the February 17th issue of Newsweek,... "Dean's speech broke financial records at Virginia last week. The student union turned in a profit of $3500...A Watergate lecturer could be as valuable to higher education as a winning football team."

Attendance could still be required and credits could be given on a scale proportional to the number of programs, i.e. ten programs worth three credits apiece.

This would not cover the Maryville issues, however. Increasing the number of Town Hall meetings would accomplish this. Attendance should be optional assuring that only the interested would be present. This would eliminate the rude, mild roar of the uninterested that exists at most C.I.V.'s and assure a productive meeting. There are reasonable alternatives to the present C. I. V. program and they should be seriously considered.

Gary Sloboda

Anti-Heroes, Anti-Issues, Anti-Progress

After almost three years at Maryville it has become apparent that the same issues crop up every year; the same issues all but die every year. On a campus where there are real discrepancies between rules and life-styles, the status quo continues to be a confusion between what we are supposed to do, what we really want to do, and what we do.

Think about who the "heroes" on campus are. They aren't the ACC members or the campus administrators. They are the players who left the football team for what they felt was poor coaching, the senior basketball players who played only a minimum of their last game because of what many considered an unwarranted banishment by the coach, the ACC co-chairman who resigned from a position he found uncomfortable and frustrating.

These people are not quitters. They have worked through the system as far as they felt they could. The football team tried last spring to have representation when a new head coach was chosen. They were not allowed this privilege and their petition and protests were met only with disapproval by the administration.

The senior basketball players persevered through an entire season, yet they were all but ignored by the coaching staff during their last game. A large group of spectators called for them by name, and they, too, were ignored. It seems a shame that a worthy player must gain notoriety by not being allowed to play.

Mike Wenkstern found his position as ACC co-chairman one with which he could not identify. The job challenge was not met with reasonable job satisfaction. This was the basis for his resignation.

The people who make a real mark on this campus are those who, because of disregard by those in prominent positions, are not allowed to reach their full potential.

Consider what our campus issues are. Alcohol on campus, dormitory visitation, off-campus living, building hours—no student can remember when these weren't issues. Now consider what action the ACC has taken. Any solutions to these problems have been only partial solutions. The fact that these are still issues connotes those solutions are not satisfactory.

Those who ask the ACC to "realize its potential" are repeating a lost cry. The ACC has reached its potential. It has allowed itself all it will. It is a body of quasigovernance which will allow for only a very minimum of change, and only that change which it deems the safest. One begins to wonder if the ACC is more concerned with the alumni's impressions than the thoughts of our current students.

The only solution is a campus governmental attitude and people in decisive positions that won't insist on stifling individuality. We need a student body that won't allow issues to die. The possibility of its occurrence is, indeed, questionable.

We are left with a campus of anti-heroes working against anti-issues and achieving anti-progress. So, what does the future hold for Maryville? I borrow my Future Thought from Kehlog Albran who said, I have seen the future and it is very much like the present. Only longer.

David Haimbach

Letters to the Echo

Senior Athletes Ignored

Dear Editors:

The accomplishment of senior status at Maryville College is an honorable and important achievement. However, due to the many incidents and injustices I have observed this year, I am not sure seniors are held in such high esteem.

The final men's home basketball game of this season displayed a perfect example of such an injustice. Two of The Three seniors were ignored and slighted throughout their final game. They were inserted into the game with less than two minutes of time left for play: an obvious insult. Their dedication and contribution to the basketball team of MC has been ignored, not by the fans, but by the coaching staff of Maryville College.

This lackadaisical attitude toward senior sportsmen has been evident throughout this year not only in basketball but football as well. If the leaders and/or coaches of this "fine educational, intellectual institution" would consider the feelings of people instead of just winning a game, the final achievement would prove rewarding and satisfying for all.

It is unfortunate that these two outstanding leaders, in both athletics and academics, have been treated in such a disgraceful manner. I only hope this injustice will provoke a more human and intelligent attitude from the coaching staff of M. C.

I have always been told that "it's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game."

We salute John Leibrock and Jerry Spicer.

Vicki Parsons

Chaplain Not Needed

Dear Editors:

In the article "Full-time chaplain needed" the statement was made in opening that "changing student attitudes and religious values have made the role of a chaplain defunct and empty." This is where the article should have ended. There are not enough students on campus that would use the services of a chaplain; a counselor maybe, but even so, not as a full-time position.

The word "chaplain" has too much of a staunch religious ring to it. With today's more individualized religions a chaplain is out-dated. When someone has a problem he doesn't always see conversion to Christianity as a solution.

Charles B. Blair III

guest essay

ACC: Take It or Leave It

Howard Welch

Perusing back issues of The Echo, I am amused to perceive how closely Maryville College news parallels events taking place outside. It appears that the scourge of righteous self-examination begun by the Watergate debacle has made its way down from the north and, in short time, has invaded the south. Echo editorials, letters to the editor, and critical comments of all kinds have been fanning the flames of change on the Maryville College campus.

Squalid sentiments do not pertain to national politics alone. For well over six months, the All College Council has been under severe attack for its seeming indifference to student needs. Branded fickle and easily controlled, the A. C. C. is these days likened to a group of generals assuring their commanding officer that his mundane strategy will really work. Name calling and accusations of all description have poured in as everybody struggles to become a tiny part of the act of change.

Sadly enough, the act of change is exactly what this movement has become. Caught up in it, people lose their objectivity and fail to distinguish between the individual and the institution. Dr. Copeland's name inevitably becomes linked with A. C. C. business and the actions of both man and organization are construed as one. This image assumes disturbing proportions when one realizes that it is perpetuated by ignorance.

I am not suggesting that the ACC is an outstanding organization, nor do I find its leaders, past and present, inspirational. What I do realize, however, is that few student-body organizations ever fulfill all they set out to accomplish and in their benign efforts to do so, incur any available wrath. It appears that our legislative process lags far behind the surging spirit of twentieth century man. Recognizing

continued on page 4

Blackearth Percussion Ensemble

concert review

Blackearth "Brilliant"

by Danny Whiteside and Randy Hunter

Last Friday night in Wilson Chapel proved to be another experiment in audience concentration. The Blackearth ensemble performed several exciting and electrifying selections from their vast repertoire of twentieth century compositions. Each of the four percussionists proved to be a capable soloist; together they provided a diversified and extremely complex weave of percussive events.

The group displayed instruments from around the world; from the music store and the scrap heap. From around the world there were such things as Japanese meditation bells, a large marimba (which we think is called a Niamba), temple bells, several gongs and Chinese cymbals which added unique flavors to their music. They all proved to be experts in standard instruments of percussion and with the use of "junk art" (sheet metal, brake drums, metal tubing, etc.), they showed that creativity is not confined to any set of rules.

When asked about the large audience noise and how it affected them, they all agreed that this caused them to concentrate harder on the music and they felt their performance was one of their better ones.

The most important thing about Blackearth Percussion was their desire to explore and develop new concepts in music and their ability to expand into these new musical horizons and to make for themselves a unique and important place in the history and development of music.

So, in closing, may we all find the new horizons within ourselves and not fall into the confinement of conformity and apathy, just as James Baird, Garry Kvistad, David Johnson, and Allen Otte have done. Thank you, Blackearth for a brilliant performance and the inspiration to continue the search to find the new horizons within ourselves.

Kohn Recital Tonight

Melanie Schroeder Kohn will be presented in her senior piano recital Friday, Feb. 28, at 8:15 p.m. in the Maryville College Music Hall.

On the program are the following works: English Suite in A minor by J. S. Bach; The Tempest Sonata, Beethoven; Scenes from Childhood, Schumann; and the suite Estampes by Debussy.

Miss Kohn, who is taking a double Fine Arts major in applied music and art, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Kohn, Jr., 2700 Canterbury Road, Columbia, S. C.

At Maryville College she is a member of two music fraternities the college-community orchestra, the concert choir, and the Interim Committee of the All College Council.

Revue To Thank Community

As a way to thank Maryville-Alcoa and Knoxville communities for contributions to Maryville College, students are producing a musical comedy revue to be presented March 3.

A college spokesman said that the community fund raising campaigns for the college have been so successful students wanted to express their appreciation.

The revue, written and directed by student S. Michael Ayers, features a wide variety of American music.

Included in the cast are Ed Fort, Bonnie Holsinger, Cindy Murane, Steve Yuhasz, Mary Story, Janet Cunningham, and Randy Hunter.

Assistant director and stage manager is Trish Damon. Band members are Carolyn Phibbs, David Williams, and Ray Crabtree.

Campaign Director William Mooney said the college has received almost $80,000 in the fund raising campaign in the community. The goal is $105,000.

MC Briefs

Futurist Robert Theobald will speak at CIV Wednesday, March 5.

A Nice Way to Say Thank You, written by Steve Ayers, will premiere on March 3.

Registration and Schedule Changes for Spring term should be made on Wednesday or Thursday according to schedule provided by the Registrar's office.

Tom Martin

continued from page 1

mon goals to post graduate experience. Maryville needs to reevaluate what values, skills and experiences students need to fulfill themselves and help society move in a more desirable direction."

Do you feel that these goals can be accomplished through the ACC or are other channels necessary?

"If the ACC can drastically change what it traditionally has seen as its duty, it may be able to help move the college in this direction. I am doubtful whether or not the ACC can do this."

Why?

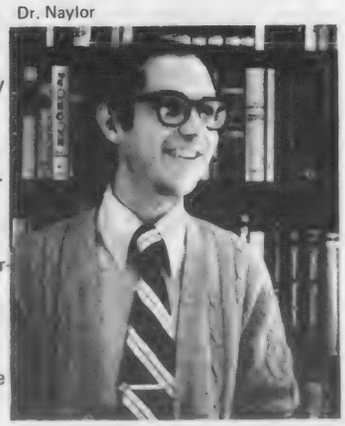
"There are several reasons: (1) Because it will involve personal commitment, (2) It will involve doing things differently, (3) It will be necessary to redefine students as equal citizens who are the only logical people to ask about situations that concern them, such as dorm life, curriculum needs and opportunities, and (4) It will involve a new definition of the concept of community, which is now totally out of date and no longer acceptable to the entire college constituency. I'm afraid that these things, particularly coming from a student, are too threatening and radically different for most of the structures of the college to undertake."

Are you hopeful of seeing the beginning of these changes in your last months at Maryville?

"Though I am constantly frustrated, I am also hopeful because it does none of us any good to be pessimistic, I feel the changes have to be made and therefore assume they will be made. Maryville College has been good to me and for me, but it is declining fast, as is society in general. Doing more of the same things either a little better or with more money will not be effective. It will take time, work and commitment, which I see the present structure and philosophy as incapable of giving. We have the ability to choose the way we will go. If we don't choose, either the college will decline or forms of dissruption will begin to face certain changes."

New Professor At MC

Maryville College will welcome a new professor for the Spring term, Dr. Robert J. Naylor, who will be teaching the basic physical chemistry courses. Dr. Naylor received his Ph.D. from Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, and attended Butler University in Indianapolis for his undergraduate studies. He has been teaching at Case Western Reserve for the past two years and will return there again for the summer months in order to continue his research.



We should consider ourselves here at Maryville College lucky to receive such an enthusiastic professor as Dr. Naylor. He was highly commended by his students at Case Western Reserve; in fact, the student evaluations proved him to be a very understanding person, and his former students felt that they could relate to him very easily.

Dr. Naylor is interested in Maryville College primarily because of the small college community atmosphere. Several of his classes at Case Western Reserve were composed of 450 students in one classroom. However his classes here obviously will not be nearly as crowded, and he will have an even better opportunity to relate to his students.

Besides being a physical chemist, Dr. Naylor also leads an active private life. His main interests are found in photography, astronomy, sports, and hiking with his wife. He has a deep concern for many things, including his curiosity about galactic chemistry, which is the study of molecules in outer space; he also gives much attention to the famous Stonehenge in England.

Dr. Naylor will reside on campus in one of the dormitories, which will give the students a chance to acquaint themselves with him. We are all looking forward to meeting Dr. Naylor and hope, indeed, that he will find his work at Maryville College to be an enjoyable experience.

Dr. Naylor

Trial Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Dana Alspaugh, Millie Brewer, Emerson Henderson, Randy Hunter, Howard Welsh, Kit Williamson, Danny Whiteside; Layout - Gwen Guba; Photography - Richard Mahler, Curtis Leonard, Joe Showalter.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

MC ENLISTS

continued from page 1

soldier-student can expect to earn up to $14,000 with normal promotions.

Maryville College has agreed to serve as the individual's "home" college, where a record of his progress will be on file and an academic advisor assigned to keep in contact with him. In addition, the school will evaluate for college credit the person's scores on educational achievement batteries, course work at post installations or educational institutions, correspondence courses, and Army training and experience.

To bolster the program, the Army will provide academic counseling for the soldier-student at Army education centers to further assure he has a viable program leading toward a degree.

Examination Program (CLEP test) administered free by the Army.

The new program does not preclude other benefits offered by the Army, including the GI Bill. Once the soldier returns to fulltime college life, he is entitled to up to 45 months of GI Bill benefits to complete his education. At present, the GI Bill scholarship is worth some $8000.

Further information can be obtained from Maryville College or the nearest recruiting office.

Men Finish In Style

The Maryville College Mens' Basketball team concluded the 1974-75 season with its most successful campaign in four years. The Fighting Scots, who were expected to improve some on last year's dismal 5-21 docket, surprised most people with their style and ability to handle teams that during the past few years have proved to be trouble for Maryville. The Scots finished with a record of 13-9 for a .591 winning percentage. Their final game of the season was last Thursday night at home as they thumped the Lincoln Memorial University Railsplitters of Harrogate, Tennessee, 88-78.

These two teams had met earlier at Harrogate as the Scots were only able to win by one in that ballgame. This return match saw the Railsplitters take control in the early stages as it appeared that Maryville was in for a long night. However, about midway through the first half, the Scots got going and started to climb from what had become a 10-point deficit. Randy Schaurer, playing his final game for Maryville after four years of service, along with Mike Morton were hitting from the outside. This was vital since the Railsplitters did have the height advantage, although Randy Lambert was holding his own under the boards for the Scots.

Maryville was able to take a 37-36 lead at halftime, then came back for the second half and pretty well wrapped things up. Kenny Talbott, who scored a total of 22 points in the game, was a big reason as most of his scoring came in the second half. LMU was really never out of the contest until the 2:00 mark in the game. By virtue of their loss, the Railsplitters finished their regular season campaign at 7-19.

Besides Talbott, the other big Maryville contributors were Schaurer as he pumped in 16, Bruce Guillaume (15), and Morton (15). LMU's leading scorer was Mike Beck with 15.

In addition to Schaurer, two other Seniors were making their final appearance as members of the Basketball team. They were John Leibrock and Jerry Spicer.

The leading scorer for Maryville for the entire season was Schaurer. He was the leading average scorer per game with 15.25. From the field, he was successful 55.6% of the time. Schaurer was also the leading free-throw shooter for the Scots making good on 31 of 37 for a percentage of 83.7. Lambert led the team in rebounds with 192. The team as a whole shot 48.5 percent from the floor and 73.7 percent on freethrows which was a vast improvement over the past few years and helps to explain the Maryville basketball rejuvenation of 1974-75.

Two for Talbott

Women's B-ball Season Ends

In pre-season scrimmages the M.C. Lassies basketball team looked impressive on both defense and offense in winning 2 of 3 scheduled practice games. Coach Brown had worked hard and was pleased with the progress that the team was making.

However during the regulation season injuries to starters Melinda Lucas and to Chris Curran and to three substitutes plagued the team and kept trainer Shada Overton busy. A tiring schedule (due to the extended Christmas vacation) of 15 games in 4 weeks added to the team's woes. Therefore a record of 5 wins and 10 losses was not too disappointing in their first year of intercollegiate status. Too, one loss was by 3 points and another defeat was by only 2 points.

In district competition this past weekend, the M. C. squad lost to U. T. at Chattanooga Friday morning 68-47. Leading scorers were Betsy Bauer with 12 and Chris Curran with 10. Friday night the Lassies defeated Knoxville College 58 to 40. Betsy Bauer tossed in 27 points for Maryville and was selected to the All Tournament Team. East Tennessee State eliminated the Lady Scots Saturday morning in the double elimination event in a thriller, 51-49. Pam Patton was high scorer for Maryville with 14.

What does the future hold? The Lassies won 3 of the last 5 games demonstrating a strong finish and each player showed much improvement. Too, in the individual scoring averages category for the year, 4 girls averaged within a 5 point range of each other. Captain Terrie Topham, Chris Curran, and Jean Erhardt played outstanding defense during the season. Sandy Chambers, Libby Lowry, and others came off the bench in several games to claim many rebounds and to give the team a lift. The offense showed some bright spots but was inconsistent and characterized by a low percentage of shots made. All players except senior Melinda Lucas will be eligible to play next year, but statisticians Lynn Earnhear and Sue Mehaffy will be sorely missed as they graduate. With more experience, team play, and consistency the girls squad could have one of the better teams in East Tennessee next year.

guest essay

continued from page 2

this, the A. C. C. should be viewed as an orderly means to change and its distruction or replacement not so vehemently sought.

Humanity sporatically enters time of high idealism when plan B seems to assure more glowing results than the incumbant plan A. Such was the sentiment when the A. C. C. was instituted in 1968. Seven years later, with ideals badly shaken, students again are looking for a more viable form of government.

I do not think that it is to be foun The student-body of this campus is given two choices: either to disband the A. C. C. and all representative forms of government or learn to tolerate the slowness of legislative action.

The A. C. C. with its retinus of characters does not function flawless ly but this is easily forgiven in light of the organization's efforts to rectif itself from within. Those who seek its replacement are reminded that un til a better form of government is dis covered, the A. C. C. remains a process, and just that, by which change is most speedily accomplished.

News Briefs

The AFL-CIO says Congress should take steps toward nationalizing the oil industry which it blames for creating the energy crisis.

Betty Ford's mail at the White House is running 3 to 1 against her outspoken support of passage of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution.

What may prove to be history's second largest oil spill, has already despoiled 20 miles of Portugal's coastline.

The Walt Disney organization has offered to build a glass pyramid as a tourist attraction beside the three famous pyramids of Giaz, on Cairo's outskirts.

The Supreme Court has upheld the right of Congress to require that federal employes retire at age 70.

White House physician William Lukash says twice as many alcoholics are in the military than in the civilian population.

The 34-day takeover of an unused monastery in Wisconsin by members of the Menominee tribe has ended with native people firmly in control of the land.

Twelve million Americans currently use marijuana but more than half the adult U. S. population favors maintaining or toughening the penalties for its possession, according to the Drug Abuse Council.

Editors Fight Inflation

Realizing the financial difficulties of many college students today, this week's trial editors vow that, should they be awarded the editorship, they will not raise the price of this publication.

GIVE BLOOD FOR FLORIDA.

$10 per donation for a vacation.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

blood alliance

theHighland ECHO

"All that is necessary for the forces of evil to win in this world is for enough good men to do nothing." --- Edmund Burke

Vol. LX, Number 18 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | 7 March 1975

AC Theatre

'CAT" Proves Captivating

Howard Welsh

No where in American drama is e southern family structure more osely or dispassionately examined an in the writings of Tennessee Wil- ms. For his ability to elevate every- y occurrences to universal propor- ns, Williams ranks foremost among ose playwrights who are striving to pture the essence of American liv- g. His play, "Cat on a Hot Tin oof," which played at Maryville Col- e last weekend, is a superlative ex- ple of narrative cleverly interpolat- with conjecture.

Boasting a practical set design and stumes, the Maryville College Play- use production of "Cat on a Hot n Roof" lived up to this theater's putation for technical excellence. otle lighting techniques during the eworks and thunderstorm added quences enormously to the realism the production and culminated in excellent stage picture.

With so much technical expertise cking them up, all that remained turn to page 3

oing On this Week

night

O MARYVILLE COLLEGE STU- NTS, Artie Baker and Steve Mag- will perform at Yosemite Sam's Knoxville. The music will be acous- guitar-oriented folk rock. It's bound be a lot of fun. Everyone is invited. ne: 7:00-9:00 p.m.

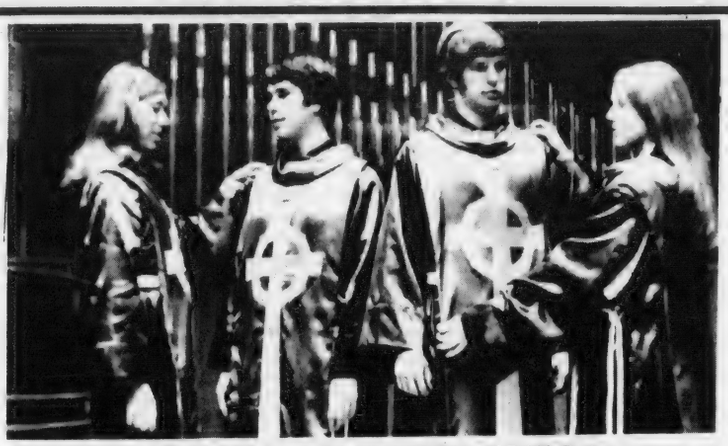
urday

E MARYVILLE COLLEGE BAND present its winter concert in Wil- Chapel. CIV CREDIT will be gi- . Time: 8:15 p.m.

nday

SPERS: DR. DAVID YOUNG l provide leadership for Vespers itled "Am I a Humanist?" A num- of faculty and students will also rticipate in the program to be held the Little Chapel. Time: 7:00 p.m.

sday



GROUP CALLED SONRISE will performing at the BSU dinner at ntral Alcoa Baptist Church. All in- ested in attending notify Box 2651 March 9. Time of the program: 0 p.m.

dnesday

: "WHAT MAKES A REVOLU- NARY?" Dr. Warren Lerner, As- Professor of History, Duke Uni- ity. Time: 9:20 a.m.

rsday

Choir Concert: Second Presby- an Church, Knoxville. Time: 8:00 .

From left to right: Kathy Bushing, David Adcock, Jim Lester, and Debbie Burton.

Choir Prepares for Tour

The Maryville College Concert Choir's annual spring tour itinerary has been established and plans are being completed for 43 musically talented students to take a chartered bus trip March 13-25 to cities in Tennessee, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island. In the past 25 years, the choir has traveled over 50,000 miles to appear in nearly 500 cities east and west of the Mississippi River.

The choir, under the direction of Dr. Harry H. Harter since 1947, will sing before high schools, concert audiences, and church congregations in the nine state area.

The 1975 tour marks the eighth time for the choir to make its spring tour in the northeast direction, the last time being in 1971. Four appearances are command performances and return engagements in Albany, New York, Dover and Toms River, New Jersey, and northern states including Canada.

Wherever the Maryville College Concert Choir goes it has a reputation for winning the high praise of music critics and standing ovations from high school students.

Choir members are chosen by rigid auditions each fall. In late winter the director chose 43 members for the tour from the full 60-voice choir. Each tour member gives his or her spring break from classes in order to make the tour.

The choir is the number one choral organization which provides special music for college events. It is the nucleus of a 150-voice chorus for the annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah" and sings for the Easter Sunrise service in a natural amphitheatre in the College Woods.

Communications Committtee to Select New Editor

Communications Committee, an organ of the ACC, is currently in the process of selecting a new editor for the Highland Echo, for the year 1975-76. The new editor will take over this spring replacing Emerson Henderson.

The Communications Committee is under the Chiarmanship of Mr. Blair Beasley and the Co-chairman is Mr. Lynn Stanley. This committee in the Spring Term will meet again to select an editor for the "Chilhowean."

Outgoing Editor of the ECHO: Emerson Henderson

"The students are basically concerned with getting good grades and getting drunk or high."

Cartlidge Proposes Interim

I am considering an interim project entitled "Housemusic of the Medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque Christmastide". The project's purpose will be to locate, study, and perform such music. The group will have to be "shaped." That is, participants will need to read music, sing (I can help with this), and play (and have available) a suitable instrument (viz., strings, recorder, transverse flute, double-reed, keyboard, etc.). I can also help with recorder playing. The size of the group will have to be about ten.

There, of course, must be some distribution of talents. We cannot make this go with ten oboeists. The nature of the scoring of this music, however, gives us great latitude. We will do research on the texts, the music, authentic performance techniques, etc. As I am a miserable amateur in the instrumental side of this project, we will need to rely on everyone for "expert" and informed input. There will be lots of time spent in practice, research, and rehearsal.

If you are interested, drop a note (pardon the pun) in box 2833 (indicate your particular musical "bag") or see me before March 29. Your note will not be a commitment, of course.

ACC Elections

Nominations for next year's ACC members will be held during the week following Spring Break, March 24-28. If you are interested in holding an office, now is the time to get busy. In order to qualify for the ballot, a nominee must have at least 10 nominations. More information will be released later, but if you have questions contact Dr. Nichols, 2878, or Marla Hoskins, 2334.

Frosh Women Inducted

The Freshmen Women's Honor Society inducted ten freshmen from the class of '78 into the club on February 10, 1975. A brief ceremony was held to formally welcome the girls, followed by refreshments.

The new members include Donna Baines, Debbie Burton, Virginia Hinton, Cynthia Mantey, Ann Robinson, Lynn Scherich, Jean Shultz, Rebecca Smith, Linda Stritter, and Betty Carol Zinavage.

Education Day

Dr. Dorothy Johnson of the District of Columbia school system was keynote speaker at Maryville College's Professional Day for Seniors in Education.

Dr. Johnson is Regional Superintendent for Region Two in the District of Columbia. She talked to the students about the rewards of teaching.

Other speakers were: Dr. Joe Chandler, Knox County Schools; and Dr. Cavett Cheshier, Tennessee Education Association.

Resource persons for the afternoon session were: Ann Lyons, Little Tennessee Educational Co-op, on careers in special education; Nancy McCormack, Office of International Education at UT, on overseas teaching opportunities; Mary Dipboye, coordinator of liberal arts advising at UT, on opportunities in guidance and counseling.

Some 30 seniors attended the conference.

Editor's Focus

Wrapping Up of Another Term

getting hot in a cold, cold world

Someone once observed, perhaps a bit wishfully, that a college is a fountain of knowledge where many go to drink. However, in our case, as another term approaches its end, we have come to realize that it hasn't been that much fun after all. What we have been drinking here for the most part is the strange-tasting "liberal education." We are told that liberal education is good for us and has the qualities of developing "independent scholarship" and of fostering "intellectual growth."

I have always had difficulty in understanding how our kind of liberal education originated here at Maryville College. Perhaps I would have never understood it if it were not revealed to me by my old friend Buchwald. In my revelation I saw that somewhere near the present site of Maryville College, a big party was going on. The participants appeared to be learned men and skilled administrators. They were all standing around a large kettle, waiting for it to boil. The Chef Casey was adding spices to it: "A dash of apathy, a cup of naiveness, and three tablespoonfuls of gullibility." Suddenly Master Chef Moreland arrived. "What's cooking?" he asked. Someone told him, "It's the newest soup in town. It's called "liberal education." "Smells good," he said, "let me taste it." He took a wooden spoon and tasted it, then said, "It's missing something." "What?" everyone asked. He said, "It's missing chopped hypocrisy. You can never make a good "liberal education" without chopped hypocrisy." "Of course," said the Chef. Then he took a large box of hypocrisy and poured all the contents in. The Master Chef took the spoon and tasted it again, then said, "It's flat. It needs more students in it." The Chef said, "We have thrown all the students in it, we have none left." The Master Chef said, "Then let's throw some professors in." "Professors?" everyone asked. "That's what I said," said the Master Chef. Soon the bubbling mixture consumed several professors as well. The Master Chef tasted again. "That's better," he said, "but it needs more core-courses." The Chef threw in some core-courses and seasoned it with a pan of PE, and a gross of CIVs in order that the students might be given an opportunity to enjoy five years in hot water instead of four. Master Chef went over and tasted with his spoon and said, "It's perfect. Now anyone who can pay a $10 non-refundable, can sip it once."

So this is how our "liberal education" structure originated. Since the time it was first prepared, thousands of students have taken their shares of this "liberal education"; term after term, year after year. The recipe has remained the same for the most part and not enough attention has been given to changing the ingredients to make it more palatable. A short time ago some dissatisfaction was expressed by students on putting too many CIVs in it. So it was decided that those who do not want this many CIVs will have to have their "liberal education" seasoned with more courses. A perfect example of the old English idiom "Out of the frying pan, into the fire."

Not the entire story of "liberal education" is amusing. Well intended though it is, the students tend to shrug off its good effects. One example of this is an interesting event described by educationalist John P. Kennedy. He said, "I once traveled through France with a party of people that included a lady who was a college graduate and who, in high school and college, had taken five years of French. Shopkeepers in France would say to her, "Bon jour, Madame." She would immediately become flustered and would say to rest of us, "I used to know all that. I took so much French at college you'd never believe it, but I can't remember all that stuff."

Such things happen more often than they should. While we are dwelling in the deceptive euphoria of status quo, the so-called 'real world' is getting rougher every day. The joy ride is in jeopardy. As the end of another term draws near, let us not let it pass like just another term. Let us have something concrete done, now! Here are some suggestions.

To The Administration:

1) The fat of our curriculum must be trimm off by

A. softening the CIV conditions, and
B. restructuring the core-courses.

2) There should be more student participati in selection and structuring of various co ses. (After all, students are the only ones paying to be here)

3) Our educational program must have a l ter functional value, (there is a need for operative training in a student's major fi rather than restricting one to abstract-te book theories).

4) We must have more professors and more administrators.

To The Students:

1) We must realize that re-education in ev stage of life is as important as education self.

2) The consequences of spending four ye here are going to be much greater in lives than we think. We must speak against unreasonable impositions. It mi make us a little unpopular in some people' eyes, but then no one is here to win popularity contest.

To Us All

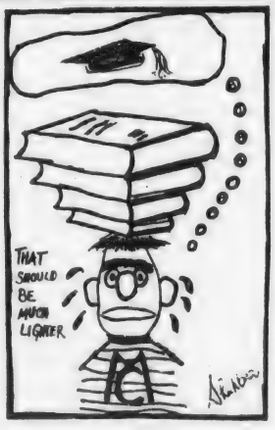
Together we can bring our educational s up-to-date or we can continue to follow the n val traditions of our college.

interaction

What Do the Seniors Think?

Editor's Note: In a matter of just about a term, those who are presently seniors, will say good-bye to a place where they will have spent, among other things, four important years of their lives. Their impressions can be very useful to all others. This week the ECHO is presenting the views of two of the seniors. Possibly, this practice will continue until all seniors have been included.

Maryville: A Case of Discrepancies



By Skelly Morris

In retrospect of my four years at Maryville College, as a whole it has been a very positive experience. However, there are many contradictions, hypocrisies and cases of plain ignorance which must be rectified if this institution is to attempt to live up to the higher levels of education and life which it now expounds.

The extreme lack of communication between administration and students is near crippling. With the exception of a few administrators, such as Dr. Kramer and perhaps two others, there seems to be a total unconcern as to whether the students are aware of what is going on. An example of this is the energy crisis which recently struck our campus. Little has been said since Christmas as to the degree of effectiveness of our conservation efforts. Are they working? How well? Was the situation really that bad to begin with? We have been informed that gifts and contributions increased and the situation is under control, but is that informing us about what is happening?

One of the purposes of this institution is to prepare students for life outside of this college. The efforts of Mrs. Spurlin in the Career Planning Office have been very admirable, but there is another problem which must be dealt with. In spite of the fact that the size of Maryville College supposedly allows for a more personal relationship for each student, this is not always the case. Recent developments which have come out of the Registrar's Office are somewhat disturbing. One particular case which comes to

turn to page 4

ECHO Mail

Letters to the ECHO should be typed and turned in to Box 2820. They will be subject to editing for the reason of space only.

Men Seek Lloyd

To the Editor,

Despite the intense competition imposed upon the students against each other here at Maryville, there are times when the school code is community, brotherhood, sharing, and helping. A great example of one of these times was the fire at Pearson's that left many women without a place to stay. The response to this critical situation was moving. With people from the surrounding community along with other students offering rooms for the affected women. Many women stayed in the mens' dorms. The comfort of many on campus was set aside to help the afflicted members of our community.

At the beginning of next year, a comparable situation will affect the men of Memorial Hall. The strong feeling of brotherhood binding them threatens to be broken through separation and scattering. Whether admitted or not, the men of Memorial are the finest possible example of togetherness and interdependence of which Maryville stand for. Separation would be a harmful and unnecessary step.

There is a solution to the Memorial dilemma. The only complication would be the personal discomfort of a few others. Much of Lloyd Hall is double rooms occupied by only one woman. One of the proposals which is under consideration is to have the men from Memorial to occupy the second floor of Lloyd and the women the third floor. The same method that has worked in Pearson's.

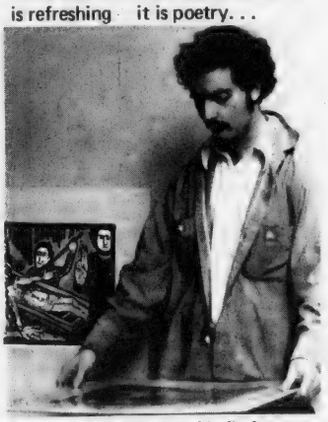
Memorial's men aren't pleading, but merely asking the continuation of the community feeling so prominent at Maryville. In other words, they are asking that the women demonstrate their spirit of cooperation so that we may continue to show our community spirit as a unit.

Sincerely,
The Men of Memorial

Open Letter to Anderso

We are writing this letter because of our concern for the Maryville College Community. It is about only one part of the community, however it is the major function of this college, EDUCATION. Through three years o experience, we have seen the deterioration of some departments here at M. C. We should state here that this letter is not meant to point the blame at anyone, we hope that it will be taken as constructive criticism about the situation as it now exists. We hope you will take this into consideration in the future planning of the school.

turn to page 4



Art Critique

Giant Frogs and Other Things

By Melanie Kohn
Senior Fine Arts Major

Now on display in The FAC gallery is Kim Daniel Robinson's senior art show entitled "Reflections," Kim has given to the public for contemplation and enjoyment three major art forms: paintings, prints, and brush and ink sketches. To contribute even more to the element of enjoyment, he has even included his own children's story about giant frogs, a story which he has delightfully illustrated with many prints. Subject matter of the show ranges from nature scenes and self-portraits to groups of people and thumb-size adaptations of medieval works. The paintings were done in oils, to which Kim added various textures and varnish glosses. The prints are linocub and woodcuts and occur both in color and in black-and-white. Not only is the large number of works well-displayed or well-organized, but each piece is well presented by means of matte or frame.

Perhaps the main thrust of Kim's art involves the style of Expressionism, a style which began in Germany around 1911. The works do not involve a great amount of detail, but focus instead upon expressive color, expressive use of line, and an immediate and strong mood. In other words, the observer perceives a definite expression from the artist's work and in turn may find himself aware of an immediate personal reaction to the subject matter and manner in which it is handled. Kim strives not only to capture impressions, but to evoke the essence of a mood or the feeling of a situation. For instance, he has on display several prints of the Music Hall, each of which captures a unique attitude and impression. Many of his paintings and prints involve subject matter from the realm of fantasy. Each one might convey a totally different message to different viewers, but all contain a certain degree of symbolism and very definite expressionistic ideas. The brush and ink sketches of the college woods also create specific feelings about those particular scenes and about the mind of the artist during the minutes in which they were captured. Kim, being the "whole" person that he is, has not left our any range of emotion; he involves the observer in: imagining the fantastic, in simple childhood delight, in gloominess, in groping for moral truth, in despair, and in jubilence. In short Kim Robinson has given a large portion of his soul and of his life at M. C. to you. It is hoped that everyone will avail himself of the opportunity to experience the many levels of the mind that Kim's art has to offer. It is refreshing it is poetry. . .

Robinson after setting up his display: An artist's work is never done.

Editor's Note:

Kim Robinson's work is currently being exhibited at the MC Art Gallery in the Fine Arts Center.

The gallery is open to the public. Hours are; 9:10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday; 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday; and 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday (sometimes 8:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m.). Those who would like to visit the gallery at a time not scheduled should call the Fine Arts Office at 982-6950.

A scene from Jones' Production: "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof"

The Successful "Cat"

continued from page 1

was for the actors to prove their stuff. Beginning with Patricia Damon as Big Mama, all of the performers handled their roles with delicacy and confidence. Miss Damon's performance however stands out for its restrained but powerful interpretation of a quietly defeated woman and for consistency and vivid realism, Miss Damon must be praised for turning in one of the finer dramatic performances seen on this stage in recent times.

Paul Kersey and Belinda Chiddie, as Brick and Margaret respectively, were the focal point of the action in the play. As the tempestuous couple who begin the play on a note of impending divorce, Mr. Kersey and Miss Chiddie handled their difficult roles with a finesse that belied youth and in experience. Mr. Kersey was the aging athlete unable to cope with uncertainties in his past as was Miss Chiddie the perfect bitter, long-suffering wife. Together they were responsible for some excellent bits of ensemble acting, an accomplishment not seen too often in these parts.

Steve Yuhasz turned in a convincing performance as Big Daddy. Projecting an air of authority from the start, Mr. Yuhasz went on to build an interesting character study of a southern landowner dying of cancer. His impressive stage presence and ability to control other performers in a conflict mark Mr. Yuhasz as an actor with much dramatic potential.

Not to be forgotten was Suzanne Schoen as Mae. A newcomer to the Playhouse, Miss Schoen promises to be an asset for her engaging use of facial expression. In "Cat," she captured perfectly the tawdriness of a scheming woman, and the disdain she managed to elicit from the audience is testament to her clever use of nuances. Mae, in this production, was truly viprous.

The other characterizations were less praiseworthy. Carl Swenson played Gooper as Carl Swenson and although we were aware of his presence, we lamented the absence of a developed role. The same can be said of Mike Jacobus who, as the timid preacher, was too timid. Stanley McCleave as Doctor Baugh took up stage space.

"Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" owes its success to brilliant casting by director Thomas Jones and a sympathetic understanding by the major cast members. The play survives on its ability to present a tableau of shop-worn lives and in so doing, places stringent demands upon its interpreters. These challanges, more than adequately met last weekend, constituted a vital evening in theater.

Indian Artifacts on Display

The collection of Indian artifacts is being displayed in the SSC lobby. The artifacts (dating back to 5200 B. C.) were discovered by the archaeology interim class. The site on which they were found is located in the Miller's Cove area in Blount County.

Students, faculty, and staff interested in archaeology will have the opportunity during the spring term to attend an introductory class in archaeology which is to be taught in the Continuing Education Program. This class will be taught by a team of University of Tennessee Archaeologists. The fee for the course will be minimal.

Finally, students are reminded that the University of Tennessee archaeology department is conducting a field project this summer. Up to two course credits can be earned while learning archaeology in the field. Applications are available in the placement office and in Dr. Nichols' office.

History Day Scheduled

The Third Annual Blount History Teachers Association History Contest has been scheduled for April 2 at Maryville College.

The two first place winners in the high school categories will receive $200 scholarships to Maryville College. The top five winners will receive subscriptions to quality historical magazines or journals.

ECHO Policy Proposal

The New ECHO will invite and welcome participation from all segments of our community. In the past years, some dissatisfaction had been expressed by various departments as to inadequate representation in the ECHO, such as Art and Sciences.

This issue of the ECHO contains, among other things, two articles from the faculty, two Seniors' letters, Choir feature, and Fine Arts critiques. Further attempts will be made to insure proper and adequate representation of all sectors for the dual porpose of giving the ECHO a diversity in its mood and making it a paper of everyone.

Trial Editor
Shahbaz Ahmed

Lay-out Assistant
Lyn Stanley

Faculty Advisor
Dr. Robert B. Braid

Photographer
Joe Showalter

Distribution
Jeff Draper

Other Contributors

Wayne Dansbury
Emerson Henderson
Melanie Kohn
Mona Miller
Skelly Morris
Howard Welch

Delightful Thank You Extended

by Wayne Dansbury

On Monday night past, a group of students gathered in the theatre to present "A Nice Way To Say Thank You." This college of music and dialoque was conceived and written by Steve Ayers in order to say 'thank you' to the friends and community of Maryville College.

The overall production is deserving of more applause than it received after each bombardment of balloons. Mr. Ayers is to be congratulated for producing a show that given a central theme and some basic rewrites would be excellant for a student recruiting tour. After all everyone loves a show.

The performers are likewise deserving of a bravo. Considering that the plaque had ravaged their voices, the singers did maintain the cute effect of ". . .Thank You". Perhaps a little more shoulder to the old grindstone would have given this show the glitter it needed, but overall we should say to this production staff: thank you.

MC Fund Drive Nears Goal

Gifts and pledges in response to the Maryville College Community Fund Drive now total $101,000, only $4,-000 short of the goal.

Campaign chairman Jack Proffitt says he is confident that the goal will be reached. He also urges all workers to report completed assignments to campaign director Bill Mooney at the college development office.

Maryville College students presented a musical "A Nice Way to Say Thank You" comedy revue Monday night in appreciation for the community's support of the college.

Upcoming Sports

Spring is just around the corner and that means it is almost time for the Maryville College Spring sports program to get underway. In recent years, the Spring sports have proved to be Maryville's strength in most areas. This year the three (baseball, tennis, and track) are looking up with the three coaches looking enthusiastically at the season ahead.

Coach Boydson Baird's squad is coming off a 23-12 log from last year and a third-place finish in the NCAA Southern Region Tournament in New Orleans. The squad has been working out for two weeks and is preparing for its opening game on April 3 vs. Slippery Rock. About 30 players are out for the team this Spring and it appears the Scots have the nucleus of another fine team.

Dr. Donald Wyatt is serving as the team's Faculty Advisor and is preparing the team for a tour of Georgia and Florida during Spring Break. Four players are returning this year and include Sutton Brown, Craig Larsen, Arlene Ignico, and Mike Dykes. Five newcomers will be trying for the other two spots along with an alternate position. The Scots will have seven matches during Spring Break starting with a home encounter vs. University of Wisconsin-Stout on March 14.

Coach Ron Case is readying his squad for their opening meet on April 2 with Emory and Henry here. Eight returnees from last year and one from two years ago (Jeff Hamilton) along with nine new men are out this year. Other returning participants include Mike Osborne, Captain Mark Keahon, Scott Poland, Tom Duling, Lee Taylor, Chip Krug, Gary Elrod, and Scott Cook.

GIVE BLOOD FOR FLORIDA.

$10 per donation for a vacation.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking.

blood alliance

What A Taste!

Letters

continued from page 2

While the college has been building up their personnel in the administrative end, it seems as though they have been neglecting the academic aspects. Which brings us to the basic question of, why are we here? If your conclusion is the same as ours, which is, to get a good liberal arts education, this brings us to a second question. Are we getting what we paid for? Understaffed departments, overloaded professors, and undue emphasis placed on grades rather than actual learning, would seem to defeat the whole purpose of Maryville as an educational institution. Understaffed departments refer to those containing two or less full time professors, who are expected to not only function as major advisors for all juniors and seniors, but also assume the responsibility of supervising all special studies, composing comps, as well as teaching the bulk of major classes within their departments. This situation creates an environment in which the professors are forced to spread into too many areas, and prevents them from adequately taking the time to meet the standards of education in relation to the needs of the students.

Now we've all heard the argument that certain departments just don't have enough majors to warrant an increase in personnel. But doesn't it seem that if these same departments had more to offer, this would stimulate the interest and in turn increase the enrollment in these subjects. At the moment many of us are receiving a very one-sided viewpoint in our particular field of study, and this can only be remedied by the acquiring of others who can present different conclusions in regard to subject matter.

To summarize let us repeat that we are not directing blame towards anyone or anything. We just felt it was time for someone to stand up for the teachers and simply give credit where credit is due. In light of the incredible responsibility and academic burden placed upon them it's amazing we are receiving the quality of education we are now. If Maryville is to remain a highly-rated academic institution, somebody had better give this matter some devoted attention, and for all concerned, the sooner the better.

Sincerely,
Mike Libby
Fred Harris

Senior Thoughts

continued from page 2

mind is the case of the senior who was applying for entrance into law school, only to have his hopes dampened by an oversight by the registrar's office which lowered his overall G. P. A. from a 3.5 to a 3.4. Any of us who have applied for any post-graduate work know this is a very significant drop. Or the case of the sophomore who was attempting to transfer and requested his transcripts be sent to other schools, only to find three weeks later they had never been sent. Admittedly, mistakes do happen, but the list of incidences could go on and on. This seems a somewhat impersonal approach when dealing with someone's future.

One area of hypocrisy which may spell doom for Maryville College is the favoritism shown to certain individuals concerning the enforcement of various rules and regulations. I personally can cite several cases this year in which students have been only slightly reprimanded for very serious offenses such as theft, which could bring severe action outside of our "community". Also, how effective are rules when an administrator suggests that those who enforce rules should, in fact, turn their heads because a student has a problem and we can not do anything about it. Admittedly, many of the college rules are useless, but many are here to protect each of us from ourselves and others. If an individual encroaches on another's rights, then he or she should be punished with absolutely no exceptions. This is fundamental to the perpetuation of this institution, and those in the positions of Dean should awaken and recognize this fact.

I have experienced and witnessed these hypocrisies and contradictions for four years. I have talked to various administrators about them, but to little or no avail. In the past few weeks I have become totally disgusted, but I am tired of swimming against the tide. I only hope that there are people somewhere on this campus who care about the things I have mentioned. Whether they are students, faculty or administration, the fact remains that someone must be aware of what is going on, and see what is coming. Maryville College must wake up and clean house, for there is a lot of trash around, and if it is not cleaned up soon it may smother us.

Maryville's Organs: Cut-off the Fat

By Lyn Stanley

As Matthew Arnold says in one of his famous essays, real criticism... obeys an instinct prompting it to try to know the best that is known and thought in the world, irrespectively of practice, politics, and everything of the kind; and to value knowledge and thought as they approach this best, without intrusion of any other considerations whatever.

And as Cardinal John Henry Newman of the nineteenth century put it in his famous essay on the Liberal Arts education, it is the education which gives a man a clear conscious view of his own opinions and judgements, a truth in developing them, an eloquence in expressing them and a force in urging them.

With this in mind, I desperately urge Maryville College to reassert its intended purpose for existence, namely to give the conscientious student the coherent and forceful knowledge to urge the critical views of the day and age. I maintain a very basic contention that Maryville is the type of institution that can be a valuable organ in grooming today's student into tomorrow's leader. But in recent years the college has seemed to stray.

There are many frills in the present curriculum which do not allow a totally successful endeavor between the college and its students. In our case these frills include entire programs as well as many irresponsible core offerings and related activities. This mutual endeavor has faltered for far-ranging reasons.

It is quite shocking for me, as a graduating senior, to view the caliber of incoming students each year and how they find their place in the diverse Maryville campus. As part of this needed reassertion, there obviously needs to be more explicit job descriptions for many of the administrative and student relation offices of this college. To complete this reassertion, Maryville, as well as the hundreds of other shakey small colleges around the world, must realize that an air of professionalism, that some of our administrators and professors possess, must be carried throughout the college organization. There is obviously a lack of this in many of our departments and offices.

But it is my hope that the beginnings of this professional air have begun in our most recent past. The college must make this reassertion within the limitations of our available money. Any college that fails to operate within these limitations surely does not plan to continue as an equitable business.

And this is the point of my criticism. There are far to many frivolous bodies and programs existing on our campus for the sake of a few. Are these destructive organs going to survive during the worse economic crisis since 1929? Or are we going to cut some edges to insure our survival. But then again, these same organs could become obese and implanted in the faltering caliber of our education.

THIS WILL BE THE LAST ISSUE OF THE ECHO FOR THE WINTER TERM. THE NEXT ISSUE WILL BE PUBLISHED ON APRIL 4, 1975, IN THE SPRING TERM. IN ANTICIPATION, THE ECHO WISHES EVERYONE

A Relaxing Spring Break and an Enjoyable Easter

theHighland ECHO

The Earth is like a grain of sand, only much much heavier. -Kehlog Albran

Vol. 60 No. 19 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 4, 1975

'75-'76 Dorm Policy Announced

The dormitory policy for next year has been announced by the administration. All changes go into effect next September. Memorial Hall will be closed, and the residents thereof will move into Carnegie Hall with Mrs. Harrison, their present head resident. Dorm III will house all male freshmen. Any that cannot be accomodated there will be housed in the second floor of Dorm I, women residing on the other floors.

Memorial Hall was closed as the result of a decision by the Board of Directors that it was unfit for living. There is no insulation in the century-old dormitory, and the cost of heating the building was too high.

There are presently 47 men living in Memorial. Nine will graduate next year, some will most likely become Resident Assistants, and some others do not have a strong interest in staying tohether. The administration estimates that 25 men will have to move to Carnegie Hall. The west side of the first and second floors will be set aside to those who wish to stay together.

Since it is felt that the quad system is important to freshmen, the decision has been reached to use Dorm I for that purpose. There will be no freshmen in Carnegie Hall next year.

The new dorm situation is a result of the desire of the administration to utilize the best facilities possible at the lowest cost and the most convenience to everyone involved.

Home Concert Ends Choir Tour

On Friday, March 14, the Maryville College Concert Choir departed from the campus to begin another annual tour. This year, the choir, which was composed of 44 people, visited 15 churches, 1 college, and various high schools along the way. They traveled throughout Virginia, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, Rhode Island, Maryland, and different churches in the Knoxville area. On April 6, the choir will present the same concert in the Maryville College community in Wilson Chapel.

As mentioned before, the choir not only performed at churches, but also at high schools, although the same concert was not given. As a result of the high school concerts, there are now many prospective students for MC. Peter Vial gave some information about the college to the interested high school students.

Although the choir members did not have the chance to be at home for vacation, some members were lucky enough to see some of their friends and relatives while on tour. Even if they didn't have this opportunity, all the members were warmly greeted by many MC alumni. In some cases where the alumni were present, the choir ended the program with the Alma Mater. Since this was the first time that the new choir robes have left campus, they gained much approval in all of the appearances, especially from the alumni.

All of the tour proved to be a success, but many members agree that the most successful, emotional, and memorable concert was given at Gloucester College.

On the last night of the tour, there was a gathering of all MC choir members known as Faux Pas, or False Step. At this meeting, all the oddities on the tour were commemorated.

Each year, a female choir member is awarded the honor of "Sweetheart of Basses." This year, there was a big surprise; instead of just one girl, all the girls were chosen, and each received a carnation and a kiss.

Perhaps the main reason that the MC Concert Choir has gained such fame across the nation and in Europe is that there is a "feeling of togetherness, though the need of each person to be an individual is recognized." Now that another tour has ended, the choir would like to give special thanks to H. F., the bus driver who has accompanied the choir for 11 years.

"Thanks for listening, Lord."

MC Briefs

The Maryville College Choir will present its home concert Sunday at 8:15 p.m. in the Chapel. CIV credit will be given.

Tri Beta, biology society will hold a spring flower sale tomorrow, Saturday, April 5 from 9 to 3.

CIV will be a panel discussion with the ACC Nominees on Wednesday.

The MC Community Orchestra will present "Hill Heritage Suite," on Friday and Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in the Theatre.

The Spring Turnabout will be held Saturday, April 5, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Dress is semi-formal. Couples-$4.00 Singles-$2.00

Kull Ballet To Be Performed

Tom Martin (left) and Terry Noack dance the roles of the two young warriors who vie for the attention of the Indian maiden, Karen Proffitt, in the legend of "Atsanvto" (The Necklace), Part II of "Hill Heritage Suite."

Parts II and III of "Hill Heritage Suite," composed by Lee Kull and choreographed by Cheryl Van Metre, will be premiered on April 11 and 12 by the Maryville College-Community Orchestra and the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet.

Part III, entitled "The Feud," features Tom Martin and Sarajune Owen as the star-crossed lovers of Appalachia.

Performances are scheduled for Friday and Saturday, April 11 and 12 at 8:15 p.m. in the Maryville College Theatre. Admission is $3.00 for adults, $2.00 for students. Tickets may be purchased at the Blount Chamber of Commerce Building, the Van Metre School of Dance or at the door.

New Major Offered

Maryville College will add a major in business administration to its curriculum beginning in September. The action was approved by the Administrative Committee of the Board of Directors on recommendation of the All-College Council.

The development has taken shape during the last two years and is in response to the increasing interest of students, parents, and board members.

Last spring the college board established a Langston Chair of Business Administration with the objectives of strengthening the entire business and economics curriculum and offering a major in business administration. The chair was named in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Loyd H. Langston, both nationally known in the fields of business and education and both long-time friends of the college.

Dr. Harry Price, currently chairman of the economics department, will head the joint economics and business administration department. He said students majoring in business administration will meet in full the college's standard requirements for a liberal arts degree.

Dr. Price said the business courses offered will include: introduction to business administration, economics, business law, accounting, marketing, finance, and management, with optional courses in government and business and labor. The department also will offer a short business intern program and provision for a two-term independent study in the field of business.

A number of these courses are already being offered, Dr. Price said.

mc forum

Editors Vow To Uncover All Issues

Is Everybody Happy?

An old saying states "you can't please everyone." But Maryville College tries anyway, having yet to prove the exception to the rule.

In talks with administrators over the past week and by general observation these past few years, it is becoming easier to understand just how hard it is to come up with an acceptable solution that will meet anyone's standards.

In reaching a decision on the dorm policy for next year, the administration had to consider everyone's priorities, which often had to cut in on someone else's.

Another broader example is our current CIV program. The programs offered each week are chances for our various departments to make themselves known. The faculty and administration are pleased, but students are often left to suffer programs of poor quality.

Our rules are set up as a compromise between the desired freedoms of the students and the acceptable restrictions of the administration, with the faculty usually caught somewhere in the middle.

Now, as editors of the Highland Echo, we, too, are in a position in which it is hard to please anyone. But, at the same time, we cannot afford to offer editorial compromise. What we can do is express an invitation and expectation of various opinions from the college community. In the past, some factions of the college have failed to use the Echo as a medium to make their opinions known. They may have felt that this is only a student paper.

This is a campus paper. Everyone, including the Board of Directors, the administration, the faculty, and the students all have a chance to voice their opinion.

What we are offering is not a compromise, but an invitation to a greater freedom of expression. The Maryville College community can pull together right here. Everyone can be heard, if they will just make themselves heard.

David Haimbach

Communication Lacking

There is no such thing as the Maryville College community. The vision of the administration of a united, "one big, happy family" campus community is far from reality. Interestingly enough it seems that those who want to achieve this ideal the most are those who are stagnating it--the administration. To have a feeling of a workable community an open system of communication involving all parties must exist. It exists between the students and faculty and the faculty and administration. However, a huge communication gap looms between the students and administration. Any student who has entered Anderson Hall with a perplexing problem and received the departmental run-arounds causing him to leave even more confused can testify to this. Perhaps the best example of this void is in the recent selling of the college farm. Rumors have been cropping up everywhere on this subject. Some say that the college is going to sell the farm, others that it has already been sold. The truth of the matter remains hidden. It should have been the duty of the Andersonites to announce the tentative plans of selling the farm to the rest of the community. Not only to squash rumors but also to hear reactions. Two students, Randy Hunter and Steve Yuhasz, had a brilliant plan to possibly turn the barn at the farm into a theatre dinner club. This plan not only had great money-making potential, but it would also benefit those whose majors lie in the arts. If there is any truth to the rumor that the farm has been sold, the plan is wasted.

Conversely, Anderson's communication with the students has been good to some extent at times. The fast announcement made after the decision to close classes for two weeks during winter term was highly commendable. However, how many students know why their tuition and board money was not refunded? Surely, an even smaller number know what happened to their money. The students should be informed.

As editors of the "Echo" we hope to bridge this communication gap. We encourage the people at Anderson to use the paper more than in the past. It is the best means by which to link the students and administration. The students have always expressed what they have had to say in it. We now hope that the administration will cooperate and follow their example.

Gary Sloboda

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Millie Brewer, Emerson Henderson, Skellie Morris, Fred Strohl, Kit Williamson; Layout - Kim Darden, Photography - Joe Showalter; Rabbit Blues - Charlie Blair.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Letters to the Echo

The Maryville College Wrestling Team has just returned from participating in the National Championships held in Cleveland, Ohio. Since little has been said or written about the team this season, it may be of interest to note that fourteen members of the team qualified for participation in the Nationals. In order to qualify for the National Event, each team member had to achieve a win-loss record better than 500. In addition, he had to place first, second, or third, in one of the association tournaments in which Maryville College participates.

Having qualified, the team must then have the endorsement of the Athletic Department to participate.

At the conclusion of the regular season, February 18, ten wrestlers began preparation for the trip to Cleveland (March 6, 7, and 8) fully expecting that the departmental endorsement would be forthcoming. Having another full week of practice under our belt, it was disappointing, at best, to learn that the Chairman of the Department of Health, Physical Education, and Athletics could not in good conscience extend this endorsement. To make a trip of this nature without the support of the college funding seemed doubtful if not impossible. In spite of the obvious, we all wondered if there might not be some way that we would still be able to participate. Having agreed that among the reasons for choosing Maryville College in the first place, was the belief that we would be able to participate in a quality program with the opportunity to achieve National recognition provided we qualified to do so. We continued to practice hoping that somehow we might be able to work out our problems.

One bright spot in our dilemna came as we realized that all of the other coaches were sympathetic to our situation. Each coach expressed his concern and offered to help in whatever way possible. As coaches, each understood the importance of competition on the national level both as it relates to the college and the individual athlete. Even with this support, it was difficult to believe that we were going to be able to make it. Then, one of our team-mates told us that his family had offered the use of their home during the course of the tournament so that we might still be able to participate. We decided to get together and look over all the possibilities. Even though it meant sacrificing, we all felt as though we should accept this offer of hospitality and provide for our own meals and transportation in order to make what we felt was an important commitment.

continued on page 3

Letter continued from page 2

Finally, we would like to get to the real purpose of this letter. First, we would like to thank every one who supported us and made it a successful season. Second, we would like to express the pride we felt all year in being associated with one another, as a member of the team, in representing the college and in our associations with the rest of the community. Third, we would like to express our deepest regret that the Chairman of the Department of Health, Physical Education, and Intercollegiate Athletics did not see our endeavors as being a credit to the institution and worthy of its support and hope that at some future date he will in good conscience be able to endorse us to represent Maryville College.

Members of the Wrestling Team

Be It Ever So Humble. . .

There's No Place Like Home

by Skellie Morris

By now, everyone knows that Memorial will be vacated and that Dorm I will be co-ed freshmen, and most of us have formed opinions as to the wisdom and reason behind the move. What fails to come through in discussion of this issue is the emotion involved. It is impossible to discuss the closing of Memorial objectively, for the subjective is a very important aspect. This is as it should be. Realizing that the decision has been made, the emotions are still quite viable.

The men in Memorial are left with a very empty feeling in facing the news that the dorm will no longer be our home. However, we are concerned now with the future of each resident of the dorm and intend to guarantee the most comfortable living conditions for next year. The administration has assured us that our conditions will be improved in Carnegie next year. Carpeting and painting of rooms has been promised and must be provided before any of us will move in peacefully.

Perhaps the biggest question arises when the future of Dorm I is brought up. The logic behind a freshmen co-ed dorm somehow eludes all realistic thought. Perhaps it will work; however I have no envy for the dorm parents or Resident Assistants. Perhaps it will be a menagerie for us to look upon when we journey back to our Alma Mater once a year at Homecoming. No matter, it will be interesting and, I am quite sure, educational.

Probably the way that most of the residents in Memorial feel is quite easily stated: We want to know that someone cares. Too long have we seen the plush lobbies in Lloyd, with their spotless couches and radiant lamps, yet gone home to our salvaged couch and ancient lights. We do not understand how it can be justified. We invite anyone to come and view our home. We love it, but its days are numbered. None of us will ever regret a day spent in this dorm, with its drafty rooms and bug-infested bathrooms. All of us regret leaving it.

Editors' Note: The suggestion that rooms in Carnegie be carpeted for men from Memorial has not been "promised" at the present time. This is still only a suggestion.

Jaycees Are Looking For A Few Good Men

by The Maryville-Alcoa Jaycees

Jaycees are devoting their time and talents towards building a better community and a better America. Aged 18 to 35, these young men represent most all walks of life and have been serving their communities throughout the nation since 1915.

The Jaycees is an organization for young men which offers personal growth through community development. The Jaycees is designed specifically to meet the needs of the young man seeking to make his place in his community. Every young man is offered the opportunities to a voice in community affairs, a practical leadership development course, the chance to try new ideas and improve old ones, and social contact with other young men.

Since the Jaycees feel that tomorrow's leaders must come from today's youth, most of their projects are youth-oriented.

Organizations such as the Jaycees can only continue to do their share in the community if they can continue to grow. The Jaycees welcome any young man, age 18 to 35, who would like to share in their ideas and has a desire to better himself. All Jaycees believe that service to humanity is the best work of life, a key line in the Jaycee Creed.

The Maryville-Alcoa Jaycees are presently wishing to offer this great opportunity to young men at Maryville College. If you want to become a more viable, active part of your campus, of the Blount County area, and of your nation, please fill out the following form and leave it in the Echo Box.

Name _____

Address _____

Telephone number _____

Age _____

Class _____ Major _____

Areas of Interest _____

Vaudeville Tonight

The Maryville College Social Committee will sponsor "Vaudeville Tonight!", a nostalgic variety presentation, on Tuesday, April 8 at 7:30 p.m. at (or "in") Wilson Chapel. The two-hour show attempts to recapture the spirit of live entertainment during the 1930's.

Fourteen persons tour with the production which includes music, comedy, dancing, and magic. Musical favorites from the first three decades of the century will be featured. Dances include tap and "soft shoe" in vaudeville style. The Main Street Players will present comedy sketches based on humorous scenes from the past.

The featured entertainer is magician Ken Griffin of Hollywood, California. Mr. Griffin, who specializes in large, dramatic stage illusions, has appeared throughout the free world with his own show. He is assisted by three persons including his wife Roberta, who will also present a mind-reading act.

Producer Johnny Moss says, "We are looking forward to playing Maryville College and anticipate a good response." He goes on to say, "The show is directed primarily toward adults, but children will also enjoy the show, which is wholesome, family entertainment."

Advance admission prices are $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for all students. Tickets are on sale at Proffitts & Dorm III or may be purchased from members of the Social Committee. All tickets will be 50¢ more at the door.

Alpha Sig

Alpha Sigma, better known as "Sig," has taken a new outlook on life. It is the feelings of the members that through a good membership the social life of this campus can be improved. Already, with the cooperation of Theta Epsilon, steps have been made this year in the right direction.

"Sig" has also changed in its outlook towards membership. Membership requirements have been changed. If you are interested in finding out about the "new Sig," and how it will improve life on campus, be at the "Sig" room on April 9, at 7:30 p.m. or contact Craig Larsen.

Kinsinger To Perform

Dr. Dan H. Kinsinger, associate professor of music at Maryville College, will be presented in a faculty recital Friday, April 4, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. Rosemary Ahmad, also of the Music Department, will be Dr. Kinsinger's accompanist.

Dr. Kinsinger, a tenor, also performs as a baritone occasionally and has included a baritone aria in his program.

The program will include works of Ralph Vaughan Williams, Franz Liszt, Chausson, Duparc, Gounod, and Marx.

Dr. Kinsinger, who received the Doctor of Musical Arts degree in the performing arts in voice from the University of Illinois, has been a member of the Maryville College faculty since 1954. He performs as soloist in many area programs including the annual performance of "Messiah."

Track

Coach Ron Case's Maryville College Track team was scheduled to open its 1975 season Wednesday in a dual home meet with the Wasps of Emory and Henry College. This is the first season that Case has the coaching reins for track and he hopes to be able to build a base for a strong program that Maryville has been lacking for some time. Coach Case worked hard during the preseason in getting ready and feels that the Scots will start to show improvement this year.

Mike Osborne has been a steadying influence for the squad during the past two seasons. He can do just about anything and everything as he has led in scoring over the two year span. His events include the High Hurdles, 440-yard Hurdles, Javelin, and Mile Relay.

Other runners for Maryville include Scott Poland for the 220, 440-relay, and possibly the 100; Chip Krug, 880; Gary Elrod, 220 and 440; Jeff Hamilton, 100, 220, and 440-relay; and newcomers Keith Goodwin, 440-and 880; John Drake, 100, 220, and 440-relay; Gary Petree, 100, 220, and 440-relay; Payton Crosby, 120-High Hurdles and 440-Low Hurdles; Ronnie Lashley, 100, 220, and 440-relay; Bill Straher, 440; Harold Law, 440 and 220. The Mile Relay team will consist of Crosby, Straher, Law, and Osborne. Additions may come later. Distance running will be handled by Joe Whitehead as he will compete in the Mile and the three-mile.

The field events will be anchored by team Captain Mark Keahon who will be throwing the shotput again this year. He will be joined by Freshman Ed Plunkett. Tom Duling and Lee Taylor will hurl the discus. Scott Cook will once again handle the Polevault. The Highjump will be done by Hamilton and Drake.

The Scots next meet is tomorrow when they meet Western Carolina College at Cullowhee, North Carolina. Their next home meet is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon vs. Milligan College with a 3:00 starting time. The Scots only other scheduled home meet is set for Saturday April 26 with Centre College.

SPRING SPORTS BEGI

Baseball

The 1975 version of the Maryville College Baseball team was scheduled to get its regular season underway yesterday afternoon with a doubleheader vs. Slippery Rock College of Slippery Rock, Pennsylvania. These were to be the first two games out of 40 that Coach Boydson Baird has on the agenda for the Scots this year.

Maryville is coming off a very successful 1974 campaign that was probably the best in Scots' history as they finished up with a 23-12 mark that culminated in a third-place finish in the NCAA College Division Southern Region Tournament in New Orleans. With the exception of several individuals, the same team has returned. Additionally, several new faces can be found on the 27-man roster who should be able to contribute to the team cause.

Seniors Jim Lester and Paul Viggiano are the backbone of the team this season once again as they will be counted upon to provide leadership. Leftfielder Lester is making a comeback this year after being hit above the eye by a pitch last year that cut his season short by two weeks. Despite this, he still led the team in hitting with a .337 average and should be able to do nearly the same if he is not "gunshy" of fast pitching. Centerfielder Viggiano batted .277 in 1974, but his big ingredient was stealing bases as he had 22 thefts to lead the squad. He can be expected to do the same again this time. Rightfield will be handled in the beginning by Freshman Buddy McDonald as he replaces Wayne Risko who has moved to first base. McDonald has looked good in practice. Backing up these outfielders will be "Trip" Ziegler, Mike Brandenburg, Rich Ramos, and Wesley Dean.

The infield is set with Risko at ... Randy Pennington at second, Joe ... Moffett at shortstop, and Paul Ba... at third base. All four saw action ... year. Risko started out the season ... strong, but slumped later on as he ... ished up at .242. He does have po... as he blasted four homeruns and ... be a longball threat. Pennington is ... placing Paul Schultz at second aft... playing a reserve role last year. He ... only batted .172 in 18 games, but ... expected to improve that with mo... playing time. Moffett tied Risko f... the homerun leadership last year a... tied since departed Earl McMahan ... rbi's with 20. Bailey is a good defe... sive third baseman and only needs ... improve on his hitting that stood ... .265 last year. Backing up the star... infield will be Steve Wright, Steve ... Callahan, Wayne Fucci, Mike Libb... Chuck Lowe, and Ron Flagler.

Dave Clinton graduated in June ... Ken Hanna has now assumed starti... status as Catcher. He only batted ... in limited duty in '74, but is one ... should also improve this year with ... more playing time. Anthony Chap... man and Bobby Fitzgerald are two ... capable Freshman reserves.

Pitching may be a question mar... Kevin McKinstry led the staff last ... season with a 7-2 record but record... an ERA of 5.40. Other returnees ex... pected to see starting status are Da... Spradlin, Charlie Allcott, and Doug ... Leonhardt. Four newcomers to the ... staff include Bruce Hill, Dave Calle... han, Bobby Graham, and Danny T... They will see both starting and reli... activity.

The Scots travel to Greenville, Te... nessee tomorrow afternoon for a do... bleheader with Tusculum College. ... Tuesday, they travel to Knoxville fo... a single game with the University of ... Tennessee.

We Invite You to Visit Us at Seven Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Downtown
Alcoa
Airport
Broadway
McGhee Tyson
Seymour-Chapman Hwy.
Townsend

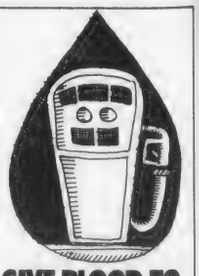
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Women's Tennis

The recently formed Maryville College Tennis Club is busy preparing for its first match against Carson-Newman College on April 8. The club, which was formed during the Winter term, elected Shada Overton as its president and secured Miss Brown as its sponsor.

Two other matches have been arranged with the hope that more can be scheduled before the State Tournament at Peabody College to be held May 8-10.

Any interested person who would like to learn more about the club is encouraged to talk with Shada.



bank of maryville

Your Bank
In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

GIVE BLOOD TO KEEP A GOOD THING GOING.

$10 per donation to buy gas.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

blood alliance
520 Weston Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone: 637-3171

theHighland ECHO

Arguments with furniture are rarely productive. -Kehlog Albran.

Vol. 60 No. 20 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 11, 1975

The Candidates

ACC Elections Today

Donna Baines

Sally Smith

Gerri Gudall

Ruth Wilbanks

Donna Baines, a freshman English major, hopes to attend graduate school after completion of Maryville. One of Donna's main concerns is the communication problem. She states, "I'd like to see the communications develop and improve between the faculty and the students." Donna is a native of Erwin, Tenn.

Sally Smith, a freshman from Birmingham, Ala., states, "The ACC should be a link between the students, faculty, and administration, as stated before by many people. However, it should not confine itself to closing the gap between these people; it should also bring together the different factions of people included in these groups. This can be done by awareness on the part of the ACC members." One of Sally's main concerns is the awareness of needs and ideas of the people involved with Maryville. Sally's interest lies in the theater.

Gerri Gudall, a sophomore French major, explains, "My main objective in becoming a member of the ACC is to keep all business running smoothly, with an awareness of student interest-administrative interest. I hope to see all members of the council work together as a single unit, thus eliminating the need to 'open communication.' "

Ruth Wilbanks, of Louisville, Ky., is a History major of sophomore standing. According to Ruth, "People have accused the ACC of being too concerned with philosophy and interpreting definitions instead of taking a stance of positive action. Next year, I would like to see improved communication between students and the administration and also a great deal less thetoric in all facets of the ACC." Ruth plans on attending graduate school.

Emerson D. Henderson, a Political Science major, comes to Maryville from Covington, Ga. As a junior, Emerson remarks, "I have observed the ACC both from within as a representative for two years and from the outside as editor of the Echo, and I am convinced that the effectiveness of the ACC will be determined by our own involvement in its meetings and committees. Active involvement in the formal process of decision making along with the informal pressure applied through the informal processes could really make the ACC a responsive governing body."

Sher Lay, a junior from Fairport, N. Y., states, "The greatest factor lacking in the ACC is participation and communication on behalf of students, faculty, and the administration in the college community. Much has been done during this year to promote communication; I feel that nothing can be accomplished unless these channels are opened even further." Sher plans to major in Psychology.

Suzanne Phillips, of Toms River, N. J., is majoring in History with the hope of attending law school afterwards. Suzanne replies, "I think this year's council has tried to make some important steps in opening up communication between the three segments of the council. I am hopeful this can be carried on to a greater extent next year, involving each segment in the others' difficulties. I am hoping the students will want to be helpful in solving financial, academic, and dormitory problems that are presently facing Maryville." Suzanne is a junior this year.

Suzanne Phillips

Sher Lay

Emerson D. Henderson

Administration		Staff	Faculty 1-5 years at MC	5-15 years at MC	15 plus years at MC
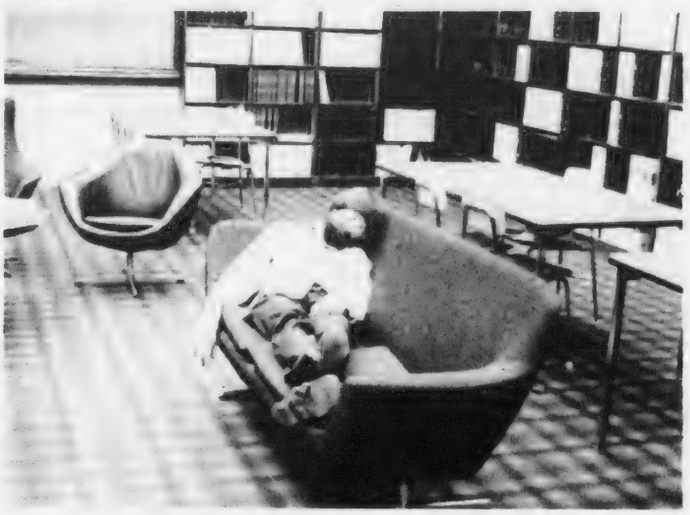
Raymond Brahams	Neil McDade	Matthew Couzens	Robert Braid	Charlotte Beck	James Bloy
George Kramer	William Ribble	Elaine Spurlin	Harry Price	William Dent	Robert Ramger
				Wallace Lewis	Victor Schoen

A Forlorn Festivity

This article will contain both good news and bad news. First, the good news. Due to a change in policy there will be no Sophomore English Proficiency Exams, nor Senior Comps. Now the bad news: that is only a rumor, and is completely untrue. Despite student swearing and protest, English Proficiency Exams will be given Thursday, April 17 at 1:00 p.m. in Thaw 201. Also, on that very same day, seniors will be treated to U. R. E.'s at 1:30 p.m. in the Chapel. Seniors are asked to bring two number two pencils. Friday's festivities will be under the auspices of major advisors and they should be contacted for details.

Comps have been an area of much debate over the past few years. The necessity of such exams has been questioned time and again. The philosophy behind the exams is that it gives a chance to bring all the information together. It is also reported to be a valuable recommendation for obtaining entrance into Graduate School. It compiles all that a student has, or has not learned, over the years here at Maryville. However, according to the Registrar's office, last year all seniors successfully completed their exams.



It makes no difference whether one agrees or disagrees with the theory of Comprehensive Exams. The fact is that they are here for at least this year. So do the best possible, cram as much as possible, pray, but above all, celebrate when they are finished.

*Special thanks to the Registrar's Office for their cooperative assistance in this article.

Bikers

The Maryville College Bicycle Club will sponsor its first bike hike this Sunday afternoon, April 13, on the Smokey Mountain Parkway. We will begin loading bicycles at 12:30 in front of SSC and plan to leave campus by 1:00. All old members and any new interested bike enthusiasts are urged to register on the sign-up sheets in the post office by Friday. There will be a minimal charge for the truck rental.

Come ride with us in the foothills of the Smokies!

MC Group Attends Chemistry Meet

Dr. Gale Rhodes, Maryville College Chemistry Department chairman, and four students attended the recent Symposium on Chemistry and Molecular Biology at the University of Kentucky.

Topic of the symposium was "Chemistry and Molecular Biology of Immunoglobulins." It was conducted by Professor Bruce A. Cunningham and Nobel laureat Professor Gerald M. Edelman, both of Rockefeller University.

The purpose of the meeting was to provide background information and current status reports in the efforts to understand immunity and allergic reactions at the molecular level.

Students attending were Arthur Fowler, senior chemistry major from Knoxville; Mark Hall, junior chemistry major from Oak Ridge; John Law, junior biology major from Maryville; and Marcia Riley, junior biology major from Maryville.

Marathon ACC Meeting Held

by Kit Williamson

An interested group of students attended the April 2 meeting of the All College Council to voice their opinions about the selling of the college farm and other matters of importance.

The first part of the meeting dealt mainly with business and committee reports, but as the agenda presentation was handed over to co-chairman Tom Martin, the students presented their feelings about certain events on campus, including questions about the discontinuation of the med-tech major, the role of the R. A.'s and counselors, the decision to make Dorm I a coed dorm, and the sale of the college farm. After these questions were made known to the Council, a lengthy discussion proceeded among members of the council and the students present. As the meeting went on, it became evident to all who attended that a basic lack of communication and understanding exists between the constituents of the council. The administration felt they had been explicit in their communications to the students, and vice versa.

The central issue being discussed was the impending sale of the college farm, on which stands the oldest cabin in Blount County, dating back to 1795. When this sale was made public, a group of concerned students made themselves heard and inquired about any alternative possibilities. When this was met with a negative response because of financial commitments, the students brought up the idea of dismantling and re-locationing the cabin on Maryville College grounds. This alternative was discussed, with the assistance of Mr. McDade, and Suzanne Phillips and Dr. McNiel were named co-chairmen of a special task force to look into this procedure.

By the end of the meeting, which lasted four hours, the remaining group seemed tired, but positive and hopeful. Many important issues had been discussed, and the communication, although strained at times, was at least headed in the right direction. It will now be up to next year's council to keep the lines of communication wide open.

News Briefs

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace is the leading candidate for 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, according to the latest Gallup Poll.

The College Scholarship Service of the College Board in New York estimates that the cost of college in 1975 to 1976 will be 6 to 8 per cent higher than this year.

Continuing Education At MC

Wish you could play chess? Would you like to learn about growing your own vegetable garden? Maybe you would be more interested in French cooking. These are a few of the courses offered in the M. C.Continuing Education program this spring.

Three years ago Mr. Bushing attended a meeting in Memphis on the Continuing Education Program. He realized this was an exciting dimension of education that was catching on all over the country. The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools uses the term 'continuing education' in referring to non-credit classroom activity.

Presently, there are roughly 7 million full-time students in college compared to the 30 to 40 million people enrolled in continuing education courses (5 times more than in regular college courses).

The continuing education program initiated at M. C. is primarily for the people in the community, although students are welcome to take part in the classes. The community has been quite responsive. Last term over 100 people were enrolled. This spring even more people are expected to register. The types of courses offered range from highly technical (physics, archaeology) to practical (the consumer an what he should know about foods, home vegetable gardening, assertive training for women, and self-defense for women). There are also courses offered for pure enjoyment (karate, the joys of chess, bird study, french cookery, practical flower arranging, and creative art for children).

The number of meetings vary, however, most classes meet 8 to 10 times. The small fees, generally ranging from $10 to $25 are used to support the program.

People are beginning to realize that education is a life time occupation. Through the continuing education program many are finding enjoyment, recreation, and even technical skills. M. C. should consider itself lucky to have the continuing education program as part of its curriculum.

Price To Receive Doctorate

Dr. Harry B. Price, chairman of the Maryville College Business Administration and Economics Department, will receive an honorary doctoral degree from Davidson College April 18.

Dr. Price, a leading U. S. foreign aid official in the 1950s and '60s, is a 1925 graduate of Davidson.

He was born in China and lived there 14 years before attending Davidson. He earned the M. A. from Yale in 1932.

Dr. Price was active in U. S. aid to China during World War II and in postwar years held key staff positions for such agencies as UN Relief and Rehabilitation, the Economic Cooperation Administration, the Governmental Affairs Institute, and the International Mass Education Movement.

He has written and edited a number of books and articles including "The Marshall Plan and Its Meaning," a history and critical evaluation of the entire enterprise. It was published in 1955 by the Cornell University Press and has been hailed as "the best study of the Marshall Plan that has been written so far."

Dr. Price has taught at Maryville since 1971. He was awarded the honorary Doctor of Letters by Maryville in 1973.

Dr. Price

Aid For Tennessee Students

ATLANTA—Students from Tennessee can now enroll in 60 out-of-state graduate programs -- including ones in Chemistry, Criminology, and Music - at in-state tuition rates through the Academic Common Market, a project of the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB).

The Common Market — which began operation last Fall -- was formed as a sharing vehicle for Southern states to increase accessibility but to discourage duplication of highly specialized and often expensive graduate programs.

Unlike the lengthy and often intimidating forms needed to apply for financial aid, the qualification process for the Common Market is simple. There are only two requirements: acceptance in a program offered through the Common Market, and proof that one is a resident in a state which has made arrangements to send its residents to that program. In most cases, the latter merely involves providing one's Common Market state coordinator with a photocopy of a driver's license and/or a voter registration card.

Residents of Tennessee can obtain further information on the program by writing their state coordinator: Thomas F. Stovall, Associate Director, Tennessee Higher Education Commission, 908 Andrew Jackson State Office Building, Nashville, Tennessee 37219.

Vespers

A short film entitled "The Man Who Had To Sing" will be shown at vespers Sunday at 7:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. It is a parable about a guy who wouldn't give up. A discussion period will follow the showing of the film.

Dorm I Reacts To New Policy

Two days before Spring Break began in March, a meeting was held in Dorm I to inform the girls about the decision to house freshmen men on first and second floors next year. Several other meetings were held within the dorm to discuss the upcoming plans and changes involved in the decision. Since that time, we have all had a chance to react and come to some basic conclusions. The attitudes and feelings of the following girls are representative of the general mood of the dorm.

"I understand it is a necessary measure and can accept it on those grounds. Hopefully, if the counselors and the sophomore aides will work hard and can openly accept this change, it will be an enjoyable experience for everyone concerned."

Suzanne Phillips

"There is nothing we can do about the situation now, but it seems a shame that the administration didn't consult us first on the matter. I hope now that the girls will have a voice in how the dorm is going to be run and who will be brought in as R. A.'s"

Nancy Reagin

"I feel that it will be successful if the people involved are willing to go into it with an open mind and are willing to try it before putting it down. If the girls and guys will cooperate with the existing dorm rules, hopefully the situation will work out."

Karen Smith

"I'm positive about it. I think it would be good for the guys because hopefully they'll learn to take better care of the dorm, and it's good for the girls because it will be a more relaxed atmosphere with the guys."

Donna Baines

"If they had to go to a girls' dorm, Dorm I would be the best."

Chris Curran

"If they set down guidelines and try to promote cooperation from the beginning, I think it can work."

Lynn Earnheart

"I never make comments on things I don't know that much about. Personally, though, I would hope that by the time you get to college you wouldn't act like a bunch of baboons."

Becky Beverly

MC Receives $25,000 Gift

Maryville College has received a gift of $25,000 from Mrs. Irene G. Peterson of Wheatridge, Colorado. It was given in memory of her husband, Fred C. Peterson, who attended the college 1913-15.

The gift was added to $5,000 that Mr. Peterson gave in 1969 to start the Fred C. Peterson Scholarship Fund. The college will use only the annual income from the endowed fund.

Mr. Peterson, a native of Almond, N. C., left Maryville to go to Colorado for his health. He remained there until his death March 17, 1974. He and Mrs. Peterson operated a fruit and vegetable farm for 30 years. Following that he worked for the U. S. Postal Service from 1952 until his retirement in 1964.

President Joseph J. Copeland said, "Maryville College makes every effort to aid qualified students who need financial assistance. Through its financial aid program, the college has been able to keep the cost to those students relatively low. This addition to the Peterson Fund gives that effort a big boost."

He added that some additional scholarships will be available this fall based on income earned on the Peterson Fund between now and then.

Applications can be made through the Student Financial Aid Office. Scholarships from the Peterson Fund will be granted at the discretion of the Student Financial Aid Committee.

BSU Conference

The Baptist Student Union Spring Conference, held in Nashville during the weekend of April 4-6, imparted good leadership training and ideas to representatives from over thirty campuses across the state. Five training clinics, each an hour long, were held during the weekend in addition to periods of worship, games, refreshments, and sightseeing. Campuses of similar sizes were placed together for the training clinics, and these groups were broken down into areas of outreach and inward growth. The main topics for discussion in both areas were "what are the needs of students on campus" and "how can BSU meet those needs." Some of the student needs common to almost every campus include friendship, understanding, acceptance, fellowship, and relief from studies and boredom. The Maryville BSU hopes that through the ideas discussed at this conference, the help of concerned students on campus, and the guidance of the Lord Jesus Christ these needs can be met. Please feel free to come and share with us; the dates and places of meetings will be posted.

Thirty Volunteers

Thirty volunteers are needed for a telephone solicitation of local alumni for a 3-night "phonothon" to be held on the evenings of April 29, 30 and May 1.

A phonothon is new for Maryville, but other colleges are doing it with good results. It will help the college financially and can be fun.

Students who can help for one or more evenings are asked to contact Mr. Mooney in the Development Office in Anderson Hall.

Parker Named Outstanding Educator

Dr. Parker

Dr. Russell D. Parker, associate professor of history at Maryville College, has been named an Outstanding Educator of America for 1975.

Guidelines for selection for outstanding educators include talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities, civic service, and professional recognition.

Dr. Parker, a graduate of Lincoln Memorial University, received the M. A. and Ph. D. from the University of Tennessee. He has been a member of the Maryville faculty since 1964.

Each year those chosen as outstanding educators are featured in a national awards volume, OUTSTANDING EDUCATORS OF AMERICA, which is published under the auspices of Fuller and Dees, Inc.

A Man Called Hope

The sound of laughter, often times, reflects the presence of joy, deep within the secret, quiet place of an individual. Just such a person was Fred Hope. Many of us know nothing of this man outside of seeing his name scribbled on posters, and an article here and there describing him, but in actuality he was more; words can only offer a small means of introduction and feeling for this man's life and work. Hopefully, the mentioned thoughts and background of Fred Hope will create a better understanding and knowledge within us.

While a student here at Maryville in the early 1900's, he was known as an individual endowed with the gentleness of mind and heart, a hearty laugh and a keen sense of humor. All these characteristics allowed him to become a missionary who believed in the giving and sharing of mind and spirit with all people. He left Tennessee for West Africa soon after graduation and settled in Cameroun. There his life adopted a new sense of responsibility, yet the charm and beauty of his stature were forever part of him. His African friends called him "Agop" after the great fruit bearing tree of the forest. Fred Hope became more than a preaching figure among people, he was also a doer of what he believed.

Through various projects carried out under the rubric of Fred Hope Fund, the assurance of his loving kindness still exists. It is the recognition of worth and integrity of foreign people and culture that surrounded Fred Hope with the capacity to truly communicate and touch other people. The WCC centers its group projects around the perpetuation of this man and his life's work. What follows is a history of such projects, but more than that, it represents people working together to close the gap of ignorance and injustice among all people - all done in the name of Fred Hope.

Until 1946 - went to Fred Hope's Industrial School in Africa

1946-47 - 1950-51 - South China (Mary Edna Smith)

1951-52 - Cameroun Christian College in Africa and Frances Newton Hospital, Ferozepur, India (Dr. Dorothy Ferrus)

1952-53 - 1958-59 - Frances Newton Hospital

1959-60 - Africa (Operation Crossroads)

1960-61 - Medical clinic in Momjepom, Africa

1961-62 - Hospital mobile medical unit in Korea

1962-63 - John and Parveeh, two Indian medical students

1963-64 - Dr. and Mrs. David Stanley for their medical work in Laos - Scholarship for a Negro student

1964-65 - Frances Newton Hospital

1965-66 - Crossroads Africa
Frances Newton Hospital

1971-72 - Bangladesh - through UNICEF (funds raised by carnival)
Mobile unit to Sunset Gap Community Center, Newport, TN.

1972-73 - Children's Home in Nicaragua (carnival & MC students workday)

1973-74 - African Drought Project through Church World Service (Soccer game)

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Dana Alspaugh, Karen Smith, Skellie Morris, Carl Swenson, Fred Strohl, Kit Williamson; Layout - Gwen Guba; Photography - Joe Showalter, Curt Leonard; Rabbit Blues - Charlie Blair; Business Manager - Charlie Thompson; Distribution - R. C. Stevens

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

mc forum

A Step in the Right Direction

The next ACC meeting, I have been told, is going to be devoted entirely to a discussion of the college finances. This is open to the entire campus community, as always, but this meeting is of great importance. Anyone who has any question on the expenditures, endowment, or any other aspect of the financial situation of the college is urged to attend. This is not a town hall meeting, but the principle behind it is very similar. This is a chance for everyone to involve themselves directly with a matter of great concern to the entire campus.

This is a giant step in the right direction. The ACC was set up with the idea that everyone should have a voice in campus governance, but this ideal has often been neglected by those on and outside the council.

The type of meeting to be held next week is what the council should try to do more often. The barriers to communication are now just beginning to open up. This effort by the ACC to include more participation is to be applauded. We only hope that this trend will continue, and that all factions of our community will voice their opinions and needs.

David Haimbach

Letters to the Echo

Dear Andy

Dear Andy,

Help me! I'm a senior and was planning to go to graduate school next fall. I had several interviews and was accepted at two schools that I really wanted to attend. However, a week ago I was told by the Registrar's Office that while counting my CIV credits they found that I would be five short at graduation. I can't graduate! I can't go to grad school. I told the admissions director at one of the schools and he laughed at me! My advisor laughed at me! My friends are laughing! Surely there must be something I can do?! Help me, Andy!

On the Brink

Andy: Such is life!

Dear Andy,

People are starving in Africa and India. Famine is widespread. The fasting by the concerned here was to help those people out. But what about me? I'm starving to death right here in front of God and everybody. Man cannot live on Frito Pie alone. I eat Saga's soy-bean delight and in an hour it's gone! Things are so bad that I have to sit on inner tubes! I crave for meat. My roommate's kicked me out for threatening him with cannibalism. The legs on the campus dogs are starting to look like drumsticks. I can't buy my own food because I'm forced to pay for a meal ticket and can't afford it. What can I do?

Another Notch Tighter

Andy: You certainly have your share of problems.

Dear Andy,

The view from a window in an insane asylum is the same view as seen from a window in Anderson Hall.

Kehlog Albran

Andy: Hello?

Dear Andy,

I am a resident of Carnegie Hall. Last week I was bitten by a rat. This morning a cockroach ran off with my new earth shoes.

Yesterday I had to dig my roommate out from under a pile of plaster that fell from the ceiling during the night. My room has been broken into several times and valuables have been stolen. Is the lack of privacy in the bathrooms somebody's idea of a sick joke? The point is that this dorm should either be condemned as Memorial was, or vastly improved.

A Slum Dweller

Andy: You certainly have your share of problems.

Andy Hall

Have a problem? Andy is here to help if you let him. Send all your troubles to Andy in care of the Echo.

To the Editors:

"What's on my mind?" has prompted this letter, really a reaction to comments and opinions expressed in the February 28th issue of the Highland Echo. As a member of the college community I found the issues discussed interesting and thought provoking. Not having journalistic experience in writing, and also being over 30 years of age, puts me at a disadvantage, but this is an attempt to raise some questions about life on our campus.

Since the students recognize so clearly the goals and full potential they wish to realize, can there be a sharing of these views? Although there might be 600 different views, would this many students be willing to come together to communicate and interact in order to make it a democratic procedure for arriving at curriculum changes to fulfill that potential? There is the Instructional Program Committee through which such suggestions can be channelled, and I frequently hear about new courses that receive favorable action in this Committee. Granted changes are made, do these always guarantee the most desirable life-styles? No one questions that change is normal and is needed.

Another issue raised is community - a redefining of its meaning, and a concern that the college with its "present structure and philosophy" is not capable of improving the "declining society." On February 23 at Vespers, an interested group of students and faculty witnessed a vivid presentation by Don Luce, Executive Director of Cleargy and Laity Concern, on human suffering among the Vietnamese people as a result of the war and our human responsibility to these people.

The following Monday morning members from this group met and developed a strategy to be a part of the solution to some of these problems. I see this as a contribution to society's needs.

Frustrations are as daily as eating and sleeping. They are even as normal as change and the outside world sometimes offers us more frustrations than challenges. I believe the academic program and the daily and weekly activities on our campus offer challenges and create sensitivity to social problems, eventually leading to a better society. My experience with students in their search for facts, ideas, and concepts convince me they are learning something. Their choices of topics show real concern for many current issues. In their sorting of ideas and in their ultimate arrival at conclusions and truths from this investigation, they may even relieve some of the boredom so frequently expressed. Why not try discovering some new ideas?

I would like to speak to the issue of a full-time chaplain, or whatever title may be appropriate for the times, maybe Coordinator of Campus Ministry. Certainly the format and purport of his responsibilities would have to be very "individualized" and varied, and as suggested by Ed Loper in the February 21 issue he would need to relate very closely to students wherever they are. Is the search for truth defunct and outdated when there are men and women, both students and faculty, on our campus actively "committed to the ideals of the Christian faith and the pursuit of truth?"

Virginia Turrentine

Some Reactions To 20th Century Music

by Michael Johnston

After two weeks of classes, I have been impressed in several ways. My major impression, which alternates between excitement and frustration, is that I know so little about music. Like so many others of my contemporaries, I was duped, early in the 1960's, by the politics of science. From grade school on, I encountered the attitude that America needs Scientists to win the cold war, retain supremacy, honor, safeguard the world for apple pie and coca-cola, etc., etc., etc. The arts, on the other hand, were not granted much importance in school. This, in retrospect, was a real contradiction, because when science did not offer any aesthetic solace, we all turned to rock music, pop art, and strange literature and cinema. The schools and the government and the Establishment (whatever that is) then gave us the negative line, "That's not art, that's not 'Culchuh'," while only offering science. I suppose they (what paranoia, who are "they"?) thought American youth of the post WW II baby boom had all been born with an appreciation of art in our blood and could differentiate between "Aht" and t. v. shows. They were mistaken, but we didn't know any better and having been told simultaneously "Don't go along with 'the crowd' " and "don't be a nonconformist (pronounced: "radical"), we didn't have time or logic to point out the contradiction, being too busy learning science in the schools and social inconsistencies in the street.

Much later, I left the "we" and came to college to become a social scientist. After playing that game for a while, I realized that the cold war was over and scientists couldn't get jobs and I was through with being pragmatic, it was time to do what I wanted to do all along. . .attempt to be an artist. I now find myself in the exciting position of doing what I want but not knowing enough about art to really understand what I'm doing. But being a child of 20th century America, I know that our whole culture has never known exactly what it's been doing either, so...onward. The point is to get where you're going and then figure out where you've been.

BUT...Reality occasionally comes crashing in. Having gotten myself into an upper-level music course (20th Century History & Styles), I realize where I've been does nothing to prepare me for it. I come to class very excited—this all so new. I sit, listening to everything, trying to make sense of concepts like "tonality", "chromatics", and "parallelism" and know that my intuition about what they mean isn't the whole story. Then the music—music that I have to listen to. I can't turn it on and do something else and still hope to know what I've heard. So, every cell is focused on the music—intense listening. I leave class exhausted, unable to speak for about an hour, burning over in my head all I've heard and unable to find niches from past experience to fit it in. Exhausted from hidden fear that someone in class will ask my opinion or analysis of a piece of music and then hear me say "It's interesting" to a piece like "The Rite of Spring" that caused a riot at its debut. A Riot! Sure, rock groups get their audience into such frenzies that they could incite a riot, but a ballet? It boggles the mind.

The frustration occurs when I try so hard to hear the distinctions between composers, try to hear the specific techniques they use. I'm able to hear differences, but cannot yet verbalize them. My command of the language necessary to do so is limited. And specially lacking is a knowledge of history. Early in Salzman's book (20th C. Music: an Introduction by Eric Salzman) I was fascinated to read that the composers of the 20th century reacted to a changing world by rejection of altering traditionally accepted styles. Yet when I listen to the compositions, I can't compare them to anything. I've tried to remedy this by listening to some pre-20th century compositions—mostly by Beethoven. I can hear differences, but can't yet define what they are. Despite the frustration (I, a 7-year student of debate and public speaking, always ready with an extemporaneous opinion, can't find words), it presents a real challenge. Hopefully, by the term's end, I'll know enough to recognize and verbalize what I've heard.

A particularly intriguing aspect for me is the psychosocial reflections in the music. Salzman, in his introduction to Ch. 1, speaks of art reflecting the change in Western culture. A few lines later, he speaks of the basic psychological principle in tonality being continuance. I think immediately of the Gestalt principle of continuance. It states that if you see a row of dots, for example: . . . . . o3o2o1 you will pick o2 as the continuance of the row, rather than o1 or o3.

Later in Chapter 2 he offers an interesting example of how different composers reacted to the change in musical form. Richard Strauss, on one hand, experimented heavily, but turned back toward traditional tonality. Mahler, on the other hand, incorporated the crisis of the 20th century in his music without seeking resolutions or answers.

Of course, that's almost straight from the book, and I couldn't prove it, yet. I've listened to some Strauss and have Mahler on even now as I write. So far, I haven't heard him talk musically of crisis. But them, I'm used to the short-story form of popular music. I have not quite adapted my perception to the novel style of the symphony.

My other listening has been eclectic. Debussy's "La Mer"; Ravel's "Sonatine" (1905), "Gaspard de la nuit" (1908), and "Le Tombeau de Couperin" (1917); Stravinsky's "Petrouchka", Strauss' "Don Juan, Op. 20", and a few minutes of a Schoenberg Piano Concerto. My recollection of the last piece is that it sounded like an orchestral nervous breakdown. I'll have to return to it soon, after doing some more reading.

In the coming weeks I'm going to correlate my listening and reading much closer. This two weeks has been spent in an electic overview--just sampling a lot of new material. From here on, I know I must listen to the specific people I'm reading about—a carry-over of in-class experience.

A final note on the class experience—I've been most impressed by Debussy. The imagery of "The Sunken Cathedral". Apart from the fact that a sunken cathedral is a concept I've never considered, I was amazed. I saw a huge, Gothic church through murky water and heard the bells chime emerge, muffled by the water.

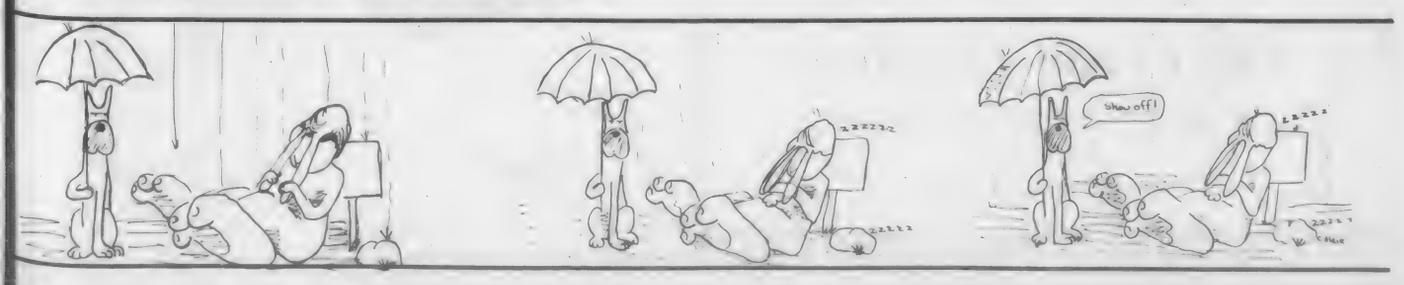
The highlight of the first two weeks was most unexpected. This week's C. I. V. program (April 2) showed me that I really had learned something. I sat in the chapel, more appreciative of the material than ever before. Before the program started I really hadn't read the hand-out. I just sat and listened. All of a sudden Betty Carol Zinavage appeared and began to play the piano. The style was familiar, the compositional techniques familiar; I knew it. . .Debussy! I checked the program notes—sure enough, I was right.

Maybe I've been listening a little too hard in class. In that C. I. V., just sitting back, relaxed, I could recognize a piece by Debussy.

That's one small step for osmosis. . . .

Kull Ballet To Be Performed

Tom Martin and Terry Noack dance the roles of the two young warriors who vie for the attention of the Indian maiden, Karen Proffitt, in the legend of "Atsanvto" (The Necklace), Part II of "Hill Heritage Suite."



Parts II and III of "Hill Heritage Suite," composed by Lee Kull and choreographed by Cheryl Van Metre, will be premiered on April 11 and 12 by the Maryville College-Community Orchestra and the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet.

Part III, entitled "The Feud," features Tom Martin and Sarajune Owen as the star-crossed lovers of Appalachia.

Performances are scheduled for Friday and Saturday, April 11 and 12 at 8:15 p.m. in the Maryville College Theatre. Admission is $3.00 for adults, $2.00 for students. Tickets may be purchased at the Blount Chamber of Commerce Building, the Van Metre School of Dance or at the door.

"Shrew" To Be Performed

The Maryville College Playhouse will present "The Taming of the Shrew" William Shakespeare's classic comedy about the war between men and women on the 14, 15, and the 16 of May. In the role of the tamer, Petruchio, will be Steve Ayres. In the role of the shrew, Katherine, will be Celeste Gourdin. Suzanne Schoen will play Bianca, Katherine's younger sister beset by suiters, but unable to marry until her father Baptista, played by Howard Welsh, can marry off Katherine. In the roles of Bianca's suiters will be Phil Gibson, Paul Kersey, Wayne Dansbury, Mike Jacobus and Stan McCleave. Comic servants will be played by Rocky Onofrietto, Don Tosh, and Carl Swenson. Other members of the large cast will be Trish Damon, Sally Smith, Tim Kelly, Joe Carnevale, Jim Grey, and Mary Story. The play will be directed by Mr. Blair Beasily assisted by Belinda Chiddie and Mary Story.

Montana Students Win Collective Bargaining Rights

by Neil Klotz

(CPS)—For the first time students have won the legal right to participate in collective bargaining negotiations in higher education.

The Montana legislature has passed a bill that grants students not only the right to observe bargaining sessions between faculty and administration, but also to participate actively in caucauses as part of the public employers' team.

Although students at several schools across the nation have been allowed to observe bargaining sessions by the mutual consent of faculty and administration, this consent has often dissolved, leaving students on the outside while negotiations directly affecting their tuition, class size and governance rights continued.

Montana is the first state to guarantee student rights during bargaining. Supporters of the bill have received assurances that the governor will sign the measure into law sometime next week.

The most important provisions of the bill stipulate that:

—Each student government may designate an agent to meet and confer with both its board of regents—the public employer—and the faculty bargaining team before bargaining begins.

—The student team may observe negotiations and participate in the caucuses of the public employer/regents' team between sessions at the table.

—Students may meet and confer with the regents' team concerning the negotiated agreement before the contract is signed.

—Student observers must maintain the confidentially of the negotiations.

Although the measure does not grant students the right to veto a contract, it does allow them ample opportunity to voice their concerns throughout the bargaining, according to Bruce Nelson of the Montana Student Lobby, who was instrumental in formulating and gathering support for the legislation.

"Students' whole lives can be affected by a faculty strike or work stoppage," Nelson told CPS. "If you're going to subject them to such a burden, they should at least have some say in the process."

Although no faculties in Montana have unionized yet, elections for bargaining agents will occur on several campuses in the state soon.

"Usually students don't become aware of bargaining until their faculty and administration have already negotiated away many of their rights," said Nelson. "Hopefully we've gotten in before there's any damage done."

Although the student bargaining bill passed the state house 60-31 and the senate 41-8, the student lobby had to contend with a number of groups originally opposed to the legislation.

On one hand, said Nelson, were the faculty unions, whose initial reaction was "shock and horror and outrage." On the other were those pro-industry legislators who didn't like collective bargaining in the first place. A third group were state congresspeople "who don't feel students should have a damn thing to say about anything."

The student lobbyists, however, convinced both pro-union and pro-management forces that students could help them by participating in the sessions. As part of the public employers' team, students would lend extra clout. But as advocates of certain faculty concerns, students could do that group some good inside a management caucus, the lobby argued.

Although the tactic of playing both ends against the middle worked, it did have an element of danger, Nelson noted.

"Since this was a first, the newness of the whole thing allowed us to use a strategy that gave us nearly a unanimous vote," he said. "But if the strategy had backfired, we would have gone down to a unanimous defeat."

Alliance For Arts Conference At MC

Tennessee educators and artists will convene at Maryville College April 25-26 for the second of three regional Alliance for Arts in Education Conferences. A third conference will be at Memphis State University May 2-3.

The association is dedicated to bringing the artist and educator together in an advocacy group which can change the climate toward arts in education. The regional conferences are designed to focus on specific ways the arts can be used to improve the quality of teaching and learning of academic subjects. East Tennessee conference coordinators are Mitchell Van Metre, art supervisor, Knoxville City Schools, and Dr. Harry Harter, chairman of the fine arts department at Maryville College.

Keynote speakers for the East Tennessee workshop are Bernard Rosenblatt, associate director, Aesthetic Education Programs, Central Midwestern Regional Educational Laboratory; and Beccher Clapp, supervisor of instruction, Knox County Schools. Mr. Rosenblatt will speak on "Aesthetic Education," Mr. Clapp will speak on the conference theme, "The Arts: A Natural Way to Learn."

Sessions will be devoted to "The Arts with the Exceptional Child," "Careers in the Arts," "Curriculum: Application of the Arts and Art Techniques to the Classroom," and "Visual Literacy."

Experts will share specific guidelines in the use of art, music, drama, creative dramatics, media arts, and literature, all of which can be adapted by the non-arts oriented teacher. Ways the arts can help develop the potential of all children, including the exceptional child, will be experienced. Arts resources within the reach of the teacher, principal, supervisor, or school system will be outlined.

The conferences have been made possible by a grant from the National Alliance for Arts Education to the State Department of Education. They are sponsored by the Department of Education and the Tennessee Arts Commission.

The conferences are open to teachers, principals, supervisors, parents, and others interested in the arts. Further information may be obtained from Beasley Overbey, coordinator, State Department of Education, Division of Field Services and Resources, Building 309, 11th Avenue, Smyrna, Tennessee 37167.

History Contest

The Third Annual Contest in High School/Junior High School History was held at M. C. on April 2. Sponsored by the Blount History Association, the contest attracted 57 Blount County Students. The five categories of testing were: U. S. History since 1865; World History since 1500; Tennessee History; U. S. History to 1865; and World History to 1500. The two top winners in the high school competition, Betty Williams and Kae Carpenter, will receive $200 scholarships to Maryville College. All other winners received subscriptions to various journals. In addition to this contest, another was held on Wednesday for high school students only. About 60 students were expected from the East Tennessee region, yet results were not available at press time.

THE
FLAVOR TREE
DELICATESSEN

For Your Favorite Deli

Sandwiches - Hot or Cold

Philadelphia - Style Hoagies
Our Specialty -
Imported & Domestic Cheeses

Call Ahead - 983-7914

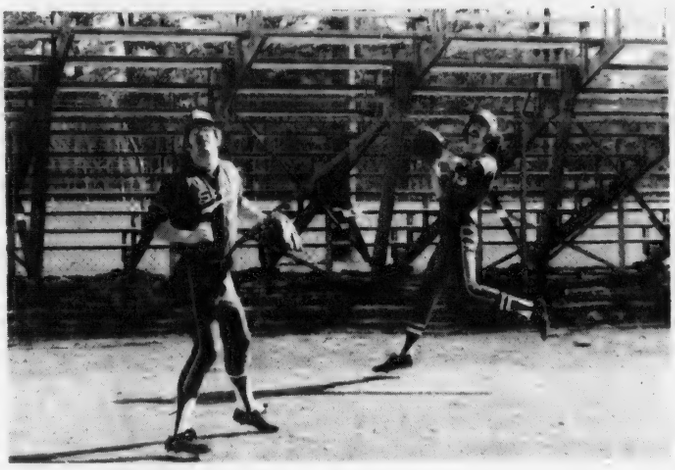
Church Ave. Professional Building
404 Church
Just Past Gilbert's

Interim Info

The possibility of designing an independent interim project is one that should excite anyone who has an idea or a topic that he or she would like to pursue individually. Also encouraged are original group projects, which require a faculty sponsor, and, in addition, the submission of a written proposed program of study or experience. A brochure describing faculty-initiated interim project offerings for next interim will be made available on April 15. Included will be forms for written independent interim proposals, the deadline for which is May 1. The Interim Committee encourages those people who are interested in independent interims to crystallize their ideas, locate faculty advisers, and prepare their written proposals soon so that they can be reviewed and approved by the committee before the close of the spring term. Anyone who has questions is invited to speak with a member of the Interim Committee, a listing of which is readily available on the ACC Committee Membership List.

COMPS!

Baseball Team Splits Double Header



Ron Spangler scored the winning run after a sacrafice fly by Al Lombardi in the second game of a doubleheader Saturday as the Tusculum College Pioneers defeated the Maryville College "Fighting" Scots at Tusculum, 6-5. In the opener, which also happened to be Maryville's first game of the 1975 campaign, the Scots prevailed over the Pioneers behind the pitching of Kevin "Dapper" McKinstry, 7-6.

The second game loss was a heartbreaker for Coach Boyson Baird and his squad. Both teams got rolling in the first inning. Joe Moffitt started things for Maryville with a two out double to leftfield followed by a walk to Wayne Risko. Ken Hanna singled to drive in Moffitt. Both Risko and Bill "Trip" Zeigler, Hanna's designated runner, moved up a base on a wild pitch. Bobby Fitzgerald followed with a double to drive those two home. Tusculum came back in the bottom of the first to score five runs off of Danny Thomas which turned out to be the only real bad inning he had, but a costly one at that.

The Scots tied the score in the top of the seventh as Buddy McDonald walked with one down. After Paul Viggiano filed out, Jim Lester was hit on the foot by a pitch. Moffit then walked, bringing up Risko who promptly singled to drive in Lester and McDonald.

Tusculum's seventh inning opened with Spangler's single after which Jewels Brock, the winning pitcher, sacrafiсed him to second. After Chip Lumas walked, Pete Franklin hit a fly ball to Lester in left that appeared to be caught, but Lester dropped the ball as the runners moved up to second and third. Lombardi then hit a fly ball foul in right field that McDonald chased and caught. Spangler then tagged up and beat a good throw from McDonald for the winning run. Despite the loss, Thomas gave up only seven hits and struck out three. From the second inning on, he only allowed three hits.

The first game turned out better for Maryville. McKinstry went all the way for the win, although the Scots did have to come from behind to win. Viggiano lead off the game with a single and stole second. After two were out, Moffit walked following Viggiano's theft of third. After Moffit stole second, Risko walked to load the bases. Hanna followed with a single to score two runs. Lester scored one in the third on a double by Risko after he had walked. Maryville got three in the fourth as Paul Bailey singled and advanced to second on a wild pitch. McDonald then sacraficed Bailey to third and was safe on first himself as pitcher Tom McCann booted the play. Viggiano then singled and came around the bases on a double error by the Pioneers that tied the score at 6-6. The winning run scored in the fifth as Risko walked and advanced all the way to third before McDonald singled him home.

The Scots were scheduled to play the University of Tennessee at Knoxville on Tuesday. Their next game is set for Bryan College in Dayton, Tennessee on Monday. That will be a doubleheader. Their next home appearance will be Wednesday when they entertain Lincoln Memorial University for two. The first game will start at 2:00 p.m.

SPORTS

Track

Maryville College Thinclads opened their season with a close win over Emory & Henry last Wednesday, 76-68. On Saturday the Scots travelled to Western Carolina University for a big invitational, placing 10th out of fifteen colleges, most of which were larger schools.

In the opener, junior Mike Osborne led the way for Maryville with 2 firsts and 1 second. He also ran a leg on the Scot's winning mile-relay team. In the 120 yd. high hurdles & 440 yd. intermediate's Osborne ran away from the field, posting times of 15.0, & 59.2, respectively. Freshman distance runner Joe Whitehead came through with another double victory, winning both the mile and 2-mile runs. Freshman sprinters Harold Law and Bill Straher did well in the open quarter and ran good splits in the mile relay, with Straher anchoring it. The highlight of the meet was John Leibrock's school-record highjunp of 6' 4". That leap bettered the old mark by ½" which was also held by Leibrock.

Overall depth in the field events was a big factor in the meet, with the Scots outpointing E&H 43-20 in 7 events. Tom Duling and Troy Bowman each took a first in the discus and shot put, respectively. Ronnie Lasley was a pleasant surprise for Coach Ron Case, taking 1st in the javelin with a fine heave of 157' 11".

Saturday at W. C. U. Maryville went up against excellent competition. Mike Osborne was high point man for the Scots again. His 14.8 in the high hurdles, which gave him 4th place, qualified him for the nationals to be held the last weekend in May. Scott Cook took another 4th in the pole vault with a good leap of 13'. The mile relay and 440-relay teams both took fifth in their races.

The Scots next meet is/was at home Tuesday, April 8, against Milligan College.

Sports Briefs

Major League Baseball's first black manager made his regular season debut Tuesday as Frank Robinson led his Cleveland Indians to a 5-3 win over the New York Yankees. Robinson hit a homerun in the first inning to help the Cleveland cause.

The Houston Rockets and Seattle Supersonics won their first games in the National Basketball Association Playoffs Tuesday night by defeating the New York Knicks and Detroit Pistons respectively.

The 39th Masters Golf Tournament is taking place in Augusta, Georgia this weekend with Arnold Palmer, Lee Elder, and Jack Nicklaus all expressing pre-tournament optimism about winning the prestigious event.

In American Basketball Association Playoff action Tuesday evening, the Kentucky Colonels beat the Memphis Sounds, 119-105, and took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Tennis

Sutton Brown

Maryville College's illustrious net men have posted an impressive 3 win 1 loss record since their successful Florida tour. They entered the season without the aid of three returning lettermen, but under the direction of Donald Wyatt and with the addition of 5 new members, Mike Webster, Joe Rigell, Buddy Bernhardt, Joan Walters, and Sue Layman, they have been able to post their winning record. The play of Maryville's returning lettermen, Craig Larsen, Sutton Brown, Mike Dykes, Arlene Ignico and the mono-stricken George Reigelsperger was a major factor in M. C.'s winning ways.

The net men have a difficult match with perennial power U. T. of Chattanooga on April 10th. Then following an eight day lay off they continue their 1975 season against the likes of Emory and Henry, King College, Centre, and Tennessee Wesleyan University. Maryville's next home match will be April 22nd against Centre College. Best of Luck. Scotty Net Men!

Craig Larsen

Student Union and Collective Bargaining

by Neil Klotz

(CPS)—Mention "student union" to most students and they'll initiate a harangue about warped ping-pong tables or pop machines that don't give the correct change.

But mention "student union" to students who have found that collective bargaining negotiations between their faculty and administrations can directly affect their tuition, class size and campus governance rights and you'll have scratched a much more volatile issue.

Student unionism, an often bandied concept over the years, has materialized again as a solution to the lack of student input in collective bargaining. Few bargaining activists have chosen to go the unionization route, due in large part to some misunderstandings that have spread about the term union.

Anyone can unionize. If a group of workers designates an agent and management agrees to bargain, talks can begin. Unfortunately, if management doesn't agree to bargain, workers have no real recourse but to strike. In order to prevent debilitating strikes and provide workers with an alternative to the above de facto bargaining, federal and state laws were set up over the years to formalize the bargaining process for many industries.

Student unions have not been recognized by either state laws or the National Labor Relations Board, but this does not mean they are not unions. The crucial question is: can they bargain? Faculties in a few states without bargaining laws

So far, both student union projects have initially set their sights on bargaining separately with faculty and administration. The Stockton group already has a contract with its faculty union, and the U. Mass groups is keying its efforts on an administration-student contract.

According to at least one bargaining commentator, Geoffrey Sill, tripartite bargaining may be a "red herring" and the business of negotiating contracts is "a peculiarly American form of unionism."

"It is still rather uncommon for European unions," wrote Sill in a working paper, "to negotiate contracts with employers; rather, the union acts as a grievance mechanism, a political force and a watchdog of labor interests, but avoids tying itself down with contractual language." Sill remarked that it might be better if both student and faculty unions adopt this form of unionism which would "allow the provisional agreements between students, faculty and administration to be modified each year as needed."

College Board Predicts Cost Increase

(CPS)—To the surprise of absolutely no one, the cost of going to college next year will increase an average of 6-8% according to a study released by the College Entrance Examination Board at the end of March.

The survey, "Student Expenses at Postsecondary Institutions, 1975-75," covered costs of tuition and fees, transportation, personal expenses, room and board, and books and supplies at 2400 residential and commuter colleges.

The largest percentage increase--12%—will be borne by resident students at public two and four-year schools, while resident students at private four-year institutions will have to pay the largest dollar increase, $352.

Tuition for public schools is set to go up an average of only 5-8%, with a cost-of-living increase ranging from 7-13% providing the largest portion of the increase for public school students.

The cost-of-living should stay essentially the same for students at private two-year schools, while increasing an average of 8-10% for four-year private students, according to the study.

The College Board noted that tuition charges still account for almost all of the differences between public and private school costs. The survey said these charges will range from a yearly average $301 at two-year public colleges to $2240 at four-year private schools.

The "tuition gap" between what it costs to attend a private four-year school versus a public four-year school is expected to increase from $1639 to $1712 next year.

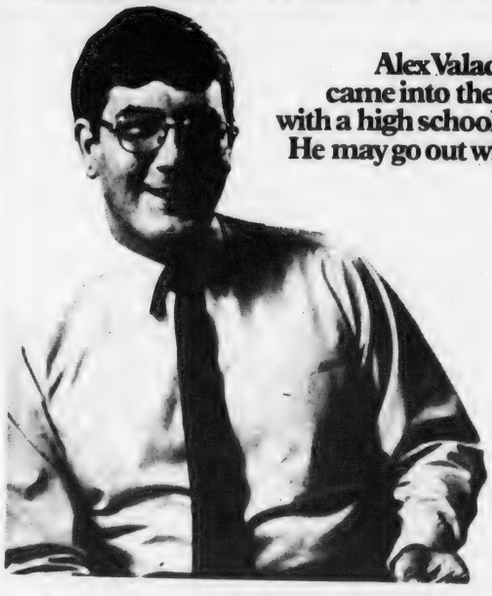
Broken down by regions, the survey pinpointed the Southwestern states as having the least expensive public school tuition—$289—and the New England states as having the most expensive private school tuition, $2542.

The lowest overall average costs were reported at two-year public colleges for commuter students, $2058.

The report also noted that costs for proprietary schools may actually go down next year, but cautioned that its sample for these schools was very limited and may not reflect an overall trend.

Jaycees Are Looking For A Few Good Men

by The Maryville-Alcoa Jaycees



Jaycees are devoting their time and talents towards building a better community and a better America. Aged 18 to 35, these young men represent most all walks of life and have been serving their communities throughout the nation since 1915.

The Jaycees is an organization for young men which offers personal growth through community development. The Jaycees is designed specifically to meet the needs of the young man seeking to make his place in his community. Every young man is offered the opportunities to a voice in community affairs, a practical leadership development course, the chance to try new ideas and improve old ones, and social contact with other young men.

Since the Jaycees feel that tomorrow's leaders must come from today's youth, most of their projects are youth-oriented.

Organizations such as the Jaycees can only continue to do their share in the community if they can continue to grow. The Jaycees welcome any young man, age 18 to 35, who would like to share in their ideas and has a desire to better himself. All Jaycees believe that service to humanity is the best work of life, a key line in the Jaycee Creed.

The Maryville-Alcoa Jaycees are presently wishing to offer this great opportunity to young men at Maryville College. If you want to become a more viable, active part of your campus, of the Blount County area, and of your nation, please contact the Echo at Box 2820.

Alex Valadez came into the Army with a high school education. He may go out with a Ph.D.

Last year, over 90,000 young men and women earned college credits while serving in the Army. They did it on Army time. With the Army paying 75% of their tuition costs.

One of the 90,000 was Specialist 5 Alex Valadez of Chattanooga, Tenn. Through various Army programs Alex managed to earn a B.S. degree in just two and one-half years.

Today, he's six hours short of his Master's. After that, he plans to go for his Ph.D.

Not everyone who joins the Army ends up with a doctorate. But if they want one, the Army will help them get it.

Contact your local Army Recruiter and ask about Project Ahead.

Join the people who've joined the Army.

Easy Curb Market

8-11 Market

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK

Hoagies 75¢

8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.

Open All Holidays

BEVERAGES OF ALL TYPES

PICNIC SUPPLIES

715 East Broadway
Maryville

GIVE BLOOD TO A TURNIP.

$10 per donation to buy your vegetables.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

blood alliance

520 Western Ave.
Knoxville, Tennessee
Phone: 637-3171

theHighland ECHO

A condemned man does not start chain letters. -Kehlog Albran

Vol. 60 No. 20 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 18, 1975

Galbraith To Present Recital At MC

Mr. Galbraith

Wayne Galbraith, organist, will present a Performing Artist Concert at Maryville College Friday, April 18, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Galbraith, who has received acclaim from the well-known organist Virgil Fox, has performed extensively throughout the United States and abroad.

He played an organ recital at Carnegie Hall in 1970 and frequently appears on television.

As a member of the United States Air Force Band, he was accompanist and assistant director for the Singing Sergeants and official organist and director at Rolling Air Force Base Chapel.

He performed at the White House for President and Mrs. Eisenhower, at the American Embassy in Tokyo for General and Mrs. MacArthur, and in Korea for Generalissimo and Madame Chiang-Kai-Shek.

Galbraith, who started musical studies at age eight and played his first church service at thirteen, is presently Minister of Music at Edgewood Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh.

He attended Carnegie-Mellon College of Music where he studied with the well-known composer Nicolai Lapatnikoff and noted musicologist Dr. Frederick Dorian.

Galbraith is a member of Concert Artists of Pittsburgh and Dean of the Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Echo Interview

Phillips Speaks On ACC's Future

Newly elected ACC co-chairperson Suzanne Phillips comes to Maryville from Tom's River, NJ, and is majoring in History. She has hopes of going on to law school after graduation next year. Talking about her new position, Suzanne presents some of her hopes and plans for next year's Council.

Do you feel pleased with the results of the newly elected council?

I think I can work well with all those that were elected and hope we can cooperate with each other to accomplish the goals we set for ourselves.

Can you name any specific issues that you hope to bring up in the coming year?

One thing I'd like to do is to organize the committees so that the people who are placed on them are concerned and willing to try and rectify any problems within the specific areas. The only way that the ACC can function to meet the community's needs is for the committees to submit proposals to the council, and I hope this will be done more next year.

Another concern of mine is dorm life. I would hope that the counselors and head residents will be able to communicate more freely with members of the Administration so that they can come to understand some of the problems that face the students in the dorm.

I also hope that the people on the council can learn more about the finances of the college so that we can explain this to other members of the student body. In this way, the students may be able to come up with different fund-raising ideas that would help the college with the financial difficulties it now faces. A main concern of mine is the College farm. I hope by next year we will be able to move the farmhouse to another location, hopefully on college property. A possible use for this would be a museum and a place of display for student and faculty arts and crafts.

Another area in which I hope action can be taken is that of academics, specifically the core course requirements facing freshmen upon arrival. A committee has already been formed to re-evaluate these courses and I hope it can be continued next year.

In general, I hope that students can become more involved in decisions

continued on page 4

MC Opens Bicentennial

More than 100 persons will participate as Maryville College opens its Bicentennial celebration with "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere" Friday, April 18, the 200th anniversary of the event.

The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man." The Air National Guard, under the direction of Paul Langford, will present the flags, beginning with "Don't Tread on Me," and proceeding through the present one representing the 50 states.

The college choir, directed by Dr. Harry Harter, will sing "Easter Anthem" by Williams Billings. Longfellow's poem, "The Midnight Ride" will be read by the Academic Dean, Dr. Carolyn Blair.

Randy Hunter, a senior music major from Birmingham, will sing "Momma Look Sharp" from 1776, followed by Lynn Yeatts at the organ playing variations on "America" by Charles Ives.

Copland's "Dance from Appalachian Spring" will be performed by junior members of the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet under the direction of Cheryl Van Metre.

The program will close with the film "Williamsburg: The Story of a Patriot" and Finale from 1776.

The program will be presented at 9:20 a.m. in Wilson Chapel. It is directed by Thomas E. Jones of the speech-theatre department. Steve Yuhasz, a senior theatre major from Carteret, N. J., as Benjamin Franklin will be the cordinator.

College Plans To Move Farmhouse

Up on a hill overlooking the fields behind the college is an old, dilapidated farm house. Under this decaying exterior of weatherboard is a log cabin dating back to approximately 1795, one of the oldest farm houses in the area. This land was leased by William Blount, the first governor of Tennessee to the first treasurer of Blount County in appreciation for his services. In more recent years this farm has served as the college dairy and in the last few years has been rented out by the college.

Within the next couple of months, this house along with three acres of land bordering Tuckaleechee Pike will be sold by the college. Unfortunately, the selling of the land is necessary for the financial upkeep of the college. but this does not mean the farm house must be destroyed, too. A group of concerned faculty, administration, and students are forming a committee to move the farm onto the college proper. This will take a lot of hard work and financial support. Much of the cost can be waivered if students and faculty will volunteer some of their time and energy to securing funds from local civic clubs and industries and also by doing some of the physical work themselves. The committee will be having an organizational meeting, so all those who are interested in helping should contact either Dr. McNiel, or Suzanne Phillips, Box 2501.

Richter To Perform

Dr. Richter

Dr. Marion Morrey Richter, noted composer-lecturer-pianist, will present a concert at Maryville College Monday, April 21 at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. The concert, sponsored by the Maryville Music Club and Delta Omicron (International Music Fraternity for Women), is an International Women's Year event.

As a composer, Dr. Richter has written in all forms and won numerous honors. As a performer, she is a skillful pianist who has premiered works of other American composers as well as her own.

Dorothy Bushing, concert chairman, said, "Dr. Richter is especially well qualified to represent women in the arts. Her work in the field of music is outstanding. Her unique manner of explaining the music she plays gives such depth to her playing that the listener is hardly aware of the passage of time."

Dr. Richter has performed her concert-lectures in a number of countries and will make an "Around the World with American Music" tour in the fall.

Dr. Richter will be in Maryville Sunday, April 20, for a province meeting of Delta Omicron. The province includes chapters from Maryville College, Carson-Newman, University of Tennessee, Chattanooga, and East Tennessee State University. Members will meet for a tea and musicale at the home of province president Charlotte Kull.

Tickets for the Monday concert can be purchased at the college Fine Arts Center office or at the door. General admission is $2.50; students $1.

mc forum

A Modest Proposal

As the economic crunch is falling on all colleges and universities across the nation desperate measures are being taken by many institutions to maintain existence. Maryville has proved to be no exception. The eight week winter term, departmental budget cutbacks, and the selling of the college farm are prime examples of desperation to say the least. This week the administration and the board of directors have been meeting to draw up the budget for next year. Spending cutbacks of over 10% are being asked of all departments. The state of the college's economy is in sad shape. Surely, once the wheels at the meeting start grinding an adequate budget proposal will be drawn up. Proposals to make money by selling other college owned land will also come about. Perhaps the board should consider other alternatives before the college proper is all that remains.

As a money-making resource the college facilities offer an unlimited, virtually untapped pool. The best example is probably a plan to use Anderson Hall. During the day the administrative functions will proceed as always. In the night the building will turn into a night club, the Copeland Cabana.

A Carribean atmosphere will prevail. Palm trees and other tropical fauna will be imported. The female administrators will divide themselves between the duties of grass-skirted waitresses and cooks. Students in the arts can provide the native decorations and entertainment – limbo and flamingo dancing, steel drum music and other tropical flares. The male administrators will be either bus boys or waiters. Of course Dr. Copeland will be the maitre d'. Each night he will appear in a panama hat and a striking Hawaiian shirt. He will also introduce all acts. The patrons will consist of East Tennesseeans – reservations only. Each academic year will culminate with a gala outdoor luau between Sutton and the Cabana.

This will be a chance that every aspect of the college can benefit from. The entire college community can come closer by working together for a common cause. The theater people will gain valuable experience. Financially, the college will be pulled from it's dilemna. With this problem solved the administrators will then be able to relax and get away from it all, so to speak.

Gary Sloboda

Dear Andy

Dear Andy,

This may be sort of late, but I think the point of my letter is still valid. This past interim I discovered after my first class meeting that I had made a regrettable error in my course choice. I found out later the mistake was almost incorrectable. I went to the registrar, who flatly refused to make a course change, even though I had a note from my professor. I went to one of the deans with my problem. They consulted another dean, who contacted the registrar, who then agreed to the change. My teacher filled out the necessary paper work and I returned to the registrar, satisfied that justice did prevail at Maryville. When I arrived, the registrar had changed her mind, and decided not to change my schedule after all. A couple of tears, deans, and compromises later, the registrar finally decided to let me escape into a new class. Can't something be done about all the red tape?

Stuck in the Middle

Andy: You're right; this is sort of late.

Dear Andy,

The selling of the campus farm is of real concern to me. It's one thing for the school to sell property without letting the students know beforehand, so that all sorts of post-sale alternatives have to be considered, but what is going to happen to the cows?

That's right. What about the cows? Are we going to milk all our resources for cash? Should we let this pass without raising a stink? Next thing you know the college will be sold to the Arabs. The ramifecations are udderly astounding. When are we going to cut the bull?

Cal Pye

Andy: I think you spelled ramifacations wrong.

Dear Andy,

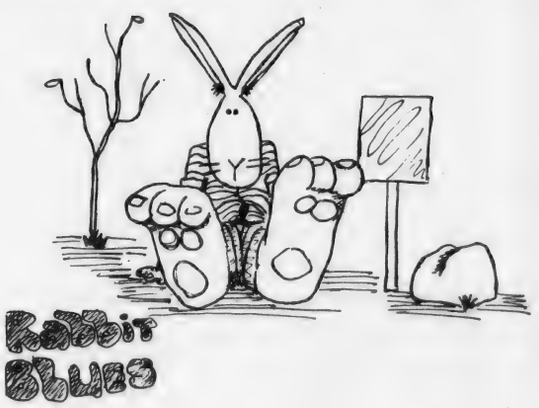
Perusing back issues of The Echo, I am amused to perceive how closely Maryville College news parallels motifs represented in the drama of William Shakespeare. It appears that the scourge of righteous self-examination exemplified by King Lear, in the play of that nomenclature, and the manipulative elegance of Hamlet's Claudius have permeated the ages and emerged in Maryville.

Another prevalent theme of Shakespeare's in evidence at the college is that of the discrepencies between illusion and reality. This institution has promoted the facade of being a community with open communication. But the banter we call "communication" simply resembles the foolish stychomithia of Shakespeare's clowns. We are only bamboozling ourselves. You know?

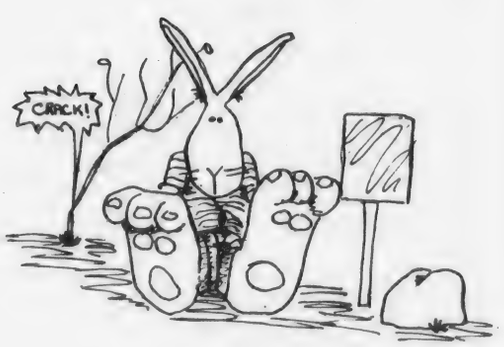
Howie

Andy: Do you have a question to ask, or do you want to make a speech?

Dear Andy,



I just want to share with you all a verse from a fine musical composition which I feel has a relevant message for us all. "Gitchee-gitchee, ya-ya, da-da. Gitchee-gitchee, ya-ya, gee."



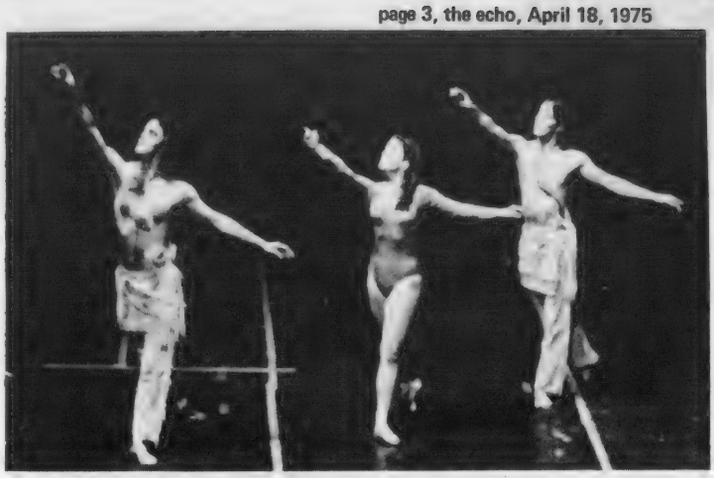
Can You Dig It?

Andy: Is that you, Victor?

Andy Hall

Have a problem? Andy is here to help if you let him. Send all your troubles to Andy in care of the Echo.

Ballet Found Wanting



by Howard Welsh

It is no easy accomplishment to set folklore to music and to this end, Lee Kull's "Hill Heritage Suite" triumphed mightily. Parts II and III of this bicentennial composition which premiered at Maryville College last weekend displayed a pleasing embodiment of Appalachian culture and testified to the composer's musical sensitivity toward his subject. Regrettably the remainder of the production did not meet these standards, and Mr. Kull's apparent intentions went partially unrealized.

Cheryl Van Metre's choreography was characteristically good when it involved only a few dancers and inadequate when the stage was filled with people. Because she understands so completely the artistry involved in solo-role delineation, it is a shame that Miss Van Meter cannot extend the same philosophy to large groups of dancers. Apart from rows and rows of freshly brushed teeth and an occasional furtive glance at the second row of seats, most of the performers displayed a propensity for staring into the wings as they danced as though in anticipation of being summoned to the phone.

Individual performances saved the evening. Reba French as the Sorceress in Part II (The Necklace) displayed excellent control and captivating facial expression as a character-dancer. Having mastered the fundamentals of body control, Miss French went on to delight her audiences with a performance that bespoke a keen understanding of the intricacies and nuances of idiosyncratic performing. She is an artist whose career should be followed with much interest.

As Rosanna in Part III (The Feud), Sarajune Owen must be credited for turning in one of the evening's most convincing performances. With much experience to her name, Miss Owen danced the role of the disspirited young woman with an incredible degree of pathos and versatility. Like Miss French in Part II, Sarajune Owen is the consumate artist who understands the necessity for bringing together all aspects of a characterization and this she did in a perfectly realized and accurately executed performance. Subtle timing and a vivid use of facial expression mark Miss Owen as a talented and vital performaner.

Terry Noack, Karen Proffitt, Tom Martin

"Hill Heritage Suite" is a brilliant composition that suffered in performance because of an unresponsive orchestra and unimaginative choreography. With some tightening of the original score and greater emphasis placed on character delineation in the solo spots, "Hill Heritage Suite" has the potential to fulfill its creator's original intention - to musically capture the lives and minds of a mountain people. Let us hope that that accomplishment may yet be realized.

Up To Date Report of MC Energy and Utility Costs

Because of the continuing escalation of prices for oil, natural gas, electricity, water and sewer these utilities are taking a significantly larger slice out of our operating budget. An evaluation of each BTU of energy and each gallon of water we use is necessary NOW if we are to avoid waste and unnecessary luxury.

On Dec. 13, 1974 we were informed of our natural gas curtailment, and the resulting shift to oil drastically increased our heating costs. Even with our extended closing during the Christmas holidays our daily heating costs for Dec., Jan. and Feb. were about $31,000.00 - almost double the cost last year for this period. In Feb. 1975 the average daily heating cost was $500.00 - almost three times the average last year. These costs are in spite of reduced hours at the steam plant and operation on much lower pressure than normal. (The average daily temperature was approximately 4 degrees lower this year than last.)

On March 7, 1975 we were allowed to go back to natural gas at the steam plant and were told we would get 30% of the gas we used last year between Apr. 1 and Oct. 31. However, we are now informed we are to get only 14% of this gas and on April 12 were requested to switch to oil for an indefinite period. Since the heating season is about over for this term our continued use of oil will be to supply hot water for all buildings and steam for the kitchen.

The use of oil as an energy source means that each gallon of hot water will cost us three times as much as last year and conservation can effect substantial savings. Scheduling the minimum hours the steam plant must run is now in progress. It will help greatly to stretch our hot water supplies if the heaviest use can be made during the daytime hours between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

In addition to the higher cost of heating water, we now have a greatly increased cost in disposing of it. Formerly, our sewer charges were 70% of our water bill. They are now 82¢ per 1,000 gallons regardless of consumption with the result that sewer fees are now 2½ times more than they were last year. (Sewer costs for March 1975 were almost $1,000.00.)

By being more energy conscious the students, faculty and staff can save many wasted dollars. Because of past efforts we used almost 24% less electricity in Dec. 1974, Jan. and Feb. of this year compared to the same months a year ago. However, we paid almost 9% more than last year for this reduced amount of electricity.

Our water consumption was reduced by 15½%, however cost was up 21% for the same periods as above.

The long range picture for all energy and utility costs indicates an upward trend. Our total energy and utility costs for next year are estimated to be $161,000. It is in our mutual interest to avoid waste and hold these costs to a minimum. The students and faculty of Maryville College have already proven they can save wasted hot water, kilowatts of electricity and BTU's of gas and oil. Your cooperation and your continued suggestions to get the most for our utility dollar are appreciated.

Hugh Crawford, Jr.
Business Mgr.

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Kit Williamson, Fred Strohl, Millie Brewer, Howard Welsh; Layout - Gwen Guba; Photography - Joe Showalter; Rabbit Blues - Charlie Blair; Business Manager - Charlie Thompson; Distribution - R. C. Stevens; Advisor - Dr. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Thirteen Elected to Alpha Gamma Sigma

This year, thirteen students were elected to become members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma Scholarship Honor Society at Maryville College. Several other students were eligible, but only 10% of the graduating class can be chosen. There is also one member chosen from the junior class. The requirement which permits eligibility is a 3.33 grade point average.

The honor students are: Elizabeth J. Widner, Alcoa; Sheila M. Moore, Maryville (Biology); Arthur T. Fowler, Knoxville (Chemistry); Floyd V. Bernhardt, Indianapolis, Ind. (HPER); Debbra L. Chai, Columbus, Ga. (Psychology); Pamela J. Gnagy, Rochester, N. Y.; Melanie Kohn, Columbia, S. C.; Maryann P. O'Neil, Boca Raton, Fla.; (Psychology); Anna Ruth Prochazka, Franklin, Ill.; Sue E. Sanders, Decatur, Ala. (English); John M. Sortino, Pompano Beach, Fla.; Jerry Spicer, Englewood, Ohio (History); and Beth A. Weatherup, Miami, Fla. (Indiv.).

Elizabeth Widner is the outstanding junior.

On the April 4, meeting, Dean Carolyn Blair was elected to be an associate member. The faculty members must have approval from at least ninety percent of the Society members, although Dean Blair received unanimous approval.

The recognition ceremony for the new members will take place on April 23, in Wilson Chapel. Dr. Jack Durant, who is the director of graduate studies in English at North Carolina State University, will be the guest speaker. Dr. Durant graduated from MC in 1953.

This organization was founded in 1934, and is still given much attention at Maryville College.

NOTE: The members listed above whose majors are not given were inducted on February 24, 1975.

Young Serves On Science Panel

Dr. David Young, Director of the Futuristics Project at Maryville College, was a member of a special panel at the spring meeting of the American Chemical Society in Philadelphia last week. Topic of the meeting was "Should Chemical Education Become Involved in the Ethical and Moral Implications of Modern Science?" Two other panel members have been recipients of national awards in chemical education.

Dr. Young also made two presentations to science students at Doyle High School last week on "Electrical Stimulation of the Brain" as Visiting Scientist sponsored by the Tennessee Academy of Science.

SPORTS

Women's Tennis Scores Victory

The Women's Tennis Club is trying to handle it's win graciously over Carson-Newman on Tuesday, April 8. The match score was 5-4, the win coming from the doubles teams of Bauer & Harrawood (6-3, 6-2) and Munn & Overton (6-2, 6-1). Singles were won by Harrawood (/-4, 6—3), Munn (6-2, 8-6) and Overton (7-5, 6-2).

The team is really proud of the win, but realizes that more practice is needed to remain victorious when they host Carson-Newman Thursday, April 17th, at 3 p.m.

Tennis

Tennessee Wesleyan University defeated the Maryville College "Fighting" Scots tennis team 9-0 Tuesday afternoon in a match played at Athens, Tennessee. TWC swept all six singles sets and the three doubles matches. Results in the Singles included Roberto Parsterini over Craig Larsen, 6-2 and 6-1; Pedro Parario over Sutton Brown, 6-3 and 7-6; Bob Holtgrove over Mike Webster, 4-6, 6-2, and 6-4; Oli Israil over Joe Rigell, 6-0 and 6-0; Norman Cole over Buddy Bernhardt, 6-1 and 6-1; and David Mayers over George Reiglesberger, 6-2 and 7-5. In Doubles competition, Parsterini and Parario defeated Larsen and Brown, 7-5 and 6-3; Holtgrove-Israil over Webster-Bernhardt, 6-0 and 6-2; and Cole-Mayers over Rigell-Reiglesberger, 6-2 and 6-4.

Baseball

Dave Callahan pitched four innings of effective relief Monday afternoon in helping the "Fighting" Scots to a 10-7 nightcap victory over the Bryan College Lions in a doubleheader played at Dayton, Tennessee. In the first game, the Lions prevailed for a 2-0 win. In the only other contest Maryville had last week, the Scots dropped a 13-6 decision to the Tennessee Volunteers at Knoxville. Following Monday's doubleheader, the Scots' record stood at 2-3.

Phillips

continued from page 1

pertinent to campus life. It was shown at the last ACC meeting that one of our main problems is communication. For example, when the discussion of the farm came up, the Administration thought it had clearly explained the eminent sale of the farm, but many of the students present hadn't understood the full implications. Perhaps problems of this sort can be rectified by holding Town Hall meetings pertaining to specific issues so that students opinions and perhaps helpful suggestions could be heard. Another suggestion would be for ACC members to attend dorm meetings to hear any opinions or suggestions that are discussed at these meetings.

Do you forsee any changes in the structure of the ACC or can you work with the present structure effectively?

The only problem that I have concerning the structure of the ACC is that of understanding the term Consensus. Previously, I had thought that it meant agreement by all or at least a lack of any major complaint. Many times I sit in ACC meetings and don't realize that a consensus has been reached. Before I know it, the discussion is dropped. This doesn't necessar ily mean it has to be changed, but it should be clarified to the point of a working defintion.

Finally, did you personally seek this job, and are you willing to give it the attention it deserves?

Yes, I desired to be on the Council, and am pleased that I was voted as co-chairperson. I am hoping that as co-chairperson, I will be able to voice the concerns of the students as well as help Dr. Copeland coordinate the agenda and promote the efficiency of the entire council.

Wanted: New Editor

Applications for the editorship of the Maryville College Yearbook, The Chilhowean will be accepted now through April 28. They should be turned in to Mr. Blair Beasley, Box 2814, or to Mrs. Clyde Ussery in the Communications Office.

WSI Course To Be Held

There will be a retraining course held for all those who hold a current Water Safety Instructor's Certificate. This course will start on Monday, April 28 and run for four consecutive Monday nights, May 5, May 12, and May 19 from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. in the pool. Every class must be attended for re-certification. All Water Safety Instructors will have until December 31, 1976 for retraining, but it would be advisable for those who are able to take it now.

EASY CURB MARKET
8 - 11 MARKET
Open 7 Days A Week
8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
Open All Holidays
BEVERAGE OF ALL TYPES
PICNIC SUPPLIES
715 EAST BROADWAY
MARYVILLE

SCHLITZ
10-Oz. 6 Pack $1.47
Case $5.75

SCHLITZ
"Tall Boy" (24-oz.) 59¢ EACH
Case $7.20

THE
FLAVOR TREE
DELICATESSEN

For Your Favorite Deli
Sandwiches - Hot or Cold

Philadelphia - Style Hoagies
Our Specialty -
Imported & Domestic Cheeses

Call Ahead - 983-7914
Church Ave. Professional Building
404 Church
Just Past Gilbert's

Alex Valadez came into the Army with a high school education. He may go out with a Ph.D.

Last year, over 90,000 young men and women earned college credits while serving in the Army. They did it on Army time. With the Army paying 75% of their tuition costs.

One of the 90,000 was Specialist 5 Alex Valadez of Chattanooga, Tenn. Through various Army programs Alex managed to earn a B.S. degree in just two and one-half years.

Today, he's six hours short of his Master's. After that, he plans to go for his Ph.D.

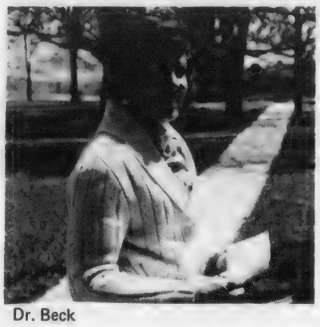
Not everyone who joins the Army ends up with a doctorate. But if they want one, the Army will help them get it.

Contact your local Army Recruiter and ask about Project Ahead.

Join the people who've joined the Army.

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 60 No. 21 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 25, 1975



Beck Receives Grant

Dr. Charlotte Beck, assistant professor of English at Maryville College, has received a National Endowment for the Humanities grant for summer study at the University of California, Berkeley.

The purpose of the summer seminar program is to provide college teachers with opportunities to work with distinguished scholars in their fields at major universities.

The topic for the seminar Dr. Beck will attend is "Self, Epic, and the Romantic and Victorian Imagination." It will be directed by Dr. U. C. Knoepflmacher of the Berkeley English Department.

In addition to the work of the seminar, Dr. Beck will be free to pursue a study of her own choosing, either research or a program of intensive reading.

Dr. Beck

Dr. Beck, who has been at Maryville since 1966, holds the B. Mus., M. A., and Ph. D. degrees from the University of Tennessee.

Fred Hope Auction Nets $308

Another one of Tom Taylor's many talents came out Saturday night, April 19, as he auctioned off 49 items from pies and cakes to a bicycle to a sketch of tennis shoes. Auctioneer Taylor was so good at drawing bids from the crowd of over 100 that he actually got a bid of 75¢ from Mike Dykes' dog on an Uncle Sam Morse Code Key Kit!

The $308 raised in this auction will go to support selfdevelopment projects in the drought area of the Sahel desert in Africa.

The bidding was spirited and in some cases nickel, dime and quarter raises carried an item from an opening bid of 50¢ to a sale at 8-10 dollars. Examples of successful bids at the $6 level were as follows: (with person winning the bid in parentheses) $6 for 5 arp lessons by Danny Whiteside (Linda Savage), $6 for a cherry pie baked by Pam Rhodes (Charlotte Orange), $6 for 1 days odd jobs by Grant Bartelt (J. W. Nichols), $5.50 for canoeing lessons for 2 by Bernie McGraw (Gean Hyden), $6.50 for breakfast in bed served by Ron Shadduck and Frank Oglesby (Martha Browne) and $6 for 4 loaves of homemade wheat bread by Sue Bollfrahs (Tom Peters).

Other memorable biddings were $10 for an apple pie baked by Sweet Young (Meredith Leach), $9 for a German chocolate cake made by Dottie Beasley (Bob Newby) and $21.25 for an African Daishiki donated by Donald Wyatt (Ellen Bercovitz).

Entertainment was provided by the duo of Ken Atchley and Bob Sturge doing two new songs "Maryville Woman" and "You Heartless Maryville Woman You Old Scottie Dog." They also gave a repeat performance of their famous "Truckers Lament." Copies of the words were auctioned off respectively for $2, $3.60 and $8.25. (One was the original written on a Saga napkin!)

The World Concern Committee was the sponsor of the auction and special thanks go to Virginia Turrentine and Neva Parker for their coordination efforts. Also special thanks to David Littlefield, who even though not a member of the committee, did much to help make the evening a success.

See ya next year at an even bigger Fred Hope Auction!

The highest bidding of the evening was on a 10-speed bicycle donated by Brick Brahams. Faculty son David Young, Jr. was the proud winner at $65. Toward the end of the auction Ricky Smith donated a fold-up bike which was to be put up for bids during the week.

MC Board Adopts Balanced Budget

The Maryville College Board of Directors adopted a balanced budget of $3,230,392 for the 1975-76 fiscal year at the regular spring meeting Thursday and Friday.

President Joseph J. Copeland emphasized that the balanced budget is dependent upon raising $400,000 in current gifts, a $150,000 increase over recent years.

A $150 tuition increase will be used for increases in faculty and staff salaries, student aid and for contingent expenses.

The board recodified and updated its by-laws and set up a new committee structure. New committees are: executive, budget, investment, fund raising, public relations, nominating, academic policy, long range planning, and student affairs. Members will be assigned to committees within the next month.

The priority objective of the student affairs committee will be to study the standards of the campus community and report findings to the board.

Board chairman Dr. Dan McGill said the action is being taken in response to deep concern of board members regarding present standards and their implementation. He said concern also had been expressed to the board by student members of the All-College Council.

The board approved a new business administration major to become effective in the 1975-76 academic year.

It was decided that Dr. David P. Young will continue next year as faculty coordinator of religious life. Dr. Young has filled that position since the death of college chaplain Dr. Albert Cropp last fall.

After receiving a report resulting from faculty involvement in faculty evaluation, the board granted promotions from instructor to assistant professor to: Thelma Bianco, art; Claude Y. Stewart, religion and philosophy; Marja Hanson, French.

A second year leave of absence was granted to Robert John Bonham in order for him to complete his doctorate in fine arts at Ohio State University.

Faculty status was granted Dr. Robert J. Naylor, assistant professor of chemistry, and Charles Hurt, instructor of music.

The board also approved recommendations for honorary degrees, alumni citations, and 50-year certificates for the 62 living members of the class of 1925.

One session was spent with representatives of the All-College Council discussing the total life of the college.

Board members and their wives were special guests at a dinner meeting hosted by President and Mrs. Copeland. They were entertained with after-dinner music by students demonstrating their own creativity. Students participating were: Melanie Kohn, Columbia, S. C.; Randy Hunter, Birmingham; Cindy Murane, Hawaii; Peggy Leatherwood, Mt. Airy, Md.; Robert Sturge, Syracuse, N. Y.; and Kenneth Atchley, Lebanon, Tenn.

African Masks Displayed

If you've been in the library lately, you could not have missed the odd and varied shapes of African art now on display. No matter what your preference is in art, it is all there, from shapes that look like they popped out of Picasso's head to native women bearing water jugs.

The Europeans did not learn of African Negro sculpture until the 15th century, but it was given little attention until it was rediscovered at the beginning of the 20th century. Only a couple of years after this, such painters as Picasso and Vlaminck began to think about this art more seriously and commenced to collect the sculpture. Thus, African art brought a new and fresh inspiration.

Dr. Wyatt

In Gardner's 4th edition of Art Through the Ages, it is stated that African art comes primarily from the central part of the continent. It also states that the oldest datable African cultures have thus far been found in Nigeria, where specific styles of court art were encouraged. Small terra-cotta (a type of waterproof clay) heads have been found near the town of Nok in a geological level estimated to be more than 2000 years old. These small pieces are objects for study which should tell the 20th century man a great deal of the sculpture of Africa and its culture.

The art was studied mainly by anthropologists hoping to understand the primitive technology before 1920. Today, the African art is looked upon as a design of high excellence and is finally studied on its own merits.

So if you're planning an art major and still haven't been able to find a style that says YOU, maybe you should develope an interest in the African art.

Interim Data Needed

ATTENTION! S'il vous plait. Return your Indication of Preference form to Box 2813 as soon as possible, (deadline May 1). You will help in the planning of our 1975 INTERIM by your suggestions and response.

Girlie Flicks At MC

The second film in a three part film series entitled "Understanding the Women in Your Life" will be presented Monday, April 28. The film, "Growing up Female", will be shown at 4:00 p.m. and again at 7:00 p.m. in the Proffitt Dining Room in Pearsons Hall. A discussion with refreshments will follow the 7:00 o'clock showing. Admission is free, and everyone is invited.

The last film, "Joyce at 34" will be shown Monday, May 5. The film series is jointly sponsored by the Library, the Freshmen Women's Honor Society, and the Career Planning and Placement Office.

mc forum

Students Need More Responsible Freedom

The Board of Directors is finally taking positive action to comprehend the standards of conduct on the Maryville campus. After such confusion over the enforcement of our present standards has existed for so long, the need has finally been realized to re-appraise those standards and possibly change them.

It is obvious to almost everyone on campus that our rules are broken by a great number of our community members all the time. It is impossible to expect our staff members to exercise full authority over this because there are simply too many people breaking the rules for them to be enforced. The job of Resident Assistant and Head Resident has become not so much that of a policeman as deciding the degree of abuse that requires some action.

This is what these positions should be. The R. A.'s and Head Residents should be there in an advisory capacity rather than one in which they must enforce someone else's moral standards. Since these people are chosen because of their judgement capabilities, they should be allowed to put them to use to interpret the standards of conduct as they see fit. Rather than telling a student they can't have a beer or friend of the opposite sex in their room, the resident advisors should be able to keep the situation within reason.

They have been doing this for years, but it should be an open policy rather than a clandestine operation, just as the behavior of students should be. Only then will students learn self-discipline instead of deception.

David Haimbach

Dear Andy

Dear Andy,

I would like to applaud the fine work of the social committee. A star on your foreheads! Why, I went roller skating the other night and had such a kinky, spiffy time. I haven't done anything like that since I was in high school. Gosh! What fun! Me and Susie (that's my date) got on the end of a whippette and were just spun round n' round n' round until, I was about to upchuck! (Well actually I wouldn't have done it right there on the rink, I mean how could I face everyone afterwards?) It reminds me of the time I was in high school n' me n' Jinny n' the gang were drinking on the hill n' Jinny drank too much! Well I had on some white levis' n' Jinny turned all green n'...uh...oh never mind.

Anyways, I'd just like to say the social committee is doing a wonderful job, throwing far-out dances and things. It's just like when I was in high school.

Marc Ward

Andy: Some people have all the fun.

Dear Andy,

I bet you've been wondering what happens to a campus dog when it dies.

Saga

Andy: You wouldn't.

Dear Andy,

It's getting near budget time once again. I think that the college should increase the money alloted to the football team. After all, the team spreads the name of MC and increases enrollment.

Oleo

Andy: You have a point...but its on your head.

Dear Andy,

When Admissions reviews this year's applicants I hope they overlook all West Virginians.

The English Department

Andy: Varmints.

Andy Hall

Letters to the Echo

To the Editors:

There is a professor in the science department who just gave out the grades for his phase of a mini-course in Science Fundamentals. Of forty students, thirty-six failed. No one received an "A".

This is ridiculous. Obviously there was something wrong with his teaching if practically nobody in his class learned anything. Either that, or the academic standard at Maryville is at an all-time low. This problem should be looked into before more people have to suffer such poor instruction.

Name Withheld by Request

Maureen Meade

ACC Meeting

The ACC will be setting a large portion of time on its April 30 agenda to discuss Dormitory Life and Conditions. Interested and concerned students are encouraged to attend and voice their opinions. The meeting will be held in 304 Anderson at 2:30 p.m.

Arts Program At MC Conference

"An Evening with the Arts" will be a featured part of the second regional Alliance for Arts Education Conference April 25-26 at Maryville College.

The Maryville College Playhouse will present "Schubert's Last Serenade" directed by Thomas Jones.

"The Hill Heritage Suite, Part 2 (The Necklace," composed by Maryville College music professor Lee Kull, will be danced by the Maryville Alcoa Civic Ballet. It was choreographed by Cheryl Van Metre who is also artistic director for the ballet.

Dr. Harry Harter, chairman of the Fine Arts Department, will direct the Maryville College Chorus in the presentation of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dream Coat."

Maryville College pianist Sallie Schoen also will perform.

The community is cordially invited to attend the program which will be at 7:15 p.m. in the Theatre. There is no admission charge.

Review

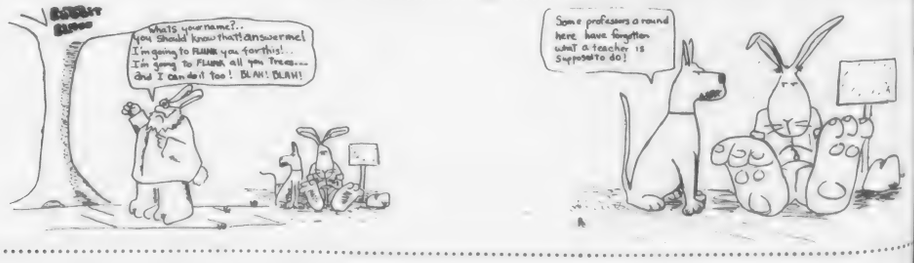
Go Feel A Spider

by Marc Ward

Currently in the gallery of the Fine Arts Center is Maureen Meade's Senior Art Show. It is comprised of pri drawings, paintings, sculpture, and mixed media pieces. Maureen's prin and drawings show her ease at handling line and composition. Several of her figure drawings have excellent contour and definition with a minimum of line. Her ability to be comfortable with her materials and to u them efficiently give her work a feeling of both spontaneity and control Her sculpture, comprised mostly of busts, reflects this same quality in te ture and in the character that comes through from the clay to the viewer. A personal favorite of mine is a sma bust of a young man with a pencil b hind his ear. He resembles that student teacher that everyone had at o time during high school.

The main part of Maureen's show a her particular individual interest is i mixed media. Using canvas and pain as a basis for an idea she has added such things as, velvet, jewelry, plaste of paris, children's toys, rocks, and popcorn. By doing this she has not only broken the picture plane but h extended it into the realm of the vie er and added an extra dimension of visual enjoyment. Some of her multi media works are a large furry spider a fortune teller with arms extending out from the canvas, a butterfly, and a circus scene with a trained dog jum ing through a hoop out into the gallery.

Creativity can easily be lost if it cannot be carried out with a certain spo taneity and technical ability. It is refreshing to see an artist try somethin new and at the same time not fall in to the production of faddish junk th has passed for art and assaulted the American public for the last fifteen years. This is a small campus and the gallery in the Fine Arts center is not that far out of the way. Go over som day afterlunch, in the next week and a half and feel a spider.



Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Kit Williamson, Fred Strohl, Millie Brewer, Howard Welsh; Layout - Gwen Guba; Photography - Joe Showalter; Rabbit Blues - Charlie Blair; Business Manager - Charlie Thompson; Distribution - R. C. Stevens; Advisor - Dr. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

MC To Offer Graduate Courses

Maryville College is offering two courses for graduate credit during the summer term through arrangements with Mankato State College, Mankato, Minnesota.

The courses, Psycho-Social Aspects of Sports and Perceptual-Motor Development, will carry three quarter hours credit and may be transferred into a graduate program other than Mankato. Classes will meet Monday through Friday July 21-August 1.

Psycho-Social Aspects of Sports will include sport psychology and sport sociology. Perceptual-Motor Development will cover the developing child, relationship of cognitive and motor development, perceptual-motor evaluation, programs and practical application.

Director of Summer School Arthur Bushing said, "A lot of interest has been expressed by local teachers in a course on perceptual-motor development. We are pleased to be able to provide the opportunity for them to take such a course locally for graduate credit."

Both courses will be taught by Dr. Jack H. Llewellyn, Director, Physical Education Graduate Program at Mankato.

Dr. Llewellyn, a Knoxville native and Maryville graduate, holds the M. A. and Ed. S. from Eastern Kentucky University and the Ph. D. from Florida State University.

He is co-editor of the State Physical Education Journal in Minnesota and has written a number of articles based on his extensive research. He has two books under contract, one to be completed in September and one in January. He is co-authoring a third book, "Preschool and Elementary Physical Education: A Perceptual Motor Emphasis" to be published by Holt, Rinehart, and Winston.

Further information about the graduate courses can be obtained by contacting Arthur S. Bushing, Director of Summer School, at 982-6412.

Look At This

Attention all Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors Interested in Education at any level:

There will be a meeting on Monday, April 28 at 10:30 a.m. at the theater. The purpose of this meeting will be to discuss the new screening procedure for admission to and retention in the Teacher Education program. All forms necessary for this process will be distributed and explained. It is absolutely necessary to attend this meeting if you plan to become certified to teach in any subject, at any level, upon graduation from Maryville College.

Wanted: New Editor

Applications for the editorship of the Maryville College Yearbook, The Chilhowean will be accepted now through April 28. They should be turned in to Mr. Blair Beasley, Box 2814, or to Mrs. Clyde Ussery in the Communications Office.

Vespers

The Film, "Buddhism, Man and Nature" will be shown at vespers Sunday, April 27 at 7:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. Everyone is invited.

Is this your future?

Career Day Planned

"What can I do with a major in _____?" Fill in the blank with any one of a number of fields, and you have one of the most frequently asked questions on campus. This is a question that "Career Day" will try to answer.

Through the use of panel presentations and group discussion, departments will be presenting career alternatives available to the liberal arts graduate. Panel members will be discussing how they got involved in specific careers as well as current career opportunities within their fields.

Take this opportunity to explore career alternatives within your field. The locations for specific programs are as follows:

Wednesday, April 30
9:20-11:00

Education (elementary and secondary) -- Room 216, Thaw Hall

Fine Arts-
Music ---------- Music Hall
Art ---------- Fine Arts Lounge

Health and PE
---------- Room 162A, Health and PE Bldg.

Humanities ---- Room 206, Anderson

Social Sciences
---------- Room 201, Thaw Hall

Physical Sciences
---------- Room 113, Sutton Science Center

Social Sciences
---------- Room 201, Thaw Hall

CIV credit will be given for participation.

Sortino, Fowler Receive Awards

The East Tennessee Section of the American Chemical Society has awarded John Sortino and Arthur Fowler two of the 1975 outstanding Senior Chemistry Awards. The awards include a one year paid membership in the American Chemical Society and a one year subscription to any Journal of the Society, exclusive of Chemical Abstracts.

Formal presentation of the Awards will be made at the May 13 meeting of the East Tennessee Section at Buehler Hall, University of Tennessee.

Congratulations to these outstanding seniors.

SPORTS

Baseball

Coach Boydson Baird's MC Baseball team played four games against Lincoln Memorial University of Harrogate, Tennessee last week as they won three and lost one. The Scots swept a doubleheader from the Railsplitters last Wednesday at Maryville, 5-4 and 6-2; before dividing a twinbill at Harrogate on Monday as they won the first game, 6-2, before dropping the nightcap, 6-5. The Scots were scheduled to play Bristol Commercial College of Bristol, Virginia here on Saturday for a doubleheader, but that was rained out. Through Monday, the Maryville season record stood at 5-4.

Last Wednesday's first victory over LMU saw the Scots come from behind to win, although it took eight innings to get the job accomplished. After tying the score in the bottom of the seventh inning with two runs, MC's Vince Fucci singled home "Trip" Zeigler for the winning run. Kevin McKinstry went all the way on the pitcher's mound for the Scots.

In the second game, Danny Thomas pitched Maryville to victory as he was helped by two rbi's by Steve Wright and two hits by Paul Viggiano. In addition, Viggiano stole four bases in the winning effort.

Monday's first game at Harrogate saw Dave Spradlin pitch all the way as he was helped by Joe Moffett and Bobby Fitzgerald who both had two hits apiece. The Scots had a rougher going in the second game as they fell behind and had to play catchup, only to fall short. Buddy McDonald hit his first homerun of the season in the second inning which was only Maryville's second of the season.

Yesterday afternoon, the Scots were scheduled to host Tusculum for two games. Today at 2:00, Tennessee Tech will visit for a doubleheader, while the Scots go to Appalachia, Virginia tomorrow afternoon for a twinbill with Clinch Valley College. Three doubleheaders next week see the Scots in Cookville, Tennessee Monday vs. Tennessee Tech, home on Tuesday with Milligan, and home again on Thursday when the Scots host Bryan.

Tennis

The Maryville College Tennis team lost its two matches last week as they bowed to Emory and Henry College on Friday, 9-0, and were defeated by Centre College on Tuesday, 7-2.

The Scots were unable to win a set against Emory and Henry as Rick Rhuddy downed Craig Larsen, 6-0 and 6-3, to start the day. Other results included Tom Glenn over Sutton Brown, 6-1 and 6-1; Bill Maxey over Mike Webster, 6-4 and 6-1; Robbie Hodder over Joe Rigell, 6-0 and 6-0; Bob Anderson over George Reigelsperger, 6-0 and 6-0; and Vic Barnett over Joan Walters, 6-1 and 6-1; to round out the Singles competition.

In the Doubles events, Emory and Henry also swept as Rhuddy-Glenn beat Larsen-Brown, 6-3 and 6-4; Maxey-McLarin defeated Layman-Webster, 6-0 and 6-2; and Barrett-Prosser downed Rigell-Reigelsperger, 6-0 and 6-1.

Against Centre College, the Scots showed improvement. Craig Larsen and Buddy Bernhardt won in Singles as Larsen downed Mark Lucas, 6-3 and 6-2; while Bernhardt handled Rocky Cooper, 7-6 and 6-1. Other Singles winners for the Colonels were Steve Richardson over Brown, 6-0 and 6-3; Gary Colton over Webster, 7-5 and 6-4; Bob Hamilton over Rigell, 6-3 and 6-1; and Peter Wunsch over Reigelsperger, 6-3 and 6-0.

Centre swept the Doubles as Lucas-Richardson beat Larsen-Brown, 7-5 and 6-3; Colton-Hamilton downed Webster-Bernhardt, 6-4 and 6-2; and Petterson-Wunsch beat Rigell-Reigelsperger, 6-1 and 6-3.

Craig Larsen

Arts Education Meet

A number of local persons will discuss and portray with graphic guidelines the role which aesthetic education, media, music, movement, creative drama, and visual literacy can play in education April 25-26 at Maryville College. The occasion is the Second Regional Conference Alliance for Arts Education.

David Styles and June Parker of Maryville will discuss the highly successful video experiences with Alcoa and Maryville elementary school children.

The use of music and folk dancing as successful therapeutic approaches with exceptional children will be presented by Martha McLean, music therapist at East Tennessee Psychiatric Hospital.

The potential of the electronic synthesizer in music will be explored by Danny Whiteside, a Maryville College music composition major. The Orff method will be presented by Whiteside and Sandy Murphy, music camp director and member of the Knox County Chapter of American Guild of Organists.

Allan Hoke, Doyle High School choral conductor, will discuss the Kodaly method.

Knox County creative drama specialist Elizabeth Rike will present her case for an integrated curriculum with creative drama as its core.

Tom Cook, University of Tennessee, will show techniques for adapting plays to the classroom as well as to the stage.

Others participating will be: Bernard Rosenblatt, Aesthetic Programs, Central Midwestern Regional Education Laboratory; Geva Alder, free lance video artist, Nashville; Pansy Jo Smelzer, Metro Nashville schools; Roy Money, Vanderbilt University Craft Center; Bill Alder, electronics engineer and consultant, Nashville; Ted Carpenter, Broadside TV, Johnson City; David Hunsinger and Shirley Holt, East Tennessee teachers; and Dr. Lon Nuell, southeastern regional vice-president, Visual Literacy Association.

The conference is open at no cost to educators, parents, artists or other individuals interested in the arts as effective teaching tools in the lives of students and their families.

Teachers interested in receiving continuing education credit may register for a $10 fee at the conference.

Further information is available by contacting Beasley Overbey, project coordinator, State Department of Education, Division of Field Services and Resources, Building 309, 11th Avenue, Smyrna, Tennessee 37167.

Tri Beta Attends Biologist Conference

During this school year, Beta Beta Beta Honor Society has initiated several fund-raising service projects. A car wash and book exchange provided the necessary funds that made the utilization of our campus greenhouse possible. In addition to making the initial investment of plants, Beta Beta Beta has maintained their care and has offered subsequent sales.

As a result of these activities Beta Beta Beta was able to attend the Southeastern Conference of Biologists at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va. on April 17-18. Those members attending were: Dr. Shields, Dr. Ramger, Warren Banner, Billy Bone, Dee Ann Dunwoody, Dorothy Hamory, Helene Hanchett, Paul Kirk, John Law, Mclinda Lucas, Sheila Moore, John Price, and Harry and Marsha Riley.

In addition to Beta Beta Beta seminars, paper sessions were representative of the Southeastern Botanical society, the Southern Appalachian Botanical Club, and the Southeastern Society of Parasitologist. Representing Maryville College at the Beta Beta Beta Research Report Session were Melinda Lucas on "Cross-Resistance and Infectious Drug Resistance of Four Species of Bacteria to Ampicillin, Cephalexin, Erthromycin, and Tetracycline", and John Price on "The Inhibitory Effects of Safrole." Many distinguished speakers were heard, and the diversity of subject matter provided that scholarly stimulation which is exemplary of Tri-Beta's intent.

Clapp To Be Keynoter

Dr. Beecher Clapp, director of instruction for Knox County Schools, will give the keynote address Friday for the second regional Alliance for Arts Education Conference at Maryville College.

Dr. Clapp will explore on the conference theme, "The Arts: A Natural Way to Learn." The conference will focus on specific ways the arts can be used to improve the quality of teaching and learning of academic subjects.

Features of the conference will include workshops, demonstrations, displays, audio-visual programs, lectures, and presentations by educators from Tennessee as well as out of state. Other events will include music, film, dance, and dramatic offerings.

Films from the collection of the Sinking Creek Film Celebration will be shown. Mary Jane Coleman of Greenville, founder and chairman of the sixth national independent film celebration at Vanderbilt University in June, will serve as an arts resource person. Mrs. Coleman, a former member of the Tennessee Arts Commission, is current chairman of the TAC film advisory panel.

Principals, supervisors, teachers, parents, or other individuals interested in the arts in education may register April 25-26 at no cost. Teachers interested in receiving a continuing education unit may register for credit for a $10 fee.

EASY CURB MARKET

8 - 11 MARKET

Open 7 Days A Week

8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.

Open All Holidays

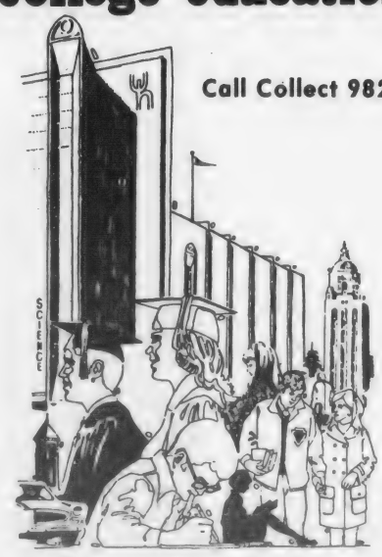
BEVERAGE OF ALL TYPES

PICNIC SUPPLIES

715 EAST BROADWAY
MARYVILLE

SCHLITZ

10-Oz. 6 Pack $1.47



Case $5.75

SCHLITZ

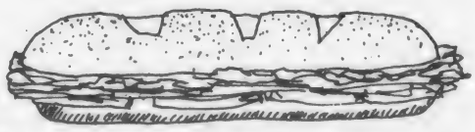
"Tall Boy" (24-oz.) 59c EACH

Case $7.20

Let the Army help with your college education

Call Collect 982-5515

See your Army Recruiter



the flavor tree

404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

For your favorite deli. sandwich — hot or cold — (From $1.00)

* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty

* Imported & domestic cheese

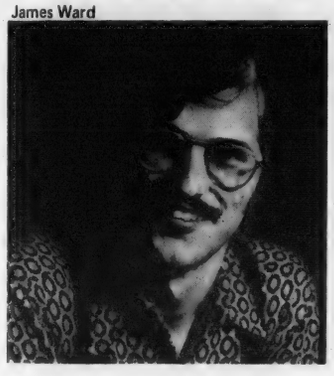
delicatessen

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 60 No. 22 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 2, 1975

James Ward Is Coming



by Kathy Bushing

If you like jazz, black soul, good professional performers, or just a good time, then you've got a treat to look forward to because James Ward is coming to our campus on Thursday, May 8, to give a free concert.

Ward is a cum laude graduate of Covenant College in Lookout Mountain, Tennessee where he received a B. A. degree in music in 1972. He is presently serving as a campus intern for Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, but Mr. Ward has been increasingly familiar to I-V students in the south for the last couple of years through his concerts.

Calling himself an, "intinerant musician in residence," with relative freedom to book his own concerts and tours, Ward says, "with Inter-Varsity I have had considerable exposure to campuses where there are many who do not know the message of hope. We see my songs as a catalyst for further conversations with non-Christians as well as a source of sheer enjoyment and worship for believers."

James Ward

Ward now sees his career is a "promotional phase." Work requests are increasing and audiences are getting larger. His growing popularity has led him to re-evaluate his whole style of performance.

"In my recent concerts, I have tried to stress that music is like any other job that takes hard work, and that it fits in to the many gifts in Christ's body," he says. "I have also tried to destroy some of the sensational techniques I feel have contributed to an idolization of performers. This doesn't mean music must be sloppy or unprofessional. I come to do a concert, not a hymn sing."

Many of James Ward's songs have cross-cultural flavor, and as time goes on, his music," has been mellowing into a more complete statement of faith, speaking to as many areas of life as possible with the Christian perspective on all subjects. Audiences of all types respond to this kind of music – Christians and non-believers."

James Ward has been writing his own music since his junior year in college, and he has cut two albums– To the Glory of God and James Ward: Himself. Having heard him several times in concert, I can promise you an evening of excitement, entertainment, and food for thought. But don't just take my word for it, watch for further announcements and come to the FAC music hall on the evening of May 8th and find out for yourself!

One In Ten Colleges Expected To Close Or Merge

Financial pressure will probably cause one out of every ten colleges and universities in the U. S. to merge, consolidate or close down during the next five years, a panel of educational leaders has predicted.

The report, issued by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, noted that higher education may never again experience the type of growth it experienced in the sixties when enrollment doubled.

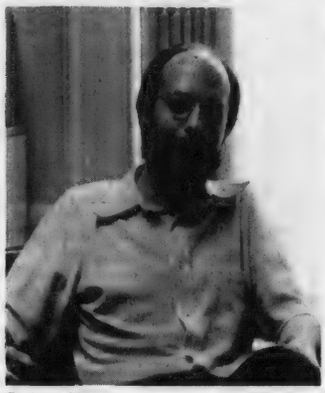
"Higher education is in the throes of one of its greatest periods of transition," the report observed, but cautioned pessimists who feel the change can only be for the worse.

Colleges are now free, the report said, to provide universal access to higher education, to open their doors wider to adults and part-time students and to concentrate on previously neglected teaching areas like preschool and remedial instruction.

"New enrollment projections...affirm and document a widely expected trend of slowing growth to the mid-1980's, declining growth rates in the late 1980's to about 1990, and then gradually increasing enrollment rates," according to the report.

The panel foresaw "a soft landing, not a hard crash," for higher education and called on schools to use the enrollment slowdown as an opportunity to "replace quantitative growth with qualitative improvement."

The Carnegie report also concluded that:



—Financial problems have caused conflict and shifts in campus authorith with many school officials reporting that the quality of their students, faculty and institutional programs has fallen off.

—Colleges and universities can operate well with a much smaller portion of the gross national product than they are used to.

—Because many private colleges face extinction for the first time since the Depression, special efforts should be made to preserve them as an important source of educational diversity.

Vespers

"Worship through Media" will be the title of the vespers program Sunday in the Little Chapel at 7:00 p.m. Colleen O'Shaughnessy will have charge of the program.

Richard Mahler

Richard Mahler Turns In Resignation

Mr. Richard Mahler, Associations Communicator at Maryville College, has decided to resign from the college. He and his family will move to Lynchburg, Virginia, in May, where a great number of his relatives live. Mr. Mahler will be employed at J. P. Bell Publishing Co. The publishing company has been bought by First Colony Life Insurance. Here, he will attempt to set up and manage a design unit.

The main reason for his resignation from MC is that he wants to work in an environment which offers "more flexibility and has a more creative outlook." He believes that in order to have this atmosphere, he must move to a larger community than the MC campus.

One day, Mr. Mahler plans to return to school, probably Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond or The University of Virginia in Charlottesville, to receive his MFA in art. He intends to continue his hobbies, which include building and designing furniture.

He will be leaving a family of friends on our campus, and he says he will always have many fond memories of the College. We wish the Mahlers much success and the best of luck always.

Apply For Financial Aid Now

Students need to remember that no financial aid received this year will be continued automatically for the next year. This applies to work assignments, loans, and all scholarships and grants. If a student applied for some form of aid for 1974-75 and did not receive it, a new application must be made in order to be considered for 1975-76. If you have not made application and wish to do so, see the Director of Financial Aid as soon as possible.

College Makes Personnel Cutbacks

In an attempt to implement the $3,-230,392 balanced budget adopted by the Board of Directors, the offices of Dean of Men and Alumni Relations will be eliminated next year. These are the first of many changes involving both people and programs that will be necessary to meet the budget the Board adopted, according to President Joseph J. Copeland.

President Copeland stated that "a reduction of administrative staff in many areas will be necessary under the 75-76 budget." Other cutbacks can be expected in the next few weeks involving staff in the offices of Student Affairs, Alumni Affairs, and Maintenance and Operation.

The office of Dean of Men presently occupied by Coach Don Elia, will be combined with the office of Dean of Women. Dean Massey will be in charge of the combined offices. Dr. Copeland stated that there is no longer a need to have separate offices due to the present living arrangements and the effect of co-ed dorms. He felt that the problems faced by both male and female students can be handled by Dean Massey. Whether Coach Elia will remain at Maryville in a coaching capacity is not known at this time.

Bruce Semple, Director of Alumni Affairs, will not be at Maryville next year. Another office will probably take over the functions of that office.

The new budget also calls for cutbacks in departmental budgets. Special attention is being given to the athletic budget. Substantial cutbacks can be expected as the Administration evaluates this area. "Quality education with fewer people is what the budget demands," according to Dr. Copeland. However, he added that there will be no dismissal of faculty members.

President Copeland in an interview with the Echo stated that "we will meet the difficulties of a balanced budget and we will conquer them, and go right on with a strong total program." He added, "this is a mild experience compared to past problems Maryville has faced and conquered."

Plan Ahead For Travel Expense

All students should make plans now for extra expenses to be met at the end of the term.

Each year the Financial Aid Office is called upon to provide loans for last-minute expenses, including those required for travel. This year the Financial Aid Office will be unable to make loans in May except for definite emergencies. Lack of planning is not a valid reason for asking for an emergency loan.

A Dean's Eye View

A CBS newsman, reporting this week the fall of Saigon, said of the corpses strewn along the road, "Yesterday they were alive. Today they are only a sanitation problem." Through television we have witnessed the carnage, the weary faces of refugees, and desperate attempts to escape to other countries.

Many of us are in danger of losing all sensitivity through saturation with pictures of a war that no one ever had a chance of winning, a war that never should have been. Others, becoming ever more conscious through this war of the problems besetting mankind, are challenged to work harder for better answers.

At Maryville College within the last month we have had indications of a growing interest in achieving a more global outlook, recognizing that the major problems confronting us are world problems that only world citizens can hope to solve. Dr. Harry Price, himself a world citizen, has been sharing his vision of what could happen on this campus.

Observing that most international questions are generally analyzed and discussed from the vantage point of individual nations, and the interests of those nations, Dr. Price asks: "Who speaks for man, for the best interests of all humanity?" He is urging us at Maryville to take the deliberate thought and effort necessary to acquire a genuinely global perspective and to become world citizens.

He has presented his proposal to the faculty at a general faculty meeting and to the Instructional Program Committee, and it is beginning to be the focus for informal faculty and student discussions. As yet no one has a concrete plan for launching such a program, but the ideas are beginning to come. The immediate question is to determine what form the program should take and how each discipline can contribute to what must be an interdisciplinary effort.

Much hard thinking and planning is ahead if we are to light even one small candle for international understanding, but Maryville College has a history of world concern. Surely on this campus in 1975 we have the minds and imagination and commitment to pick up Dr. Price's challenge.

Caroline Blair

Interim Data Needed

IMPORTANT! Please don't forget to return your Indication of Preference form to Box 2813 as soon as possible. The deadline is NOW! You will help guarantee your choice will be offered, as well as help the planning of our 1975 INTERIM by your suggestions and response.

Dear Andy

Dear Andy,

Sallie and I just got back from New Orleans where we tried out a little of that "Gitchee-gitchee goo-goo" business, and really, Andy, everything you've said is true!

Da-da,
Victor

Andy; Tickle the ivories, eh, Victor?

Dear Andy,

I really feel guilty. I'm supposed to be working on the Highland Echo, but last week I felt I just needed a break, so I faked a tummy ache. Unfortunately, my act was too convincing, and my room-mate took me to the hospital where my appendix was removed. That wouldn't be so bad; I deserved it, I'm sure. But I'm guilt-ridden because I had such a good time. The doctor was a real cut-up. The guy left me in stitches. I spent the weekend lying on a soft mattress, with gourmet cuisine, beautiful young nurses, and plenty of sympathy. I received magazines, cards, and toys. How do I tell them I was only kidding around?

Hairless

Andy: You've certainly had your slice of bad luck.

Dear Andy,

After being chosen as Senior Counselor for next year, I'm beginning to have my doubts about the system of choosing Senior Counselors. Maybe reputations aren't a basis for judgement of a person's leadership and counseling capabilities, but I would think that a person's actions outside of a Saturday morning interview should be taken into account. Senior counselors are chosen by people who, for the most part, don't really know the candidates. If more students had a chance to voice their opinions, maybe the interviewers would have a better idea of who they're talking to. The present system really doesn't always lend itself to the best choices.

Concerned

Andy: This does sound like a dilemna.

Dear Andy,

I understand your college has a Non-Western Studies course. I feel I am highly qualified to teach this course, should there be an opening. My credentials are good and my reputation is impeccable. Furthermore, I am a Non-Westerner and currently unemployed.

Nguyen Van Thieu

Andy: You've come at a bad time, pal.

Dear Andy,

I'm glad to see the government is shipping in all those South Vietnamese. I was about running out of Pollock jokes.

Tickled Pink

Andy: Your sense of humor is amazing.

Dear Andy,

Walking around campus the other day I was pleased to see a plainclothes cop patrolling the Physical Education Building. It's about time! This is what the college has needed all along! And the real needs are still unfulfilled. We need more plainclothes officers stationed around campus.

Some inconspicuous men in trench coats, string ties, and alpine hats could certainly be an asset to campus law enforcement. The uniformed officers are all right for sneaking up on cars to issue parking tickets, but civilian dress can nab the real offenders. They could track down women in the men's dorms after hours, and bust liquor offenders. Elliot Ness all over again!

We've got rules. People break them. So let's get the punks! Relaxing the rules is only asking for trouble. Student responsibility can only detract from a Christian liberal arts education. If espionage is the only way to catch the offenders, then let's get on it before it's too late.

An Angry Citizen

Andy: Are you any relation to Joe McCarthy?

Dear Andy,

With enrollment on the decline the past few years and the staff lay-offs at hand, has anyone suggested an airlift for the refugees streaming off campus in the spring?

Bewildered

Andy; It's a thought.

Andy Hall

Letters to the Echo

To the Editors:

The past Friday, April twenty-fi Nineteen seventy-five on the Mary ville College campus seemed as un eventful as the blooming perenial woods, but in one area of the cam pus many years of disruption and content finally came to rest with t resignation of Maryville College Co munity Orchestra Director-Compos Lee Kull.

Lee, as he is known to all in the chestra and workers in the entire c munity, came to Maryville College the late sixties as an inspired and e getic young man from an educatio background that could not be easi matched by many other faculty me bers on this campus. His free spirit and constant striving for perfection in the creation of a unique style of musical genius has gone unsurpasse in this community. His contributio to the cultural education of Mary ville College students and city resi dents is indeed a reflection of the h educational standards that have ma Maryville a revered institution for many years. But in the light of the cent Kull resignation, one has had second thoughts about the educatio al priorities that Maryville College tends to purport.

In reviewing the series of events the past few years and in recent months, one need not wonder why resignation occurred. It was inevitable. The constant bickering, backstabbing, and favoritism that has pe meated much recent music depart ment policy in regards to instrume talists has indeed produced an ava anche of dissatisfaction. The recent successes of the orchestra in conjun tion with the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet and the individual success of Lee with his composition "Hill Her tage Suite" have led to some bitter sentment in the "elitist hierarchy" the music department. A resentme that in part would bring any sincere effort to share a prominent spot in the musical commitment of Maryv to the depths of bitter disappoint ment. So, how have these past years of turmoil contributed to Maryville College cultural life? One need only answer this question with another. How can any liberal arts education survive with such intentional quest for domination fostered by ignoranc selfishness, jealousy, and immaturit But it is not only the students that suffer, it is the entire Maryville Col lege Community that must take the brunt of this indignation.

To refer to the genius of Lee Kull again and again is not a tedious task. Intellect expresses itself in many ways. And perhaps Lee Kull is just such an example. For years Maryvi has seen his genius grow, but no lon er. Lee will leave this campus on Ma 30, 1975, to attend the University o Tennessee Law School. This is indee a monument to human diversity. On can only say, what is Maryville's los is U. T.'s gain.

Milton Bus

To the Maryville Community,

We were all deeply moved by Jim Lester's "What's On My Mind" state ment. Certainly Mr. Lester sets a good example for us by his participation i so many facets of our community's activities. The Maryville College Con cert Choir considers it a privilege

continued on page

An Echo Interview

Impressions Of A New Professor

by Shahbaz Ahmed

Dr. Naylor, would you please tell us something about your background and why you decided to come to Maryville?

I did my undergraduate work at Butler University in Indianapolis, Indiana, where I received a B. S. in chemistry. From there I went to Case Institute of Technology in Cleveland, Ohio, which is now called Case Western Reserve University. I did my graduate research in Chemical Physics under Douglas Carlson. Initially, I intended to do research exclusively, but gradually developed interest in teaching. I wanted to teach at a small liberal arts college where I would develop personal acquaintance with students. I wrote letters to various schools, including Maryville College. I received a reply from Dr. Gale Rhodes. At that time I thought Gale Rhodes was a girl, but when I met a bearded young man, I discovered how wrong I was. Anyway, after the departure of Dr. Tabereaux, I was invited to teach here.

What are your present impressions of Maryville College?

I have been here only for about five or six weeks. It's hard to get a real handle of a college community. One of the reasons that I have come here in the first place is that the science faculty here seems rather close-knit. Everyone seems to get along with everyone else and there is no infighting. Believe me, there is a lot of it that goes on—a lot of politics in a lot of schools. People here seem to be pretty open and I have been rather impressed with that.

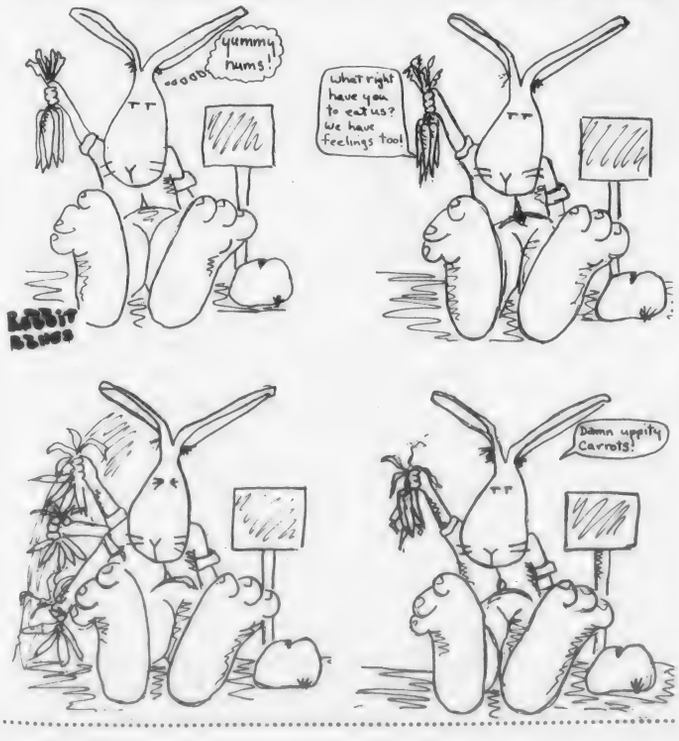
The facilities here are really nice. Students gripe a lot, but you guys don't know how nice the set-up here is. Overall, a Maryville student has far better opportunities than students at a lot of other colleges. Some other larger schools might be better equipped, but I don't think facilities make departments; I think people make departments. It's the people who are doing the teaching and the attitudes of the students who are taking the courses that really make the college. Flashy pieces of equipment are only secondary. I think Maryville is in a pretty good situation, mainly because of its personnel.

Is there anything in particular that you are looking forward to here?

Yes. I am looking forward to changing some of the curriculum, to interact with students, to try to get some of the students I have met a little more motivated than they seem to be at present. The students in general seem to have a little lack of motivation—more than I'd like to see. Maybe it's because it's the spring time. I'd like to see the students take a little more advantage of the opportunities that are available here.

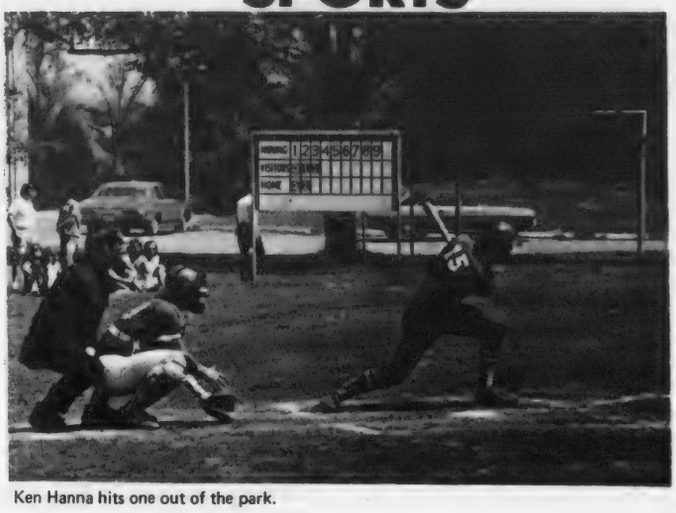
Would you like to see any other changes in your department?

Yes. In fact, we have already made some changes, and we are planning to change the Equilibrium, Periodicity, and Bonding courses both in content and in rigor. I think these courses can be taught a little more deeply than before.



We are changing some of the senior level courses. Thermodynamics has traditionally been taught in the senior year. I am moving it back to the middle term of the junior year simply because it is the foundation of all advanced level chemistry. We are also changing Kinetics from a junior to a senior level course. Furthermore, I am planning to get involved in research of gas phase reactions.

I'd like to help develop an awareness of how important Chemistry is, and try to stimulate perhaps a little more interest in Chemistry.



What would be your message or word of advice to all Maryville College students?

Most students who are here have not really been to other colleges and they don't know what other colleges are like. Maryville provides a very fine environment for learning in diverse areas. I hope the students refrain from griping about trivial things, and con-

continued on page 4

SPORTS

Ken Hanna hits one out of the park.

Hardballers Go 3-1

Coach Boydson Baird's hardballers won three and lost one last week as they extended their season record to 8-5 through Saturday. Last week's results included a split in a doubleheader with Tusculum College as the Scots won the first contest before the Pioneers took the nightcap. Maryville swept the doubleheader with Clinch Valley College on Saturday as they bombarded the Cavaliers in the first game, 13-3, before coming from behind to take the second game also, 9-8.

Dave Callahan pitched Maryville to its first game 5-2 victory over Tusculum as he went all the way to notch the victory. Dave Spradlin, inserted into the starting line-up as a result of an injury to Paul Viggiano, was the batting star as he went 3-for-4 with two doubles and two runs-batted-in.

The Scots lost another heartbreaker in the second game, 3-2, as another good pitching effort by Danny Thomas went to waste. Jim Lester's 3-for-4 and Paul Bailey's 2-for-4 were not enough to get the Scots ahead.

Saturday's doubleheader with Clinch Valley was scheduled for Virginia, but was moved to Maryville after heavy rains made it impossible for a game to be played there. The Cavaliers probably wished they stayed home as they were hit hard in the first game as Ken Hanna, Wayne Risko, and Buddy McDonald all contributed a homerun. Charlie Allcott pitched the first six innings for the Scots, while Kevin "Dapper" McKinstry finished up in the seventh. In the nightcap, Maryville scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh to win it. Vince Fucci walked with the bases loaded scoring "Trip" Zeigler with the tying run, while Paul Bailey did the same to score Buddy McDonald with the clincher. Dave Callahan relieved Doug "Sluggo" Leonhardt in the fourth inning and was credited with his third win of the year opposed to no defeats.

Last Friday's scheduled doubleheader with Tennessee Tech was rained out.

The Scots traveled to Cookville, Tennessee Monday for a doubleheader. They returned home for two vs. Milligan on Tuesday and were scheduled for a twinbill with Bryan yesterday. This afternoon, the Scots are scheduled for a return doubleheader with Milligan at Johnson City, Tennessee. Monday, they start four straight days of doubleheaders as they host Tennessee and entertain Cumberland Tuesday. Wednesday, they travel to Wise, Virginia to meet Clinch Valley again, followed by a return engagement with Cumberland on Thursday at Williamsburg, Kentucky.

Tennis

The MC Tennis team lost its three matches this week as they bowed to Tennessee Weslyan on Thursday, 6-0; David Lipscomb on Saturday, 7-2; and Western Carolina on Monday, 8-1.

Maryville was unable to score in the Singles competition with Tennessee Weslyan, although Buddy Bernhardt and Sutton Brown did take their opponents to a third set before losing in their respective matches. The Doubles competition was not played because of rain.

Brown and Mike Webster were victorious in the Scots' Singles competition against David Lipscomb. Brown won, 6-2 and 6-2; while Webster had a 6-0 and 7-6 advantage.

Brown was also the only MC player to beat out a Western Carolina player in Singles competition as he won 7-6 and 6-1.

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Millie Brewer, Fred Strohl, Shahbaz Ahmed, Emerson Henderson, Dr. Caroline Blair, Kathy Bushing; Layout - Gwen Guba; Photography - Joe Showalter; Rabbit Blues - Charlie Blair; Business Manager - Charlie Thompson; Distribution - R. C. Stevens; Advisor - Dr. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2620 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

News Briefs

Cambodia's former President Hol Nol and his family have moved into their new surburban quarters, a four-bedroom, two-level home in Honolulu.

A Washington rally of nearly 50,000 union members calling for action against a national unemployment rate of 8.7 percent broke up early Saturday after protesting union demonstrators drowned out speakers.

Sen. Howard Baker stated in New Mexico this week that he may seek the Republican nomination for president next year.

CBS announced that after 20 seasons on television the durable Western "Gunsmoke" will be cancelled next season.

Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment concede privately that the chances are "not good" of winning enactment next year despite the fact that approval by only four more states is needed.

Former CIA Director Richard Helms cursed a newsman and denied the C. I. A. was involved in the assassination of foreign officials.

House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill insists that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is a presidential candidate, despite Kennedy's denials.

Attorneys for Joann Little, a 20 year-old black woman charged with first-degree murder of Clarence Alligood, 62 year-old jailer who she claims attempted to rape her, are filing motions to get the trial moved to a different county.

The Saigon government surrendered unconditionally to the Viet Cong Wednesday morning, ending 30 years of warfare.

Tony Perez, a New York referee, filed a $20 million suit against Muhammad Ali, charging the heavyweight champion with "false, malicious, and libelous" statements damaging to his career.

Sen. George McGovern (D) of South Dakota will leave on a three day trip to Cuba to confer with Premier Fidel Castro sometime in May.

Volkswagen, the largest automaker in West Germany, announced plans Tuesday to cut its work force by 25,000 men.

President Ford is "wholeheartedly" in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment which would ensure for both sexes "equality of rights under the law."

President Ford had an unannounced meeting with evangelist Billy Graham at the White House, just before meeting with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the Southeast Asia situation.

The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that state laws treating women as adults at an earlier age than men in child support cases are unconstitutional.

Maryville College Director of Continuing Education Arthur Bushing attended the 1975 Association for Continuing Higher Education Conference in Atlanta last week.

Two Americans who hijacked a Western Airlines passenger jet to Algiers in 1972 have been granted permission to stay in France by a Paris court.

The House voted this week to pump $5 billion into state and federal unemployment trust funds drained by the high jobless rate.

Enroll Now

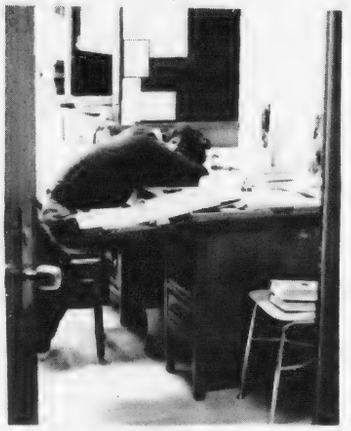
History 333 will be devoted to a seminar called "Women in Historical Perspective" in the fall of 1975. Any interested student from the sophomore to the senior level is eligible to enroll.

Letters continued

continued from page 2

and an honor to count athletes among it's membership. The Choir, without qualification, would welcome athletic men and women into our activities. In the same vein we as Choir members should participate in and support the athletic events of Maryville College. The important thing that Jim pointed out is that we all need to develop what the world so sorely lacks, that is respect and tolerance for those people who are different than we are. It is important that we all seek to understand each other and each other's world. We all look to be creative in our own way, whether it be to run a pass play or sing a song.

Thank you, Jim for sharing your thoughts with us: now it's up to us. We recognize that an athlete is an artist in his own right, but as Jim put it, the Athletes and the Artists should take this to heart.



The Maryville
College Concert Choir

continued from page 3

Dr. Paul Naylor

centrate on obtaining the maximum returns for the enormous amounts of money that they are spending to be here. I also wish that our students would do their best to achieve the utmost benefits from the opportunities and facilities that Maryville provides.

Dr. Naylor

Let the Army help with your college education

See your Army Recruiter
Call Collect 982-5515

the flavor tree
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

For your favorite deli. sandwich — hot or cold — (From $1.00)
 Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914
 Imported & domestic cheese

delicatessen

bank of maryville

Your* Bank In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK — MEMBER F.D.I.C.

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 60 No. 23 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 9, 1975

Phillip Steele Returns for Belshazzar's Feast

Phillip Steele

The final major musical event of the '74-'75 season under the direction of the Department of Fine Arts will be the performance of William Walton's oratoria Belshazzar's Feast. The piece is scored for double chorus, baritone solo, orchestra, and two brass bands. The performance will take place in Wilson Chapel at Maryville College on Sunday evening, May 18, at 8:30 p.m. The chorus will comprise selected singers joining the Maryville College Concert Choir and the Doyle High School Mixed Chorus.

This work has been co-ordinated and will be directed by Dr. Harry H. Harter, Chairman of the Department of Fine Arts. Working together with Harter have been Mr. Lee Kull, director of the Maryville College-Community Orchestra, Mr. Charles Hurt, director of the Maryville College Symphonic Band, Mr. John Ribble, director and Mr. Allan Hoke, associate director of the Doyle High School Mixed Chorus. The Maryville College-Community orchestra will be augmented by Dr. James Bloy, organist, Sallie W. Schoen, pianist, and professional instrumentalists in the immediate area. Wind players for the two special brass bands from the local community include Mark Connell and Greg Hancock, trumpeters; Dale Horst, Ruth Mary Weston, and Thomas Houser, trombonists; and, Lee Huffaker on the tuba.

Baritone soloist will be Philip Steele, who will be returning to the campus for the first time since he completed his third and final year as Maryville College's Affiliate Artist in 1973. Mr. Steele has made recent appearances with the New Orleans Opera Theatre and the Houston Grand Opera Company. He is currently a member of the New York City Opera Company, performing in the Center City Theatre.

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST was originally intended for broadcasting, and was commissioned for the Leeds Festival of 1931. The text was chosen by (Sir) Osbert Sitwell and was drawn from Psalms LXXXI and CXXXVII and the fifth chapter of the Book of Daniel. The work is divided into three sections, with very short pauses between them. The first, after a bleak statement of a prophecy by Isaiah, expresses the feelings of the Jews in captivity. Justly famed is the unaccompanied eight-part chorus "By the waters of Babylon", one of the most beautiful pieces of modern choral writing. The second part is a vivid picture of the great city, Babylon, and includes the brilliantly scored "Praise ye the Gods" - which is an example of the way many of Walton's themes, by slight alteration to the intervals or

continued on page 3

Counselors Weekend At Tremont

The newly elected counselors and resident assistants met at Tremont last weekend for a series of seminars and discussions, led by the Deans and Joanna Allman and Ray Wassum. Also present for participation in a panel discussion Saturday morning were Dr. Blair, Dr. Young, Elaine Spurlin, and Mr. Brahams.

After arrival at Tremont and dinner in the cafeteria, discussions led by Deans Massey and Elia followed. The rest of the evening, under the direction of Ray and Joanna, was spent working on different role-playing situations. The interaction among all present proved to be a valid and valuable learning experience as many ideas were exchanged. This discussion continued late into the evening, but everyone was awakened at 8:00 Saturday morning for breakfast and the panel presentation. Elaine Spurlin talked about her role on campus, and the goals she hopes to accomplish next year through Career Planning & Placement. Presenting the religious activities of the campus, Dr. Young related his plans and hopes for next year. Dr. Blair spoke about the upcoming academic innovations and possible changes in the curriculum structure. Mr. Brahams gave a brief rundown of the financial status of the college, and answered questions concerning the economic policies. All in all, the panel proved beneficial to all the counselors, answering any questions about the different areas.

The 1975 weekend at Tremont—a success for all concerned!

Band Concert Scheduled At MC

The Maryville College Band, under the direction of Charles R. Hurt, will present its annual spring concert Saturday, May 15, at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

Among the works to be performed are Suite Francaise, First Suite in E Flat, Barnum and Baileys Favorites, Chorale and Capriccio, American Variations, and March to the Gallows.

A special number, Dodecaphonic Set by William P. Latham, will be conducted by Peggy Leatherwood, a junior music major from Mt. Airy, Maryland.

There will be no admission charge.

Attention Writers!

The deadline for contributions to the literary supplement of the Echo is Thursday, May 9. Please feel free to contribute. Submit contributions to box 2248.

May Madness On Sunday

If you want a chance to release all those pent-up emotions and frustrations you've accumulated this year, the Social Committee has the right event for you. The annual May Madness festivities are scheduled to begin at 2:00 p.m., Sunday, May 11. All events will be held behind the Physical Education building and Dorm III.

There are three categories of events: teams, couples, and individuals. The team activities include the bed race, bat relay, and sack race. The teams are arranged in groups of twelve, but adjustments will be made for additional contestants.

The egg-toss and three-legged race are the events scheduled for couples. Individual contests are the pie-eating contest, greased pole climb, and frisbee-throw. Contestants are asked to supply their own frisbee. Prizes will be awarded in all events.

The last contest of the day is a tug-of-war between two teams of unlimited but equal numbers. There is a mudhole between the teams. This is officially called a team event, but is more realistically considered a free-for-all. Originally, only the losing team is supposed to be dragged into the mud, but anyone in the general vicinity is usually considered fair game.

May Madness started as an unorganized event called the Mother's Day Riots. It involved mud-slinging and

continued on page 4

"Shrew" Running Smoothly

Maryville College Playhouse will present Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew on May 15, 16, and 17. This will be the final major production of the year for the theatre. Professor Blair E. Beasley is the director. He assures us that everything is running smoothly and the play promises to be a good one.

In the cast are Celeste Gourdin as Kate, Steve Avers as Petruchio. Stuart Smith as Baptista, Paul Kersey as Lucentio, Phil Gibson as Trunio, Carl Swenson as Grumio, Suzanne Schoen as Bianca, Wayne Dansbury as Hortensio, Mike Jacobus as Gremio, Stan McCleave as Vincentio, and Don Tosh as Curtis; others in the cast are James Gray as a servant, Trish Damon as the hat-maker, and Sally Smith as the tailor. Rounding out the players are Tim Kelly and Joseph Carnevale.

With only two weeks of rehearsal time remaining the cast and crews are putting in many extra hours of time and effort. Admission is $1.00 for students and $2.00 for adults. Remember! Production dates are May 15, 16, and 17.

The "Shrew" cast

A Dean's Eye View

Last week the All-College Council approved a change in the core requirement in physical education. Although it will chiefly affect in-coming freshmen, it involves a new course that upperclassmen may elect for credit. Those working for teacher certification may use it to fulfill a health course requirement.

The new course, HPER 101, which combines the present Fundamentals courses with Health 101 (Living), will deal with total fitness, including such health issues as drugs, alcohol, sex, and environmental problems. Conducted through lectures, class discussions, laboratory and gymnasium sessions, it will carry a semester course credit and be graded on the full letter scale, instead of on the S-U basis now used for physical education activity courses.

In the change, three of the present six activity courses are being dropped so that physical education requirements can now be fulfilled by HPER 101 plus three activity courses of the student's own choosing (the one exception being that those classified as weak or non-swimmers will be required to pass an elementary swimming class). A freshman with a good background in this area may be exempted by demonstrating proficiency on a standardized test.

All freshmen enrolling in the fall of 1975 will follow the revised curriculum, as will next year's sophomores who have not yet taken the Fundamentals courses. Other students will follow the activity course requirements under which they entered college, although they may elect HPER 101 on the same basis they would elect any other course.

Those who have questions about how this change affects them should talk with a member of the Health and Physical Education staff.

Carolyn Blair

Dear Andy

Dear Andy,

One of the stupidest things on campus have to be the Sophomore English Proficiency Test. Really now, if a person could get through 121 and 122, why should they be insulted by being asked if he could write.

Insulted Sophomore

Andy: 12a, 4b, 17c, and 12k

Dear Andy,

Every Sunday at 7:00 p.m. all of the buildings on campus are locked in honor of Vespers. I would like to propose that everyone also be locked out of their dorms. This way everyone would come and worship. And that way the five of us would have company.

Lonely

Andy: I think they dropped that idea once before.

Dear Andy,

Vell, my friends at Maryville, you zeem to be doink a gut job. Just az ve haff told you. Assignink troopers to vatch dose little morons dat talk in C. I. V. iz true Storm Trooper tactics. Und you take down der names und take avay der credits. Very gut, my friends. You haff ztudied vell. YOU SHOULD PUT OUT ZHEIR EYES! NO, NO...CUT OUD ZHEIR TOUNGES! YAVOL, DAS ISS IT! DEN ZHEY COULDN'T TALK! Heir Copeland, Fraulein Blair, and zhose off you in der Registrar's office vill be revarded for zis. Viola herselff vould be proud off you zitting in C. I. V. und takink down der svinehundts names. Oh, by der by, der brown zhirts zat vere ordered are on der vay.

Rudolf Hess

Andy: Hold on fella, didn't I see you at Nuremburg?

Andy Hall

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Karen Smith, Kit Williamson, Skellie Morris, S. Michael Ayers, Fred Strohl; Layout - Gwen Guba; Rabbit Blues - Charles Blair; Business Manager - Charlie Thompson; Distribution - R. C. Stevens; Advisor - Dr. Elizabeth Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Parting Shots

by Willy Vidal

This is my last will and testament to the venerable institution — Maryville.

Institutions, unlike men, are slow to change. It is no small wonder that Maryville has left a stronger mark on me than I on her (it?). I should make a distinction here between Maryville the institution (machine) and Maryville the people. The institution itself has taught me the wisdom of the American Corporate State — the blind promise that my growth is "free" and unhindered and the reality that no institution has allowed such freedom. The wisdom that I am a young adult and responsible person but I must be chained by moralistic codes which are not to be enforced or are unenforceable. The double-talk has certainly been around my three years here — if anything it has augmented the theory of expediency which we political scientists like to play down.

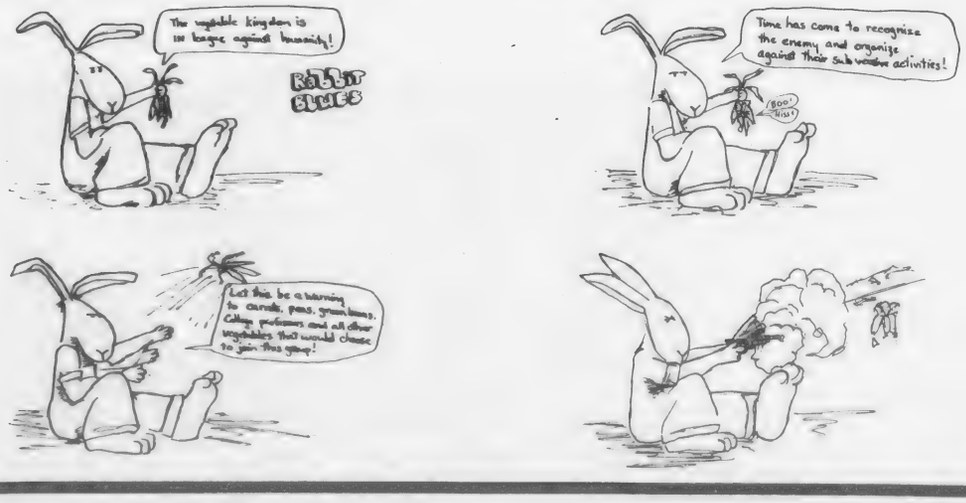
But herein lies my last will to Maryville: Remembering that men don't make institutions but history does; it is only too sweet to realize that while I have not become an aesthetic monk (pardon my exaggeration) by my stay here, I will be among a generation of alumni that will bring the overdue winds of change to good ole Maryville.

I hope no one misunderstands what I have said. To repeat it bluntly: This institution has no real grip on the times—that is the mood of its largest concentrated segment — the students. Simply because it still wishes to live in an era which is best characterized by Prohibition and the Temperance Movement. But time will make Maryville come to the reality of the present. With this happy thought I can appreciate the more serious matter of getting a quality education — that was more important than quibbling with the administration over some of the "issues" which put us in different worlds. It is in the matter of my personal growth in the form of Maryville the people that I have received a quality education. From the people here I have acquired more than I can describe. I just hope that I was able to give something meaningful in return.

Letters to the Echo

To the Editors:

In the early morning hours of April 30 South Vietnam unconditionally surrendered to North Vietnam in what was the final chapter of the longest and most senseless "war" the U. S. has ever been involved in.



Today, there are still 1,300 MIA's who will probably never be accounted for. More money was spent on that war than any war previously. Countless acres of land are no longer fit for any type of agrarian production. But beneath the immense number of dead and missing, the monetary drain; the geographical, political, and idealogical reasons for that war there lies the mutual suffering of those who survived.

The survivors mourn the loss of loved ones. But these few who know the horrors of the Vietnam War also mourn for the men, women, and children who had no choice but to die in their innocence and fear at the hands of forces they knew little about.

Now comes the time when people ask, "What happens next?" There is a proposal to send 300 to 400 million dollars to Vietnam, but the problem with this is how does it get to the people without it filtering down through the Communist government. President Ford says the war is over and it is time to "bind our countries wounds" and turn our attention to more immediate problems.

Are we as a nation being asked to forget this war? I hope not, because if we forget the great vitality wasted in the Vietnam War we may make the same mistake again. As Walter M. Miller, in his A Canticle For Lebowity, said, "Listen, are we helpless? Are we doomed to do it again and again and again? Have we no choice but to play the Phoenix in an unending sequence of rise and fall?. . . Are we doomed to it, Lord, chained to the pendulum of our own mad clockwork, helpless to halt its swing?" We must never forget the suffering caused by this war or any war, but yet, this remembrance must not become an albatross around our necks. We should remember to learn.

Keith Henderson

For What It's Worth

by Skellie Morris

Not many of us knew her. In fact, not many of us ever saw her. She used to work in Anderson. However, she rarely took breaks, and rarely ate lunch. She was a very conscientious worker; everyone knew that. She does not work here anymore; few people know that. She does not work here anymore because she broke her leg. Kind of gets to you doesn't it? Makes you proud of Maryville College doesn't it? I wish this story was false, but it is true.

Judy Beaubien had worked in the Development office since September. Development is in charge of fund-raising, and even though few of us are even aware the office exists, it serves an important function. Judy broke her leg on Saturday, March 23, and called in to tell her boss that she would not be at work. She went to work on Wednesday, but she was on crutches, with no walking cast. The cast made it impossible for her to work, and the next Tuesday she asked for the rest of the week off. Upon hearing this, her boss, Mr. Mooney, conferred with Mr. McDade and Judy was released. The reasons given were that her release was under consideration anyway, and that Mr. Mooney needed a full-time secretary.

Mr. Mooney has yet to hire a full-time secretary. The slack is being taken up by extra student help hours. However, Mr. Mooney's student help secretary quit shortly after Judy was "released," and the student help has been on and off.

As for the reason given by Mr. Mooney that Judy's release had been under consideration, he stated that Judy's work "had not been up to par." However, in contacting Judy about this, she stated that Mr. Mooney never mentioned anything to her about the quality of her work. In addition, in talking to persons in and around the Development office, all remarked on Mrs. Beaubien's willingness to work,and one person who had previously worked with Judy stated, "Her work was excellent under the circumstances and conditions she had to work." Others remarked that Judy rarely took breaks and very seldom took off from work to go to lunch. In addition to this, she had just received a raise, but Mr. Mooney states that this was a contractual raise, and is received by most all secretaries.

Mr. Mooney also stated that he had problems with Judy's absenteeism before, but had kept no record on it. However, Judy states that the only times she could remember missing were two days when her ten-year-old daughter was sick and when Judy had come down with the flu at Christmas.

As for her two weeks severence pay, Judy received 6½ days, because of the days she had been out with her leg. However, Judy said that in order to receive this pay she had to call up and ask for it, and that no initiative was taken by the college to pay her what she was entitled.

That is the way it happened. This article was meant as an attack no person, but rather a presentation of the facts, and hopefully will result in some questions being answered. In closing, the words of Mr. Mooney echo and seem a bit haunting. "We try to be human and humane, but we are running a business." This is true, but Judy Beaubien's cast was only on for two weeks.

Becky Teas

Teas Receives Scholarship

Rebecca Teas has been selected for the National Women's Educational Society Scholarship of $125 sponsored by Alpha Delta Kappa. Every year, each department nominates candidates planning an educational profession and of junior standing. These candidates must write a theme concerning "What I hope to gain from and contribute to the field of education." Then the candidates must secure an evaluation from three faculty members. Their academic records and the prepared theme are considered and sent to the selection committee of Alpha Delta Kappa, who then acknowledge an outstanding junior for this scholarship.

Becky comes to Maryville from Nashville, Tennessee. Becky's previous experiences with children include counseling at a day camp, supervising at a day care center and assisting a dance class for 6th and 7th graders. Becky hopes to attend graduate school someday but would like to teach elementary school in a foreign country after completing her senior year at Maryville.

Let The Stars Get In Your Eyes

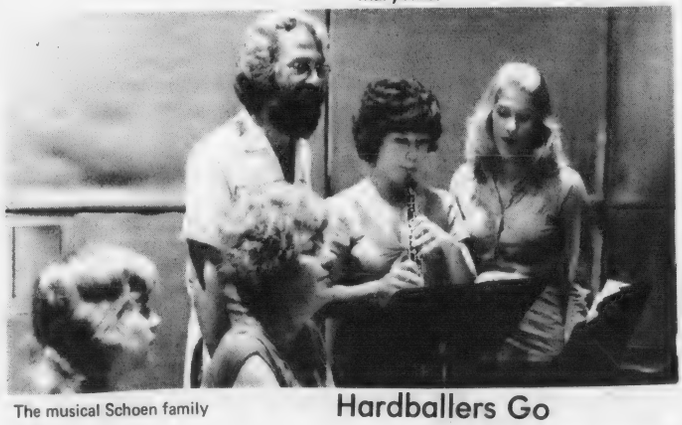
Interim is set up as a broadening experience away from the normal curriculum. The off campus excursions are usually far and above the others in quality. Unfortunately they cost an arm and a leg. Next interim one of the best proposals to come along in years is being offered. Not only is it inexpensive and mind-expanding, it also offers travel, camping, studying at another University, star-gazing, and a chance to escape from the torrential Tennessee rains of December to the beautifully warm, dry Arizona climate. The fascinating universe above us will be studied through the use of Maryville's 7-inch Questar telescope. Research will be done at the University of Arizona or Arizona State. Trips to Kitt Peak National Observatory are planned. Under the guidance of Dr. Love and a well-known astronomer, 21 clear star filled nights in the Arizona desert will be used to their full potential to study the mysteries of the universe. Learn about such things as comets, the rings of Saturn, Super Novas, Neutron Stars, Black, holes and the effects of the everexpanding universe. The price is only $175. A deposit of $25 must be paid at the Treasurer's office by May 15th. A minimum of 10 students is required or this interim cannot be offered.

Study Of Athletics Being Made

Much has been written about the ethical and educational problems associated with big-time athletics—recruiting, subsidizing, preferential treatment of athletes, exploitation, etc. Small colleges, however, have been ignored.

A study is now under way to identify problems and possible solutions at small colleges. The aim is to strengthen athletic programs by preserving their values while minimizing evils.

Students, faculty, and staff members are invited to share experiences, observations, and concerns—specific cases of good and bad practices, problems and solutions. These should be sent to Dr.P. Moulton, 925 Lincoln Ave., Adrian, Mich. 49221.



To receive a summary of findings this summer or fall, a permanent address should be given.

Belshazzar's Feast

continued from page 1

rhythms, are made to serve several purposes. The last section tells the story of "the writing on the wall" and concludes with a lament and thanksgiving chorus for the fall of the king and his city. The final "Alleluia" chorus, in which the word is flung ecstatically from one choir to the other, is a glory of sound.

The performance is the final event in the series of Performing Artists concerts. Admission for college personell and students is with I. D.: general admission is $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for students.

The musical Schoen family

Hardballers Go

The MC baseball team won four and lost four to extend their 1975 season record to 12 wins and nine losses. Last week's results included two losses at Tennessee Tech on Monday as the Scots bowed 4-3 in nine innings in the first game and 2-1 in the second. Tuesday, MC split with Milligan at home as they lost the first game, 3-0, before coming back in the nightcap, 5-4. Thursday saw them sweep a doubleheader against Bryan, 4-2 and 3-0; and going to Milligan on Friday to split with the Buffalos in a twinbill as the Scots won, 10-6, after losing, 6-2. Saturday's doubleheader with Tennessee Tech was rained out.

The Scots travel to Emory, Virginia tomorrow afternoon for a doubleheader with Emory and Henry. They return home Monday for a single contest with UT which was rescheduled from last Monday because of a conflict in the UT schedule. MC will conclude its season on Tuesday with a doubleheader at home vs. Emory and Henry.

Smoky Mountain Geology Offered

"Geology of the Smoky Mountain Area" will be taught on the Maryville College campus June 15-July 18, and, for the first time, will be open to area students and teachers.

The course may be taken for graduate or undergraduate credit. The instruction and credit is being arranged through Wright State University, Dayton, Ohio. The eight quarter hours credit may be transferred from Wright State into graduate or undergraduate programs in other schools.

The course will emphasize the geological processes which developed the present landscape and will utilize lectures, reading, and direct observation in the field. There are no prerequisites.

Cost is $335 for graduate credit; $320 for undergraduate credit.

Further information may be obtained by writing or calling Arthur S. Bushing, Director of Summer School, at Maryville College.

Last Chance

Today is the last day for football cheerleading clinic; it will be held at 4:00 in the gym. Closed tryouts will be held May 13 at 6:00, in the gym.

Editors' Blunder

In last week's Echo, "Caroline" Blair should have been spelled Carolyn Blair, and "Paul" Naylor should have been Robert Naylor.

Go Roller Skating

The Social Committee is sponsoring another Roller Skating Party this Saturday night, May 10. The bus will leave from the Chapel at 11:30 p.m. and return at 2:30 a.m. We will have the whole rink to ourselves - so don't worry if you're not a good skater! The cost is $2.50 and it includes bus fare, skates, and rink fee. There is a snack bar that sells hamburgers and cokes, etc., so bring along extra money. If you are interested in going, sign up at dinner tonight or see Ed Fort water balloon fights, as well as any other pranks students could imagine. Involuntary swims in the fish pond were not uncommon. The activities lasted the whole day, and were entirely student-initiated. In the late 1960's, however, it evolved into a supervised activity.

May Madness

continued from page 1

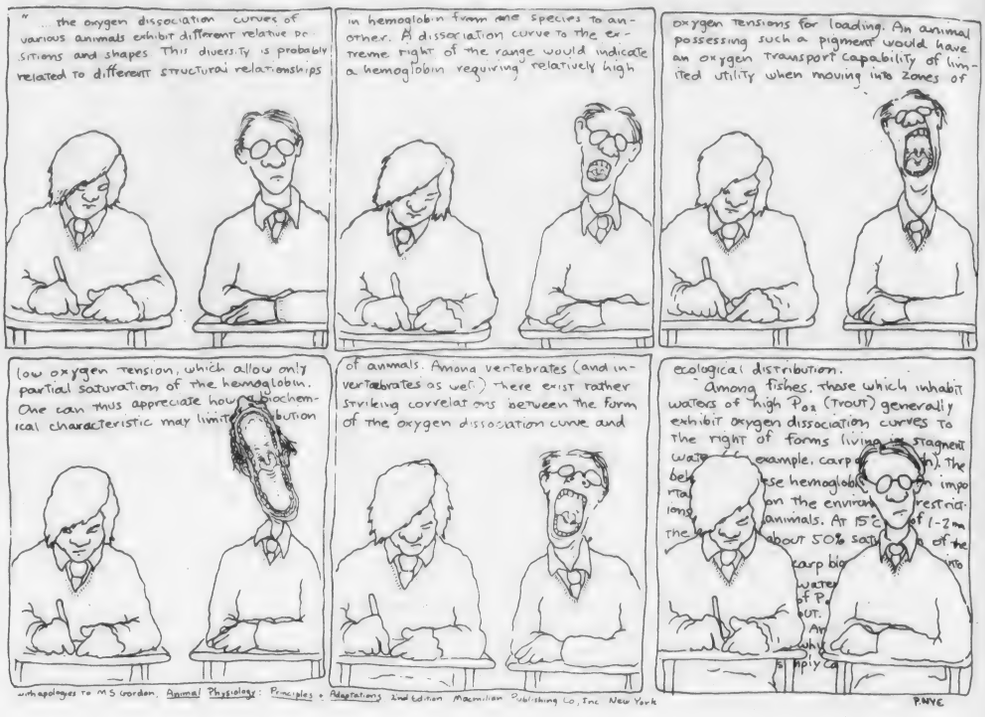
Participants can sign up in the Dining Hall, but if you haven't entered your name, don't worry about it. Join in anyway. Changes will be made to accomodate anyone who comes. Participate or just watch. Either way, it should be a good time for everyone.

Probably Get Eaten By A Bookworm

(CPS)—Tapes, tapes, who's got the tapes? It looks like the University of Southern California (USC) might get former President Nixon's White House tapes if a legal tangle can be worked out.



In a collective decision, Mr. and Mrs. Nixon and several USC trustess board members have tentatively agreed on plans to build a presidential library to house the materials.

A key section of the current plans provides that materials collected in the library will be available for public study by scholars and other researchers. According to Nixon "The only restrictions on public availibility would be for materials involving US foreign policy and national security."

The agreement, however, it contingent on several legal factors, among them a law that requires all materials from the Nixon administration be kept in Washington. The constitutionality of that law is now under challenge.

USC is optimistic though. "Plans for the library will proceed on the assumption that all of the Nixon materials will eventually be available," a university spokesman said.

Nixon has promised that if the law preventing the transfer of the presidential materials is declared invalid, he will ask that a provision in a legal agreement made last year be eliminated—a provision which requires that the White House tape recordings would be destroyed after his death.

Junior Class Sponsors Rich Mountain Tower

Rich Mountain Tower, the popular Knoxville band, will be appearing at Maryville College on Wednesday evening, May 14, in Pearson's Dining Hall. The dance-concert begins at 8:30 and lasts until midnight. The cost is only $1.50 per person. Proceeds will go to benefit the Junior class.

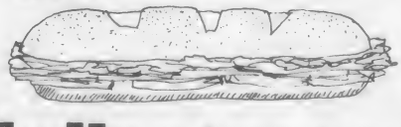
Class Nominations

The Junior class will hold nominations for next year's officers on Monday, May 12, at lunch and dinner. All members of the class are asked to nominate individuals for the positions of president, vice-president, and secretary. Elections will be held the following Monday, May 19.

We Invite You to Visit Us at Seven Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Tallest And Closest To The Campus



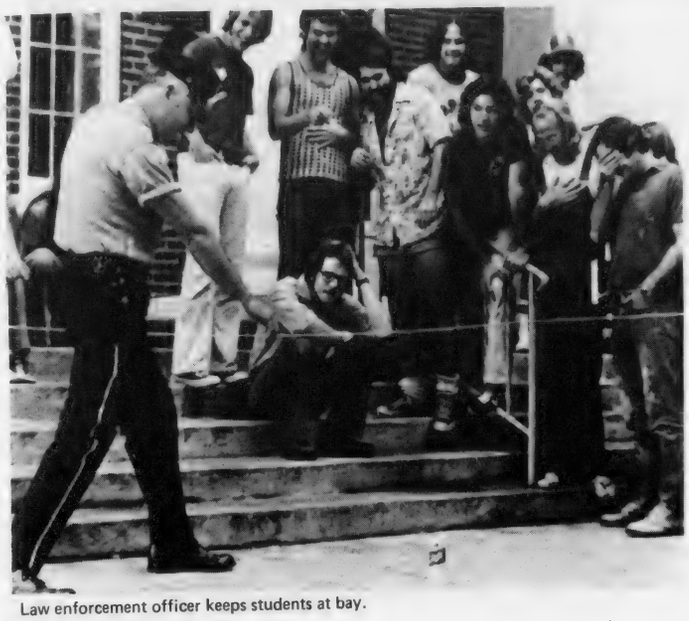
Downtown
Alcoa
Airport
Broadway
McGhee Tyson
Seymour-Chapman Hwy.
Townsend

EASY CURB MARKET
8 - 11 MARKET
Open 7 Days A Week
8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
Open All Holidays
BEVERAGE OF ALL TYPES
PICNIC SUPPLIES
715 EAST BROADWAY
MARYVILLE

SCHLITZ
10-Oz. 6 Pack $1.47
Case $5.75
SCHLITZ
"Tall Boy" (24-oz.) 59¢ EACH
Case $7.20

FALSTAFF
7 oz. bottles
case 24 $3.39

the flavor tree
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's
For your favorite deli. sandwich
— hot or cold — (From $1.00)
* Imported & domestic cheese
* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914



delicatessen

LET'S HAVE SOME BLOODSHED.
$10
per donation.
Monday through Saturday
Free parking
blood alliance
520 Western Avenue • Phone 637-3171
(Formerly Knoxville Blood Center)

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 60 No. 24 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 16, 1975

Law enforcement officer keeps students at bay.

Students Appalled
Beer Can Found On Campus

Last Sunday morning appeared to be like any other Sunday at Maryville. Men in their white shirts with ties, women in flowery dresses, all with bibles in hand headed to breakfast before church. The innocent songs of the birds, who were awakened by the warm rays of the sun, gave no warning as to what happened in the dark of the night before. As the students slept, no one dreamed of the threatening, uninvited guest, probably left by the Devil's messenger himself. Early that morning two students (who wish to remain unidentified as they are now under a psychologists care in the infirmary) discovered the cylindrical demon, a 16 ounce empty beer can. The campus police were called in. Special agents from the Registrars office were immediately called off their C. I. V. assignments and put on the case. Several theories have been developed after careful study of the incident. One theory is that the can was planted by University of Tennessee fraternity students. Another theory is that it was washed in by the spring rains. One theory submitted by the Physics department and later discounted is that the can was an attempt of communication by intelligent alien beings.

After the initial shock subsided several community members commented on the holocost. A freshman cheerleader said, "I think its cute." Dr. Copeland stated after nearly stepping on the can," Beer Can? What beer can? I saw no beer can?" "Lunch was really rank today," added Ken Atchley. When asked Dean Massey explained, "I know it doesn't belong to one of my girls. My girls do not drink!" Victor Schoen screamed, "You only go around once" and tried to steal the can.

The campus police took the can into custody and are currently analyzing it for finger prints and other clues. The full impact that this incident will have on Maryville can not be foretold at this time. Only time will tell. As Dean Blair summed it up, " this college has gone through times far more severe than this and has come up rosey. I only hope that everyone has grown from this and I thank God that it's over now."

Students Conduct MC Telethon

Eighteen Maryville College students participated in a telethon last week, contacting almost 700 alumni and friends in East Tennessee by telephone.

Specific pledges from the telethon amounted to $948, and the final return will be between $2,000 and $3,000 according to telethon director William H. Mooney.

"We are delighted with the Willingness of the students to work for the college," Mooney said. "And since it was a followup to the recent community campaign, we are pleased with the favorable response to the telethon.

The students who helped were: Steve Ayers, Linda Barras, Cynthia Mantey, Maggie Miller, Karen Wiley, Paul Viggiano, Paul Bailey, Pete Xiques, Jeff Rogers, Skip Vessells, Debby Coppage, Suzanne Phillips, Karen Smith, Kit Williamson, Ruth Wilbanks, Grace Riley, Dave Costello, and Bill Walker.

MC Presents "Shrew"

The Maryville College Playhouse is promising a wild and tumultuous farce as its next production – Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," which is being prepared for an opening on May 15th with no sense of reverence for a classic, but a belief that Shakespeare meant his comedies to be laughed at, and the more slapstick the better. There will be three performances, through May 17th.

Probably no play's plot has ever been more neatly summed up in its title than is the case with his broad, robustious farce, which indeed relates the gusty story of a husband's skilled taming of a wildcat wife.

The scene is sixteenth century Italy, but the story of a man with the vigor and courage to tame a termagant bride has been considered down the centuries – since Shakespeare wrote his comedy in 1594 – to be applicable to every age.

Steve Ayers will have the role of Petruchio, the man who weds a waspish wife with his eyes open, confident that he can draw her strings, and Celeste Gourdin will be seen as Katharine, the spitfire who has really been waiting all along for a man strong enough to prove his mastery, but nevertheless puts up a scratching, kicking, biting, shrieking defense until she is starved, humiliated and beaten into submission. At the end she sweetly offers advice to other married women on their duty of unquestioning obedience to their husbands.

The means by which Petruchio achieves his victory, with their comic extravagance, have delighted playgoers for centuries, women as well as men, since women understand that for them (as for Katharine) the play's lesson is not to compete with husbands in muscular strength, and that feminine victories are won in subtler ways.

Suzanne Schoen (Bianca) will be seen as Katharine's supposedly sweeter sister who, after marriage, turns out to need Katharine's lesson as much as ever Katharine did, Paul Kersey (Lucentio) as the luckless groom of this sister who loses a bet to Petruchio over which of them has the more (seemingly) obedient wife, Stuart Smith (Baptista) as the relieved father of the two sisters, and others in a case of 22 (no.) who are being directed by Blair Beasley will be Phil Gibson, Carl Swenson, Don Tosh and Trish Damon.

Business Major Shows Promise

A new major, Business Administration, will be included in the Maryville College curriculum next Fall. This action was taken mainly to satisfy the ever-increasing interest in the field of business.

Dr. Harry Price, who is presently the chairman of the economics department, will also take control in the joint economics and business administration department.

There will be two full-time faculty members involved with the new major, Dr. Harry Price and Mr. Thomas Metcalf. Other faculty members who will be teaching the required courses for this major are Vice President Neil McDade-business administration, Mr. Duncan Crawford-business law, Dr. Hartwell Herring- accounting, Mr. James Sturgeon - management and business finance, and Mr. Charles Davis marketing. All of these faculty members have had practical experience and academic training in business.

A short business intern program and a two-term independent study in business will also be available. According to Dr. Price, most of these courses are now being offered.

Series Of One-Acts Performed

On May 19, 20, and 21 there will be a one-act plays presented in the Studio Theatre by the directing class of the Speech-Theatre Department. These productions are a combination of original compositions by the directors and plays by noted authors. All of the plays will be experimental in nature, either in their writing, staging, or both.

Showtime is 8:15 p.m., Monday and Wednesday, and 9:00 p.m. Tuesday. Admission to all of these productions is free.

Madrigal Singers

The Maryville College Madrigal Singers will present a special concert on May 22 at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center, This concert is under the direction of Pamela Thomson, a junior music education major, as a part of her Independent Studies' project.

The concert will consist of 16th and 17th century English madrigals and will be presented in the manner in which these madrigals were originally performed. A madrigal is a Renaissance song for three or more voices, dealing with "Melancoly or merry" subjects. Included in the program will be a piece by Henry VIII, three by Thomas Morely, two by William Byrd, and others. The entire project is under the supervision of Dr. Harry H. Harter, chairman of the Department of Fine Arts.

Parting Shots

The Maryville Melt

by Mike Wenkstern

Here I go, in and out, the party's almost ended;
It's been a trip, a crazy ride, as norrible as splendid.

Then I came, and now I go, to hither and erewhom,
Equipped I hope, to face the world, reality's garb to don.

I've done some things, and said much more, but most of all I've felt,
Just what it's like to see and feel, and do the Maryville Melt.

The Maryville Melt, just what it is, is difficult to say,
But surely I've experienced it, on each and every day.

It's people, places, things, events, and how they interact,
That makes the melt a dance quite real, which makes me feel intact.

I melt and ooze, and think and sleep, while time slides right on through,
And what I feel, and how I feel, are the dictates of what I do.

Here to learn, to grow and burn, in common much have we,
We're bound to grasp, and love or hate, all we feel and see.

Together tight, alone I'm hip, there's feeling everywhere,
It's cool to stop and think about how much I really care.

Not what I know, but how I know, and who and why and when,
The Melt's enough, intense, serene, not one to dance again.

Do it, do it, once, twice and just once more,
Never can it be the same, so heavy as before.

And so I'll melt on out of here, and into something new;
With me I'll take, inside my head, innumerable thoughts of you.

From The Editors

This is essentially a letter to next year's Senior class, but it will concern everyone eventually. Next Monday the election of officers is to be held. During our first three years here elections are a chance to add something impressive to someone's transcript and little more. Class government has lost most of its importance with the development of the All-College Council, so class activities and class spirit really aren't felt to be necessary anymore. This has its evidence in any class meeting held lately.

However, Senior year should be different. Whereas class government is fairly inactive up to this point, it suddenly becomes a major factor in the final outcome of all your years at Maryville. The president of the Senior class has one of the most time-consuming jobs on campus, as well as one of the most frustrating. Trying to organize class activities and graduation is hard enough, but the class officers should expect little, if any, cooperation from their class members. Whether it be a fund-raising project or simply a class activity, its organization and execution will be left up to the three officers and about twenty per cent of the five people that show up for class meetings.

Money is about the largest problem in class government. This year's Senior class had to apply for funds from the school because they were completely bankrupt. Next year's Seniors might as well be since their treasury holds hardly enough to support any activities. This should be the foremost consideration of the new president. If he can drum up some support from those who elect him, he should begin immediately in the fall term to work on some projects. It is of the utmost importance to elect someone willing and capable of spending long hours at this task. He must be organized to be able to enlist the support of his classmates. He must be an insomniac.

After all the griping about apathy toward class government, it is easy to see that the same problems extend into the ACC. Stated in the simplest terms, it is due mainly to the fact that most students want to share in the benefits of campus government without any effort on their part. It's really a lot easier to complain about nothing being done than to actually take steps to see that a change occurs, or an activity is successful. Before someone asks for more from campus government he should be ready to add what he plans to do to accomplish more.

Seniors for next year have their chance now to see that something is accomplished. They can vote. And maybe, just maybe, they can get together next year and get something done.

Dear Andy

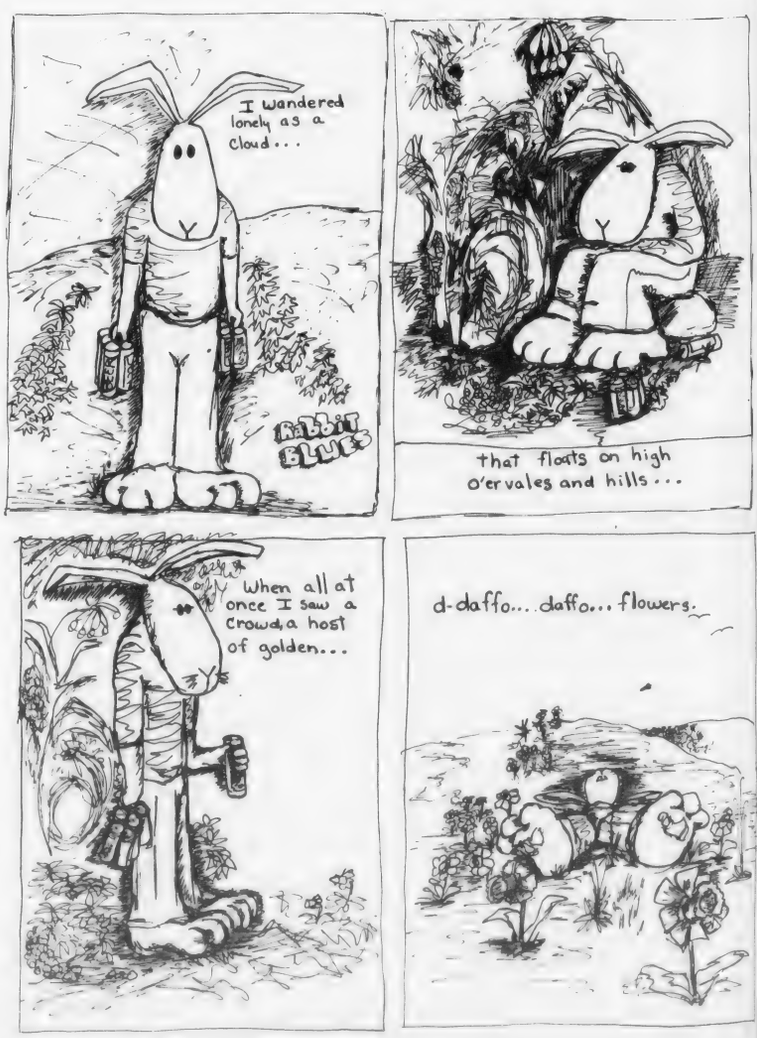
Dear Andy,
Do you know Jesus?

James Ward

Andy: No, but if you'd hum a few bars....

Dear Andy,
I live in Pearsons. Every morning I wake up, throw open the drapes and am confronted by a large chiquita banana. It's getting to me Andy. At night I dream of bana farmers and slipping on banana peels. Last night I dreamed I was the cherry on top of a banana split. What can I do to make that girl take that yellow nonstrosity out of her window before I lose all sanity.

Yellow Fever



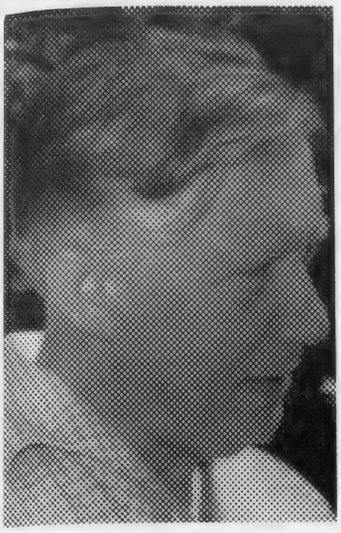
Andy: I think you've just done that.

Dear Andy,
At this writing the U. S. has sunk three Cambodian patrol boats in retaliation to the capture of an American merchant ship. The situation could very easily get out of hand. What can we do?

May Day

Andy: What do you mean we? I'm 4F.

Andy Hall



Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Karen Smith, Dave Schwind, Fred Strohl, Ken Atchley, Dana Alspaugh: Layout - Gwen Guba; Rabbit Blues - Charlie Blair; Business Manager - Charlie Thompson, Distribution - R. C. Stevens; Advisor Dr. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Dr. Pyson

Dyson To Speak At MC

Dr. Geoffrey Dyson, president of the British Association of National Coaches, will speak at Maryville College Wednesday, May 21, at 9:20 a.m. in Wilson Chapel. His subject will be "Athletics as a Unifying Factor in the World."

Dr. Dyson, an internationally known lecturer, is a specialist in the area of track-field and history of modern and ancient Olympics. He is a member of the International Olympic Academy.

Between 1947 and 1961, Dr. Dyson organized all Amateur Athletic Association national courses, senior coaching examinations, and conferences. He coached the British Olympic teams of 1952, 1956, and 1960.

Immediately before and after World War II, he was a lecturer in physical education at Loughborough College. During the war he commanded Army Schools of Physical Training in East Africa and Italy.

Dr. Dyson has advised various sports governing bodies on fitness training and body mechanics and has conducted courses in many parts of the world.

He is currently director of physical education at Winchester College.

Dr. Dyson will also be guest speaker at the Maryville College All Sports Banquet Wednesday evening.

Belshazzar's Feast on Sunday

The final major musical event of the '74-'75 season under the direction of the Department of Fine Arts will be the performance of William Walton's oratoria Belshazzar's Feast. The piece is scored for double chorus, baritone solo, orchestra, and two brass bands. The performance will take place in Wilson Chapel at Maryville College on Sunday evening, May 18, at 8:30 p.m. The chorus will comprise selected singers joining the Maryville College Concert Choir and the Doyle High School Mixed Chorus.

Cartlidge Has Article Published

Dr. David R. Cartlidge, associate professor of philosophy and religion at Maryville College, is author of an article in the current issue of the Journal of Religion. The article is entitled "I Corinthians 7 as a Foundation for a Christian Sex Ethic."

Colleges Adjust To Buckley Ammendment

(CPS)—The confusion appears to be subsiding as administrators and students become acquainted with the ins and outs of the recently-enacted Family Rights and Privacy Act, also known as the Buckley amendment after its sponsor, Sen. James Buckley (C-NY).

The law allows college students access to their "educational records" inluding records, files, documents and other materials maintained by a college which contain information directly related to a student. It also sets limits on the type of information that can be released from a student's files without his permission.

The bill drew sharp criticism from educational institutions and organizations when it was first passed, virtually unnoticed, in November. Educators claimed that the ambiguities and inconsistencies of the bill made compliance impossible.

The bill was later revised and passed by Congress. Shortly after, the Department of HEW issued clarifying regulations—which are themselves still undergoing clarification.

"With all due respect to (Sen. Buckley's office) it was a poorly drafted piece of legislation," said Ed Gliman of HEW who is handling the questions and violation reports that come to HEW.

"As of March 30 we had 3500 pieces of correspondence concerning the Privacy Act," Gliman said.

According to Gliman there have been around 40 reports of administration noncompliance or violation, but the majority of them have been misunderstandings which were cleared up with a phone call or letter. Three-quarters of the complaints have come from secondary schools, Gliman said. Besides college students, parents of school children under the age of 18 also are given the right to see school files.

"At this point we're assuming that everyone who hasn't complained is complying with the law," said Gliman. "However hard it is to believe, some students and administrators still don't know the law has been amended."

As was feared, some admissions directors are reporting that fewer and less open recommendations are being received from high school counselors at the college level and faculty at the grad school level.

Under the Buckley law, students have a right to see letters of recommendation unless they sign a waiver beforehand.

"The Buckley amendment has made our job harder...the recommendations we receive are watered down. The counselors are afraid to be candid," said University of Connecticut/Storrs admissions director John Vlandis.

Recommendations are needed, Vlandis said, to provide information not included in a student's academic record and to explain inconsistencies in records.

Likewise, at Washington University (St. Louis) useful recommendations have dried up, prompting the Pre-Medical and Pre-Dental Committee to strongly request that pre-medical students sign waivers relinquishing their right to see faculty recommendations.

The Committee pointed out that a lack of recommendations could seriously hamper a student's medical school admission chances because some schools count letters as up to 30% of the total evaluation process.

Besides admissions directors, college news bureaus have run into headaches with the new law.

Going by a strict interpretation, the University of Kansas News Bureau decided that it would no longer release the names of a student's parents without written permission from the student.

The Buckley law provides that a college can only publicly release "directory information" about a student. Directory information includes a student's name, address, telephone listing, date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height if a member of an athletic team, degrees and awards received, as well as dates of attendance, and the most recent previous educational institution attended by a student.

Most other information can be released only if a student signs a waiver giving his permission.

Pigskinners Look Ahead To '75 Season

The Maryville football Scots' spring session is in full swing, with sixty-five men returning to play ball from last year. The increase in returning players over last year's total which was only thrity-four indicates an upswing in interest in football at Maryville. Coach Jim Jordan added that "We have the best attitude since I've been here. We're eager to learn, and I think that can be attributed to our coaches Lonnie Warwick, Dick Evie, Dick Maloney, Bob Gilbert, and Rich Birchfield."

The Scots offense will run off the wishbone next year. According to Coach Jordan, it will be used because it has an option threat to either side, it is simple, it is hard for the defense to find the football, and it is a balanced attack.

The defense will be running the "50". The main reason for this is the outstanding talent in linebackers and defensive backs. Using these talents, the deep threat and around-the-end threat are almost eliminated.

The number one objective for spring '75 is to construct an effective offensive line adapted to the new formation. Second in importance is to develop a consistant quarterback who can make every play look the same.

So far, Maryville's starting quarterback is Bobby Nick who is backed by John Brake and Dave Schwind. After baseball, Danny Thomas and Bobby Fitzgerald will join the quarterback ranks. Fullbacks are Glen Thompson followed by Rick Varasqui and Dan Bailey. At halfback there is Joe Genualdi, and Dan Maples, with Billy Bone, Gary Petree, Paul Murphy, Ron Lasley Steve Harrison, and Rob Kirkland. Split ends are led by Tom Hyne with Keith Goodwin, Bill Straher, and after baseball, Jim Lester. Tight ends are Don Surrency followed by Bill Brewer and John Coates. The main line for the offense is led by Lee Struble at center with Mark Keahon and Ken Myers at guard and Jim Yeats with Mark Conover at tackle. Other linemen are centers Mike Evans and Chip Krug, guards Gary Cooper and Jeff Hurst, and tackles Randy Clowers, Doug Taylor, and Eugene McSpadden. The kicker will again be Tim Kelly.

The defense will start defensive backs Mike Osborne, Wayne Thompson, Payton Crosby, Ron Brofman, and Kevin Lynch, Linebackers are Jeff Hittinger, Ray Oliveri, and Steve Howard Their subs will be Wayne Dunn, Jesse Jackson, Charlie McGuire, and Dave Key. The line will start Tom Duling and Mike Bourque at end, Lee Taylor and Bob Tronio at tackle. Ends Wesley Dean and Bruce Scott fill in with Joe Moffit and Ken Hanna being added after baseball season. Tackles Ken Jones and Craig Arcos ably take up the slack. Bob Shumski will be back next year after a knee injury at tackle for the defense.

For all of these players, the culminating point of spring '75 will be the intrasquad scrimmage. Team captains will pick players and the two captain's squads will be pitted against each other. Scot fans can see this game on May 28 at six o'clock at Honaker Field.

Bacon Attends Workshop In Wisconsin

Dr. Ellis Bacon, Assistant Director for Program at Maryville College's Tremont Center, is attending a workshop in acclimatization at George Williams College in Williams Bay, Wisconsin, this week.

Baseball Team Goes 2-2

The MC Baseball team was 2-2 this past week to extend their season record to 14-11. The results included a split of a doubleheader with Cumberland College as they lost, 4-3, before coming back to win, 9-3, last Tuesday. On Thursday, they defeated Cumberland at Williamsburg, Kentucky, 8-5 before the second game was rained out. On Monday afternoon, the Scots lost to Tennessee, 3-0, in a rain-shortened five-inning contest.

After losing the first Cumberland game, Dave Spradlin moved from the pitchers' mound to designated hitter and banged out two hits in the nightcap as did Buddy McDonald in pacing the Scots to victory. McDonald had another big day on Thursday as he contributed two hits and three rbi's in defeating the Indians again. Danny Thomas was the winning pitcher with last-inning relief from "Dapper" McKinstry.

A pouring rain halted play in Monday's game with Tennessee during the top of the sixth inning. The Scots were only able to muster two hits, although they did draw five walks. Mike Flagler was the losing pitcher despite a good effort.

Stressing the Best Stress

(CPS)—While many favor a relaxed unpressured atmosphere for learning, one Michigan State University scientist believes effective learning is a function of stress and anxiety produced by uncertainty.

Dr. Maynard Miller, a MSU geology professor, claims the successful teacher is one who builds a controlled amount of stress into the classroom to produce quality performance.

Miller led a 13-year field training program in Alaska and considers himself a "connoisseur of misery." According to the scientist, harsh physical conditions offer an excellent learning and teaching enviroment where a person can experience what Miller calls "creative stress," a condition sometimes leading to "creative failure."

Miles Serving As Consultant In Florida

Andy Miles, Assistant Director for Administration at Maryville College's Tremont Center, is serving as a consultant in the establishment of an environmental education center in Florida. The center would be a part of the Fort Walton Beach School System in Okaloosa County.

Individualized Major Proposals Due

Proposals for individualized majors will be reviewed on Thursday, May 22, at the break. All students considering this major must go through the regular procedure as outlined in the pamphlet available in the Registrar's Office.

Members of the Committee include Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler, Chairman; Dr. David Young, Dr. Wallace Lewis, Miss Martha Hess, and William Swenson.

Senior Class Elections On Monday

Elections for 1975-76 senior class officers are to be held Monday, May 19th. The candidates are as follows:

President
Robert Hines
Craig Larsen
John Stuhl

Vice President
Charlie Blair
Alex Carrick
Martha Day
Sher Lay
Rebecca Teas

Secretary-Treasurer
Dorothy Bang
Sue Conner
Rebecca Teas

The duties of the officers include the planning of homecoming and graduation ceremonies, and organizing all campus and community activities of the class.

May Madness

Tug-o-war

Bed Race

Pie Eating Contest

Wanted!

NEEDED: pianist for night club. Must play pop and blues. Call Kay at 982-5373 before noon or after 10 p.m. or at 983-9446 anytime.

Art Department Recieves Grant

A grant from the Charles E. Merrill Trust has made it possible for the M. C. Art Department to award commissions to 25 artists for works of art.

Those commissioned include M. C. students, M. C. graduates and other artists in the area. The purpose of the grant, according to Charles E. Merrill Jr., was to benefit practicing artists and craftsmen as well as enrich the artistic life of the college.

The following artists have been commissioned to do works of art for the college and have been purchased with the Merrill Fund:

Marc Ward - ceramic containers - to be displayed in the FAC
Charlie Blair - ceramic fountain - FAC
Karen Wiley - fabric wallhanging - Davis Dorm
Martha Day - fabric wallhanging - FAC
Nancy Millner - ceramic wallhanging - Infirmary
Linda Savage - batik wallhanging - Dorm I
Gary Lewis - oil painting - Student Center
Lynn Houlberg - pen and ink drawings - Anderson
Maureen Meade - multi-media paintings - Student Center
Bill Hara - multi-media painting - Student Center
Kathy Snatchko - oil painting - Student Center
Lois Cowan - oil paintings - Business Office
Linda Goff - batik wallhangings - Chaplins Office
Bill Peglar - metal wall relief sculpture - FAC
Tom Gingras - metal wall relief sculpture - Anderson
Lindy Harris - pen and ink drawings - Admissions Office
Judy McCarthy - fabric wallhanging - Dining Hall
Kim Robinson - prints and paintings - Student Center
Merritt Dardatzke - pottery - Library
Joseph Falsetti - wood sculptures - Chapel and FAC
Pam Hassler - enamel wallhangings - Anderson
Sandra Blain - pottery - Library
Rosa Kennedy - pottery - Library
Martha Wright - watercolor - Anderson
Lynn Rumbley - pen and ink drawings - Anderson

the flavor tree
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's
For your favorite deli. sandwich — hot or cold — (From $1.00)
* Imported & domestic cheese
* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914

delicatessen

EASY CURB MARKET
8 - 11 MARKET
Open 7 Days A Week
8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
Open All Holidays
BEVERAGE OF ALL TYPES
PICNIC SUPPLIES
715 EAST BROADWAY
MARYVILLE

SCHLITZ
10-Oz. 6 Pack $1.47
Case $5.75
SCHLITZ
"Tall Boy" (24-oz.) 59¢ EACH
Case $7.20

FALSTAFF
7 oz. bottles
case 24 $3.39

theHighland ECHO

Men perspire, horses sweat, women glisten - Miss H.

Vol. 60 No. 25 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 23, 1975

Elizabeth Jackson Retires

Dr. Elizabeth H. Jackson, a member of the Maryville College faculty for forty years, is retiring at the end of this school year. She came to the Maryville campus in 1935 from the staff of Webster's Dictionary. She said she came because she wanted more contact with people and the enjoyment of working with college students and watching their progress (especially in writing)

When asked why she stayed at Maryville, she replied that she has "a lot of faith in Maryville" and that Maryville has had and hopefully will continue to have something in addition to an academic program.

Dr. Jackson has no definite plans for the future but said she is looking forward to retirement very much. It will give her a chance to do the things she has had to set aside before in order to grade papers and will allow time to be with friends and relatives. She said that she might travel some and perhaps do more work on the English dialect survey that she worked on during her last sabbatical leave.

However it is spent, the time will be a well-deserved rest from paper-grading, scheduling, ordering books, as well as actual teaching and preparation. She said, "One thing I like about Maryville is I like to teach; I like the class room." It is obvious that Dr. Jackson and her dedication will be missed not only by the faculty but also the entire Maryville College community.

Dr. Jackson

In 1952

Controversy Surrounds Butler Departure

During the past several weeks, there has been much talk concerning the dismissal of Dr. Richard Butler. As everyone knows, there are several sides to every controversy and rarely do these stories coincide. This situation is no exception.

Two years ago, Dr. Butler came to Maryville College expecting to remain here for at least two years. The end of the 1975 spring term concludes these two years. In January, Dean Blair and Dr. Butler had a long discussion where she reminded him of the termination of these two years in May. From this discussion and through Dr. Butler's actions, such as not attending faculty meetings or participating in campus activities and not turning in a schedule for the coming year, she assumed that he was not planning on returning in the fall. Dr. Butler, however, says that there was no understanding between Dean Blair and himself that indicated a decision to leave Maryville College in the fall, so he continued to order textbooks and plan classes rather than look for a new position elsewhere. Meanwhile, a new sociology professor has been appointed to replace Dr. Butler.

Since Dr. Butler has not found another position, he was given permission to remain at Maryville College through the fall term and interim so that he would have sufficient time to find employment. However, according to Dr. Butler, Dean Blair reconsidered this decision after learning that he had told students of the situation and the present decline in the sociology department. It was decided that he should not return at all after the summer.

Obviously the situation is very complicated and involves much more than is known. There are no simple answers. but both students and faculty should be aware and concerned with this situation and others like it.

Rhodes Continues NSF Grant

Summer research funded by Research Corporation will be continued at Maryville College for a second summer. Initiated and supervised by Dr. Gale Rhodes, this research is directed at "Primitive Transmembrane Transport and Nonheme Iron Redox Activities Among Thermal Polymers of Amino Acids." For several science majors this research offers an excellent opportunity for the application and an increased expertise of laboratory skills. Each summer, two students are selected to work as technical assistants. The students to work this summer are Art Fowler (on oxidation proteins) and Sheila Moore (transmembrane transport proteins). Dr. Rhodes comments on the significance of his project.

"I think the project offers two students the opportunity for research experience of different type than that of course work or independent study. From my own standpoint, it helps me keep my 'hands wet' with experimental work and keeps me involved in activities that complement and vitalize my teaching activities. I prefer to teach with the viewpoint of a participant in my fields of interst, not as an observer. From a purely scientific standpoint, the work is an attempt to answer questions concerning the origins of the first "working" proteins. We are seeking to determine if forerummers of certain modern proteins might have existed on earth before there was life. We simulate the alleged chemical and atmospheric conditions of the early earth and carry out analyses for certain types of proteins. Mainly it's fun."

Students Inducted Into Tau Kappa Chi

Thirteen new members were inducted into Tau Kappa Chi, Maryville College's honorary music society at the Rosemary Barrett Ahmad concert this week.

Members are elected by the music faculty and active members of Tau Kappa Chi. Nominees must have an accumulative grade average of 3.25 or better. Qualifications may be satisfied by a performance in a student recital, vocal or instrumental concert, or competent organization and direction of a musical event. One-third of the membership may be non-music majors who participate in music organizations or performances.

Music majors elected are: Kathy Wassum, senior, Orlando, Fla.; Daniel Whiteside, junior, Fairfax, Va.; Lisa Boehm, sophomore, Charleston, W. VA.; Scott Dennev, sophomore, Green River, Wyo.; Cindy Murane, sophomore, Hawaii; Colleen O'Shaughnessy, sophomore, Chicago; Carol Paris, sophomore Owensboro, Ky.; and Pam Shelton, sophomore, Carmel, N. Y.

Non-music majors elected are: Ellen Bercovitz, sophomore, Newport Beach, Cal.; Dan Bergner, junior, Orchard Park, N.Y.; Belinda Chiddie, junior, Winston-Salem, N.C.; and Christine D'Aquila, senior, Edison,N J.

Rita Buchanan Resigns

Mrs. Rita Buchanan, a typist in the Maryville College Post Office since September, 1974, is leaving MC to return home to take care of her two children and to concentrate on Blue Grass music. Rita plays the violin and has participated in the Maryville College Community Orchestra.

Rita has enjoyed working in the Post Office, and has especially liked operating the IBM Composer. Among the many publications she has typed include the Maryville College Bulletin, the calendar, the Interim proposals, Fine Arts programs, and the Highland Echo.

Maryville is sorry to lose Rita, but hopes she enjoys her future endeavors.

Rita

Doyle Madrigals Perform Tuesday

The Doyle High School Madrigal and Recorder Ensembles will appear in concert at Maryville College Tuesday, May 27, at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Hall. It is a part of their spring tour of concerts.

The Madrigal group is composed of eleven students and is directed by John Ribble. The Recorder ensemble includes twelve students and is directed by Alan Hoke.

The two ensembles are a part of a special music program at Doyle, and the students participating in the groups earn course credit. Students are responsible for their own constumes which are designed to co-ordinate with the entire group.

The concert at Maryville is being sponsored by Dr. Harry Harter, chairman of the Fine Arts Department, and the Maryville College Madrigal Singers. A reception for the guest artists will follow the performance.

Parting Shots

WHAT TO DO ABOUT GRADUATION

In some cases students have been known to avoid graduation. The Speech Theatre Dept. for example, has a couple of students who have a combined total of fourteen terms involved in Special Studies. (A good-deal of extended research as I understand it.) No matter, the point being that after so much griping about this place--nobody really wants to leave. The effect has been labelled the "womb syndrome." Its power stems from the fact that nothing is for keeps "here at Maryville". Our little community is very much like a nuclear testing ground. If we do not succeed, it's back to the drawing board. Of course we must look at the alternative, and to be honest, there aren't many reasons for leaving. Crime, poverty, pollution, and apathy; I am truly prayerful when I think of how lucky we are not to have any of these things at Maryville. Isn't it about time that we count our lucky stars and register for next fall? What's one more year? So what if you were suppose to graduate in 68', everyone changes their major once. Hell, in one more year I can apply for tenure.

Good Bye Forever
Steve Ayers

SEE JANE

See Jane.
See Jane run.
She overslept. She is late for class.
She is just in time for a pop quiz from Dr. Kratz.
Oh my. She is sad.
See Jane later.
She is at a quad party.
She is happy.
See all her friends.
They are very happy.
I wonder why.

There is Jane again.
She is in the—how do you say?—"sophomore slump."
She is bored.
She does not want to study.
See her walk around campus.
See her walk to Gilbert's.
She has nothing to do.
She wonders what she can do.
I wonder what she will do.
Dr. Shields wonders when she will do it.

See Jane.
She is different now.
She has a major—and special studies.
Boy, does she look excited.
She still does not want to study.
It is Party Time with all her friends.
She is learning something.
But what?

See Jane.
Only one more year to go.
One more year of Saga food.
One more year to study.
One more year to party.
And only 20 more CIV's!
She has friends and comps.
What more could she want? Graduation.
Then she will be ready for the world—right?

Susie Sanders

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Ingrid Gensler, Kit Williamson, Lisa Wishon, Fred Strohl; Layout: Gwen Guba; Rabbit Blues: Charlie Blair; Business Manager: Charlie Thompson; Distribution: R.C. Stevens; Advisor: Dr. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Letter to the Echo

Dear Editor,

A college newspaper's supposed to cover all of that colleges's events . . . right? Then why is it that the track team has been ignored through their entire season? There was only one article pertaining to track that I can remember and that came out before the track season even started! We have a fine team that has worked hard through their entire season. They deserve some recognition, especially our two out standing track stars; Tom Duling and Mike Osborne. How many students know that Tom and Mike are first in the state of Tennessee (college division) for the discus and high hurdles? And is everyone aware that Maryville College is third in the state overall? If the students do realize this, they heard it through the grapevine rather than in the school newspaper where it should have been seen first!!

Duling won the discus toss at the TIAC meet in Memphis with a throw of 132 feet 10 inches. This bettered his MC record by 9 inches.

Osborne won the high hurdles with a time of 14.8, just 2/10 of a second slower than his MC record. Mike also recieved a second in the 440 yard hurdles. His time of 14.8 qualifies him to compete in the National Championships at Baldwin Wallace College in Cleveland, Ohio, May 27-31.

Other MC competitions finished as follow:

100 yd. dash:	Gary Petree - 4th
Shot put:	Mark Keahon - 4th
	Troy Bowman - 5th
220 yd. dash:	Gary Petree - 5th
440 yd. relay:	Scott Poland	team 4th
	John Drake
	Gary Petree
	Bill Straher
Mile Relay:	Mike Osborne	team 4th
	Gary Elrod
	Bill Straher
	Harold Law

The man behind this team deserves a lot of credit too: Coach Ron Case. He has done an outstanding job with the men this year. He is understanding and has a quality to receive the very best from each of his athletes. Not only has he done a good job for the present, he has also planned for the future. He has contacted some excellent prospects for next years team. He has also formed a cross country program for the fall so that the team will be stronger in the spring. The entire team has the greatest appreciation for all the help and sweat he has put into making a winning track team. They will all hate to see him go at the end of this year if he is not permitted to return in the fall.

I hope that this letter has given the team and coach some of their deserved recognition and reward. I also hope that in the future, all MC sports are covered in full without any being ignored.

"A Track Fan"

EDITORS COMMENT

The Highland Echo has approached several members of the track team for articles each week. We have received none. If they don't care enough to write an article, who does? We simply cannot print something we never receive.

The same holds true for the graduation program. We asked for articles on the various activities at the end of the year, but received nothing. That is the only reason these activities have not received proper coverage.

Attention Golf Fans

Attention: Golf Fans Among Faculty, Staff, and Students

On June 7 the Maryville and Alcoa Rotary Clubs are sponsoring a hole-in-one golf contest here at the College. There are some free tickets in the Business Office which will be given away on a first come, first served basis. The only stipulation is that if you take a ticket, please plan to use it. The clubs are very interested in getting a large participation in the contest.

According to Matthew

"Again, the kingdom of Nixon is like a net thrown into international water off the coast of South America. When it is full, it must be given to the South Americans who have extended their boundaries just far enough to encompass the American traveler."

And when Nixon had finished these parables, he went away from there quickly, very quickly. He said to his aides, "You know that after two days, the weekend will be over and Sirica will come back to town, and the Nixon Administration will be delivered up to be unseated. Then the chief Democrats of the people gathered outside the Senate Office Building, and took council in order to arrest Nixon. But they said, "Not during March, we will wait until September, until the situation surfaces." Then one of the twelve, who was called McCord, went to the Chief Democrats and said, "What will you give me if I deliver him to you?" And they paid him in political immunity. And from that moment he sought an opportunity to betray him.

When it was evening he sat at the table with his twelve in an upper room of the White House. As they were eating, Nixon took the tapes and broke them, and for 18 minutes they sung a hymn. Then he took the cup and when he had filled it with deep red wine, he poured it over the remaining documents and fed them into the paper shredder. And his aides fell to their knees and said, "Truly you are our Savior!" And when they had syncronized their stories, they went out.

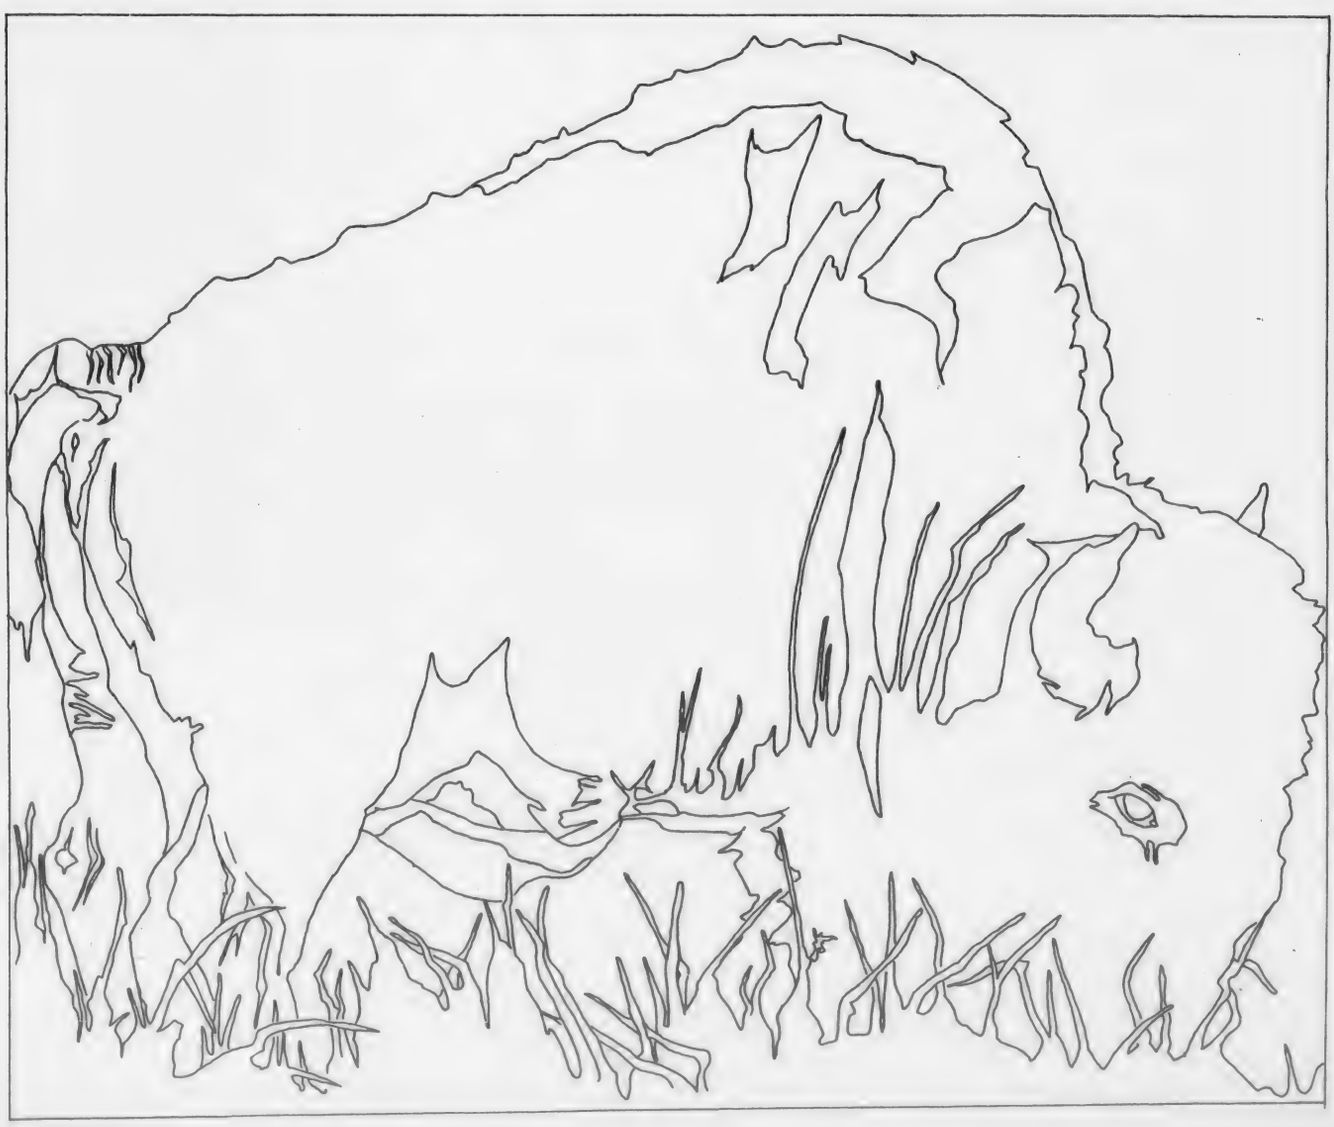
At dawn all chief Representatives and Senators of the people held consultation against Nixon in order to impeach him. Having subpoenaed Him, they led him away and handed Him over to Rodino, the judge.

Now it was customary for the judge to release at the impeachment on of the tapes selected by the populace. And at that time they held a notorious tape called the "Trinity". "Which of the two, the "Trinity" or Nixon shall I release to you?" They said the incriminating "Trinity". "Then what shall I do with Nixon, who is called King?" The entire Congress said, "Let him be impeached!" Rodino said, "Why, what wrong has be done?" But they shouted ever more loudly over the deleations, "Let him be impeached."

When Rodino saw that he was accomplishing nothing, but that instead a riot was brewing, he took water and washed his hands before the crowd saying, "I am innocent of the income tax of this man; you yourselves see to it." And all the people answered, "his domestic blunders be on us and on our children." He then released the tapes to them; but to Nixon he gave the title of "Unindicted Coconspirator", and handed him over to be impeached.

The congress spat on him; they took the CIA and struck him on the head. After they had mocked him, they took off his robe of national security and returned him his own battered blue suit. And they led him away to resign.

On the way out they found a Jock called Gerald, whom they forced to bear his cross. Gerald, now President, arrived at the place called the White House, to call the nations signals.



And when they had resigned Nixon, they distributed his real estate among them by casting stock certificates so that the prophet's saying was fulfilled, "They parted his Camp David among them, and over his Key Biscayne estate they cast lots." And sitting down they watched him squirm there. And two robbers were resigned along with him, one to the right right and one to the ultra-right.

And so it came to pass that on the 30th day after his resignation he was delivered up from proscution by Gerald the Jock's timely pardon.

Nixon was not seen much anymore, but was said to be sulking around San Clemente talking only to his aides, his wife Pat, and occasionally, when he would listen, his teddy bear. But it was reported from reliable sources him saying, "and lo, I am with you always, to the close of the age."

Abridged

Milton Bush
Jim Gonos

GREG MAXWELL

Yes, it was the mid-1960's. The steady hum of people below echoed against the buildings that took refuge from the glaring sun. I stepped into the stuffy elevator that would take me closer to the exciting confusion below. Silently the steel door of the moving cubicle clicked shut. Pushing the smooth hand-polished button marked "main level", I became uncomfortably aware that I was alone. No more did the song of outside life ring in my ears. Down....down. Farther and farther this ugly steel cubicle dropped. On and on. Past all levels of discovered civilizations into an unknown depth. The air became dank and moist. The roaring silence was so strong it almost shattered my eardrums. On and on plunging deeper and deeper downward. It was then that I noticed the floor indicator wasn't working. Suddenly, as if someone's great hand had reached out and grabbed the steel box, it came to a dead stop. Anxiously I waited for the door to open..... nothing! Even the dead silence was gone! There was nothing! ABSOLUTELY NOTHING!.....I must escape... But how? How can I in this ugly steel box?! Hours passed... and I was still trapped. But then something happened. The doors of the steel box slid open. Happy that I had found a vein of escape, I quickly approached the open doors to leave... but stopped...and wondered what I would find outside. There was silence, which was very unusual in this building. After a few moments of decision I thought it best to remove myself from this steel box and see just where I was. Taking one large but timid step, I stood in a long hallway undecided what should be my next move. It was awfully still.

Suddenly, spotlights of tremendous strength were turned on me. Momentary blindness followed. As I raised my hand to my brow to blockade the brightness, an angered voice filled the room.

"hey, buddy!....You! Would you mind getting off the set?"

"Set?....what set?"

"The movie set buddy. Movie set. MOVIE SET!"

"But...but I work here. I've worked here for years!....13 to be exact. This is no movie set!"

"Sorry, buddy. You're mistaken. Don't you understand? This place isn't real. It's a set. A movie set."

"But..."

"A movie set. How many times do I have to tell ya? It never was a real place and it never will be a real place. Now if ya don't mind, we've got work to do. Can ya please move?"

"But you don't understand. I've come to work here every morning. Every morning for the...for the...for the... past..."

"Yeah, buddy. I know, I know. For the past 13 years... Hey, maybe ya should have quit before ya hit 13 huh? Can't tell. It just might be true...ya know...all they say about 13 being a superstitious number. Now would ya mind moving. At least stand back here with the rest of us."

Confused and bewildered I retreated behind the director's chair. What were these people trying to do to me? Why I knew every nook and cranny of this building! How could it be possible?...Well, it couldn't be...that's all there is to it. It just couldn't be!

"Quiet on the set. O. K. Can ya hear me from back here?"

"Yeah. Go ahead."

"You're going to come out of office B and walk toward us down the hallway. Got that?"

"Got ya."

"O. K. Let's get started. Roll-em."

My head was spinning. What was this all about?...He said office B. That's my office! What's a stranger doing in my office?

Quickly the door of office B opened. Now I'll see who this character is that's taken over my office. Out stepped a man with his head lowered. As he raised his head and looked into the camera I couldn't believe what I saw! It was me... It was actually me. Like someone had made a carbon copy of me. It wasn't like having a twin brother...It wasn't like it at all. It was me...or someone identical to me...that was coming out of my office. I just couldn't take it any longer.

"Who are you? Just what are you guys trying to prove? You think this is some kind of joke or something? You all must think you're really cute. Well it's not..."

"Buddy. Just who do you think you are? Now look. We're trying to film a movie. First you just barge in here and then...Look if you can't control yourself you'll have to leave. Now!"

"But that fellow. That's me!"

"Buddy...are you sure you're feelin' alright?"

"Yes, of course I'm feeling alright. But that fellow is me.. Well, just look at the two of us...We're identical."

"Buddy, I think ya should see a doctor. You two couldn't look more different...Well, look. I'll prove it to you. Come here. Now look in this mirror and tell me if ya still think you two are identical."

Anxious to prove that that man was me, I gladly accepted his offer to look in the mirror. But the image face with wasn't that of the man I remember Staring back at me was a white haired man a old with a tired and weary face. Weary of life Slowly I raised my right hand to my face to that was staring me in the face. Yes. I could wrinkles as though they'd been there for ye pure exhaustion and shock came over me.

"Hey buddy. You don't look too well. W down here?"

"Thank you.....Thank you."

"Buddy. I'm sorry I was so hard on you, make you understand that you and this man same man. Why you saw for yourself in the at least 45 years older than him. Look. Let to you. Hey, Greg. Come here."

Uneasily Greg stepped over.

"This is Greg Maxwell. I'm sorry Buddy quite caught your name. What is it?"

Slowly I looked up.

"My name?...Greg...Greg Maxwell..."

Old Man

An old man sat alone.
He sat and rocked.
and gazed at me unflinchingly.
His hands lay stagnant on his knees.
Inside his brittle wrinkling folds
He stared at me through two specks of moist blue sky- - - the only part not dull and dryed out.
Just one time he reached and shakily touched my hair
but then his hand fell silent into his lap
again.

Lisa Wilson

The Murder of Leadership

Armed with Darringer and Dagger,
The assassin crept forward---
With a Devil-smile...
Crept closer,
crept closer...
And fired!
And Honesty
And Self-made Men were DEAD!

Peggy Maher

NOTE: This poem was inspired by the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

Jeff Swain

ne face to yself to be.
70 years
of living.
he proof
he deep feeling of

n't ya sit down

just had to dn't be the r. You're troduce him

't think I

Chris D'Aquila

Revenge

Shafts of golden sunlight as polars stand
holding the grey clouds up.
I wait for the blind Samson
to topple this sky.

Anonymous

Cassandra

"Again the dread pang of true prophet's gift
With preludes of great evil dizzies me."

They never forgive a girl for having a brain.
I knew just as well, and I told father
That that horse was just too big for a piece of statuary,
And, Andromache, you of all people should know
What with Hector just buried and all
That those Greeks aren't giving out anything but the shaft.
Nothing's free, Andry, even Paris found that out!

And just because Hecuba babysits for you free
Doesn't mean she won't collect.
Priam won't live forever, and when he's gone
She'll move in with you,
And when Astynax is about fourteen
You'll be getting a sitter for her!

There's this pressure on my sinuses—
(Some people get itchy feet but with me its my sinuses)
Everytime I look out the window
Like that horse was situated on my head.
So I might as well start packing.
I'd better pack everything, since I'll probably never get back;
Who cares anyway? I'm fed up with being the only one
Who can find anything, and if father won't use my talent
For planning the future, I'll sell it to some Greek Who's at least smart enough to read his horoscope!

I guess I'll be the doorprise for one of those Greek heroes.
I hope its Achilles and not that tiresome five-star general
Who's famous for collecting slave girls,
But who gives a damn, I'm twenty-three, for God's sake,
And still a virgin—that can't last for long—
But even if Agamemnon offered me my own chariot
And all the silk I can embroider, he'll get nothing from me.
After all, didn't I turn Apollo down when I was just a kid?
But once you say "no" they just look over your head
As if you were pregnant or something!

That pressure's moved over into my Eustacian tube
I guess that means Ag's the one;
I never luck up and get the nice guys,
They're afraid I'll know when they slip around,
And I will alright, but I guess
I could put up with that if I didn't have to fix their dinners—
These young guys aren't any more liberated than their fathers!

Anyway it'll be all over pretty soon.
That Clytemnestra, if she's anything like her sister,
Will probably stab me before I can tell her
That as far as I'm concerned her war hero can take a flying leap—
I'd settle for my own place near a library
Where I could think—maybe put some of this prophecy down on paper—
But I doubt anyone except a few students would read it.

Charlotte Beck

Travelling with Thom

My brother continually cultivates his smile
in restroom mirrors.

Tim Rahn

Tom Fox

Signature

I am a cynic
...true...
but look closer the sadness shows sometimes– when I'm high
For I am a fair lady who has learned that there are no princes and there are no dragons either.
...yes...
I've learned
but I'm not really sure
I wanted to know

Kimberly Darden

We live Alone - -
Life is tiny bits of sand.
The waves, eternally,
come to take us from the land;
We try to hold ourselves from mingling in Though many are we,
We are few and will be back again.

Monti

Dying In a Hospital Cancer Ward

I'd like to think I'll always be a stranger
A 'wanderin' until I finally see the light
To live life free and see what's there to see
I'd like to think that I have done alright.

Now, advice to you can come from every doorstep
They'll tell ya how to avoid their own mistakes
They all mean well, but there's little there to tell
They can't tell ya exactly what it takes.

I'm a drifting lad originally from my home
I'd like to think that someday I'll go there again
But in this painful meantime, I'll slowly use my own time
And when I arrive, I'll be in my heaven.

The people I've known haven't been too bad
Some can really set a boy straight
And a few back there, I remember with care
And a few just never learned how to hate.

But back on the road, as free as a bird
I don't think I ever want to "tie"
'Cause I love the road and not to carry a load and travel, even just with my mind's eye.

Dave Barker

Sitting, thinking,
Wondering what will happen
When I turn the next corner
In the road of life.

The unknown scares me,
And I really don't feel that I can cope,
But I know that I must,
Because the road goes on
Into tomorrow.

I keep wondering what will happen
When I reach the next fork.

Which way to go?

To tomorrow or yesterday?

Yesterday offers comforts,
But leaves no room for growing.

Tomorrow offers growing,
But is a scary unknown.

Which way are you going?

Mellowing out after an extreme life high,
Before which was extreme depression.

Just wondering.

What comes next?

If I knew that I'd be a sage.
But there really are no sages,
For no one knows what's next.
Isn't that what keeps us going?

Nan Bostock

Strewn against the earthen shoulder, patches of meadow sweet and fireweed stand in the dim grey of evening. . . a great blue heron hearld's the empty sky, and wayward gulls cry into the night's impossibilities.

Neva Parker

The Saga of M. C.

Meatless spagetti sauce
Always out of milk
Recycled pimentos
Yeastly rolls
Varied Soybean
In one end and out the other
Ludicrous lines
Leftover leftovers
Every napkin an environmental issue.

Casserole kingdom
Oblivious slop sloppers
Loosers' Luncheon
Lethargic lettuce
Eleven kinds of pineapple icecream
Gastro Intestronitis
Even the coffee is bad.

Terry Noack

Joe Showalter

Yellow, red, green, and orange,
like a colorful tangle of spaghetti,
the bikes coil upon each other.
Who will be the enterprising soul to brave this tangled mess?

Unwind the strands,
pluck a single color
from the multicolored array.
Gently fold back again for the next one to venture this prismatic disk.

Nancy Druschel

Tom Fox

I read, I sing, I laugh a while,
Then I climb a hill or kick a stone
Into the pond and watch the ripples grow
Into unbreakable circles.

With these I become a part of the Undefined, part of the universe,
Part of humanity.

With these I explore the known and unknown,
I enter eternity with bliss.

I cry every now and then
And the walls fall on my life,
My dreams, my hopes.
All is swept by on a flood of crystal tears.

But I realize I live,
And happiness returns
As if it had never left.

With these in mind, I pray-
For understanding and love.
I pray for Man.

I am the universe,
I am humanity
And my soul knows God.
I am part of God.

All is Peace!

Debby Cook

10,000 to (1 x 20 megatons)

Dawn was coming. The slow rising of the sun, while pushing moon and stars out of sight, began to break the arid cold of the desert night. The ground seemed to sigh with relief lief as it gave up its nightly chill for the soothing heat of the day.

Ka amil, chief of the Usury desert tribes, stood on a low hill gazing down on Gibble, his town, the town all members of his ten tribes looked upon as the center of their universe. He watched silently as lights came on in the windows of houses and cook fires were set alight in front of the hundreds of tents which were housing ten thousand of his subjects. They had come from near and far to join his crusade. Ten thousand soldiers were more than enough to overwhelm the three thousand strangers who were defiling the Mother Earth.

Those parasitic aliens had arrived many years earlier in their flamespitting sky-craft. They were allowed to remain only if they followed the rulings of the Elder's Council and took their precious black fuel from the great pools which lay many leagues to the East of Ka amil's lands. Soon the greedy wasteful strangers had drained the pools of oil, as they called it, and began building large metal towers from which they drove druel shafts into the very heart of the Mother Earth and drew out her black blood.

Ka amil, escorted by scores of his subjects, had made a great pilgrimage to the seat of the Elder's Council to protest this flagrant torture of the Goddess Earth. They and their protest were turned away by a council which had been corrupted by the power and technology of strangers.

Disquieted by this turn of events, Ka amil made his way back to the land of his people and formed a new council, the Usurian Elder's Council. This new council pledged that the Mother Earth would never be defiled in the lands of the Usury people.

The day had come not many months afterwards when the strangers had moved West of the Muddy River; onto the Ka amil's land. They immediately set up their towers and tortured the Earth. Ka amil became infuriated and bid the Usurian Council let him destroy the towers and their owners. The council voted in favor of him unanimously. He sent out highly skilled desert fighters to destroy the two towers that had been seen. They came back four days later reporting success. The towers had been razed and the strangers operating them killed. Rangers sent out later did not bring back such encouraging news. Instead of moving off, the strangers had built six new towers and brought in some type of guards. When the rangers had appeared on a ridge above one of the new towers, a strange object, which moved on round bands and had a turret with a long tube on it, moved out from the tower toward them. They retreated behind the ridge, and deciding the new guard to be a stronger foe than they could fight, returned to Gibble.

Ka amil could stand for no more, he called his subjects from all his lands to join together with him in a crusade to crush the enemy strangers once and for all. The people of Usury responded with zeal; they arrived by the hundreds each day, coming in long caravans out of the desert. Whole villages moved to Gibble to join Ka amil's Holy Army. From the day the first of these caravans had arrived a festive mood had prevailed through all of Gibble; all but the mind of Ka amil, a single fact of unexplained value had begun to nag his mind. All the caravan leaders had reported sighting black dots trailed by streamers of white which circled the caravans from a great height every day or two. No one could explain this oddity until one of the leaders brought forth the idea that the mysterious dots were none other than emissaries of the great Mother Earth which were blessing the peoples of the caravans to insure victory over the strangers. All the leaders accepted this explanation and spread the news through their people. Soon the town was buzzing with news of the great Mother of the Earth visiting on the day of battle. On the surface Ka amil believed the stories of the upcoming visitation too; but deep inside he felt that something about the black specks in the sky was amiss.

While his army was arriving, Ka amil stepped up the attacks on the towers. Even though the returning raiders reported success after success in destroying towers, his rangers brought back discouraging news. The towers that were destroyed were always rebuilt in three or four days, and new towers were being built by the scores. But he was worrying more about those infernal black specks than the number of towers being built, they were circleing Gibble twice a day now. To Ka amil those "emissaries of the Mother Earth" just did not look too divine to him.

And now, here he stood, watching his people awake to the day they would march off to war and hopefully victory. He felt elated, yet deep inside he was worried. What were those black specks he watched idly circle his army's encampment!? Ka amil sighed and started to descend the hill towards Gibble, his cloak glowing softly in the dawn's sun. Overhead a single speck trailing a great white streamer circled.

At midday Ka amil's aide came into his bedroom and softly roused him from a restless sleep. The loyal aide helped the chief of the Usury into his royal armor. In the dim candle light the gold trappings of his breast plate glittered jubilantly. Finally, the aide carefully handed him the sword that had been carried by ten Usury chieftans before Ka amil. It had never been defeated in battle; it had always upheld the honor of the Usury people it served. Ka amil rose and left his chambers.

When he enters the square of Gibble, the ears of Ka amil were assaulted by the cheers of his subjects. The clashing of sword on shield, the clapping of many hands and the hoarse yells of ten thousand stout warriors raised the eyes of Ka amil, he felt the tiny worries of unexplained facts vanish like fog under a bright sun. The pride and joy of his troop's welcome overwhelmed him; he raised his sword on high and cheered his troops in return. His aide leaned over and bid the great Ka amil look to the sky. He lowered his sword and gazed to the heavens. There, far above them in the brittle blue skies, not one, but two black dots, their white tails twining about one another. They were messengers, he was blessed, his troops were blessed; he turned to tell his troops of the great good omens overhead when the world vanished in a blinding white flash.

Jeff Swain

Bambadier Cannie Shurmak, of Strategic bomber 130-c belonging to the Earth Interplanetary Air Force, opened the ships log and entered the following,

"10/45/09. Twenty megaton therm-nuclear device dropped at 12:01.3. Impact at 12:02.5. Observed total destruction of target zone."

The two big bombers wheeled away and disappeared to the East over the smoking ruins of Gibble.

Elliot Hopkins

Impressions

Remembrance

Once upon a moonlit night away from all lights but the stars we sat cradled by a mountain.
The darkness crept down quietly,
slithered through the trees, and poured over us on the hillside--- thickening and settling slowly.

How easy it was to let starlight dazzle our eyes while the wind that tossed the tree-limbs rustled our thoughts as well.

The thing that I remember most is that I could feel the mountain's heartbeat beneath me in rhythm with yours.

And your breathing was an echo of something lost and long ago.

Lisa Wilson

Tom Fox

Motion of a Glossy Print

Waxen like small porcelain sculptures the grasses glisten
green in the dew dipped morn.
The dead brown stalks of Queen Anne's Lace stiffly sway in the brisk breeze.
Fleets of clouds at full sail, rapidly speed with the strength of westerly winds across a sea of lucid, pale blueness.
High kiting birds drop erratically in flight.
Their breasts seem to brush
the tops of tall grey trees, branches leaflessly tossing about.
Other birds endlessly sing from the dense brush that is gathered around a swollen creek bed.
Rippling, rushing, muddy waters
cascade over jumbled smooth stones.
The wind swirls lifeless, frail leaves plunging them into the creek where they are left to flow; cascade over a stream of jumbled smooth worn stones.

Anonymous

Break

Engulfed in a cascade of fall colours, in love with the crisp and clearness of fall
A gentle sax melts my mind, I am caged in a plastic world of green and yellow, with Neon lights and soot stained ceilings.
People grouped by carpenters' design watch the careful planned approach of Nicotine addicts.
Coffee consumed from hot and cold styrofoam cups, minds wander...perchance to escape
The sounds stop - and silence beckons...
a coin is dropped...the push button alters lives again.
Trapped in a world of decaying decadence.
windows distorted with age hold us in a world of disspassionate illusion where education is taken for granted and regurgitation is the norm.
life goes on with out me.
I sit absorbed in a world of jukebox fed memories.

Terry Noack

"Impressions" is the beginning of something new on the Maryville College campus. We feel that it can be the beginning of something very exciting. We hope to enlarge this supplement into a full magazine next year so that the campus community will have a much needed outlet for creative talent. However, the only way we will be able to produce a literary magazine will be with the full support of the community. We need to know how you feel about this idea. Read "Impressions" and give us your reactions, both positive and negative. If we know how the campus feels we will be able to make "Impressions" truly a campus magazine.

We would like to thank those who helped create "Impressions". Lisa Wilson, Ed Loper, Neena Stallings and Gerri Gudall were invaluable as editors. We especially appreciate the efforts of Ann Weaver, our typist, and Linda Savage, who was kind enough to make posters and design our title. Finally we wish to acknowledge the encouragement we received from Dr. Beck, our faculty advisor.

Kimberly Darden
Tim Rahn
co-editors of "Impressions"

The Gospel of Watergate: Based on The Gos

The book of the genealogy of the Nixon Administration, the son of democracy, the son of monarchy.

Nero was the father of Atilla the Hun, the father of Genghis Khan, Innocent the III was the father of Urban the II. Henry the VIII was the father of Bloody Mary, the mother of Ivan the Terrible, the father of Ferdinand and Isabella, who fathered the Inquisition. Andrew Johnson was the father of U. S. Grant, the father of Czar Nicholas II. The Zimmerman letter was the father of Palmer, the father of the Red Scare, who fathered the Teapot Dome Scandal. President Hoover was the father of an illegitimate son, Adolph Hitler: the father of Tojo, Stalin, and the Rosenburgs. McCarthy was the father of the witch-hunts, who was the father of the election of Wallace. The Bay of Pigs Incident fathered the Eagleton scandal. And the Nixon Administration was conceived of the Virgin Pentagon Papers of Daniel Ellsberg.

In those days came Joseph McCarthy, speaking on the wilderness of communism saying, "Communism is the death of the soul. It is the organization of total conformity—in short, of tyranny—and it is committed to making tyranny universal." Thus fulfills the prophet's words saying, "for there is a communist hiding under every burning rosebush." Now Joseph wore a cloak of national security with a leather girdle of M-1 bullets around his waist, and his food was Coca Cola, hot dogs (no yellow stuff, no red stuff), and apple pie. And he went out into America speaking of freedom and Baptizing followers with a plumber's helper. And when Nixon came from Washington to Joseph to be baptized, Joseph would have prevented him saying, "I need to be baptized by you, and you come to me?" But Nixon answered him saying, "Let it be so now, for thus it is fitting for us to fulfill Haldeman's testimony." Then he consented. And when Joseph baptized him, behold, the F. B. I. files were opened and he saw the spirit of the tapes descending upon him like a super-nova, and plummeting his head. And Joseph said, "Go placidly amidst the noise and waste, and remember what comfort there my be in the National Anthem."

Then Nixon was led into domestic affairs and was tempted by the courts. While the rest of the nation fasted forty days, due to inflation, Dick ate heartily, till finally the meat distributor said to him, "We will not deliver meat to the White House until we can eat it also," and Nixon said, "Let them eat cake, for man does not live by meat alone, but from every word from my mouth." And then the Republican Party took him to Washington and offered him the Presidency again,————and he took it. And then Pat took him to Camp David, in the Catoctin Mountains, from there he could see all the kingdoms of the world, and he wished that they were his. All his problems left him for the moment, and behold, Pat came and ministered to him. And Dick returned to Washington, by power of his 707 and began to speak, "I have no knowledge of the cover-up!"

As he drove by the Potomac he saw two men, John, who his called a liar, and Charles Colson, testing the pollution content of the water. And he said to them, "Follow me and I'll make yoy fish-mongers." And going from there he saw Magruder and Mitchell aboard a yacht in Miami set up for sound and photographs, and after all was secure, they packed up their tapes and followed him.

And he went about the nation speaking "power to the Presidency," and vetoing Medicare bills. And great crowds followed him with picket signs and banners.

Seeing the crowds he went into the Blue Room and delivered a State of the Union Address saying:

"Blessed are they who disbelieve the charges of illegal activity during and preceding the election of 1972."

"Blessed are they who remember I was in Moscow when the knowledge of the break-ins occurred."

"Blessed are they who live in the ghetto to keep the economy balanced."

"Blessed are they who know that Eliot Richardson is the new Attorney General."

"Blessed are they who know I accepted resignations of Bob Haldeman and John Erlichman."

"Blessed are they who eat soy flour instead of wheat flour."

"Blessed are they who place faith in our system."

"Blessed are they who let the judicial process go forward."

"Blessed are they who do not fall into excesses, that two wrongs don't make a right."

"Blessed are they who are not distracted by the events of Watergate at a time of critical importance to America and the world."

"You are the salt of the earth, I will not give that to Russia."

"You are the light of the world, or until the oil runs out."

"I have not come to abolish the law and leaders, but I have and will try to."

"You have heard that it was said to our forefathers, "YOU shall not deprive certain freedoms, and whoever does shall be liable to judgment. But I say to you that anyone who accuses me of espionage will be paid off

"You shall not commit adultery, but I say to you, whoever looks upon Pat lustfully must be insane

"It was also said, "Whoever divorces his wife, let him give her a certificate of divorce. But I say to you, go to Las Vegas."

"Do not swear falsely, but only of the Democrats."

"You have heard it was said 'An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.' But I say to you, subpoena or court order, I will not release the tapes."

"You have heard it was said, 'You shall love your neighbor and hate your enemies.' But I say to you, love your neighbor, pray for your enemies, and hate the Democrats."

"Judge not, I will judge for you."

"Beware of false prophets, for they come to you as Democrats. You will know them by their Ass."

"Everyone then who hears these words of mine and does them will be like a wise man who has built his house upon the government land; and the stock market fell and the mortgage went up."

And when Nixon had finished his address, the crowds were astonished at his teaching, and Chet and David gave a half hour commentary which interrupted the Brady Bunch, for he taught them as one who has authority, for "He was the President!"

When he came down from the mountain, great crowds followed him and behold, Ron Zieglar came to him saying, "Dick come clean." And immediately Nixon said to him, "See that you say nothing to anyone, especially the press."

When Nixon entered John Dean's house, The Howard Johnson's across from the Watergate Building, he saw Martha Mitchell lying sick on the davenport. And he touched her hand to a newly connected telephone line and she rose and called her divorce lawyer.

As they were going away, behold a dumb demoniac, Herbert L. Porter, was brought to him. And when asked why he chose to "abdicate your own conscience," he spoke, "I have kind of drifted along. In all honesty I said nothing for fear group pressure would ensue, of not being a team-player.....I had never been involved in a political campaign before...These things were all new to me and I accepted them for what they were." And the crowds marveled saying, "a terrible indictment of politics."

And when he called his twelve aides together, he gave them authority over the plumbers to cast them out and cover-up any infirmity. The names of his twelve important aides were Haldeman, Erlichman, McCord, who is called a liar, Colson, Magruder, Mitchell, Sloan and LaRue, and Stans, head of finance, Mardian, Gray, and Dean. And Nixon sent them out to pay-off and overshadow. "Behold, I sent you out as wolves in the midst of sheep; so be wise and as innocent as I. Beware of newsmen; for they will deliver you up by misleading questions, and flog you in their conferences and you will be dragged before a seven-man investigation committee of senators, to bear testimony before them. When they deliver you up, do not be anxious how or what you are to say; for what you are to say will be given to you in that hour; for it is not you who speak, but the Spirit of Perjury."

And when Nixon had finished instructing his twelve aides, he went on from there to sleep, for he refused to watch the proceedings on NBC.

At the proper time Nixon went through the grainfields; his people were hungry and they began to pluck ears of grain and eat. But when the Russians saw it, they said to him, "Look, our five-year plans went down the drain with Kruschev, sell us some grain." And Nixon said, "You have read the newspapers, too." So he sold them our excess grain. Inflation became rampant and later Nixon was heard to say, "I desire mercy and not sacrifice."

That same day Nixon went out from the White House and sat beside the Reflecting pool. And demonstrators gathered around him and he got into a swan boat (which cost him a buck and a half) and sat there and he told them a parable, saying:

"A President went out to win. And as he campaigned, some money fell along his path and his aides devoured it. Other money fell in the Rocky Mountains, where they wasted it on ski resorts and gambling casinos and when '72 came they were back for more. More money fell in the South, but the blacks rioted and Wallace wasted the money on the National Guard. But the most money fell in good pockets, which gave rise to 30, 60, or 100 per cent of the vote."

Shrew "Rousing"

by Debbie Welch

The rousing performance of the actors and a brawl in the audience at Thursday night's performance of "Taming of the Shrew" revived the spirit of the old Globe theatre. Blair Beasley demonstrated an ability to direct and, incidently, act in a successful production. And though Shakespeare is verbose, the characters sustained a moving dialogue.

Steve Ayers as Petruchio and Celeste Gourdin in her debut as Katherina, the shrew, deserve recognition for their convincing roles. Alternating between kissing and slapping, sweet talk and demands, Mr. Ayers well portrayed Petruchio's delight in taming his shrew. Ms. Gourdin, though straining at times for nastiness, developed a character worthy of the name shrew, at least so far as the interpretation of the play. The very physical courtship scene aroused the rah-rah emotions of the audience.

Old time favorites of the Maryville stage demand celebration also. Phillip Gibson as Tranio and Stuart Smith as Baptista supported the plot well with their appearances. The character of Grumio packages all Shakespeare's glory and was suggestively portrayed by Carl Swenson. Wayne Dansbury also drew audience recognition.

Suzanne Schoen, relatively new to M. C.'s stage, attempted to play the dual personality of sweet Bianca, but was not quite as convincing as others. Another novice, Rocky Onofrietto rallied his thick-headed character of Biondello.

The rest of the 22 person cast supported the play throughout, and Mr. Beasley did a fine job of advantageously using his set to balance the stage. All the actors needed more coaching in speech clarity as some scenes were lost to the audience though they picked up the gist as the play proceeded.

The latest performances of the Maryville Playhouse have shown a greater determination and dedication to produce good shows. "Taming of the Shrew" was no exception.

Belshazzar's Feast Proves Excellent

Lynn Yeatts
Linda Sutton

Judging from the audience reaction, the college's performance of William Walton's oratorio Belshazzar's Feast was a great success. This final major musical event of the '74-'75 season under the direction of the Department of Fine Arts took place last Sunday evening, at 8:30 p.m. Under the direction of Dr. Harry H. Harter, the oratorio was performed by the Maryville College Concert Choir, augmented by select community members; the Doyle High School Mixed Chorus, directed by John Ribble; the College-Community Orchestra, also augmented by members of the Knoxville Symphony; and baritone soloist Phillip Steele, who sang as a part of the Performing Artists Concert series.

The oratorio is a short, powerful work, heavily orchestrated. The difficult intervals and entrances made it a hard piece for the choruses to sing. However, they surmounted the intonation problems very effectively. Mr. Steele sang the short, declamatory solo sections with excellent diction and technique, and thus clearly related the Old Testament story of the overthrow of the Babylonians. The orchestral parts were also very difficult, but the instrumentalists played them with great power and excitement.

Following the performance, the College Choir made a special presentation of a plaque to the Doyle High School Mixed Chorus for their participation in four different choral works with the Concert Choir. Also honored were the winners of the annual Oscar Phillip Steele Award, presented by Mr. Steele to those music majors who showed excellent potential in the field of performance. The winners included Carol Paris, William Robinson, Pam Shelton, Rebecca Smith, and Betty Carol Zinavage.

Hunter to Hold Recital

David Randall Hunter, a senior voice major at Maryville College, will reveal in public performance a facet of his complex personality perhaps not very familiar to the college community. An evening of serious musical enjoyment is in store tonight for those who have nothing better to do on a Friday night than sit quietly in a recital hall and be entertained. In this respect the recital promises to be outstanding . . . Mr. Hunter has been working all week to prepare for the performance.

Assisted by Miss Melanie Kohn, one of the greatest assistants ever to assist on a Maryville stage, the recital seems to be well-rounded. Miss Kohn is also an exceptional pianist, which should add a great measure of professional appeal to the overall performance. Also appearing, as stage managers, will be James Gray and Stanley McCleave, both recently seen in the Maryville College Playhouse production of Taming of the Shrew.

Like television, a good recital can keep an audience spellbound for sustained periods of time with only brief periods of relaxation during commercials. There will, however, be no commercials at this evening's performance. Nor will there be any addmission charge, owing to the fact that there were no performance royalties other than the nominal 11,000 dollars tuition for the voice lessons.

Everyone is welcome! Come as you are . . . or are not.

Young to Give Reading

On Monday, May 26 Dr. David P. Young will present a reading recital on the lawn between the FAC Music Hall and Lounge. The readings will consist of poetry, character sketches, and reflections. All works are original compositions of Dr. Young.

Humor At Maryville?

Speech Competition Forthcoming

The National Endowment for the Hunamities has funded a nation-wide speech competition on certain specified American historical themes. Contests will be offered in debate, persuasive, and extempore speaking. Local, district, regional and national events will be held beginning in September, 1975 and continuing through June, 1976. The contest is open to all college students. Topics include the following. Local Event Debate: "Resolved that urbanization has lowered the quality of American life"; Persuasive Speech: "A Shrinking Frontier?"; Extemporaneous Speech: " 'In Congress Assembled...' A Representative Legislature"; District Event, Debate: "Resolved that American political parties have been dominated by socio-economic elites"; Persuasive Speech: "By Consent of the States: Is Federalism Obsolete?"; Extemporaneous Speech: "The Sprawling City". Other topics for later events and rules for the contestants are available. Any student interested in this competition should contact Dr. Walker, Thaw 212 for further information.

Prepare For King Arthur

Twelve students have already expressed a desire to participate in the third King Arthur interim scheduled for 1976, according to Mrs. Herma R. Cate and Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler, co-directors. In 1970 twenty-four persons went "In Search of King Arthur" to various parts of England; in 1973 thirty-four made a similar trip which also included several towns in northern France where the Arthurian legend was transplanted during medieval times.

Any student who has some reasonable expectations of being able to make the trip (no down payment or obligation until the spring of 1976) should contact the directors before the summer vacation.

Play-Writing Competition to be Held

Subject: One Act plays written on a theme or event in American history prior to 1800.

Judges: One from each of three departments—drama, English and history.

Elements of judging: Due the first of March, 1976, plays will be judged on three elements—dramatic, literary, and historical. While they need not adhere strictly to historical facts and may draw upon imaginative settings and characterization, the plays should not violate the historical spirit or present settings or characterization contrary to historical evidence.

Prize: One hundred dollars in prize money will be awarded at the discretion of the judges on the basis of quality. Two prizes, one of $75 and one of $25 will be awarded unless the committee decides that one prize is suitable, or unless the competition does not produce a work of desirable quality in which case the committee may not make the award.

For further information see members of the history department.

Yuhasz Performs Wednesday

On Wednesday evening May 28, 1975 Steven John Yuhasz, a Speech-Theatre major, will present his Senior Recital. The program will consist of several scenes taken from outstanding dramatic literature including both classical and contemporary; from Shakespeare to the Marx Brothers. He will be assisted by Dottie Beasley, Susan Glaze and David Hunter. It is rare for a Speech—Theatre major to do a program of this sort, and it is one which you would not want to miss. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. in the Studio Theatre.

Steve Yuhasz

Scholarships Announced

PRIZES AND AWARDS

Alexander English Award - to the senior with best 4-year record in English
Winner: Jane Ellen Duffy

Bates Bible Award - This award is given annually for proficiency attained in Bible study.

David Clifton Blazier

The Bates Forensics-Drama Award is given in Alternate years to the most outstanding junior or senior in Forensics and in Drama. The award this year goes to

Steven John Yuhasz

The George A. Knapp Mathematics Award - to the junior or senior adjudged the most outstanding and most promising student majoring in Mathematics.
Penelope S. Lopez

The Verton M. Queener Scholarship Awards go to the outstanding junior in Political Science and to the outstanding junior in American or English History.

Robert Paul Hines, Jr. - History
Emerson D. Henderson - Political Science

The Davies Fine Arts Scholarship Award - to a junior majoring in Fine Arts
Lynn M. Houlberg - Art
Margaret Ann Leatherwood - (Peggy) - Music

The Blount National Bank Award of $50. goes to the senior doing the most excellent work in Economics and goes this year to Randall Warren McGill

The Bank of Maryville Scholarship Award in Economics is made each year to the rising senior economics major who has the highest overall grade point average at the end of his junior year.
Kenneth M. Talbott

The Elizabeth Hillman Chemistry Award to a woman student for excellence in Chemistry

No recipient this year

The Susan Allen Green Scholarship Award - to the most outstanding junior majoring in Biology

Susan Doris Meier

The Russell Edwards Award - to the most outstanding junior in Physics or Mathematics

David P. Reinauer

The Alpha Delta Kappa Scholarship Award - to the outstanding junior in Education

Marjorie Rebecca Teas

The Barraclough Choir Award - to the senior who has been a member of the Choir for at least two years and has been most outstanding in service to the Choir, an active Christian leader, and a successful student.
James Paul Lester, Jr.

Hardballers Finish 15-12

The 1975 Maryville College "Fighting" Scots Baseball team concluded its season last Wednesday afternoon by splitting a doubleheader at home against Emory and Henry. The Wasps won the first game, 7-2, before the Scots came back to win the nightcap, 5-4. These two teams were scheduled to play another doubleheader at Emory, Virginia, but it was rained out and will not be made up. As a result, MC closes out the campaign with a record of 15-12.

Last Wednesday's first game saw MC Pitcher Dave Spradlin hurl a no-hitter for 5 1/3 innings before giving up his first hit and running into trouble that resulted in four runs for Emory and Henry during the sixth inning. The Wasps scored three more in the seventh as Spradlin was relieved by Mike Flagler after 6 2/3 innings of work. MC did come back to score two runs in its seventh inning, but it was too late by then. Bobby Fitzgerald doubled and scored on a single by Joe Moffett. Consecutive singles by Paul Viggiano and Jim Lester allowed Moffett to score with the second run.

Emory and Henry scored two runs during the first inning of the second ballgame, but the Scots came back with one during the bottom of the first. Lester walked, stole second, advanced to third base on an error, and came home on a wild pitch. The Scots scored two in the fourth as Buddy McDonald reached base on a fielders choice and went to second on a wild pitch. Moffett then singled as McDonald moved to third. Steve Wright struck out, but the last pitch got by the catcher as McDonald was plated and Moffett moved to second. Paul Bailey walked to load the bases before Moffett scored. MC got one in the fifth as Vince Fucci reached base after being hit by a pitch, stealing second, and coming home all the way from second base on a long sacrifice fly by Fitzgerald. The Wasps tied the game with two runs in the sixth, but the Scots got their winning run in the bottom of that inning as Moffett singled, reached second on a wild pitch, moved to third on Bailey's single, and scored on a suicide squeeze by Viggiano.

"Dapper" McKinstry pitched the whole game as he notched his fifth win of the season vs. only one loss. Two of the four runs he allowed were earned as he gave up 11 hits, walked one, and struck out three. Moffett and Bailey were the leading hitters for the Scots as they both had two hits.

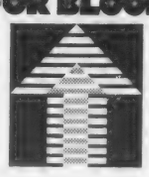
Spradlin ended up with the highest batting average on the team for the season as he hit .355. Among regulars, Fucci's .340 lead the way. McDonald lead the team in homeruns with two, while Fitzgerald captured the rbi title with 13. Lester led in stolen bases with 17. As a team, MC batted .271.

On the pitching staff, McKinstry led in victories with five and in innings pitched with 52. Spradlin recorded the most strikeouts with 24 and had the lowest ERA at 1.55.

MC originally had 38 games on its 1975 schedule, but because of rainouts and the inability to reschedule them, they only played 27 games. It was still an interesting season as the Scots should have a nucleus for another good team next year.

Track

This year's track team was the best in the last fifteen years. The team went 5-1 in two-way meets. New records were set by team standouts Mike Osborne, John Leibrock, and Tom Duling. Osborne set records in the 120 yard high hurdles and 440 yard intermediate hurdles. He is running the 120 yard event in the Division III Nationals at the end of May. Leibrock broke the old school record by high jumping 6'4". Duling tossed the discuss 132' 10" to shatter the old school mark.



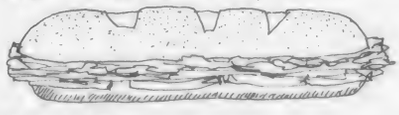
Along with their outstanding record the Scots also placed fifth at Western Carolina Relays and third at the State Track meet for small colleges.

Coach Case did an outstanding job with a team loaded with freshman, sophomores and juniors. With everyone coming back, the coach is looking forward to an undefeated season next year. Exciting and winning track has finally arrived at Maryville and promises to be around for the next few years.

Intramurals Results

At 4:00 Monday afternoon, the "Bent Nail Syndrome" squared off against "Unknown at this Time" for the men's intramural softball championship. After an exciting game, "Bent Nail Syndrome" emerged victorious. Ray Oliveri was the winning pitcher, though his team was plagued by a few timely errors. The seventh and final inning proved to be futile for the "Unknown" as they scored no runs with the "Bent Nails" going on to win the squeaker, 8-7.

WE'RE OUT FOR BLOOD.



$10 per donation.
Plasma twice a week.
Or whole blood every 8 weeks.

Monday through Saturday.
Free parking.

blood alliance
520 Western Avenue • Phone 637-3171
(Formerly Knoxville Blood Center)

the flavor tree
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

For your favorite deli. sandwich — hot or cold — (From $1.00)
* Imported & domestic cheese
* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914

delicatessen

EASY CURB MARKET
8 - 11 MARKET
Open 7 Days A Week
8:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
Open All Holidays
BEVERAGE OF ALL TYPES
PICNIC SUPPLIES
715 EAST BROADWAY
MARYVILLE

SCHLITZ
10-Oz. 6 Pack $1.47
Case $5.75

SCHLITZ
"Tall Boy" (24-oz.) 59¢ EACH
Case $7.20

FALSTAFF
7 oz. bottles
case 24 $3.39

1975 - 1976

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 1 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | September 26, 1975

Copeland Appointed To Committee

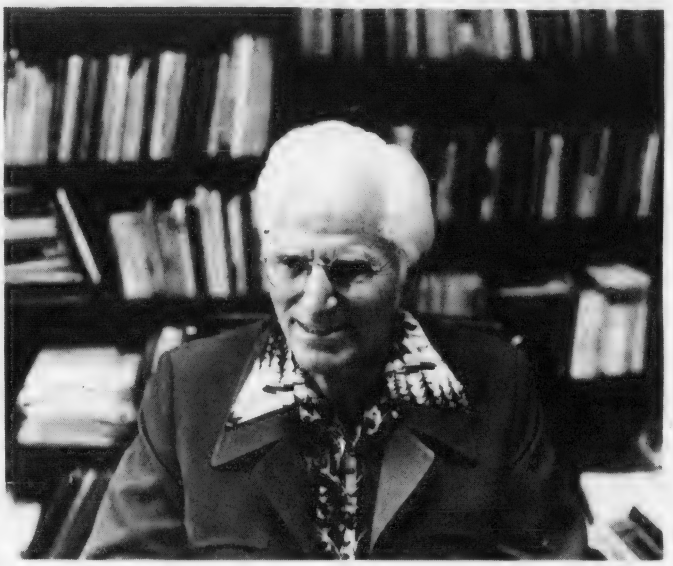
Maryville College president Joseph J. Copeland has been requested by Governor Ray Blanton to serve on a special committee of the Tennessee Student Assistance Corporation to study the total student assistance needs of state high school graduates.

The committee, which is representative of both tax-supported and independent colleges and universities will report and make its recommendations directly to the Tennessee Student Assistance Corporation which is chaired by the governor.

The corporation is responsible for administering two major programs of aid to students—the state loan program and the tuition grant program.

A total of 11,266 applications for tuition grants were received in the 1974-75 academic year; 5,697 were awarded for a total of $3,369,596. Awards were made on the basis of need to graduates of Tennessee high schools to attend any accredited Tennessee college or university of the student's choice, tax-supported or private.

The federal government supplemented the state program in 1974-75 in making $373.000 available through the corporation to Tennessee students.



Tuition grants of $968,307 were awarded to 1743 Black students in 1974-75, 30.5 percent of all awards made. Students attending private colleges represented 40 percent of the total with 60 percent attending public institutions.

Fifty-four percent of the students were from families with incomes less than $6,000, while 77.2 percent were from families with incomes less than $9,000. An additional 155 students received awards which they declined. Maryville College students were granted 35 awards totaling $30,297.

Since 1963 the corporation has been involved in higher education loans to state students representing a total of $49.395.694.

Dr. Copeland is chairman of the Tennessee Council of Private Colleges composed of 39 accredited independent colleges including such schools as Vanderbilt, Sewanee, Carson-Newman, Southwestern, and Maryville. These colleges enroll approximately 38,000 students, 25 percent of the students in Tennessee colleges and universities.

As chairman of the Tennessee Council of Private Colleges, Dr. Copeland represents these independent colleges as a full voting member in the corporation. He was instrumental in organizing the TCPC and served as its first secretary, later as vice chairman, and now as chairman.

Dr. Copeland

He recently attended a regional meeting conducted by the Tennessee Higher Education Commission chaired by Glen Rainey.

Dr. G. Wayne Brown, newly elected Executive Director of Tennessee Higher Education Commission and past academic dean at Union University, led the major discussions with 200 educators of the subject of total long range planning in higher education in Tennessee.

Dr. Copeland has been president of Maryville College since 1961.

Undecided About Interim?

If so, there still is room for the snow skiing trip to Steamboat Springs, Colorado. Lessons will be included for beginners.

Anyone interested should contact Dr. Larry Boroviak at the Physical Education Building, 983-0640, no later than Friday, September 26.

Echo Interview

Massey Discusses New Role

Dean Massey, former Dean of Women, was thrust into a new position this year. The office of the Dean of men was eliminated and a Dean of Students created. She now holds this office. The Echo interviewed her to discuss her new responsibilities.

Echo: Dean Massey how do you view your new job as both Dean of men and women? What new responsibilities will you assume?

Massey: This change will involve the assumption of some new duties:

Dean Massey

Such as organization of all the housing for the residence halls, instead of just womens residence halls. Very soon we will be making faculty advisor assignments. Of course I will be making all of those instead of just the women. And of course I have been working with all the head residents.

Echo: Do you expect any problems that might develop which would necessitate the need for a male advisor?

Massey: I can forsee some problems which might arise that could be difficult. I'm not sure that I think they would be any more difficult than when they arise with women students. I feel that we are all human beings with the same kind of problems. However we do have men available whom I would depend on a great deal. Of course I'm associate dean of students. Dr. Kramer is head of this whole area. And he would be always available when the student wanted to talk to him, or when I needed to refer to him. We do of course have male counseling on other different levels; we have a male resident in each building, we have the U.T. counselors, one of whom is a young man, and we have a "chaplain" who often counsels men. Certainly our men students should not feel that they do not have access to a man to whom they might talk.

Echo: There are often myths surrounding authority figures, which often makes them seem unapproachalbe to the students. Would you comment on how this effects you?

Massey: I suppose that those myths and rumors do occur, but I would imagine that it would be difficult to have a job and not have this occur. I personally do not feel that I'm unapproachable or formidable. I'm sure that most students who come into the office soon realize that none of us, in student personnel, are that kind of person. We welcome students, we like to get to know them, and we want them to know that we have an open door policy.

Echo: Do you see your job as governing student behavior?

Massey: Governing students behavior only so far as someone has to be responsible to see that the rights of all students are honored. In other words our philosophy is that we have regulations necessary

cont. on page 3

MC Forum:

Doin' That Maryville Rag

We're back. And drawing on all of the vast experience we acquired by running a newspaper for a full ten weeks last spring we're looking forward to another year of publication.

Very little of editorial note has occurred so far this year, but before we really move into full swing we want to ask your indulgence in making the Echo a more effective medium.

What we mostly need is some cooperation from everyone so we can be sure that all the news around campus is circulated. We considered many alternative plans to provide news incentive. One such plan was to print a lot of slander that would force people to speak up in order to save their reputation. However, we have decided to forego this idea for now. So don't push us.

We have found the college administration to be open in the past and willing to express their concerns and beliefs on various issues. Students and faculty, too, have been helpful in presenting news and issues to the Echo. We need everyone's help to cover all the news, lacking as it often is at Maryville.

Your efforts to keep the campus informed, combined with our own, should make this possible. Please correspond through Post Office Box 2820, and we will see to it that your story is covered or your letter printed.

The Echo is everyone's paper. As evidenced in past issues, we'll print anything. Since the paper is our responsibility we take the full blame for any errors or discrepancies. We've taken on one of the various scapegoat positions on campus, and we expect you to take full advantage of us.

Campus publications have often been regarded as journalistic "rags." This has been true at times, but we hope we can make this year's Echo a better rag than before. You can help.

Gary Sloboda and Dave Haimbach

Dear Andy

Dear Andy,

I would like to say that I am extremely pleased with the return of the Highland Echo after the three months layoff. It seemed like an eternity. It's hard to find reliable sources these days.

Walter Cronkite

Dear Andy,

Hey buddy! C'mere. Yeah, you! That's it. Hi, I'm Honest Joe and have I got a college for YOU! Look friend, when I first saw you coming I said, "Now there's an intelligent man that knows a good college deal when he sees one." Heh-heh. Now wait, where you goin'? Step onto my lot here friend and look at this compact model that just happens to be a favorite of mine. And I think that it will be a favorite of yours after I tell you about it. Three characteristics make this college attractive; accessibility, maneuverability and visibility. Not only is this model easy to get to and move around in, but (are you ready for this) up front its visability is only 37%. You heard it right friend, 37%. Now I ask you can you beat that? Go ahead, open up the doors and look inside. Kick the buildings! Go ahead, this baby can take it. Just look at that food service--no gas shortage here! Heh-heh. And now for the piece de resistance, in the past this baby was used by little ol' christians only to go to church on Sundays. Now I ask you, is this something you can pass up?

Honest Joe

Andy: Not today, thank you.

Dear Andy:
I get all my news from the Highland Echo. Welcome back.

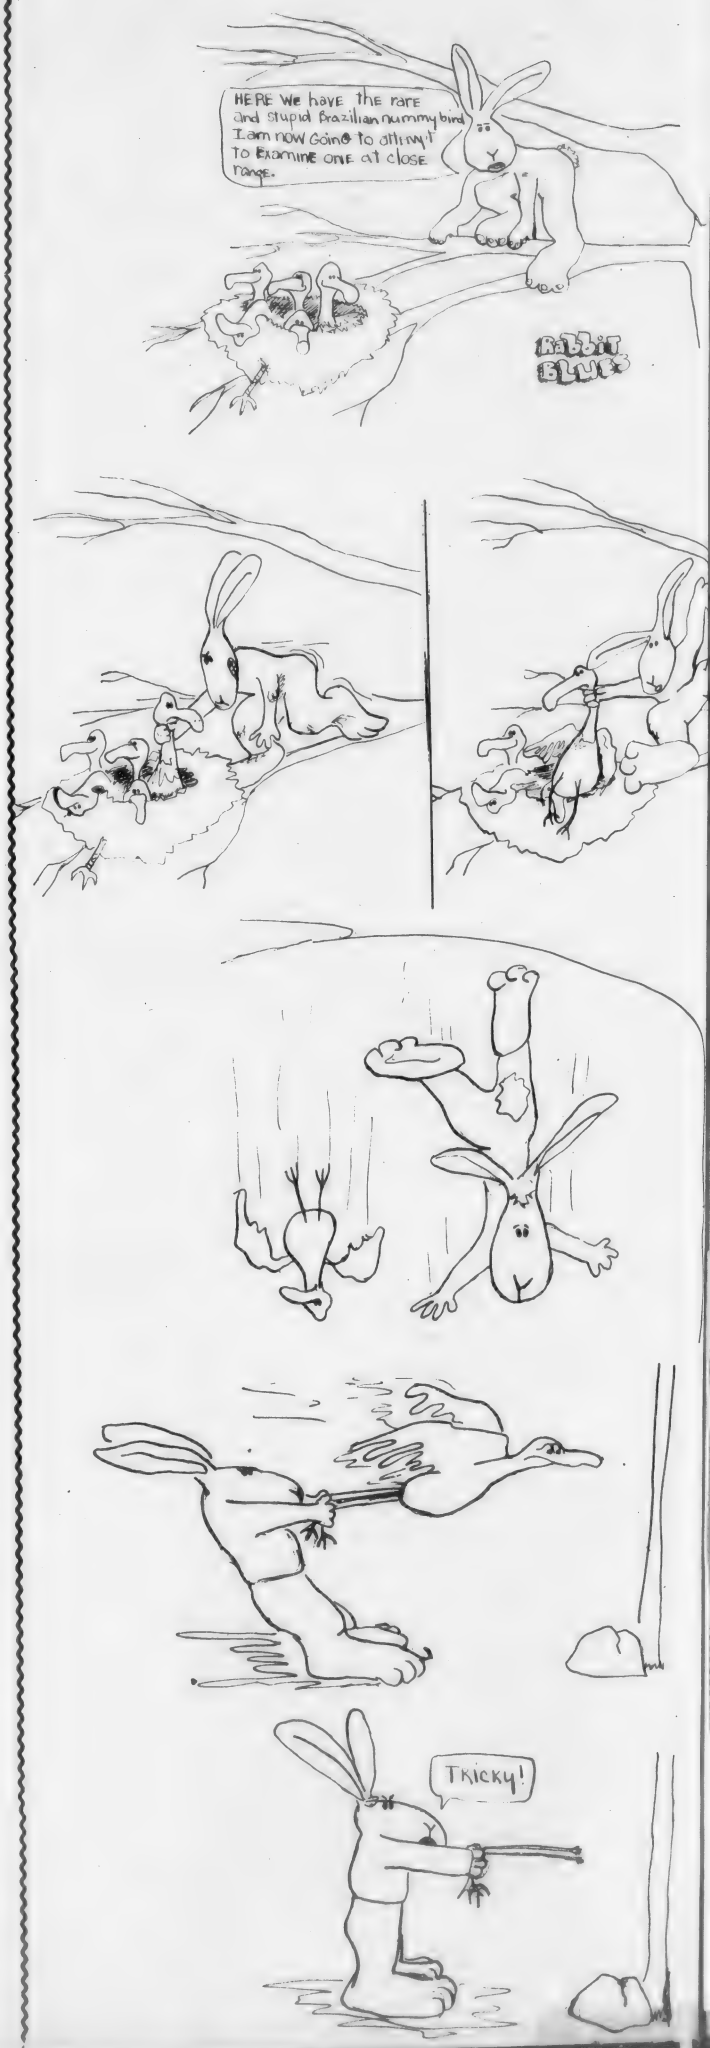
Eric Sevareid

Dear Andy:
Who says attending Maryville is like being taken for a ride in a cheap car?!

Offended

Andy:
Talk to Honest Joe.

Dear Andy:
I've really been looking forward to this first issue. The Highland Echo is the only paper I read. Keep it up.



Roger Mudd

A Letter From Andy:

Ever since I've written for the Echo I have been astounded by the questions I've been confronted with. Dorm policy, administrative problems, and various other complaints. What are you asking my advice for? I don't know any more than you about these things. I'm tired of answering these letters! I've had it! This job is driving me bonkers! I quit.

Sorry, Walter. Sorry, Eric. Sorry, Roger. Sorry, Victor.

Andy Hall

Historical Memorial Haunts Campus

It was the year 1870, when a lot of changes were taking place on the Maryville campus, that Memorial Hall began to appear. Named in commemoration of a reunion ceremony in Pittsburgh (which brought to a close a 33 year division of the Presbyterian church in the United States), Memorial Hall opened for students in the Fall of 1871. The entire expenses "for board, tuition, room-rent, fuel, lights, and washing, for the Collegiate year, at the highest rate ever, did not exceed $125.00."

It was from a small printing office in Memorial Hall in 1875, that the first student publication, The Maryville Student, was printed. Memorial Hall, commonly referred to as the South Dormitory, was completely renovated during the summer of 1890, and contained ten complete kitchens in the basement for student use.

Since the year 1918, women of Maryville College have been in the majority, so Memorial Hall was used by the women. Ten years later, Mrs. A. McLain outfitted Memorial Hall with a fire prevention sprinkler system. Thus, in 1936, the present name of McLain Memorial Hall was adopted in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Wylie McLain.

Under the Federal Governments' housing program, McLain Memorial Hall was completely "rehabilitated" in 1959 and was opened that Fall for sixty men. For the past sixteen years, the old frame building has been a home for many Maryville men. Due to the lack of funds for the necessary upkeep, and an administrative decision, Memorial is now in the process of being torn down. McLain Memorial Hall is now a part of the history of Maryville College and a cherished memory to all that loved her.

The remains of Memorial.

Massey cont. from page 1

to keep the rights of one student from being infringed upon by another person. This of course is particularly true when you live in a large group situation. So the head residents, the RA's, and deans office are concerned and work together to lessen problems in the dorms.

Echo: Regarding the dorms, there seems to be an increased interest in recreating the House Councils in the dorms. What created this renewed interest?

Massey: This arose last spring when one of the dorms was going to be turned into a coed dorm involving two groups of different lifestyles. Some of the counselors got together with residents and asked if they could work out their own plan for this year. We told them to go ahead and to let us see what they worked out. When they came back with their plan they had done a wonderful job. They had thought through what they wanted to keep and what they wanted to change. It was all within reason and we went along with it totally. The interest increased in the residents life committee, and they worked last spring on a proposal which was presented this Fall to the ACC workshop. The proposal which passed urged the formation of stronger House Councils. We have had strong House Councils in the past. They have been strong in the two womens freshman dorms and the others. The interest in this method of dorm government arose from student interest.

Free Education For Senior Citizens

Beginning with the fall term, Maryville and Blount County residents 65 or older may enroll for courses at Maryville College tuition free if class space is available. They may choose to audit or take courses for credit.

Those interested should contact the Admissions Office in Anderson Hall (982-7191). Legal verification of age will be required at the time of registration.

Registration for the fall term is September 15-16, with classes beginning on the 16th. Persons planning to enroll may obtain catalogs from the Admissions Office and talk with the Registrar about the schedule of course offerings for the fall term.

Auditors will be under no obligation of regular attendance, preparation, or examinations. Those who want credit or plan to work toward a degree will need to file transcripts of previous work.

Dr. Carolyn Blair, Academic Dean, said, "We hope that those eligible will think seriously about taking advantage of this opportunity, not only for their own personal enrichment, but for the contribution they can make by sharing their views and experiences with younger students.

"We at Maryville College believe that the most stimulating environment for learning is a vital community in which students of varying backgrounds, abilities, and interests can come together to study and discuss freely. The faculty and administration are issuing this invitation as another step toward achieving that kind of environment."

Rhodes Concludes Research

For the past two years, Dr. Gale Rhodes, Assistant Professor of Chemistry, has been doing research under a Cottrell College Science Grant. The money for this research has come from the Research Corporation, which is a private foundation that supplies many research grants, particularly to small, undergraduate colleges such as Maryville.

This past summer Dr. Rhodes had two students assisting him, Shiela Moore and Art Fowler, whom he credits with doing much of the work involved. The research dealt with the process of chemical evolution. The basic assumption is that some of the substances that make up living organisms must have been present before there were living organisms. Sound simple? Don't talk to Dr. Rhodes! The questions they worked with were a little more complex. Can you recreate the conditions that existed on earth before life began and are any of the basic substances of life produced? Are there certain kinds of protein that existed on earth before life? Obviously, these questions cannot be answered with a simple yes or no. One must be content with attempts to demonstrate the feasibility of certain chemical processes on the early earth. Simple substances, thought to have been present on earth before the advent of life, are subjected to heat, radiation, or electrical sparks and the resulting material analysed for the presence of proteins. The two years were designed to determine what kinds of protein to look for. By the end of the summer, Dr. Rhodes felt they had found a number of things interesting enough to pursue.

Dr. Rhodes is applying for another two or three year grant, but research grants are becoming more competitive each year. Besides learning alot from just the research, the students also gained invaluable experience in a different situation than classroom. It would be unfortunate for many people if this research would end here.

Class Pictures

The Chilhowean needs your help! Since our funds were cut back considerably for this year's annual, we are asking each student to contribute a $1.25 sitting fee for individual class pictures. The pictures will be taken on September 30 and October 1. This small fee will help to make up for the cut in our budget and allow us to work within other areas of the annual more. We want to provide you with a quality annual, but we can only do it with your help.

Clinic Replaces Infirmary

The returning students this fall have found some major changes concerning the infirmary. In the past years the campus hospital was in a building beside Sutton Science Center. It has now been replaced by a clinic in the back of Thaw Hall.

Contrary to last years policy of having a full time nurse, the new clinic is open only between the hours of 8:00 to 1:00 in the morning and 3:30 to 6:00 in the afternoon. If there is a problem when the nurse is not in, the dorm parents should be notified. In the case of a serious problem, there are doctors available in the emergency room at Blount County Hospital at all times. The fee at the emergency room is thirteen dollars, and this fee is taken care of by the student's insurance policy, according to the Maryville College Business Office. Also, if admitted into the hospital the student is covered the maximum of forty dollars a day.

Because of the above changes, the student will be charged for all medicines received at the new clinic. The student will also find that this year he is not permitted to stay overnight at the clinic. He must stay either in the dorm or at the hospital. These changes may not be permanent, since the administration is still viewing the effectiveness of the clinic. Therefore, your opinions on this issue are welcome.

B.S.A. Holds Debate

On Tuesday, September 30, the Black Student Association (B.S.A.) will debate the issue: "Should Blacks Celebrate the Bicentennial?" The debate will focus on the great dilemma that black Americans face as they are asked to participate in America's two-hundredth birthday celebration.

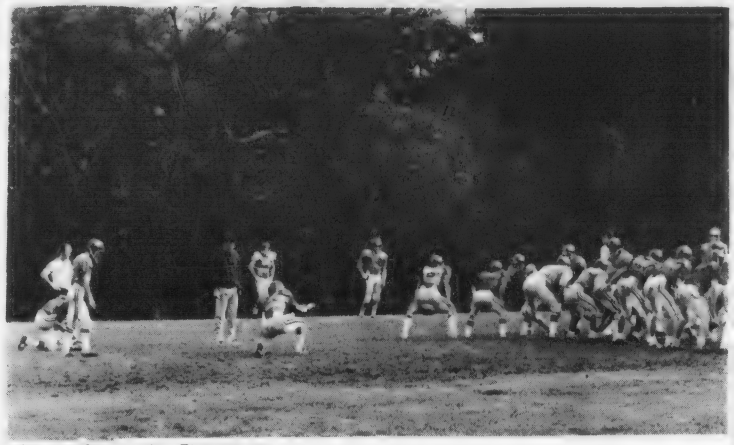
Realizing that blacks have made significant contributions to America's development, some argue that blacks should actively participate in the nation's bicentennial. Still others argue that it is rather ridiculous for blacks to celebrate two-hundred years of slavery, segregation, inequality, unemployment, racism, and poverty.

This is the first of a series of discussions on the bicentennial and how it relates to blacks which will be held each month by the B.S.A. Attempting to avoid the usual pageants of celebration, the B.S.A. will instead engage in and encourage honest appraisals of black life in America.

The debate will begin at 7:30 PM in the Black Culture Center on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall, above the Student Center. Everyone is invited to attend.

Scots Drop Opener

The Maryville College football team opened its 1975 season last Saturday by dropping a 28–21 decision to Centre College before a crowd of approximately 350 at Farris Stadium in Danville, Kentucky.



Statistically, the Colonels outplayed the Scots, although Maryville had a chance to win the ballgame until the last few minutes. The clincher came with 3:05 to go when Freshman running back Jim Shanon of Centre crossed the goal-line on a one-yard plunge. Maryville did have possession of the ball again, but could not get any kind of drive started.

Centre quarterback Roy Beard was the star of the day as he scored three of the Colonels' four touchdowns. Beard started the day's scoring with 5:23 to go in the first period on a 35-yard run. The added conversion gave Centre a 7–0 lead. In the next series, the Scots came back as Joe Genualdi's 39-yard touchdown run and Tim L Kelly's kick tied things at 7–7.

Beard's second TD came at 12:50 of the second period on a three-yard run. Earlier, Danny Maples had put Maryville in front on a three-yard run.

The halftime score of 14–14 stood until 3:42 of the third period as Beard scored his final TD on a one-yard plunge. Maryville came back for the tie, however, as Ron Lasley scored on a six-yard run with 8:34 to go in the game. That tied the score, 21–21, and set up Shanon's winning score.

Tomorrow night, the Scots meet Knoxville College in their second game of the season. This one will be played at Austin-East High School in Knoxville with a 7:30 kickoff. Maryville's first home game will be next Saturday afternoon when they host Franklin College of Franklin, Indiana.

A recent fall practice. Find the ball.

Maryville College Head Football Coach Jim Jordan can be heard on radio every Friday night from now through the remainder of the football season. College Football '75 is hosted each week by Coach Jordan and Maryville sportswriter Bob Gilbert. Each week, Jordan and Gilbert discuss Maryville's upcoming game as well as other games that weekend in college football. The show can be heard each Friday night at 6:45 on WGAP (1400 AM).

Soccer Club Starts New Season Against Bryan

Will Way takes a shot at goalie Charlie Thompson.

Those students who are presently seniors have been able to watch a sport conceptualize and slowly become accepted on the Maryville campus. Through the determination and hard work of a small core of men, the soccer club has been able to work out financial difficulties, lack of participation, and lack of support, within the campus to become a sport near and dear to the hearts of MC students.

The club originally attempted to be recognized as an intercollegiate team, but the administration would not allocate the funds necessary to set up the new sport; thus uniforms, equipment, and transportation costs have had to come out of the player's pockets. One advantage to this club status is that any person who demonstrates an enthusiasm and ability to work hard at the sport is eligible to come out for the team. This season will be the first that Maryville spectators may witness women players on the soccer field.

For those of you who would ra watch any sport than play, soccer a fast-paced and interesting sport t watch. So come on out to the gam The team has a busy season with eleven games on the schedule. Five of the games will be played at hom The first game is this Saturday, against Bryan, at 2:00. Dr. David Young is the man to see if you hav any questions concerning the team

Women's Soccer Beg

In case you haven't heard, Mar College offers a variety of intram sports for women as well as inter legiate basketball and volleyball t year. Soccer is the first intramur sport on the agenda. Sign up you (at least eleven people) at the gy September 26. Check your intra handbook for upcoming events.

Coach Sharon Brown has anno that intercollegiate volleyball try will be open through October 3. further information, contact Coa Brown.

MC Adds Women's Volleyball

Maryville College has added women's volleyball to its intercollegiate sports. The team will be coached by Sharon Brown, physical education instructor and women's basketball coach.

The lady Scots will begin practice next week for the coming season which will open October 9 with Carson-Newman at Jefferson City.

HORSIN' AROUND
448-6298
448-6411

Davey Crockett Stables in Townsend is now booking overnight pack trips into the Smokies. Special rates for Maryville College students; $10 per person with 8 persons minimum. Transportation furnished if needed.

Riding Lessons
Hay Rides

COLLEGE CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVE

Needed to sell Brand Name Stereo Components to Students at lowest prices. Hi Commission, NO Investment required. Serious Inquiries ONLY! FAD COMPONENTS, INC. 20 Passaic Ave. Fairfield, New Jersey 07006
JERRY DIAMOND 201-227-6814

RESEARCH PAPERS
THOUSANDS ON FILE
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

bank of maryville
Your Bank In Blount County
Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee
A FULL SERVICE BANK
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

the flavor
983-7914
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's
TRY OUR DELICIOUS DELI SANDWICHES
Cheese
Salami or Turkey
Ham
Corned Beef
Pastrami or Roast Beef
Reuben
"Philadelphia Hoagies
Reg.
Roast Beef
Ham
Cheese
Super Submarine

delicatesse

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 2 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | October 3, 1975

Parker Grant Completed

Approval by the National Endowment for the Humanities of a proposal to do study of the Aluminum Company of America's impact on the immediate area resulted in an eight-month concentration from the first of the year to the end of August, 1975, on that phenomenon. NEH guidelines called upon the applicant to major on "the interrelationships between human values and science and technology" and "historical, social, and cultural studies of U.S. ethnic minorities." The proposal was accordingly geared to a concentration on the black community.

It was immediately evident that any appreciable degree of success in the research project was contingent upon the cooperation of several institutions: 1) early inhabitants of the region or their descendants would be a resource for insight into what life was like prior to ALCOA'S location in the region and how their lives were changed by industrial intrusion into what had been an essentially rural community; 2) ALCOA must supply certain data as a basis for tracing its impact on the immediate locale, as well as surrounding counties; 3) the City of Alcoa's records would be of great worth in getting at the social impact; and finally 4) the public record—census reports, tax records, newspaper accounts—would be essential raw materials to a meaningful synthesis.

In the first instance, an oral history technique was employed where appropriate to interview older citizens and key personnel of Company and City. Over thirty interviews were conducted, aside from occasional conferences with persons who might shed light on some particular aspect of the research as it developed in several directions.

The Aluminum Company of America, Tennessee Operations, permitted perusal of its archives. Happily, the Company has displayed a sensitivity to history from the beginning. For example, an in-house news organ, the Aluminum Bulletin, was published monthly in Alcoa and distributed to all employees from 1918 to 1920. Although neither Tennessee Operations nor Pittsburgh possessed a complete file, the former office by publicizing the need enabled me to put together the series. From 1947 to 1961 there was an annual compilation of data by Company archivist Charles F. Hord. And from 1958 to the present the Company has published annual economic impact statements.

The City of Alcoa graciously permitted access to its General File and Ordinance Books, which supplied a fundamental base for developing the community's history.

The City at its inception in 1919 was the creature of the Company. Maryville was a community of long standing when ALCOA entered the region in 1910 in search of economical hydroelectric power and proceeded to develop the Little Tennessee River system with an integrated network of dams, a concept adopted considerably later by the Tennessee Valley Authority. The Company bought up lands in North Maryville after considering a number of other area sites and built a reduction (smelting) plant just prior to World War I and a sheet mill immediately thereafter. For a number of years the City was a "company town" in the classic mold, with Company employees of administrative rank doubling as City officials. For all that, the charter reflected the enlightenment of the Progressive movement of the early twentieth century and the efficient city manager/commission system was employed from the beginning.

Dr. Parker

Aside from the general historical survey which has emerged from the project, with particular emphasis on the social and economic impact of ALCOA'S presence, particular biographical attention has been given two remarkable early leaders whose influence was considerable in shaping community life.

One was Victor Hultquist, the first icty manager of Alcoa, a Company engineer who held his City post from 1919 to 1948 and at the same time (as ALCOA'S construction superintendent) supervised plant and townsite construction, maintenance of townsite sales and rentals, operation of the Knoxville Power Company Light and Water Departments (an ALCOA subsidiary), ALCOA Terminal Railroad, Brick and Tile Works, Farm and Dairy, Quarry and Concrete Mixing Plant, Lumbering Operation and Woodworking Shop, Trucking Department, and Landscape and Gardening Nursery. With city recorder/judge/treasurer A. B. Smith (who succeeded him as manager) Hultquist ran a tight town.

The other was a black man, John T. Arter, a disciple of Booker T. Washington, employed by the Company in 1918 to serve as principal of the black school and leader of the black community. Arter attended Knoxville College and Pittsburgh Theological Seminary and had fashioned a model school and community ar Arlington Mission School (United Presbyterian) in Wilcox County, Alabama. Surrounding himself with a cadre of able and enthusiastic lieutenants, he undertook to shape Alcoa's black sector of Hall into a model community (the Company, through a vigorous recruiting program, was importing blacks in large numbers from the Deep South for pot room labor in the smelting plant). Arter met an untimely death from a heart attack in 1922, but the influence of his circle lingered on—an inspirational force in the black community.

The foregoing paragraphs give some slight indication of the project's realizations. Four articles have resulted and have been recently submitted to appropriate journals for possible publication. At some future point in time a regional study in the form of a book is a possibility. But there are numerous loose ends to be brought together before that can happen.

New Personnel Brighten Campus

This year Maryville College has made several changes in the faculty and house residents. Among the changes in the faculty are: David O'Dell, instructor of music and orchestra; Richard Taylor, head track coach, assistant football coach, and health and physical education instructor; and Jerry Truett, independent study editor and librarian.

Returning this year is Katherine Nelson, who will be the assistant professor of Sociology. Mrs. Nelson has been working with her husband in Africa.

Robert L. Williams and Thomas Medcalf, who were formerly part time professors are now working full time. Robert L. Williams is in the psychology department. Thomas Medcalf is now assistant professor of economics and business. Working as a part time professor in the Management and Business Math department is James Sturgeon. Also, working part time, David Powell is in the English department.

Last spring Dr. Naylor became assistant professor of chemistry.

There are two new House Residents, which are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Durrant and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Isenburg at Lloyd and Davis, respectively. Also, Richard Maloney assists at Carnegie.

Kratz Article Published

Last fall Marjorie Kratz of our history department spent a sabbatical leave exploring old haunts in her native Massachusetts. The subject of her research was the rise and fall of the Cooley Dickinson Hospital School of Nursing. As an alumna of the school with an interest in medical history and women's studies, she was especially interested in those factors that brought about the foundation of the school seventy-four years ago and the conditions that this year caused it to close its doors. Her findings were published by the Alumnae Association for the closure activities in June in a booklet entitled A Chapter In Nursing Education: The Seventy-Four Years of the Cooley Dickinson Hospital School of Nursing.

Dr. Kratz feels that the passing of the school is significant for many different reasons. It is representative of the decline in numbers of three-year diploma schools for the preparation of nurses, and this decline, in turn, reflects vast changes in the nursing field itself. Modern medical techniques, complicated equipment, and growing masses of theory make the arguments for college-based nursing education more and more persuasive.

There were also economic and social ramifications. Costs burgeoned to the point where each student represented over $7000 in expenditure, which in the end patients had to pay. In the old days the nursing school was self-supporting, that is, students worked for their education and learned while they worked. Today the nature and extent of their study leaves them less and less time for actual patient contact. But this is not the whole story. In recent years women have been developing a new awareness of their worth, and are not willing to put in long hours often at menial and non-nursing tasks in the interest of their education.

The picture reflects social and economic pressures at work in the country at large.

Dr. Kratz

MC Forum:

What Happened To The Woods?

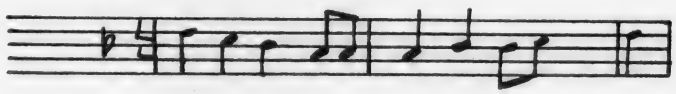
About two years ago Maryville College allowed a sewage line to be laid through the middle of the college woods. The tract of land used extends from one end of the woods to the other, and measures about twenty to twenty-five feet across. It runs close to the creek and passes near what was once used as a picnic ground. The area is easily recognized.

It is fortunate that our visibility is limited to thirty-seven per cent, because this tract of land is an eyesore. It was necessary to remove the trees from the area in order to dig it up. But now, after two years, it remains a heavily rutted mud flat scattered with debirs. The picnic area has fallen into disrepair.

The defoliation has ruined what was once a fine place to spend afternoons and evenings; with picnic tables and a fireplace. Now the tables are broken or gone; the fire pit is falling apart and being swallowed by weeds.

Why has the area been left this way? Was no effort made to reclaim the land? Will that effort never be made? While we pride our campus for its beauty, how can we allow an open wound to scar the middle of it? Some explanation is needed.

The Editors



Hello. This is Andy Hall. I have a new job with the Echo now that I have become tired of answering questions. I'm on the road, a traveling correspondent in search of news. I don't know where I am right now, though. I'm in a building. A big building with lots of people. Everything inside is very white and there's a medicinal odor permeating the air. Some of the people here are doctors, I think. But it's not a hospital. The other patients here walk around all day instead of being in bed. It's funny, they don't say anything to me. When I talk to them, they just look at me all bug-eyed or scream. And their arms are always folded across their chests. I don't know why Dave and Gary wanted me to come here for news. Nothing's going to break here. But they told me to stay here and report until I get better, whatever that means.

Anyways, this place isn't that bad. The doctors call it "the big dormitory." They said I could "govern" myself and that I could make my own rules as long as I stayed with the rules they set down for me. It didn't make muc sense at first. I thought that they wer trying to insult my intelligence. Then I realized that I could beat the systen They don't want patients of the opposite sex in our rooms after 11:00 p.m. But I make my own rules. I kicl them out at 10:00. You see, that wa I beat the system and keep one up o them. They want us to sign up girls in our rooms, also. But I get around that, too. I always put down an alias when I bring someone in. By having to make up crafty ideas like these it makes me not think about having my intelligence getting stepped on. The doctors are here now. I have to go. It's time for my shock therapy treatment. Therapy's fun, but I wish they increase the voltage.

Andy Hall

Dear Victor

A Letter From Victor:

Now that old Andy Hall is out of the way it's time for some new blood to take over. You might ask, "What's a fresh-faced kid like Victor know about writing?" Well, the evidence is right here. I'm in the driver's seat now.

What that Andy Hall lacked was a real sense of humor, and that's just what this column's going to get. So hold on to your seats, because old Victor here is going to prove that he can not only tickle the ivories, but your funny-bone as well. And away we go!

Victor:

What's going to happen to the students who need more CIV credits than are being offered this year?

Worried

Victor:

I don't know. But are you ready for this? A friend of mine got caught in a lense-grinding machine and made a spectacle of himself! Hee-hee-heeeee! That's a good one!

Dear Vic,

I have problems. I am taking Math 99, History 120 and Science Thought 101. Math and History are easy, but Science Thought's tough. Why can't there be a remedial Science Thought course, too? I don't like it.

Brain Hurt

Victor: You think you have problems; did you hear about the cow that got caught in the milking machine? Udder disaster! Ah-ha-ha!

Dear Victor:

The water in Carnegie is supposed to be hot around meal hours. But lately this hasn't been so. I've almost had four heart attacks in the past week when, after football practice, my overheated self is bombarded with virtual icicles. Can anything be done?

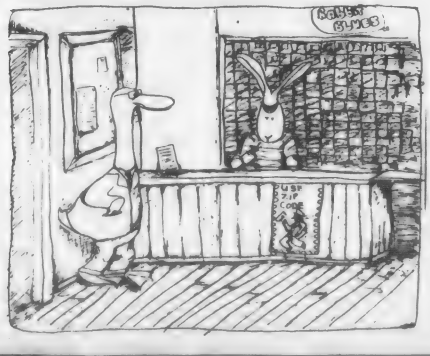
Cramping My Style

Victor:

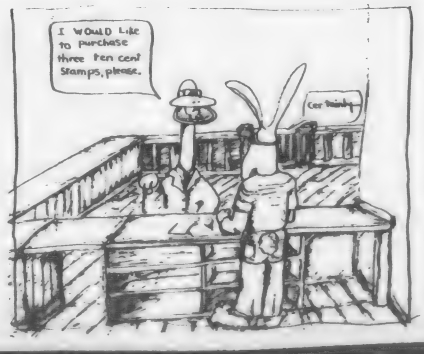
Probably not. But how's this one? A guy I know paid somebody to look up his family tree and found out he was a sap! Ah-ha-ha-ha-ha-ha!

Dear Victor,

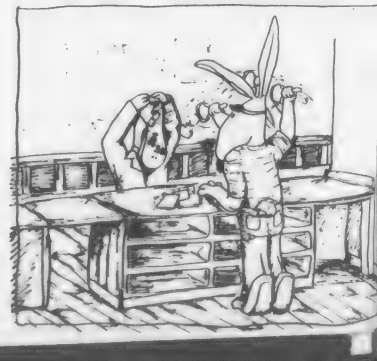
I would like to write an open letter to parties concerned with the state of this college. I hope to dispell all rumors at this time. First of all, enrollment is up and the academic standard is at an all time high. Th students are smarter, department are expanding, courses are more ulating, God is an astronaut, and am a frog.



F



Victor:



My uncle is an optometrist on a off the coast of Alaska. He's an Alutian! Ah-ha-ha-ha-ha-ha! Get

I always knew I could spice this

Victo

Toes Stepped On At ACC Meeting

By Janet Pfarrer

With all the controversy on campus concerning dorm issues, especially in Margaret Lloyd and Dorm I, a large number of interested persons showed up for last Wednesday's All-College Council meeting. On September 11, 1975, the A.C.C. passed a proposal which gave the House Councils a greater freedom to set up individual guide-lines, within the framework of the school.

With this newly passed proposal in mind, the girls of Margaret Lloyd by an unanimous vote attempted to set up a twenty-four hour lobby visitation program. The individual room visitation hours aren't to be altered and the dorm is to remain as a locked dorm. Any male guest is to be let in by a Lloyd resident, and to remain in her company throughout the visit. The Lloyd "proposal", based on the honor system, will automatically be suspended if the rules were violated.

The Lloyd "proposal" went before the All-College Council as a safety check; but, raised a series of questions, many of which (for the time being) were left unanswered. The A.C.C.'s main concern centered around whether or not the Lloyd "proposal" was an actual policy change, and if so, did it not need the Boards' approval?

Past records and old policy changes were checked, but no mention of lobby visitation was found; the actual Board visitation policy has yet to be located and checked. The Residential Life committee was requested to more fully investigate the Lloyd issue and to draw up (and pass) an actual proposal for the A.C.C.'s approval. This proposal will now await the decision of the Board, scheduled to meet on October 17.

The A.C.C. meeting stepped on a lot of toes, but it was a step in the right direction. Some questions were asked that raised good points, but were left up in the air. Such questions as why "visitation" is allowed to take place in downstairs lobbies before hours and not after hours? How are coed T.V. lounge visitation by outside quests to be handled? Should dorm policies not be campus wide? Should students lose or gain visitation freedoms based on a dorm assignment and not class ranking?

Questions like these need answers! They should not be allowed to slip by unnoticed into the minutes of September twenty-fourths' A.C.C. records. In order to obtain answers, it will take the cooperation of all students. After all, shouldn't you be the deciding factor on your residential life?

Echo Policy

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Letters and articles msut be typed and turned into Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be witheld upon request. The editors reserve the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editors, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Contributors: Fred Strohl, Ingrid Gensler, Janet Pfarrer, Diane Burger, Rose Wing, Bonnie Holsinger; Photography: Marc Ward; Lay-out: Debbie Baker; Business Manager: Charlie Thompson; Advisor: Dr. E. Fowler.

CIV Changes Finalized

Beginning with the fall term of 1975, changes have taken effect in the Community Issues and Values program. These changes involve attendance requirements, the number of programs offered during the year, and experimentation with format.

Students still have the option of selecting CIV for elective credit to meet graduation requirements, but those under the 40-course requirement (the Class of 1977 and later) may elect only two CIV credits.

Seniors, who must meet the 43-course requirement for graduation, will be able to complete the third CIV or the fourth CIV if they have taken it as an elective, provided they have attended five programs toward that credit. Those cases in which seniors will have difficulty completing the CIV requirement will be dealt with individually.

Sophomores and juniors may attend the number of programs necessary to complete the credit they have already started, and either continue taking CIV or select another course.

New students may attend CIV on a voluntary basis during the fall term and Interim. If they decide to choose CIV as an elective, they may register as they would for any other course starting with the winter term. Retroactive credit will be received for those programs already attended, provided that the attendance was registered.

The basis for one credit, attendance at thirty programs, has not been altered. However, the number of CIV programs has been reduced to approximately twenty-five for this year. The CIV Committee will continue to attempt to make improvements in the quality of these programs.

All students are invited to attend those programs which are of interest to them, regardless of whether they are registered for CIV credit. Hopefully, this modification will result in a higher quality of CIV programs with greater flexibility to allow "experimentation and innovation."

Students who have questions about CIV will find the full details posted on the bulletin board outside the Registrar's Office.

Boitnott Appointed Woodwinds Instructor

Donna Boitnott of Athens, Tennessee, has been appointed part-time instructor of woodwinds at Maryville College.

Miss Boitnott received the Bachelor of Music Education degree from Murray State College and the Master of Music Education degree from Indiana University. She is presently completing a dissertation for the doctor's degree at Florida State University.

Miss Boitnott has taught at Indiana University, the University of Missouri, Southern Illinois University, Paducah Community College in Kentucky, and the University of Florida.

She was first oboist is the Missouri State College Symphony Orchestra and Band and the Indiana University Philharmonic Orchestra and Opera Orchestra, in which she also played English horn. She also played with the symphonic orchestra at the University of Florida and Southern Illinois University Chamber Orchestra.

While playing with the University of Missouri orchestra, she performed on such ancient instruments as the krummhorn and shawm.

Miss Boitnott has given faculty oboe recitals at most of the institutions where she has taught and plans to do so at Maryville.

Dr. Harry H. Harter, chairman of the Fine Arts Department, said, "With her quality professional training and experience, we feel fortunate to have Miss Boitnott on our staff."

She will be teaching both college and community students on Thursdays in oboe, clarinet, flute, and bassoon. Members of the community who are interested in studying one of these instruments should call the Fine Arts Center at 982-9132 for further information.

A Note of Thanks
from
Carnegie Hall Residents

The occupants of Carnegie Hall, among whom are the former residents of Memorial and incoming students from Dorm III, wish to express their deep appreciation and thanks to Dr. Kramer and Dean Massey for their tremendous efforts toward rearranging, organizing, and improving Carnegie Hall and giving it the fine condition it is in now. Dr. Kramer has particularly earned enormous gratitude for fulfilling all the promises he made to the students. Carnegie residents are grateful.

Folksing Well Received

A large audience was in the Fine Arts Center's auditorium last Friday night. The reason was the Folksing which started at eight and lasted for several hours. The atmosphere was relaxed, with the performing members of the night sitting in the audience until their time to perform. Bruce Hill began the program with some selections of Elton John featured on the piano. Bruce also sang the vocal lead to one of these songs. Pete Xiques joined Bruce for the second number of the program, a duet called "I Need Someone To Turn To". Following this number the famous Tripp Ziegler got up to do three jazz numbers on the piano. After Tripp came three solo numbers- "Lean on Me", sung by George Lundy and "Autumn", and "And I Love You So", sung by Cindy Murane. Next on the program came the well-known Steve Maggio and Artie Banker duo—minus Artie Banker. Mike Dykes, however, more than made up for this lack with his powerful voice. Steve Lowry played bass for the group. Dan Whiteside completed the group with his accompaniment on the synthesizer. Along with some new songs, this group played the old favorites "Blackwater", and "Summer Breeze" After these songs, a jamming and improvisation session followed until the end of the show.

Despite technical difficulties, and a few faux paus, the Folksing was declared a success and it is hopeful that another one will soon follow.

Symphony Tickets Available

Tickets for the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra 1975-76 season are being made available to Maryville College students for half price by the Knoxville Symphony Society. The regularly priced $22.00 section "N" balcony tickets may be purchased for $11.00 at the Fine Arts Center office until October 6. The purchases must be made cash-in-advance by that date. Tickets will be distributed to student post office boxes before the first symphony performance October 23, 1975.

The 1975-76 season will include seven performances, all on Thursday evenings: October 23, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; November 20, Beethoven's MISSA SOLEMNIS, in which the Maryville College Concert Choir will perform; December 11, Daniel Heifitz, violinist; January 15, Arpad Joo as piano soloist, Zoltan Roznyai, guest conductor; February 12, Klaus Hellwig, pianist; March 11, Orchestra "Pops" Concert; April 8, pianist Roger Auber.

Scots Smothered By Knox College

The Maryville College football team lost its second game of the year Saturday night to Knoxville College, 41–7, before a crowd of approximately 4,000, including many Maryville College students, at Austin-East High School in Knoxville.

David Warren, who Coach Jim Jordan called "probably the best running back we will see this year," scored four touchdowns for the Bulldogs. Three were on rushing plays and one was on a pass play.

Maryville's only score of the night came with 10:43 remaining in the third period when Moon Thompson scored on a ten-yard run. Tim L. Kelly's extra-point was good as the Scots concluded their scoring for the night.

Offensively, Knoxville gained 274 yards to only 130 yards for the Scots. In 43 rushing plays, Maryville gained 93 yards, while Knoxville gained 175. The Scots completed three of 15 passes for 37 yards and four interceptions as Coach Jordan used four quarterbacks. The home team gained 99 yards in the air.

The Scots start a three-week series of home games tomorrow afternoon when they entertain Franklin College with a 2:00 kick-off. Next Saturday night, Randolph-Macon College will be at Honaker Field for a 7:30 start. This year's Homecoming game will be Saturday, October 18, when the Scots meet Georgetown College for another 7:30 kick-off. The Georgetown game will be Maryville's final home appearance as the Scots finish the season with four away games.

Craig Larsen and Will Way look on as Dan Bergner fakes his opponent.

Booters Lose To Bryan

The Bryan College JV booted five goals to Maryville's one goal to hand the soccer team a loss in their season opener. The Scots held Bryan to one goal in the first half, but was forced to concede four goals to Bryan's offense in the second half. Maryville's goal was kicked in by Doug Hardy in the fourth quarter.

Maryville played Tennessee Wesleyan Wednesday at Athens, and hosts Tusculum Saturday morning at 10:30

Swim Class For Tots Offered

Swim classes for children ages six months to four years are being offered during the fall term through the Maryville College continuing education program.

Janet Garbutt will teach the mother-tots course which will start October 7 and meet each Tuesday, 9:30–10:00 a.m. The class will be limited to 15 participants. The fee is $15.

Goals for the course include teaching the child to enjoy the water and be safe in water and to teach the beginners crawl, to dive and jump into deep water, to swim about 15 feet, to float, and to pick objects from the bottom in shallow water.

More information is available by calling Continuing Education director Arthur S. Bushing at 982-6412.

Brown Named To TCWSF

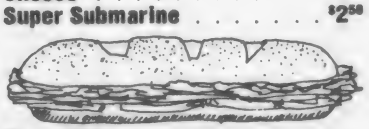
Sharon Brown, physical education instructor and women's basketball and volleyball coach at Maryville College, was recently re-elected to the governing board of the Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation.

In its annual fall meeting, the federation discussed changes in sports policy, eligibility, and how the recently passed Title IX will ultimately affect women's athletic programs.

We Invite You to Visit Us at Seven Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Downtown
Alcoa
Airport
Broadway
McGhee Tyson
Seymour-Chapman Hwy.
Townsend



Tallest And Closest To The Campus

RESEARCH PAPERS
THOUSANDS ON FILE
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

COLLEGE CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVE
Needed to sell Brand Name Stereo Components to Students at lowest prices. Hi Commission, NO Investment required. Serious Inquiries ONLY! FAD COMPONENTS, INC. 20 Passaic Ave. Fairfield, New Jersey 07006
JERRY DIAMOND 201-227-6814

Looking for adventure, travel, mystery, and intrigue? Do you want a career with high pay and room for advancement?
No this is not the Navy. This is the Highland Echo! We're looking for a few good writers. If you like to throw caution to the wind and hard work, then you might qualify. Sound exciting? If so, apply to Box 2820.

HORSIN' AROUND
448-6298
448-6411
Davey Crockett Stables in Townsend is now booking overnight pack trips into the Smokies. Special rates for Maryville College students; $10 per person with 8 persons minimum. Transportation furnished if needed.
Riding Lessons
Hay Rides

the flavor tree
983-7914
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's
TRY OUR DELICIOUS DELI SANDWICHES
Cheese 90c
Salami or Turkey $1.00
Ham $1.05
Corned Beef $1.10
Pastrami or Roast Beef $1.20
Reuben $1.40
"Philadelphia Hoagies"
Reg. $1.60
Roast Beef $1.80
Ham $1.80
Cheese $1.70
Super Submarine $2.50

delicatessen

FREE PAINT
SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER
THAT'S RIGHT, one free gallon of top grade enamel or lacquer with your first order of paint just so you will try our paint.
Detroit has cut back on auto production, We made a huge purchase of paint they can't use right now. This paint is the very same original paint on your own car or truck, worth $14.-$16. per. Gal. You can easily roll it, brush it, spray it, on anything. We have any color you may need, just name it, or mail us samples with your check.
ONLY $ 4.75 per Gallon if you order right now. Plus,++ one free gallon with your first order,, PLUS,+++ order 4 Gallons of one color and get the 5th gallon FREE.
MAIL YOUR ORDER TODAY, WHILE WE STILL HAVE MORE THAN 300 DIFFERENT COLORS !!!!
For incredible prices on wholesale lots of 50 gallons or more, call us: 504/367-3083
(All shipments F.O.B. New Orleans)
You Cannot Buy Better Paint For Less Money.
YOUR ORDER FORM
Dear Sirs: If your paint is as good as you say it is, send us the following gallons and colors:
Gallons | Color | price
Total amount $
(If you can, attach here with tape, small chips or samples of colors you want).
We understand all your paint is backed by a 100% adjustment guarantee.
TO Mail Order Paint Co. Dept. FE
83 Fifth Street
Gretna, La. 70053
Enclosed find $_____ for _____ Gallons of your paint.
Name _____ (Please print)
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____
(All shipments F.O.B. New Orleans)

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 3 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | October 10, 1975

Homecoming Queen Candidates Announced

Dorothy Bang

Martha Day

The election of the Homecoming Queen candidates of 1975 was held on Tuesday, October 7 in the main lobby of Pearsons. By popular vote, the number of candidates were narrowed down from thirteen to only five students.

These candidates well represent Maryville College and exhibit a wide variety of interests and talents. The newly elected Queen will be announced October 18, during the Homecoming half-time festivities.

Dorothy Bang: Being the daughter of a Colonel in the army has enabled Dorothy to live in such places as Japan, Alaska, Germany, and Hawaii. She is a psychology major and after graduation plans to work for some time before attending graduate school for a degree in school psychology. Dorothy has served as a lifeguard at Maryville and has participated in intramural flag football, soccer, and basketball. During her spare time, Dorothy enjoys needlework, playing the guitar, and working with children. She is a member of Theta Epsilon, Secretary-Treasurer of the Senior class, and a Senior Counselor in Pearsons.

Lynn Houlberg

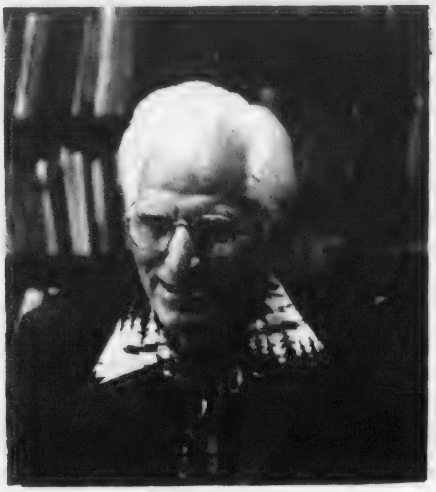
Martha Day: As an art studio major, Martha has a wide variety of interests and talents. Her studies include painting, drawing, crafts, ceramics, and photography. After graduation, Martha hopes to sell some of her own work and to go on to graduate school to expand her skills in various areas of art. Martha has been commissioned to create a wall hanging which will be displayed in the F.A.C. lounge. Dance and theatre are also a part of Martha's life as can be seen through her performances with the Maryville—Alcoa Civic Ballet and the Maryville College theatrical productions. Not only is Martha a member of the Tennessee Gymnastics Association, but she is also an instructor for the Maryville School of Gymnastics. She is a member of Theta Epsilon and Pearsons House Council.

Lynn Houlberg: As an art education major, Lynn plans to work in an art-related field after graduation and to continue her education to obtain a Master of Fine Arts degree. She is a recipient of both the Davies Fine Arts Award and the Uprising Senior Art Scholarship. Lynn was recently commissioned by the Charles Merrill Fund to sketch prints of five Maryville campus buildings. Lynn's other interests include sewing and swimming. Presently serving as an R.A. in Dorm 1, she is also a member of the Instructional Program Committee, the editor of the Chilhowean, and a student library assistant.

Pat Johnson

Patricia Johnson: Pat is an English major who hopes to continue her education in graduate school. She has an incurable desire to collect records and appreciates all styles of music. Pat is especially fond of playing musical instruments, singing, dancing, and just getting out and meeting people. When her other activities don't prevail, Pat likes to take time out to do some sewing.

Terrie Topham: As a physical education major, Terrie hopes to teach on the junior high school level. She loves most sports, especially swimming, playing raquetball, and motorcycling. Throughout her four years at Maryville College, she has been a very dedicated member of the cheerleading squad. Besides being a member of the Women's Basketball Team, Terrie is also a member of the women's "M" club and Phi Epsilon Rho. In her junior year and now as a senior, Terrie has taken responsibilities of an R.A. in Davis.



Terrie Topham

Candy Belle Mbugwe: An anthropology major hailing from Gulu, Uganda, Candy Belle hopes to attend graduate school. She has a wide scope of interests. However, her favorite hobbies are treeclimbing, screaming, and beating on her chest. A true animal lover, Candy Belle has a large collection of ticks and mites. During the summer she worked as a luggage tester for Samsonite.

Candy Belle Mbugwe

Joe Copeland's Favorite Jokes

Editors' Note: Joe Copeland is the president of Maryville College. When he comes out on stage he sometimes does zany bits. He might for instance, grab a handkerchief, wrap it around his head and pretend he's Aunt Jemima. He's also been known to slip into the lunch line inconspicuously and shout "Live grenade!"

Here are some of Joe's favorite jokes.

How can you tell the difference between Coach Jordan and a gorilla?
The gorilla peels his banana before he eats it.

Where did the limbo originate?
In a Greyhound Bus Terminal. Mr. Ribble was trying to get into a pay toilet.

Why did the Maryville College Library almost have to close?
Someone made off with the book.

Why did Dean Massey have scratches all over her face?
From learning to eat with a knife and fork.

Why doesn't Brick Brahams play hide and seek?
Because nobody would look for him.

When in college, Neil McDade never wrote his name in his textbooks. It would kill the re-sale value.

What is Matt Couzen's matched luggage?
A couple of shopping bags from the same store.

Who runs Maryville College?
Nobody runs it. It has to be pushed.

One of our maintenance men broke his arm while raking leaves. He fell out of the tree.

Dr. Cartlidge laughs three times at a joke . . . .when he first hears it, then when someone tries to explain it to him, and finally when he thinks he understands it.

"Who died?" asked the stranger at the wake.
"I think it's that one over there in the coffin," replied Dr. Walker.

Campus Woods Project Explained

Last week the Echo printed an article by its editors concerning the college woods. They brought up the question as to why the college woods have not been returned to its original state after the laying of the sewage line.

Mr. McDade has proposed an answer to this question and to others dealing with the college woods.

At the time the sewage line was being planned for Mr. McDade was not working for Maryville College. He says that the contract for the sewage line was basically between the city and the contractor. The college did sign an easement, however, he feels that the situation was out of the college hands'. It was a matter of the college being gracious about the sewage line coming through, or the city confiscating the land. It did take a year for the college to come to a decision about the college woods. In the agreement, the college asked the city to pick another area in the woods, which is not the original sight. The college also told the contractors to install sewage taps, and not to damage commercial property.

The sewage line occured late in 1973. Problems did occur and the job went about very slowly. The land became muddy while there was a change in contractors. When discussion was aroused, the Maryville Newspaper published its resistance to the sewage line. The paper did understand that it was necessary for homes in the area to have sewage lines. Most people seemingly agreed with the newspaper's sentiments.

As for the land being reclaimed, the contractor is "supposed" to plant grass over the area and repair the land. This process is being done slowly while the college is discussing this problem with the city of Maryville.

Letters to the Echo

To the Editors:

We are currently charging full time students who eat at the Dining Hall a board fee for the year of $575.00. Our contract with SAGA calls for $13.44 per student per week on a thirty-four week feeding calendar (three ten week terms, a three week interim, and odd days at the beginning and end for orientation, registration and clearing out). Thirty-four times the weekly rate is approximately $457.00.

We are estimating that other items chargeable to the board fee will total 25% of the ocntract price with SAGA. This 25% of $457 equals a little over $114. This amount is used to pay the following: insurance; maintenance of the Dining Room and its equipment; equipment replacement; utilities including electricity, water, heat, and gas for the boiler serving the dishwashing room and the steam cooking units; and general administrative overhead. An example of administrative overhead could include the time the Business Office personnel spend in handling SAGA bills and reimbursing SAGA for its services, and the time the Student Personnel Office spends compiling the board list and keeping it current. There would be a number of other small costs in this category.

When you add $457 that we pay SAGA and the $114 that the other items come to you have a total of $5 or very close to the total charge bein made. Since utility rates and insuranc rates are increasing rapidly, and some times during the year as they already have this year, we're sure the $4 per student difference for the year is mu less a margin than we should have to be on the safe side.

The Food Comm

Dear Editors,

The statement was made by the ad ministration that it is a privelege to have a car on campus. Well, I'm beginning to wonder!! When you hav to pay $20 car registration fee and then not be able to park near your dorm . . . .

I'm referring particularly to severa students living in Pearsons who were told to park behind the student center when there are many empty places in the Pearson parking lot. It's an unnecessary inconvenience. The excuse has been given that the empty places are needed when banquets are held in the banquet room. Who is the campus catering to—the studen or the community?

Dana Alspaugh

ACC Answers Campus Questions

At last week's CIV on the All College Council, a question and answer period ensued after the orientation program. Many questions were raised that could not be answered by the students, administration, and faculty who were present. Most of these questions concerned issues that Mr. Neil McDade could explain or answer for us. This is a summary of the discussion we had on these topics:

Heating, hot water schedule

Mr. McDade explained that the present schedule will only be in effect until the heat is on more often in the winter. Sometime around the end of October the weather will be such that the heat will be on most of the day. Since the heat will be on more, there will also be more hot water. Each dorm has a reserve tank to store hot water. The size of the reserve tank and the amount of people using hot water after the boilers are off will determine how long the hot water will last. Mr. McDade also stated that using this system this fall has saved the college $600.00 a day in fuel costs.

Dining Hall

One of the questions concerning the dining hall was the problem of carrying an I.D. card to all meals. Mr. McDade differentiated between those students who occasionally forget their I.D.'s and those who refuse to show them or are constant violators. Those students' names who are constant violators will be turned over to the Student Personnel Office for some sort of action.

There is nothing in Saga's contract which states that they must serve six hot breakfasts a week. By the way, this contract is available for anyone to read. The college can direct Saga to do what they feel is best for the students in regard to meals, so anyone with a suggestion or complaint should bring it to the Food Committee—Jackie Inman, Chairman, Mr. Raymond Brahams, Co-Chairman.

Commuting students are welcomed to eat in the dining hall. If they show their I.D. at the door, they will be allowed to purchase a meal ticket for $1.00. Mr. Miller would prefer if this ticket is bought at the bookstore. Mr. Miller is very willing to accomodate commuting students, so if anyone has any problems buying a ticket please contact Mr. Miller.

Memorial Hall damage fees

At the end of last year the administration was still unsure what the college was going to do with Memorial. It was still possible that the building was going to be put to some use and so Dorm damages had to be charged. Also the administration concerned with residence hall life felt that these students had to be penalized for malicious damage just as students in other dorms would be fined. If anyone is dissatisfied with these reasons please talk to Dr. Kramer.

Student Center and Physical Education Building hours

These buildings are of course connected with how many hours the college can afford to keep them open. In running the Student Center all Saga attempts to do is break even, but some hours they cannot even do this because they must pay for utilities and employees and the sales do not meet this overhead. Saga is trying to find out which hours are used the most by the campus and so if we are dissatisfied contact Bob Miller.

The P.E. building is under the same handicap of paying employees and utilities, so the hours it is open must be made worthwhile by campus use. The All College Council will be sending out a questionaire soon to find out when these buildings would be most frequently used and try to adjust these schedules accordingly.

Infirmary

Many students have expressed dissatisfaction with our present medical facilities. In last week's edition of The Highland Echo it was incorrectly states that our insurance covers admittance to the emergency room of the hospital. Our insurance covers if we are admitted to the hospital, but not any fees charged while in emergency. Since we no longer have an infirmary but a clinic only open certain hours, Dr. Proffitt is to be on call for our medical needs. Rumors have also been circulating that Mrs. Everett's job and the clinic's future are endangered; this is not ture. According to Mr. McDade, the clinic will continue through this entire school year. If we are not pleased with this set-up then a proposal or petition ought to be drawn up and submitted to the administration or the All College Council.

Budget

Many students have expressed the desire to understand how the college's budget is arrived at and divided among the various departments and services. Mr. McDade would very much like to explain this at an informal meeting to all those interested. Anyone who would like to participate should contact Suzanne Phillips, Box 2501, and they will be notified of the time and place.

Theatre Presents Two Plays

On October 30, 1975 a new innovative season of theatre begins as the Maryville College Playhouse presents "Landscape" by Harold Pinter and "The Real Inspector Hound" by Tom Stoppard as it's first major production. The two shows will run nightly Oct. 30, 31, and Nov. 1 at 8:15 p.m. Carl Swenson and Patricia Damon, are featured in "Landscape" as Duff and Beth respectively; Heidi Parunak is Assistant Director. The cast for "The Real Inspector Hound" has Neil Matheson as Moon, Don Tosh as Birdboot, Mary Story as Mrs. Drudge, Roland Moore as Simon, and Terry Thomson as Felicity, Ruth Wilbanks as Cynthia, John Morton as Magnus, and Joseph Carnevale as Inspector Hound. Ed Fort is Stage Manager and Martha Mainous is Assistant Director. Both Plays are being directed by Mr. Thomas E. Jones of the Speech-Theatre faculty.

In place of one major production during the winter term the Playhouse has inaugerated its first Studio Theatre season. Plays, recitals, and any program of an experimental nature may be produced by any interested student at no cost to the student. The Playhouse will underwrite production costs for any student program produced in the Studio Theatre. Interested persons should contact Mr. Beasley to arrange financial backing and production schedules. The Studio Theatre facility is currently undergoing rennovation and remodeling. New items include a suspended lighting grid in the ceiling to facilitate any production style (proscenium arena, L-stage, and any other non-conventional staging techniques). Other additions are blackout curtains, and innovative interior decorations in keeping with the experimental theme. Technical assistance can be provided for those unfamiliar with the wide scope of theatrical production requirements.

The second major production will be "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds" by Paul Zindel. This play was selected "the best American Play of the 1969-70 season by the New York Drama Critics Circle and shared the OBIE Award for Best Off-Broadway Play with Megan Terry's 'Approaching Simone'." Production for "Marigolds" is scheduled for May 6, 7, and 8.

This Playhouse season is one of unlimited opportunity; your participation in your theatre is encouraged.

Round Table Discussions Welcome Outstanding Students

This year the combined classes include approximately 23 students. They all seem to enjoy the discussions, and according to Dr. Walker, they work their hardest all the time. The discussions are usually rather lively; sometimes the alumni cannot resist the temptation to return to hear the students speak on various subjects. Refreshemnts are served before class, which also adds to the enjoyment of the meetings.

The major purposes of these discussions are "to acquaint the students with component parts of good drama and to encourage the students to probe the fundamental motives of man's potentialities and limitations."

Each group will eventually write a play, which will be presented at the round table discussion meetings. The students evaluate themselves, and at the end of the term a bonus is given to each sutdent who has done his best.

The entering students of Maryville College who have an outstanding verbal ability are invited to join the English and History 121 classes. Each Friday, these classes meet for two hours to discuss history and drama. The discussions are led by the students, who are divided into groups of 5 or 6 people. The involved faculty are Dr. Walker and Dean Blair.

Theatre Credits Added

Credit will now be given for Playhouse and Forum for Speech and Debate. A program has been set up to provide one elective course credit for each full year of participation after a one year apprenticeship in Forum for Speech and Debate and in Playhouse. The total credit is not to exceed two courses and is to be in addition to the 40 course credits required for graduation. A student may receive credit for one year of Forum and one year of Playhouse provided he has served one year apprenticeship in each organization. If you have any questions please contact Mr. Jones or Mr. Beasley in the Theatre, or the Registrar.

Echo Policy

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Letters and articles must be typed and turned into Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be witheld upon request. The editors reserve the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editors, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Contributors: Fred Strohl, Ingrid Gensler, Janet Pfarrer, Diane Burger, Rose Wing, Bonnie Holsinger; Photography: Marc Ward; Lay-out: Debbie Baker; Business Manager: Charlie Thompson; Advisor: Dr. E. Fowler.

Scotties Go 0 - 3

The Maryville College football team dropped its third decision of the season Saturday to Franklin College of Franklin, Indiana, 34–10. The teams were tied at halftime, 10–10, when it appeared the Scots might have a hope at upsetting the favored Grizzlies. However, Franklin maintained possession of the football for a good portion of the second half and set up their scoring plays.

The Scots took a 7–0 lead with 10:47 left in the first period when Ron Lasley crossed the goal-line on a three-yard run. With 14:04 left in the second period, Jeff Lombard put Franklin on the board with a 26-yard field goal. The Grizzlies went ahead, 10–7, 2:59 later on a nine-yard TD pass from Dana Standefer to Joe Kelly. Maryville tied the score with 1:21 remaining in the first half on a 38-yard field goal by Tim Kelly.

Lombard kicked his second FG of the day with 4:38 to go in the third period and provided the Grizzlies with the winning margin. Several minutes later, Standefer connected with Kelly again on a six-yard TD pass. Robert Kunes pretty well put the game out of reach with a 48-yard run into the end-zone early in the fourth period. Franklin's final TD came with 2:03 to go on a 16-yard run by Carl Allen.

Offensively, Franklin gained 414 yards to only 116 for Maryville. The Scots gained 86 yards on the ground and 30 through the air. Ron Lasley was the leading rusher with 60 yards in nine carries. Joe Genualdi had 37 yards in 13 carries. Quarterback Sam Horner connected on three of 11 passes for 30 yards. All three completions were to Don Surrency.

Punter Jim Lester was kept busy all afternoon with nine punts totaling 381 yards for an average of 42.3 yards.

The Scots are home again tomorrow night when they host Randolph-Macon College of Ashland, Virginia. Kickoff will be 7:30.

Fun And Games

On Sunday, October 12 from 3:30 p.m. the Student Relations Committee of Highland Presbyterian Church is sponsoring an afternoon of games for college students at the church (rain or shine). Food and drinks will be provided. Notify Jim Stockdale, Box 2477, if you can come. Please come and bring a friend.

Vespers

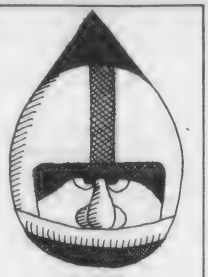
Vespers will be held in the Little Chapel on Sunday, Octover 12, at 7:00 p.m. The Baptist Student Union will have charge of the program. Everyone is welcome.

The Communications Committee is seeking an editor for a new college literary magazine to be started this term. Applications for editorship must contain any qualifications pertinent to this area of work, and a list of possible staff members, including a layout editor and a copy editor. All applications must be turned in to Box 2814 by Friday, October 17. Applicants will be notified through Campus mail as to the date of the Communications Committee meeting for the selection of the editor.

WSI For The Handicapped

The Maryville College Physical Education Department will be offering a course in Water Safety Instructor (WSI) for the Handicapped this winter. Enrollees must have a current WSI. Students will learn techniques of teaching swimming to blind, deaf, mentally and physically handicapped persons. Also, enrollees will work with a handicapped person weekly, putting to use the skills learned in class. Tentative time for the class is Tuesday, Thursday and Friday at 11:10 a.m. with the swimming lab on Fridays. All interested persons should contact the Maryville College Registrar to enroll. If more information is needed, contact Sharon Brown at 983-0640 at the Fieldhouse no later than Monday, October 27th.

Support Community Outreach



Students, become involved! One way is through the Community Outreach Committee, which undertakes various projects to answer the needs of the community near the campus. These projects include tutoring for children in grades one through six, visiting the elderly at Asbury Acres, babysitting for Headstart mothers, and collecting clothes for those in need.

Students who wish to serve the surrounding community in any of these ways are asked to come by the chaplain's office, Room 202 in Wilson Chapel, write Box 2807, or contact Peggy Maher (Box 2257), Bob Sturge, Box 2718, or Mrs. Herma Cate, Box 2824.

Soccer Team Swamped

The Scot's soccer team was downed by Tusculum last Saturday, with a final score of 7–0. Maryville took advantage of quite a few opportunities to score on Tusculum, but their goalie proved too capable at blocking the shots. Doug Hardy of Maryville kicked the ball in for a goal, only to have the point cancelled by a penalty against Maryville.

Many soccer fans may have noted that Geoff Lang, alumnus, a founder, and the past president of the Soccer Club was on hand for a brief guest appearance on the playing field.

GIVE BLOOD FOR THE TEAM.

$10 per donation to buy tickets to The Game.

Plasma twice a week. Or whole blood every 8 weeks. Mon.-Sat. Free Parking

blood alliance

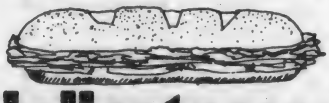
The Beta Beta Beta Biology Society is sponsoring a used book exchange Saturday, Oct. 11th (that's tomorrow!) in 137 SSC from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Come to browse, to buy, or to exchange books of any kind.

the flavor tree

983-7914

404 church ave.

church ave. professional bldg.



just past gilbert's

TRY OUR DELICIOUS DELI SANDWICHES

Cheese	90c
Salami or Turkey	$1.00
Ham	$1.05
Corned Beef	$1.10
Pastrami or Roast Beef	$1.20
Reuben	$1.40

"Philadelphia Hoagies"

Reg.	$1.60
Roast Beef	$1.90
Ham	$1.90
Cheese	$1.70
Super Submarine	$2.50

delicatessen

COLLEGE CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVE

Needed to sell Brand Name Stereo Components to Students at lowest prices. Hi Commission, NO Investment required. Serious Inquiries ONLY! FAD COMPONENTS, INC. 20 Passaic Ave. Fairfield, New Jersey 07006 JERRY DIAMOND 201-227-6814

HORSIN' AROUND
448-6298
448-6411

Davey Crockett Stables in Townsend is now booking overnight pack trips into the Smokies. Special rates for Maryville College students; $10 per person with 8 persons minimum. Transportation furnished if needed.

Riding Lessons
Hay Rides

RESEARCH PAPERS

THOUSANDS ON FILE

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.

COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

$33,500,000 Unclaimed Scholarships

Over $33,500,000 unclaimed scholarships, grants, aids, and fellowships ranging from $50 to $10,000. Current list of these sources researched and compiled as of Sept. 15, 1975.

UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS
11275 Massachusetts Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90025

☐ I am enclosing $9.95 plus $1.00 for postage and handling.

PLEASE RUSH YOUR CURRENT LIST OF UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS SOURCES TO:

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip____
(California residents please add 6% sales tax.)

theHighland ECHO

VOL 61 No. 4 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | October 17, 1975

Homecoming Events Announced

Maryville College alumni are expected to start arriving on campus Friday for weekend homecoming events.

The first scheduled event is an evening of entertainment in the studio theatre at 8:15 p.m. Selected readings will be presented by the oral interpretation class under the direction of Thomas E. Jones.

Alumni registration will be Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to noon in the lobby of the Health and Physical Education Building and from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. on Pearsons Hall lawn.

An added attraction this year is the Faculty Wives Harvest Crafts Festival from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. in the Wilson Chapel courtyard.

A pep parade on campus is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. followed by the alumni barbecue on Pearsons patio at 5:30 p.m. and the football game with Georgetown at 7:30 p.m.

Final event of the day will be the homecoming dance in the Margaret Ware Dining Room at 10:00 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

SMOKY FOLKLORE PROGRAM SCHEDULED FOR MC

A program on "Folklore of the Smoky Mountains" will be presented at Maryville College Friday, October 17, at 9:20 a.m. in the theatre.

The program of films and slides was produced by Herma Cate of the English Department and Bill Swenson of the Art Department with the help of students. It will include films and slides with music and narration.

Film photography is by Mr. Swenson with sound arranged by Danny Whiteside and Mrs. Cate. Background music is by a well-known local group, Nat Kuykendal, Ann Reagan, and Dan Gammon. Maryville student Charlie Closz will play the dulcimer. Narrators are students Bruce Hill and Peter Xiques.

Many of the slides were made by students during a folklore interim last winter. Several residents of Blount County cooperated in the making of the films and in locating items to photograph for slides.

Films used in the program will include "Tobacco Grading and Handling," "Herb Gathering," "Miller's Cove Mill," and "Take the Candy Off: Sorghum Making in Cades Cove."

Members of the community are invited to attend the program.

Experimental Theatre Program Tonight

Tonight at 8:00 p.m. the Theatre Dept. will initiate an Oral Interpretation Program as a showcase for the talents of the Oral Interpretation class. The free entertainment will be presented in the experimental theatre, and all interested listeners are invited to attend.

The program will consist of selected readings by members of the class; Ruth Wilbanks, Peter Xiques, Patricia Hines, Don Tosh, Norma Edmondson, Ingrid Gensler, David Blazier, and Martha Mainous. They will also perform some of the "Peanuts" Great Pumpkin carols, in keeping with the season.

Musical entertainment will be provided in the form of Jim Grey, Mike Dykes, Danny Whiteside and Steve Maggio.

This is only the first of five such evenings to be presented by the oral interpretation class throughout the months of October and November. Watch the Echo for dates of future performances.

Rhodes Elected VP of SCICAC

Dr. Gale Rhodes, head of the Maryville College chemistry department, has been re-elected vice-president of South Central Independent College Association of Chemists.

The organization includes small college chemistry teachers in eastern Kentucky and Tennessee, western Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, and South Carolina.

The annual meeting, at Pine Mountain State Park near Pineville, Kentucky, brought together teachers at member colleges and representatives of area universities for a sharing of experiences, innovations, and common concerns. There were also discussions of faculty and student research opportunities at the universities and seminars on recent research presented by well-known chemists.

Harvest Crafts Festival On Saturday

The Maryville College faculty wives will sponsor the annual Harvest Crafts Festival this Saturday, Octover 18, in the Chapel-Theatre complex. The hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The craft demonstrations will include leatherworking, quilting, pottery, sketching, painting, woodcarving, candlemaking, baked goods, plants, and crafts. Refreshments will be available, and the program will include a variety of entertainment.

This activity has proven to be a growing tradition on the Maryville campus, with a more active interest being shown each year. The admission is free and the crafts on display can also be purchased that day. There are varied talents in evidence at this event, and students, faculty, and administrators are urged to take advantage of this opportunity.

Library Not Hurt By Budget Cutbacks

Head Librarian, Miss Savage

As we all know, Maryville's present financial situation is not at its peak and this has caused many cutbacks in the school's budget. Recently the question was raised, does the MC library have its own budget and has it been altered in any way?

The library does have its own budget where so much money is allocated for all books in all the different departments of study as well as the different areas of the library. It is true that the library's budget has been cut, however, it is receiving a sufficient amount of federal aid under Title 2 and Title 3 to make up for this loss. Under Title 2, the library is entitled to purchase those books and materials it deems necessary and advantageous to all. The aid from Title 3 is used to purchase materials in those areas presently being developed such as crafts, deaf education, non-western studies, and allied health.

Although the library is receiving the same amount of money as it did last year, the rising cost of books and other materials has still forced it to make some minor cutbacks such as cancelling a few of the less popular periodicals.

Memorial gifts and donations from alumni and other individuals or organizations are an extremely important source of money to the library. These donations are in addition to any money received from the college or any type of financial aid.

Vespers

The Rev. Phil Muir, pastor of the Madrona Presbyterian Church in Seattle, Washington and MC alumni board member, will the the guest speaker at vespers Sunday, October 29 at 7:00 p.m. in the Little Chapel. Rev. Muir will be speaking on the topic, "Serving Christ on Campus."

Bluegrass Concert To Be Held

On Friday, November 7, 1975, from 8 to 11 p.m., the Oak Ridge Civic Music Association Guild will present in joint concert the Berea College Country Dancers and the McLain Family Bluegrass Band.

The dancers, all students in the Kentucky College, have recently returned from a tour of Scotland and England. Their authentic dances from the past have earned them wide acclaim.

Bluegrass music first and last is fun. It is "people Music" today. Instrumentation of the bluegrass band itself is homogeneous. It uses only stringed instruments, usually non-electrified, and always the five string banjo.

For the past three years the McLains have performed in the United States from New York to California and from Michigan to Mississippi, from the Grand Ole Opry to two months on the road with the Cincinnati Symphony. Ticket sales will be limited due to the capacity of the Oak Ridge High School gymnasium. To avoid disappointment, tickets may be ordered now from—

Mrs. James Gillespie
103 Willow Lane
Oak Ridge, Tennessee 37830

Adults $2.00 Students $1.00

Who Should We Cater To?

There is a common complaint among students that the college administration disregards student opinions and ideas in order to patronize the more conservative element of Maryville alumni for financial support. There is often a feeling of split concerns where the administration is concerned, and the slow process of change helps to promote this feeling. But are there really seperate concerns for Maryville College among students and alumni?

One of the college administrators recently explained to us some of the difficulties of running an institution such as ours. From the outset there is a division of interests toward a common cause. The business of a college is one that is run for people usually under the age of twenty-five and mainly supported by people over forty. The object is a quality education and an atmosphere condusive to this end. However, students and their elders are often at odds on what is the best way to attain such an education.

There have been many battles over student rights and priveleges, usually resulting in some sort of stalemate. Rules often go unchanged and continue to be broken. Instead of self-government we are left with thinly-disguised anarchy.

The reason behind this is that various factions involved in any administrative dealings either fail or refuse to communicate. Quite often people make the mistake of believing that the most effective tactic to produce results is to secretly draw out a plan and, with the element of surprise, stun their opponents with a well-formulated attack. This has proved more detrimental than pragmatic.

When it comes to administrating any organization, no one likes surprises. To suddenly confront someone in authority with a petition or the like which he has heard nothing about only insures that time will be lost while he studies the proposal. This invariably gives the impression that he disagrees, thus adding to the pre-suppositions of most students that all requests to the administration are to be turned down. This is simply not the case. Such an attitude would be in no one's best interest.

The administration and Board of Directors are caught in the middle because they are held responsible to contributors and supporters of the college who may not be so receptive to changes in policy. Who are they to appease? On one hand the college cannot thrive without the people who give us various means of support. On the other hand the school cannot exist without students.

This necessitates moderate change in order to make allowances for everyone. This in itself is one of the greatest problems in administration. "Moderate change" has different connotations for everyone. For some it means no change, whereas for others it includes a wide spectrum of possibilities.

Taking the full weight of both sides into consideration, it is obvious that an institution run by any one group would be doomed to failure. The necessary balance, however, has been held by retaining an atmosphere of opposition. The administration is caught having to cater to different ideas and ideals. And while these differences are necessary for growth, they can also stagnate an institution. Instead of continuing this idea of a "balance of power," more progress could be made by open rapport and efforts to work together toward our common causes. The opportunity has always been there, and the offices are open. All we have to do is use them. Maryville College doesn't have to cater to anyone if we can allow ourselves free thought and communication.

David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Letters to the Echo . . . . . .

To the editors:

In your October 10, editorial, "Joe Copeland's Favorite Jokes," the following statement was made in reference to Dr. Copeland's "zany bits": "He might for instance, grab a handkerchief, wrap it around his head and pretend he's Aunt Jemima." This statement clearly indicates an insensitivity toward members of this community who are Black.

We recognize your statement as an insult to the character of black womanhood and a disturbing example of the white humor that has consistently insulted us by demeaning black experiences. The grotesque Aunt Jemimas of the streetcar advertisements, proclaim only an ability to serve, without grace of loveliness. The "humor" of Aunt Jemima ignores the courageous efforts of black women as they struggled to raise their own children as well as those of their mistresses'. Instead, the Black woman has been used to provoke the mirthless laugh of ridicule.

We do not know how your statement was intended. Nevertheless, the fact remains that in your editorial you insulted our experiences, which in essence, is us. We believe we have a responsibility to the dead, living, and unborn Black women of america, to stop the perpetuation of this type of humor. This form of humor can only lead to further misunderstandings between black and white americans.

The Aunt Jemima image that attempts to define the role of Black women is highly exaggerated and distorted. The Black woman is one of America's unsung heroines. Now, more than ever, we need to call upon the strengths and values of the Black woman that have helped a people over many a mountain, and recall the hopes and prayers that can carry us all into a new land.

Aunt Jemima, alias "Grandmother," alias "Big Moma," alias "Mother Dear" is no joking matter. That jet black, nappy hair, overweight, feet hurting woman, is beautiful.

Emerson D. Henderson
President,
Black Student Association

Editors' Reply:

When we were writing the article, Aunt Jemima was not supposed to be the brunt of this joke. No malice was intended. Just as no malice was intended towards Dr. Copeland or the other people mentioned in the article. It seemed to us that no one would take this article seriously.

At the end of your letter you said that the Aunt Jemima figure is beautiful. We agree. But we can't agree with your statement that this type of humor is harmful. It can be very beneficial.

Many shows on television bear this out. Shows like "The Jeffersons," "Sanford and Son," "All in the Family," and the rest have done more good for the Black cause than bad. This has been accomplished by bringing beliefs and absurd stereotype images out into the open where we can all see them, realize the ridiculousness of them all, and laugh at them together. We tend to believe that much more can be done with satire than chronic complaints.

We apologize to those people who were offended. We would like to suggest that you spend your time in more useful ways to benefit the Black cause than digging up nit-picking issues that did not exist within the context of our article. If your need to be heard is that strong, we suggest that you lodge an official complaint to the corporation that created the Aunt Jemima figure, and send one to Flip Wilson to have him stop doing Geraldine.

MC Playhouse Opens With Two Plays

Maryville College Playhouse will open the season Oct. 30—Nov. 1 with two plays, "Landscape" by Harold Pinter and "The Real Inspector Hound" by Tom Stoppard. Both plays are being directed by Thomas E. Jones of the speech-theatre faculty.

In its style and approach, "Landscape" is a new departure for Pinter since there is nothing of the "comedy of menace." The difficulty of communications—as in so many of Pinter's plays—is one of the main themes. But this difficulty emerges not from dialogue between two people who talk to each other at length without getting through, but from what, in effect, are two monologues simultaneously delivered and intercut, each on a different level of expression.

What is remarkable about "Landscape" as a virtuoso piece of writing is not only the subtle control of its rhythms, but also the immense feat of compression Pinter has accomplished. What might otherwise have occupied a full length play is compressed into a half hour.

The sparseness of style, the extreme skill with which minute clues are subtly interwoven, create a picture of depth and density with a minimum of words. It is out of the silences and pauses that the landscape of three lives emerge, a landscape that opens onto a vast horizon.

Carl Swenson is cast as Duff and Patricia Damon as Beth. Heidi Parun is assistant director.

Stoppard is a young British playwright of both extraordinary skill and a notable gift for satirical humor. W "The Real Inspector Hound" is not distinguished as his "Rosengrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," it is a comic satire of a high and delightful quality admirably done.

The play is sharp in its mockery of both mystery melodrama and drama criticism, but it is good natured as w as accurate in its raillery.

The cast has Neil Matheson as Mo Don Tosh as Birdboot, Mary Story a Mrs. Drudge, Roland Moore as Simo Terry Thomson as Felicity, Ruth W banks as Cynthia, John Morton as Magnus, and Joseph Carnevale as In tor Hound. Martha Manous is assista director, and Ed Fort is stage manag

Admission is $2; students $1. Cur time is 8:15 p.m.

Dorm Dwellers Win Right To Drink

by Cynthia Crossen

(CPS)—While the specter of alcoholism is haunting more college campuses these days, many universities are relaxing their rules prohibiting drinking in residence halls and campus bars.

In recent months, universities in at least four states have edged toward or approved limited drinking on campus. One of the arguments frequently given for liberalized on-campus drinking policies is that drinking in dorm rooms is so wide-spread that it might as well be legal.

In fact, one out of every 20 college students is a problem drinker according to statistics of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. And almost half the college students surveyed recently by a Chicago-based advertising agency said they bought liquor at least once a month.

That liquor can now be consumed in the privacy of a student's own dorm room at Oregon State University where students 21 years and older were given permission to drink in their rooms last summer. The new rule at Oregon State forbids drinking in public places like lounges or dining halls.

The Oregon policy also forbids drunkenness. But enforcement efforts are not likely to be rigorous. The University is counting on the "living groups," not the University administration, to keep track of who's drinking and how much.

The right to drink in a dorm room hasn't been as easily won at other schools. Students at Marshall University in Huntington, WV are battling the University administration just for the privilege of drinking 3.2 beer on campus. According to West Virginia law, 3.2 beer is not intoxicating.

Marshall students have been pushing for 3.2 beer on campus since 1969. Until last spring, it was up to the University president to decide whether students could drink on campus. For a few months this summer, liquor was prohibited on all West Virginia campuses, but the Marshall University president has the final say once again and students have "some hope of approval."

The tactics that students have used to win the right to drink on campus have varied from school to school. The Nebraska Wesleyan's Board of Governors approved a student senate recommendation to allow dorm drinking in a matter of months. The Wesleyan board reaffirmed its opposition to liquor in the dormitories but said its use was up to the "judgement and social responsibility of students."

The action at Nebraska Wesleyan convinced students at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln to take another stab at liberalizing drinking policies there. But student association president Jim Say said "there is almost no hope of getting approval through the regents," and a proposal to the state legislature would probably be more effective.

Students at other schools are working for the sale of liquor on campus as well. Arizona State University student association president Craig Tribken this fall launched a campaign calling for the sale of wine and beer on campus. Students of legal drinking age at Arizona State are already permitted to drink in their residence halls.

"The stigmatizing of alcohol off campus gives it (drinking in general) an unhealthy atmosphere," Tribken said. 'I think people should be able to elect whether or not to drink. This is an important factor in creating adults."

Parker To Hold Seminar

Dr. Russell Parker, professor of history, will discuss some of the ideas which developed from last year's research at the first meeting of the Faculty Club on November 18 in Proffitt Dining Room. Faculty members and their spouses as well as retired Maryville College personnel comprise this organization which attempts to challenge its members to think creatively and continue their scholarly pursuits.

Members of the Faculty Club Committee include Dr. Dan Kinsinger, Prof. Kay Martin, Dr. J. W. Nichols, Dr. Robert Ramger, and Dr. Elizabeth Fowler.

Shields Attends Pre-Med Meet

Dr. Randolph Shields, head of the biology department at Maryville College is attending a regional conference of Pre-Medical and Allied Health Advisors at Tulane Medical School in New Orleans this week.

Hunter Club To Meet Tuesday

Hunter Club is scheduled to meet in the home of Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler on Tuesday evening, October 28, at 7:30. Composed of interested English majors, the Club meets each month in the home of one of the Enlgish faculty members to share ideas gleaned from reading and research. The October meeting will feature student independent study topics.

Poetry Contest

A $1500 grand prize will be awarded in the current Poetry Contest sponsored by the World of Poetry, a monthly newsletter for poets.

Poems of all styles and on any subject are eligible to compete for the grand prize or for 49 other cash or merchandise awards. Second place is $500.

Joseph Mellon, contest director, said, "The initial response is gratifying. Even poets who never publish are sending their work." Each winning poem will be included in the prestigious World of Poetry Anthology.

Rules and official entry forms are available by writing to: World of Poetry, 801 Portola Dr., Dept. 211, San Francisco CA 94127.

Contest deadline: November 30, 1975.

Another Folksing Tonight

In answer to numerous public requests, another folk-sing will be held tonight at 9:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center. The folk-sing is an impromptu concert program featuring a full range of local musical talent.

The last folk-sing featured rock, jazz, and folk music performed by artists from the Maryville campus and the surrounding area. This program will be similar, but an even greater turnout is expected.

Admission is free and this is one Homecoming event that no one will want to miss. The unmatched variety of a Maryville folk-sing is indeed incomparable. Everyone is invited to attend.

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Ingird Gensler, Janet Pfarrer, Millie Brewer, Rose Wing, Diane Burger, Fred Strohl, Bonnie Holsinger, Pam McCroskey, Peggy Maher, Emerson Henderson; Photography: Marc Ward; Lay Out: Debbie Baker; Distribution: R.C. Stevens; Business Manager: Charlie Thompson; Advisor: Dr. E. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2820 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

The Communications Committee is seeking an editor for a new college literary magazine to be started this term. Applications for editorship must contain any qualifications pertinent to this area of work, and a list of possible staff members, including a layout editor and a copy editor. All applications must be turned in to Box 2814 by Friday, October 17. Applicants will be notified through Campus mail as to the date of the Communications Committee meeting for the selection of the editor.

RESEARCH PAPERS
THOUSANDS ON FILE
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

$33,500,000 Unclaimed Scholarships
Over $33,500,000 unclaimed scholarships, grants, aids, and fellowships ranging from $50 to $10,000. Current list of these sources researched and compiled as of Sept. 15, 1975.
UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS
11275 Massachusetts Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90025
☐ I am enclosing $9.95 plus $1.00 for postage and handling.

PLEASE RUSH YOUR CURRENT LIST OF UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS SOURCES TO:
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
(California residents please add 6% sales tax.)

Female Booters in Action

Women's Intramural Soccer Scores

Intramural soccer is in full swing. "Carnegie Towers" defeated the "Brown Dirt Cowboys" in a close game of 4—3. Shada Overton's "Something Nasty" beat the "Minutewomen" 1—0 due to a slight miscalculation combined with a timely kick by Betsy "Booter" Bauer.

Julie "Jump-on-it" Martin starred Tuesday, saving the game for "Carnegie Towers" by falling on the tying goal, in a close battle with the "Minute-women".

Friday, October 17, is the final day to sign up your flag football team in the gym.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

October 9, a Thursday night, marked the initial game of a new intercollegiate sport at Maryville. The sport is volleyball, the Women's Volleyball Team. This first game was played at Carson-Newman, an older and much more experienced team. In light of this, the scores of 15—7 and 15—9 are a bit easier to take. In spite of their inexperience, the women play a challenging game.

Intramurals

The first flag football game of the year saw the Bombsquad slip by the Mean Machine 12—6. In the second game, Mark Stevens hurled three TD passes to help the Mean Machine rout the Bang Gang 25—6. Game three was a passing duel with Mark Stevens again collecting three TD passes, but Todd Kohlbush got four, three to Walt Cross as Peoples topped the Mean Machine 25—20.

Booters Drop Fifth

Maryville's Soccer Club suffered another frustrating defeat at the hands (or feet?) of University of the South last Saturday. The Scots worked in three goals, but Sewanee managed to shoot seven goals against Maryville. Maryville's weakness Saturday may be partially attributed to goalie problems: lack of experience and injuries have given Maryville's opponents a better opportunity to score.

The Scot's offensive line has begun to show its strength, kicking five goals in the preceding Wednesday's game against King, and the three in this last game. Only one game this fall season has ended with a shut-out. Scoring against Sewanee were Kinsey Shilling, Laurie Hill, and Craig Larsen. The Club played this last Wednesday at the University of Tennessee, and have a game tomorrow with the Bryan JV, at Bryan College. The next home game is Saturday, October 25, against King College.

Scotties Lose Fourth

The Maryville College football team is still having trouble getting their first victory of the year. The Scots lost their fourth game of 1975 last Saturday night as they bowed to the Randolph-Macon College Yellow Jackets of Ashland, Virginia, 12—0, before a rain-soaked crowd of approximately 750 at Honaker Field. Counting their four losses this year, plus losing the last two games of 1974, the Scots have lost their last six games in a row. Their last win came last October 25 against Bridgewater College in the Homecoming game.

Yellow Jacket field-goal kicker Bruce Kirk kicked two field goals for the visitors. The first one came with 13:51 remaining in the second period and gave them a 3—0 lead. Kirk also kicked one from 30 yards out on the last play of the first half which ended the night's scoring. Randolph-Macon's lone touchdown came at the 7:01 mark of the second period as Doug Wasiak scored on an 18-yard run. However, the conversion kick failed.

Randolph—Macon gained 226 yards total offense to only 107 yards for Maryville. The Yellow Jackets had 198 yards rushing to 85 for the Scots. The visitors completed two of seven passes for 28 yards while Maryville completed three of 13 for 22 yards.

Despite a thunder shower that dampened conditions three hours before game time and another downpour during the second period, there was a bright spot for the Maryville offense. Punter Jim Lester averaged 42.6 yards-per-punt for seven punts. For the season, Lester has an average of 41.0 covering 27 punts over four games.

Maryville has been having a lot of trouble engineering a successful offense this season. The wet conditions on Saturday night did not help matters any. There were several plays where long passes were dropped because receivers could not hold on to wet footballs, or the wet grass made players slip and unable to execute their assigned plays successfully. It was a frustrating night and exemplified the hard luck Maryville is having this year.

Tomorrow night is Maryville's final home game of the season as the "Fighting" Scots take on the Tigers of Georgetown College from Georgetown, Kentucky. It will be the 24th time that Maryville has played Georgetown with the series tied at 11—11—1. Kick-off is scheduled for 7:30.

Maryville's last four games will be away. Next Saturday, they will be in Bridgewater, Virginia to play Bridgewater College. Friday afternoon, October 31, the Scots travel to Jackson, Mississippi to meet Millsaps College. On November 8, the Maryville College Marching Band will appear with the team as the Scots take on Southwestern College in Memphis. Maryville will conclude its 1975 season on November 15 when they meet Emory and Henry College in Emory, Virginia.

HORSIN' AROUND
448-6298
448-6411

Davey Crockett Stables in Townsend is now booking overnight pack trips into the Smokies. Special rates for Maryville College students; $10 per person with 8 persons minimum. Transportation furnished if needed.

Riding Lessons
Hay Rides

E-Z CURB

8 - 11 MARKET
* Homecoming Special*

Old Milwaukee 16-OZ. $1.89
Lone Star 12-OZ. $1.89
Pabst Blue Ribbon 12-OZ. $1.79
Strohs 12-OZ. $1.79

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
8 - MIDNIGHT

The Book Rack

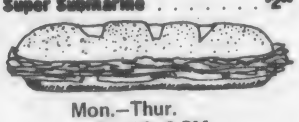
THOUSANDS OF USED PAPERBACK BOOKS

Current Best Selling Fiction
Current Best Selling Non-Fiction
Classics
Science Fiction
Sports
Westerns
Mysteries
Historical Novels
Children's Books
Religious Books
Special 10c Section

All at ½ the original price or trade two books your have read for one of ours.

OPENING OCTOBER 21st
HOURS: 10-6
MONDAY - SATURDAY

The Book Rack
506 W. Broadway
At Circle Drive
Phone 983-READ



the flavor tree
983-7914
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

TRY OUR DELICIOUS DELI SANDWICHES

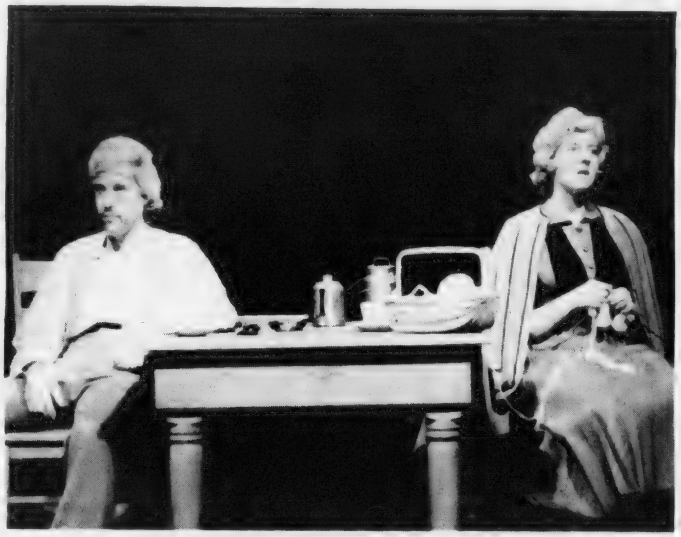
Cheese 90c
Salami or Turkey $1.00
Ham $1.00
Corned Beef $1.10
Pastrami or Roast Beef $1.20
Reuben $1.40

"Philadelphia Hoagies"

Reg. $1.00
Roast Beef $1.00
Ham $1.00
Cheese $1.10
Super Submarine $2.00

Mon.—Thur.
10 AM—8 PM
Fri.—Sat.
10 AM—11 PM

delicatessen



Booters Give MC Its First Victory

Story On Page Four

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 5 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | October 24, 1975

MC Playhouse Opens With Two Plays

Carl Swenson and Patricia Damon in "Landscape"

Maryville College Playhouse will open the season Oct. 30—Nov. 1 with two plays, "Landscape" by Harold Pinter and "The Real Inspector Hound" by Tom Stoppard. Both plays are being directed by Thomas E. Jones of the speech-theatre faculty.

In its style and approach, "Landscape" is a new departure for Pinter since there is nothing of the "comedy of menace." The difficulty of communications—as in so many of Pinter's plays—is one of the main themes. But this difficulty emerges not from dialogue between two people who talk to each other at length without getting through, but from what, in effect, are two monologues simultaneously delivered and intercut, each on a different level of expression.

What is remarkable about "Landscape" as a virtuoso piece of writing is not only the subtle control of its rhythms, but also the immense feat of compression Pinter has accomplished. What might otherwise have occupied a full length play is compressed into a half hour.

The sparseness of style, the extreme skill with which minute clues are subtly interwoven, create a picture of depth and density with a minimum of words. It is out of the silences and pauses that the landscape of three lives emerges, a landscape that opens onto a vast horizon.

Carl Swenson is cast as Duff and Patricia Damon as Beth. Heidi Parunak is assistant director.

Stoppard is a young British playwright of both extraordinary skill and a notable gift for satirical humor. While "The Real Inspector Hound" is not as distinguished as his "Rosengrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," it is a comedy satire of a high and delightful quality, admirably done.

The play is sharp in its mockery of both mystery melodrama and dramatic criticism, but it is good natured as well as accurate in its raillery.

The cast has Neil Matheson as Moon, Don Tosh as Birdboot, Mary Story as Mrs. Drudge, Roland Moore as Simon, Terry Thomson as Felicity, Ruth Wilbanks as Cynthia, John Morton as Magnus, and Joseph Carnevale as Inspector Hound. Martha Manous is assistant director, and Ed Fort is stage manager.

Admission is $2; students $1. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

Pierce To Give Recital

On Thursday, October 30, soprano Jane Pierce, a senior voice major from Knoxville, Tennessee, will present a lecture-recital in conjunction with her independent studies. The purpose of this study, Six Puccini Heroines: A Musical and Dramatic Analysis, is to examine the composer's treatment of the operatic heroine. The six heroines to be essayed in performance are: Manon ("In quelle trine morbide" from Manon Lescant), Mimi ("Mi chiamano Mimi" from La Boheme), Tosca ("Vissi d'arte" from Tosca), Butterfly ("Un bel di" from Madama Butterfly), Lauretta ("O mio babbino caro" from Gianni Schicchi), and Liu ("Tuche gel" from Turandot). The recital will be held at 7:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. Miss Pierce will be accompanied by Victor Schoen, independent studies advisor.

Hamilton Named MC Coach

Joe Hamilton, former Madisonville High School coach and graduate assistant under University of Tennessee Head Coach Ray Mears, has been named assistant basketball coach at Maryville College.

The Ohio native is a graduate of Fairmont West High School in Kettering, Ohio, and Wittenberg University, Springfield, Ohio. He has had extensive experience as a player and a coach.

Hamilton was a member of the varsity team at Wittenberg for four years, and in 1971-72 was captain of the Ohio Conference Champions and NCAA Mid-East Regional participants. His total won-lost record is 127—52 for a winning percentage of 73.6.

During his assistantship at the University of Tennessee, he was a member of the staff of Coach Mear's Camp of Champions. He has also served on the staff of a number of other basketball camps.

Other coaching experience includes assistant junior varsity coach at U—T in 1973-74 under A.W. Davis.

Hamilton replaces Mike Edwards, former U—T standout, who has accepted a position as coach at Carson-Newman College.

Freshman Class Officers Elected

Elections for the freshman class officers were held last week. As a result, the newly elected officers are Karen Amos, President; Stanley Crumpton, Vice President; and Alan Hardy, Secretary. Bill Gannon was elected to the ACC as the freshman representative.

Karen Amos, from Lenoir City, Tennessee, has a special interest in journalism and hopes to major in English. Her goal as president is to create unity within her class and set up some long range projects.

Stanley Crumpton is from Birmingham, Alabama and has not yet made a decision concerning his major. His present interests include business and elementary education.

Alan Hardy, from Long Valley, New Jersey, plans to develop an independent major in religion and sociology in order to become a minister. As secretary, he hopes to make this year's freshman class the best class Maryville ever had.

Bill Gannon, from Dover, Delaware, plans to major in political science and economics and continue in either law school or the foreign service. As an ACC representative, he plans to cooperate with both the freshman class officers and the ACC to set up more campus based events and activities.

Karen Amos and Stan Crumpton

mc forum

TO MEMBERS OF THE FACULTY

The next regularly scheduled Faculty Meeting is November 12, weeks away. I feel the following items are of sufficient importance to be reported to you immediately.

In adopting the new By-Laws, the Board requested the faculty to elect the Secretary of the Faculty, a position heretofore filled by appointment of the Board itself.

In referring to the scope and responsibility of the newly structured Academic Policy Committee, the Board drew a resolution requesting the committee to make itself available at least once each year to a regularly constituted committee of the faculty to discuss any issues or problems that the faculty feels should be considered by the Board.

Dr. Herman Spivey, Chairman, met with this committee following the Board, and discussed with the President, the Dean and the Co-Chairman of the Instructional Program Committee, this and various matters related to the academic quality of the faculty, program and students. Financial matters consumed time also.

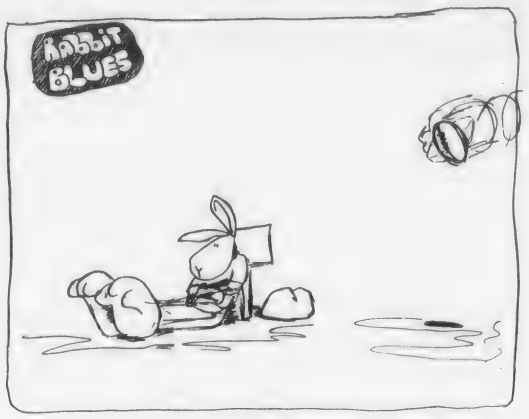
Through the Executive Committee of the Board, I had expressed a desire for a small representative group of senior faculty to serve in an advisory capacity to me during these most difficult days in which we are struggling to find answers to our major problems. Upon recommendation of the Executive Committee, the Board approved the creation of such a Faculty Council, and I look forward to working with such a council, feeling the need of their wisdom and experience.

The Board also requested the officers, faculty and students to evaluate the effectiveness and continued need of the present campus governance system; and, if necessary and desirable, to develop a new structure for the internal governance of the institution.

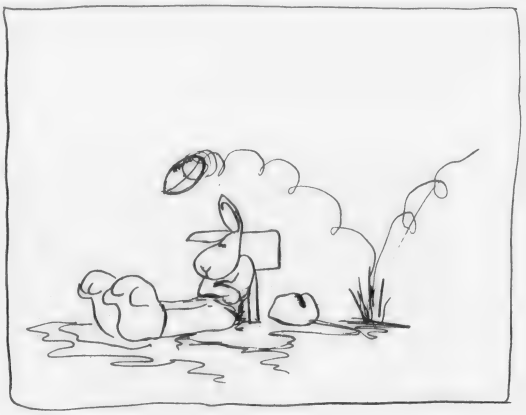
The Board reconfirmed that it holds the President accountable for all activities affecting the college and, without discouraging communication, prefers that all communication regarding the college to and from the Board, any of its committees or individual members, be made by way of the President.

Along with solemnly reconfirming this awesome responsibility, the Board assured me of its full support.

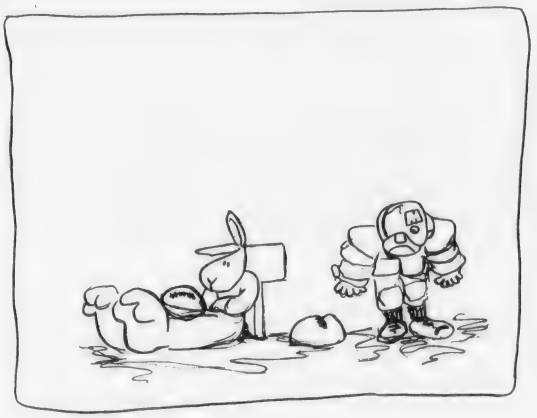
I am not retiring. Your help is needed in correcting this and other such unfounded and misleading rumors.



I look forward to working with you in the days ahead requiring our major time and energies, our positive approach and our united efforts.



Sincerely yours,
Joseph J. Copeland



Editor's Note:

This letter was given to us by a member of the faculty. A letter such as this can start rumors if not brought out in the open where questions can be asked and answered. We find the two bold type paragraphs to be highly questionable. The first is filled with ambiguity while the second is bordering the line of ridiculousness. All communications meant for the board should be sent directly to the board. There is no need for a middle man. We have found the President to be a man of integrity. Although the letter states that nothing will be censored, we cannot help but feel that there will be moments of censorship if communications are sent through those channels. If a faculty member is in disagreement with an administrative policy or action directly attributed to the President and sends a letter to the board saying so, what man in his right mind would send a letter to his employers that is detrimental to himself?

If this college and especially the office of the President is to avoid being run through the rumor mill, and if a system of open communication in our community is to exist then this recommendation of a Presidential mediary should be ignored.

Letters to the Echo

To the editors:

I would like to extend my thanks to the few individuals who made this year's homecoming the type of event it was. Much effort was put in to change the style from the homecomings in the past. Still, administration, faculty, and student cooperation was much needed.

Thank you, social committee for your untiring efforts.

Thanks to Miss Betsy Bauer for providing us with an afternoon of trumpet solos (due to unusual circumstances, our band was unable to march in our on-campus parade).

Thanks to the football players who were present for the parade.

Thank you Mr. Crawford for loaning us the campus trucks for the parade, in which to carry the football players. Sorry we couldn't use them.

Thank you, cheerleaders, for your week of work, canvassing the community, getting donations of merchandise to give to the football players in order to generate spirit. These gifts, along with the many signs on display around the campus served the purpose of arousing some school spirit. I've also heard a rumor that the football team enjoyed that huge cake you baked for them Saturday afternoon.

Thank you Lloyd, Pearsons, and Davis for your participation in the dorm displays.

Thank you Kenneth, for giving me your rubber duckie!

I would like to close this article by thanking all of the students who supported the team by attending the football game. And, to those of you who didn't—the movie that night wasn't really that good, was it?!

As you can see, without the support of everyone, the concerned people have learned to make the most of what they can with what they've got!

Signed,
The Scottie Dog

Dear Editor,

I wish to thank Maryville College for the delightful time at Homecoming weekend.

I would especially like to thank Coach Jordan for his courtesy and Southern hospitality.

After traveling seven hundred and fifty miles through fog and driving rain, to sit in freezing weather and watch what he called a football game, was just too much.

I believe he made College football history by having his senior football players on the bench for a homecoming game.

continued on page 3

Homecoming 1975

Queen Lynn Houlberg

Board Meeting Finalizes Dorm Policy

In an interview with President Copeland the Board of Directors meeting of last week was discussed. Two important articles were approved. These were the two proposals submitted to the ACC: One, by Margaret Lloyd and Dorm I on visitation procedures. Another on the evaluation of the present structure of government on the campus.

The two visitation proposals that were approved by the ACC and submitted to the Board of Directors were passed. These two proposals were sent to the Directors because they were considered to be policy changes.

The Margaret Lloyd proposal asked for twenty-four hour visitation in the lobby sections of the dorm. It was approved with certain stipulations: the residents hall doors be locked at regular closing hours; the visitor be admitted only at the invitation of a resident of the hall, who will be responsible for the visitor; the honor system observed as to the present dorm standards and; that the program be reviewed monthly with the understanding that violations may cause discontinuance of the policy.

Dorm I asked in their proposal that "sign in" for visitation begin at 6:00 p.m. instead of 12:30 p.m. The proposal was approved with the following stipulations: that the residents of the hall observe visitation policies, proper sign-in prior to 6 p.m. for any visitor who comes before six to remain after six. The visitors are to come at the invitation of the residents and be escorted by them—the resident will be responsible for his or her visitor.

The changes were made effective for the two dorms immediately and the other dorms have the same privilege to vote on these procedures, if they choose. The Board approved this with the understanding that it be reviewed next fall and thereafter if needed.

The second important discussion concerned the existing government on campus. The President, Administration Officials, and faculty are to evaluate the effectiveness of the present All College Council. If necessary a new structure may be developed for the internal governance of the college. Students will be invited to submit any contributions on the formulation of new policies.

In addition to the above mentioned proceedings, seven members that were elected to the Board in June were introduced. They are: Lamar Alexander, Dr. Herbert Anderson, Dr. Marie Gadsden, Dr. Davis Gregg, Mr. Kent Hill, Mr. Harold D. Lambert, and Mrs. James Palm.

Concerning future funds for the college, the Board's Fund-Raising Commitee, under the leadership of Mr. Tutt Bradford, community campaigns will be held in Maryville—Alcoa, Knoxville, Chicago, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Atlanta, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Nashville, and in one or more cities in California and Florida. These are the major cities where alumni of Maryville are concentrated.

Mr. Carle Davis and Mr. Raymond I. Brahams also reported for the Committee on Deferred Gifts, indicating a total of more than two million dollars in deferred expectancies.

Old Harp Singers Will Meet At MC

The Knox County Old Harp Singers will hold their annual sing at Maryville College Sunday, October 26, at 1:13 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center.

The singers represent local counties including Knox, Blount, Sevier, and Loudon.

The Maryville Concert Choir will introduce three very old shape-note tunes to the group, and the Old Harp Singers will be invited to join in the singing after the tunes have been introduced.

The old shape-note tunes have been used by Dr. Harry H. Harter of the college music department as the basis of a work for chorus and orchestra composed during the past summer. The work is entitled "Fantasia on Shape-Note Tunes," and was commissioned by the Tennessee Arts Commission for the bicentennial celebration of the State of Tennessee. It will be premiered on Sunday evening, May 9, at Maryville College.

Letters to the Editor

continued from page 2

Since when is football played as a personality contest? If Jordan doesn't like you, he doesn't play you.

What ever became of that good old game where fitness, size and experience made it a man's game?

If you have to go by the books, let's stick to paper dolls and not mess with young, enthusiastic boys who love the sport for what it is.

A team needs an offense and a defense and good old team spirit.

It sure is a winner every time.

Name Witheld

To the editors:

As everyone knows, last weekend was homecoming. Some of the dorms, namely Davis, Lloyd, and Pearsons (and possibly others about which I have not been informed), decorated in order that the school spirit would ascend to the normal level for this occasion. Some of the Pearsons residents decorated the front of their dorm, displaying a banner encouraging the Scots to "burn" the Tigers. Lloyd had a carnival-type show offering, among other things, raffle sales and delicious caramel apples. Davis was adorned with the Coppertone Suntan Lotion girl and dog. Much to the disappointment of all the girls who spent several hours working on this painting, the contribution to the homecoming festivities was declared "obscene." Thus, the prize for dorm ornamentation was awarded to Lloyd.

The Davis occupants are not upset merely because the prize went to Lloyd, but mainly because of the reason given for its not being granted to Davis. Much effort was given by many girls for the beautification of Davis dorm, besides the painting of the innocent Coppertone girl and her Scottie dog. For example, the atmosphere of the downstairs front lobby was very nostalgic for many visitors. Everyone has heard his parents, grandparents, or another elder speak of the days of the out-house and moonshine still. These past memories were brought back to life last weekend, but there were very few sentimental feelings portrayed when the time for judging dorms arrived. There should have been some type of meaning incorporated into these traces of yesteryear, but instead, the dorm lost the prize only because of the "indecent exposure" of the Coppertone girl. Is our campus now being corrupted by the use of Coppertone? Heaven forbid!

Millie Brewer

To the editors:

As a commuter, I have a request for all campus organizations; please publicize your events and/or meetings so that all students will have notice of them. For the most part, campus events have been well publicized. However, some have been announced only at the evening meal or in dorm meetings, which commuters usually do not attend. Please post announcements in the post office, the student center, and other buildings frequented by the entire college community.

Thank you,
Peggy Maher

HORSIN' AROUND
448-6298
448-6411

Davey Crockett Stables in Townsend is now booking overnight pack trips into the Smokies. Special rates for Maryville College students; $10 per person with 8 persons minimum. Transportation furnished if needed.

Riding Lessons
Hay Rides

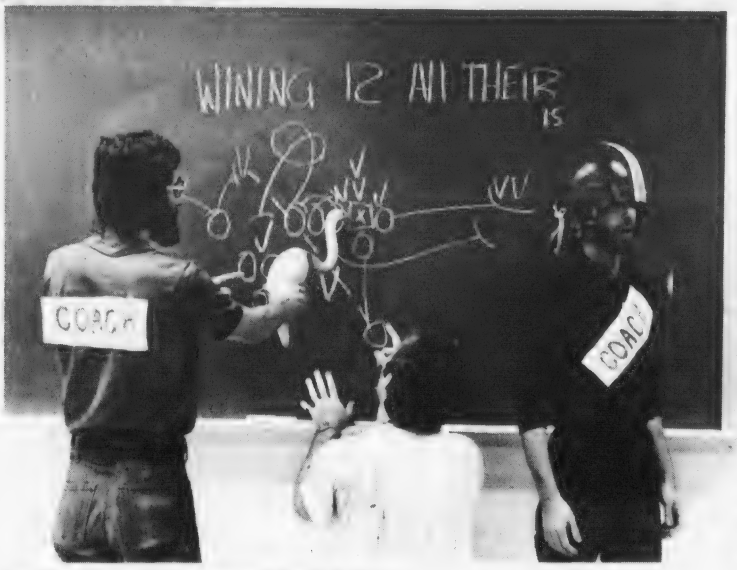
RESEARCH PAPERS
THOUSANDS ON FILE

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.

COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

$33,500,000 Unclaimed Scholarships



Over $33,500,000 unclaimed scholarships, grants, aids, and fellowships ranging from $50 to $10,000. Current list of these sources researched and compiled as of Sept. 15, 1975.

UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS
11275 Massachusetts Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90025

☐ I am enclosing $9.95 plus $1.00 for postage and handling.

PLEASE RUSH YOUR CURRENT LIST OF UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS SOURCES TO:

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip____
(California residents please add 6% sales tax.)

The Coaching staff confers moments before the game

Scotties Drop Fifth

The Maryville College "Fighting" Scots football team lost their fifth game of the season Saturday night, but still made one of their more impressive appearances before dropping a 28–7 homecoming decision to Georgetown College of Georgetown, Kentucky.

A large crowd at Honaker Field saw Maryville put on its best offensive performance of the year since the first game as they gained 155 yards total offense. The Tigers had 349 yards total offense with a large bulk of that coming during the second half. The Maryville defense thwarted several Georgetown drives during the first half by recovering a couple of fumbles. The Maryville game plan was relatively successful in the half as the Tigers only lead 14–7 when both teams went to their respective locker rooms at halftime.

During the second half, however, a stronger Georgetown squad was able to untrack itself. Their defense held Maryville to practically no successful offense, while their offense was able to score twice more.

The tigers broke into the scoring category first as Ron McIntyre scored on a 44-yard run at the 11:02 mark of the first period to give Georgetown a 7–0 lead.

Maryville's loan touchdown came with 14:24 remaining in the second period as Joe Genualdi scored on a one-yard plunge. Tim Kelly's conversion tied the score, 7–7.

With 8:19 left in the first half, the Tigers took a 14–7 lead as Alan Rhine scored on a one yard plunge.

Rhine scored his second touchdown of the night with 5:15 remaining in the third period with a one yard run which gave Georgetown a 21–7 lead.

The Tigers final scoring play came early in the fourth period when quarterback Ron Pinchback connected with Tap Pace for a 25-yard touchdown pass to give the visitors their final 28–7 advantage.

This game saw Maryville make extensive use of their passing attack. Maryville quarterbacks completed nine of 23 passes for 111 yards and one interception. Sam Horner started for the Scots and went most of the way. Horner, Maryville's leading passer, completed seven of 16 for 61 yards.

The Maryville ground game was not too effective as the home team could only accumulate 44 net yards gained on 44 carries. The rushing was just about stopped cold during the second half. Joe Genualdi was the team's leading rusher as he gained 30 yards on 14 carries.

Offensively for Georgetown, the Tigers completed five of 23 passes for 90 yards, one touchdown, and two interceptions. Their ground game gained 259 yards on 60 carries.

Tomorrow, the Scots meet Bridgewater College in Bridgewater, Virginia at 1:30 p.m. The Eagles were the last team that Maryville beat last October 26.

Soccer Club Victorious Over Bryan

What once seemed a hopeless situation has finally been resolved for the benefit of old Maryville College; will any M.C. Athletic team win a game this fall season? Happily, we may now answer in the affirmative. But this was not accomplished by our mighty football team, nor by our fledgling women's volleyball team. The team that accomplished this fantastic feat, last Saturday, was none other than our struggling and hardworking Soccer Club.

This game started out much the same as the game in the past, for early in the first half, Bryan scored a goal. But this game proved to be different; Bryan did not get a chance to score seven more points. It was Maryville's turn to dominate the field, and the club proved that they have what it takes to dominate.

After Bryan's goal, the Scots rebounded with a goal of their own, kicked in by Craig Larsen. Before the first half was over, Maryville (in the form of Doug Hardy), again broke through the Bryan defense to give us a halftime score of 2–1.

In the second half the Scots, for the most part, controlled the ball. Bryan had a few fast breaks which they took advantage of to pressure our goalie, but that was as far as they could get. The Scots' new goalie, Doug Campbell, is proving to be very capable in stopping the opponents' attempts. One more goal was kicked in for the Scots by Will Way, to give us a final score of 3–1.

The Soccer Club has a home game tomorrow afternoon at 2:00, on Honaker Field. They proved they can win, so everyone come out and see if the team can do it again.

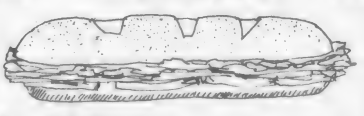
Soccer Champs And Pigskin On Parade

"Something Nasty" blitzed "Carnegie Towers" in the intramural soccer championship game with a score of 3–0. Goals were scored by Betsy Bauer and Chris Curran. Congratulations "Something Nasty".

Flag football began last Tuesday with an opener between "Brown Dirt Cowboy's" and the "Dirty Doo-doos". Freshman, Margaret "Joe Cool" Fitch ran in two touchdowns to the score 12–0. Then after a nice pass from Bauer to Jean "Wild Thing" Huntington, the "Dirty Doo-doos" won 18–0.

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

Old Milwaukee	16-OZ.	$1.89
Lone Star	12-OZ.	$1.89
Pabst Blue Ribbon	12-OZ.	$1.79
Strohs	12-OZ.	$1.79



Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
8 - MIDNIGHT

Hi! I'm Phil.
Eat Me!

the flavor tree
983-7914
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

delicatessen

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 61, No. 6 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | October 31, 1975

MCPlayhouse Presents Two Plays Tonight

The Cast of "The Real Inspector Hound"

The Maryville College Playhouse will present two plays by contemporary British playwrights Oct. 30—Nov. 1 at 8:15 p.m.

The first will be Harold Pinter's moving and poignant short play, "Landscape." The play was presented by the Royal Shakespear Company in London in 1969. The Maryville College production will be its first performance in this country outside New York.

When the play was first produced in London, it starred Dame Peggy Ashcroft; Miss Mildred Netwick appeared in the New York production. In the Maryville College production, Patricia Damon will be portraying the feminine role, and Carl Swenson will play Duff.

"Landscape" was Pinter's first play written after his highly successful "The Homecoming." A number of critics have considered it to be a minor classic, worthy of being compared to the works of Eugene Insenco or Samuel Beckett.

It is being directed by Thomas E. Jones, assisted by Heidi Parunak.

The second play is Tom Stoppard's "The Real Inspector Hound."

Stoppard is considered to be one of the most intellectual British playwrights today. His first success, "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," combines comedy and intelligence in a way as to tax the critics. In "The Real Inspector Hound" the comedy element is still at work, but it is directed toward the critics. His intent lies in trying a variety of styles—styles of play and styles of writing—that keeps the viewer on the alert at all times.

The central theme in all of Stoppard's plays seems to be the comic element of life, that you might as well laugh at it as cry about it.

Appearing in the cast are Don Tosh and Neil Matheson, portraying drama critics viewing a murder mystery melodrama. The satire of the role of the critic is cleverly woven into the play, and all the cliches of the role of the critic are attacked.

Other members of the cast are members of the mystery melodrama. They are Roland Moore, Terry Thompson, Ruth Wilbanks, Mary Story, John Morton, and Joseph Carnevale as Inspector Hound.

As the play progresses, the juxaposition between illusion and reality is amusingly handled by Stoppard.

Mr. Jones is also directing this play and is assisted by Martha Mainous.

Tickets are now on sale and may be obtained by writing to the Maryville College Playhouse or by calling 982-2911. General admission is $2; $1 for students.

Soloists Selected For Messiah Presentation

Thirteen soloists, students and singers from the community, have been selected for the 43rd annual presentation of Handel's Messiah at Maryville College.

Mark Mertz, a 1972 Maryville College graduate in speech-theatre, will sing the tenor recitative and air, "Comfort ye" and Every Valley." Mr. Mertz is in the management training program at Parks-Belk in Maryville.

The bass solos, "Thus saith the Lord," "But who may abide," and "The people that walked," will be sung by Raymond Adams, an engineer at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. Mr. Adams studied voice in Denver, Colo., and has sung in Oak Ridge church choirs and with the Oak Ridge Symphony Orchestra. His daughter, Julia, is a senior psychology major at the college.

Dr. Charlotte Beck, a member of the English department, will sing the alto recitative and air, "Behold, a virgin shall concieve" and "O thou that tellest." Although Dr. Beck's two advanced degrees are in English, she holds the Bachelor of Music degree in voice from the University of Tennessee.

The four soprano recitatives will be sung by Judy Thweatt and Marie Braxton. Miss Thweatt is a voice major from Winchester, Va. Miss Braxton is a music therapy major from Yonkers, N.Y.

A member of the local community, Winnifred Hollyfield, will sing the alto recitative and air, "Then shall the eyes of the blind" and "He shall feed his flock." Mrs. Hollyfield, a Townsend resident, is a member of the Chilhowee Choral Society and formerly sung in churches and religious musical events in New Orleans.

Pamela Thomson, a senior music education major from Gales Ferry, Conn., will sing the soprano air, "Come unto him."

The alto air, "He was despised," will be sung by Sally Gillespi, s senior Spanish major from Venetia, Pa.

Cindy Murane, a junior voice major from Hawaii, will sing the soprano solos, "They rebuke," "Behold, and see," and "I know that my redeemer liveth."

Dan Bergner, a senior chemistry major from Orchard Park, N.Y., will sing the tenor recitative and air, "He was cut off" and "But thou didst not leave his soul in hell." He will be joined in the duet, "O death, where is thy sting?", by Nancy Adams, a post-graduate from Ashland, Ky. Miss Adams will also introduce the duet with the alto recitative, "Then shall be brought to pass."

Dr. Dan Kinsinger of the college music faculty will be performing for the 23rd year. He will sing the baritone recitative "Behold, I tell you a mystery" and air "The trumpet shall sound" in which Robert Carl, a junior music education major from Wilmington, Del., will play the solo trumpet part.

The soprano air "If God be for us" will be sung by Jane Pierce, a senior voice major from Knoxville.

Bushing Named Acting Department Head

Mr. Arthur S. Bushing, Associate Professor of English, has been named acting head of the English department at Maryville College. He is replacing the position of Dr. Elizabeth Jackson who retired last spring.

A graduate of Maryville, Mr. Bushing received his M.A. in English at the University of Tennessee, and has done additional graduate work at Stanford University, the University of Paris, the State University of Iowa, Duke University, and the University of Chattanooga.

Mr. Bushing began his teaching career at Maryville College in 1943 as an instructor in physics. However, his stay at Maryville terminated after a year when he was called to serve in the army. Upon returning to the states, he taught at the University of Tennessee for a year and in 1947 was once again teaching at Maryville. This time he was an assistant professor of English. His career at Maryville since then has proved him to be quite an asset to the college.

From 1957 to 1965 he was both Professor of English and Dean of Men and today is the director of continuing education and director of summer school. Not only has he written for professional journals but is the author of the Manual of Writing and Research. A member of several professional organizations, he is also listed in the Directory of American Scholars.

In addition to his teaching career, Mr. Bushing is an active member of the Highland Presbyterian Church where he is Clerk of Session. When time permits, he enjoys gardening and camping throughout the country.

He presently resides in Maryville with his wife, Dorothy, and youngest daughter Jennifer. His two oldest children, Stuart and Barbera Ann, have both graduated from college and his daughter Kathy is presently attending Maryville College.

Mr. Bushing

mc forum

The Great Football Tragedy

by Shabaz Ahmed

Some of the Freshmen and other new students might be wondering why such a ghastly calm prevails at Maryville College on weekends. Even the returning students are amazed this term to see an almost total lack of weekend activities on our campus. It is hard to believe but just prior to this term things used to be radically different. Weekend nights at Maryville used to be quite turbulent, and even mildly orgiastic. The campus on these nights always came alive. The main source of this enormous vitality were the tremendous roars coming from men's dormitories. These roars, like the shot that was fired during the American Revolution, were reportedly heard around the world.

Unfortunately this term something is causing an overwhelming tranquilizing effect. It's one of the most tragic events in the history of Maryville College. It is an episode which the later historians will refer to as the Great Football Tragedy. The Scots have not been able to win a single game and the melancholic effect of this losing streak has been immense.

Something that greatly intrigues me is the underlying mentality in the sport of football. Winning in football "is not everything, it's the only thing." The word win is frequently substituted by victory which brings enormous pride and lofty delight. At the other end of the rope, loss means defeat which causes a great deal of degradation and sadness, something which we are experiencing now.

Our football team has certain objectives among which are to annihilate the defenses of the adversaries and to obliterate their offensive capabilities. However, the team and its affairs have not been exactly a matter of consensus. Some people think that the football team is unnecessary, some say it's a burden, according to some it is not coached very well, and there are those who contend that Maryville exists because football exists. Whatever anyone may say, as long as we have a football team, winning will continue to be "the only thing."

So far we haven't won a game this year and are suffering from the consequences. This is a situation in which we should be willing to try anything. In the interest of the football team and of the college here are some suggestions which will improve the situa and victory will be ours. I recomme that we try the following.

*Send the present coaching staff o vacation with one-way transporta tion to a remote and uninhabited island in the Carribean.

*Have the football players stop eating Saga's food for at least a week.

*Let's all pitch in and have our fo ball players converted into bionic men. I am sure we can get a disco on the whole team.

*Have Dr. Copeland sing the natio anthem at the beginning of each g I am certain our opponents will no be able to withstand the effect.

The suggestions described above a guaranteed to work, for any change i the present state of affairs will be a definite improvement.

Letters to the Echo

Dear Editor,

I would like to express my opinions as to the campus attitude of the present unsuccessful football campaign. I, for one, as a player, am very tired of being the ridiculed by the whole campus. I'm very proud to be a member of the Maryville College "FIGHTING" Scots whether we win or lose. One must remember that for every winner there must also be a loser, and I'm sure that nobody hates to lose any more than we do. When I go out on the football field Saturday I don't pray the selfish prayer for victory but rather a prayer for God's guidance and blessings for both teams. Football is a game of inches and I can recall many times this season when a couple of inches could have changed the whole tide of a game.

There are many dedicated players and coaches here at MC who have given their all to have a victorious season (the players who are still out there and the players who are walking around on crutches or with their arms in a sling). And their graditude for all the long hours of practice and conditioning have been ridicule and scorn from many. Whether we go 0–9 or 3–6, I, for one will be back next year if financially able to give my best effort in another hard fought football campaign. I would personally like to thank everyone who has helped make this football season enjoyable for many players, including myself, who enjoy the game as well as all the fine people associated with it.

name not withheld by request,
Lee Struble

To the editors:

I would like to comment on an editorial from last week's paper, by Millie Brewer, concerning the Homecoming Dorm Decoration prize. I don't know where she got her "facts" upon which to base the article, but I highly recommend that she look a little deeper the next time. In her article, Millie stated that, "the dorm lost the prize only because of the 'indecent exposure' of the Coppertone girl." I would really be interested in knowing who was being quoted!

According to the judges' list, there were five areas in which the dorms were judged; these areas were appearance, theme, use of facilities, creativity, and involvement of students. It was a close race between Davis and Lloyd. Davis had a very good idea which was quite artistically developed; however, the Coppertone girl did not closely follow the theme for Homecoming.

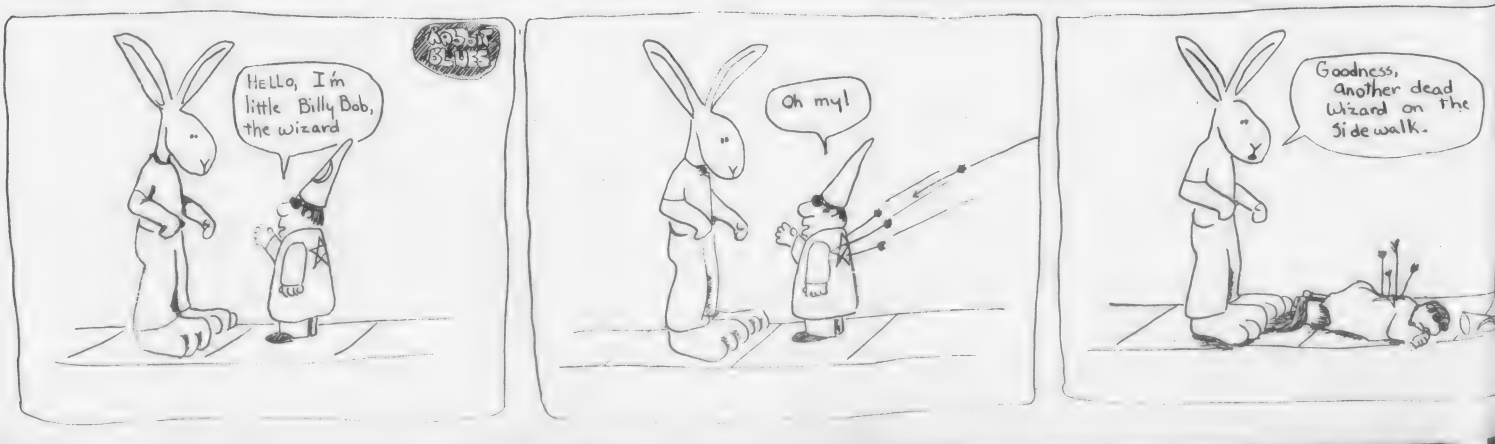
The key to the Lloyd success was involvement! Not only did Lloyd closely follow the theme of "The Scots Look Back," but they created an atmosphere where others could get involved—thus giving everyone a chance to be a part of Homecoming.

I hope I have been able to clear up any hard feelings that may have developed as a result of last week's editorial, and that perhaps those comments will be re-evaluated.

Janet Pfarrer
Lloyd resident

TO: the editors of the Echo
Re: Ad for literary magazine

The staff of the literary magazine ha begun to look for contributions for its first issue. The members of the campus community are invited to su mit either their poems, short prose, and art work. Submissions should be placed in box 2029. A tentative dead line has been set for the 25th of Nov ember. Those with questions or seco thoughts should contact either Tim Rahn, Lisa Wilson, or Linda Swackhamer.



Co-Editors: David Heimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Ingird Gensler, Janet Pfarrer, Millie Brewer, Rose Wing, Diane Burger, Fred Strohl, Bonnie Holsinger, Pam McCroskey, Peggy Maher, Emerson Henderson; Photography: Marc Ward; Lay Out: Debbie Baker; Distribution: R.C. Stevens; Business Manager: Charlie Thompson; Advisor: Dr. E. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to box 2020 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Nutritional Value Of SAGA Food Questioned

Mrs. Everett, school nurse, said that it is possible there is an iron deficiency on campus. There are no immediate tests to account for anemia in students, and if it is present it is not due to the food service. Students have been saying there is an iron deficiency in the food. The nurse replies that Saga has been offering iron in the food, however the students have not been consuming enough of the proper foods that supply iron. She said that Saga receives a certain amount of money to prepare the food, and therefore limiting the variety offered at meals. Many students do not eat correctly at Saga's meals and go elsewhere for food that does not offer enough iron.

Mrs. Everett states some common cymptoms of anemia: paleness, general weakness, and weight loss.

Mr. Bob Miller, head of Saga on campus, says that there is no iron deficiency in the food. He goes on by saying that liver is served once a week, which is a very good source of iron. Cereals, juices, and cheese are also served, Mr. Miller contends.

Some students are complaining of the use of soybean products. Mr. Miller says that there are three levels of soybean; ranging from lowest level to highest level: soy flour, soy base, and soy protein. Saga is using soy protein. He says that soybean is very high in protein and is not greasy or fatty.

Mr. Miller goes on by saying Saga could offer a greater variety of foods, but students would not be allowed to have seconds. Mr. Miller is reallocating Saga's budget to provide better gourmet nights. One of these reallocations is being made by shortening the breakfast meal by fifteen minutes.

Mr. Miller also stressed that no food should be taken out of the cafeteria. The only time this could happen is when a person is sick and has a note from the nurse. Some students feel that they do have the right to take food out of the dining hall, since they have paid for it. Some feel that by skipping a meal they should be allowed to take out a sandwich if they wish. Mr. Miller answers this by saying that students have actually only paid for 60% of the meals he or she receives. The board accounts that a student misses 40% of the meals.

Mr. Miller said he is open to any suggestions from a student, and that the Food Committee plans to use questionaires in order to find out what students would like to have served. He will hope to incorporate these suggestions into the food budget.

Bluegrass Concert To Be Held

On Friday, November 7, 1975, from 8 to 11 p.m., the Oak Ridge Civic Music Association Guild will present in joint concert the Berea College Country Dancers and the McLain Family Bluegrass Band.

The dancers, all students in the Kentucky College, have recently returned from a tour of Scotland and England. Their authentic dances from the past have earned them wide acclaim.

Bluegrass music first and last is fun. It is "people Music" today. Instrumentation of the bluegrass band itself is homogeneous. It uses only stringed instruments, usually non-electrified, and always the five string banjo.

For the past three years the McLains have performed in the United States from New York to California and from Michigan to Mississippi, from the Grand Ole Opry to two months on the road with the Cincinnati Symphony. Ticket sales will be limited due to the capacity of the Oak Ridge High School gymnasium. To avoid disappointment, tickets may be ordered now from—

Mrs. James Gillespie
103 Willow Lane
Oak Ridge, Tennessee 37830

Adults $2.00 Students $1.00

Election To Be Reheld

Due to a lack of communication, the election of the freshman ACC representative was not carried out according to regulations. As a result, a campus-wide election will be necessary in the near future.

It has become quite evident that many students, especially freshman, are not familiar with the role of the ACC representative. In the past, the freshman class was represented by the freshman class president. This person participated in ACC meetings, but lacked power of a vote. Last year this matter of freshman representation was brought to the attention of the campus and was later considered by ACC. As a result, it was decided that the freshman class should have an ACC representative with voting power. This officer must be, like all other ACC officers, elected by the entire campus.

Therefore, new nominations and election will be forthcoming. Any interested freshman can pick up a nomination petition in the P.O. beginning today, Oct. 31st. These must be signed and returned to Box 2443 no later than Tues., Nov. 4th, at 12 noon. Nominees will be notified Tues. evening. Nominee speeches will be held Wed., Nov. 5th, at 7:00 pm in Lloyd's basement. Elections *by the ENTIRE CAMPUS— will follow on Thurs., Nov. 6th. Ballots will be available in Pearson's lobby during lunch and dinner on Thurs. Faculty and staff ballots will be placed in P.O. boxes.

SUPPORT YOUR ACC AND VOTE!

Rahn Selected Editor Of Literary Magazine

At the October 23 meeting of the Communications Committee, Tim Rahn was selected as editor of the upcoming publication of the Literary Magazine. Tim, a sophomore English major, submitted hsi qualifications to the committee, along with a projected staff list. Working with Tim will be Lisa Wilson: copy editor, Linda Swackhamer: layout editor, and Ed Loper, Keith Fredericks, and Pat Johnson. After discussing several ideas and suggestions concerning the magazine, Tim was officially named editor of this literary endeavor. We wish him the best of luck!

Boroviak Attends Health Conference

Dr. Larry Boroviak, head of the health, physical education and recreation department at Maryville College, recently attended the National Conference on Cardiovascular Health in Chicago. The conference was sponsored by Y.M.C.A. with specific objectives in the areas of physical fitness, nutrition and weight control, stress reduction, and cardiac rehabilitation.

Attention: Student Employees

Time sheets for October should be turned in as soon as possible after you finish work on Friday, October 31. If it is impossible for you to have the time sheet signed by your supervisor on Friday you need to turn it in as early as possible on Monday, November 3. Work done on Saturday or Sunday must be counted on the November time sheet.

Let's Talk Books!

In the Fiction Room of the Library on three Tuesdays in November faculty members will be talking about some of their favorite current books. Come and join in these informal "book talks."

On Tuesday November 4, Sally Schoen will discuss RAGTIME by E. L. Doctorow. This work has been on the best seller list for many months. The story has surprising connections with the library at Maryville College! Come and find out more.

On Tuesday November 11, Dave Young will talk about some of the writings of Norman Cousins. Mr. Cousins is currently editor of the SATURDAY REVIEW OF LITERATURE. He will be speaking at the college in the winter so this will be a good opportunity to get a preview of his thinking.

Dean Blair will be discussing a book of special interest on November 18.

Plan now to attend these sessions at 4:00 PM in the Fiction Room.

MCSets Parents Day

Parents of Maryville College students will be honored Saturday, November 1, which has been designated as Parents Day.

Registration will begin at 9:00 a.m. in the lobby of the Physical Education Building.

President and Mrs. Joseph J. Copeland will host a coffee at Morningside in honor of the parents from 10:00 a.m. until noon.

Parents will have an opportunity to visit with college faculty and administration at the coffee.

At 1:00 p.m. parents will meet with college administrative officers in the Proffitt Dining Room.

At 8:15 p.m. the Maryville College Playhouse will present two plays "Landscape" and "The Real Inspector Hound."

Parents may purchase special meal tickets to have lunch and dinner in the Margaret Ware Dining Room with the students. Reservations for Parents Day must be made by October 27. Reservations for all events may be made by calling 982-6412.

Notice To All Elementary Ed. Majors

This pertains to those elementary Education majors who are interested in becoming certified in Early Childhood (Kindergarten). There will be a meeting on Nov. 4, at 10:30 a.m. in Thaw, room 207 to discuss this certification.

RESEARCH PAPERS

THOUSANDS ON FILE

Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.

COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

$33,500,000 Unclaimed Scholarships

Over $33,500,000 unclaimed scholarships, grants, aids, and fellowships ranging from $50 to $10,000. Current list of these sources researched and compiled as of Sept. 15, 1975.

UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS
11275 Massachusetts Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90025

☐ I am enclosing $9.95 plus $1.00 for postage and handling.

PLEASE RUSH YOUR CURRENT LIST OF UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS SOURCES TO:

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
(California residents please add 6% sales tax.)

Soccer Club Loses To King, U-T

"Bucky" Buckwalter boots the ball

Spectators witnessed a fast-paced and exciting soccer game last Wednesday against UT. It was a seesaw game, leaving the outcome in doubt until the very end. The Scots started the game out right with Craig Larsen kicking a goal. Though they made many goal attempts, UT did not get in a successful until near the end of the first half, giving a halftime score of 1—1.

The second half began with a goal by UT. Not to be outdone, the Fighting Scots fought their way (almost literally) down the field, and their second goal was booted in on a long shot by Doug Hardy. But UT again took the lead with another goal, and this seesaw action continued until near the end of the game. Maryville tied up the game at 5—5 with just minutes left. The third and fourth goals were kicked in by Will Way, and the tying goal was made by Hardy. At this point, the game could have gone in either direction. Unfortunately, it moved in the wrong direction, and UT gained control, ending in their favor with a final score of 6—5.

Last Saturday's game with King College resulted in a disappointing final score of 5—1. The Scots' lone goal was kicked by Larsen. The soccer team's last home game is being played this Saturday afternoon on Honaker Field, against Walters State.

ALSG Needs Your Help

The Alternative Lifestyles Studies Group has started a recycling project and needs your help! Containers for recycling paper have been placed in all the dorms, post office, Anderson, F.A.C., Thaw, and Sutton Science; and will remain there throughout the year. Instead of throwing away those used index cards, rough drafts, and junk mail; recycle them. Save a tree!! Thanks!

Containers for recycling glass (green and white only) will be made available later. If you have questions, contact Chris Rigell, no. 2599, or Kathy Caldwell, no. 2133. Your help is needed and appreciated!

Scotties Drop Sixth

The Maryville College "Fighting" Scots lost their sixth game of the season Saturday by bowing to Bridgewater College of Bridgewater, Virginia, 14—11, in a game played in Bridgewater. The Scots had a chance to win the ballgame during the last minute as the Scots recovered an onside kick and started an offensive drive towards the goal line. A key play was a Sam Horner-to-Tom Hyne pass that made it appear the Scots would score. However, the Bridgewater defense got stubborn and foiled the Scots on a series od downs. Maryville's last chance came on fourth down with only seconds remaining as Horner attempted a pass to Jim Lester that was incomplete.

The Scots got on the scoreboard first when Tim L. Kelly kicked a 15—yard field goal with 14:11 remaining in the second period. The Eagles came back at the 4:14 mark as Steve Snarr scored on a 13—yard run to give the home team a 7—3 lead.

With 10:53 to go in the third period, quarterback Tom Wingate connected with Mike Konopa for 41—yard TD pass to give the Eagles a 14—3 lead.

Maryville got back into the ballgame with 1:09 left in the fourth period as Joe Genualdi went over the goal line from the one yard-line. On the conversion attempt, the kick was faked as place holder Lester threw to Kenny Dickens in the end-zone for two points.

That set up the ensuing onside kick that lead to this last minute of play.

The Scots are at Jackson, Mississippi this afternoon for a game with Millsaps College.

Intramurals

Thursday's intramural football game featured Betsy Ross and the Flag Rippers against Lisa Harrawood's Team A.

Both teams showed strong offense as well as defense. Due to frequent off-sides calls against Harrawood's ten person front line (that's three huts, Dale), the Flag Rippers moved into excellent field position. However, they failed to score, resulting in a sudden death play-off. With four downs to gain yardage, Yumbo Hensley completed a thunderous long bomb to Chink Curran for the lone touchdown. Team A could not move the ball so the Flag Rippers were victorious, 6—0.

Tuesday's game saw the New Zoo Revue edge by Harrawood's Team A. Sandy Chambers intercepted a pass pushing the Revue into scoring position. After a quick hand-off, Betsy Bauer balleted into the end zone for a timely TD, resulting in another 6—0 finale.

In last week's flag football action, Peoples topped Bang Gang, 19—12, on a second half 70 yard interception return by Pete Moniodes; Bombsquad outlasted Bang Gang, 13—6; Joe Arvidson tossed 2 TD passes to lead the Studs over the Mean Machine, 19—13; and the Studs zipped Peoples, 8—0. The first round robin ended Friday. The records at the midway point of the season are the Bombsquad 4—0; Peoples, 2—2; the Studs, 1—3; The Mean Machine, 1—3; and the Bang Gang, 0—4.

HORSIN' AROUND
448-6298
448-6411

Davey Crockett Stables in Townsend is now booking overnight pack trips into the Smokies. Special rates for Maryville College students; $10 per person with 8 persons minimum. Transportation furnished if needed.

Riding Lessons
Hay Rides

the flavor tree
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

Hi! We're Belinda and Mary.
C'mon in for a Bite.

Mon.—Thur.
10 AM—8 PM
Fri.—Sat.
10 AM—11 PM

For your favorite deli. sandwich — hot or cold — (From $1.00)
* Imported & domestic cheese
* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914

delicatessen

Special Edition Of The Highland Echo

THE MURVILLE ENQUIRER

Vol. 61 No. 7

November 7, 1975

Snake - Rat Battle Exposes SSC Gambling Ring

A recent incident at the Sutton Science Center has borne out the doubtless existence of a gambling ring in that building. In the tradition of the illegal "cock fights" held in the southern states, students and faculty members at the center have pitted rats and snakes against one another in mortal combat. Weekly battle royales were exposed recently when the campus patrol was awakened by a loud commotion eminating from a ground floor office. Investigation revealed a frenzie of riotous gamblers protesting the outcome of one such battle.

After dispersing the brawl, officers discovered a cage with a rat and a battered snake. Against all odds, the riled rodent had all but annihilated his opponent.

It was discovered that such illicit games have been going on since the beginning of the term. Professor Tom Taylor claimed that the rat was intended as food for the ravaged reptile. "It was only a regular feeding," he explained, "not gambling."

This point has been disputed by experts called in from the St. Louis Zoo. They were quoted as saying, "The odds against a rat over-powering a boa constrictor are too astronomical to make this story valid. It's too outlandish to believe this was only self-protection on the part of the rat. And we, too, need protection. That's why we need Mutual of Omaha Life Insurance."

IN THIS ISSUE

Maintenance Whiz Reveals Existence Of Fayerweather Fourth Floor .... Page 19

Famed Psychic Predicts Losing Season.....Page 15

New Jersey Sophomore Discovers Meat in Saga Food .....Page 8

The Way It Was

It's been said that there is a new mood on the campuses today. A spirit similar to the pragmatic and self-centered college student of the fifties. Be that as it may, it appears to me that the current college student also has more open attitudes and outlooks on social and moral values than did any of their predecessors. These changes, along with a lessening of automatic obedience, have come about since my own college years at Maryville in the late sixties and early seventies.

I remember that I complained loudly about the parochialism of that "stuffy" institution while I was there. Yet conversely, every September one of the first things I would do when I returned for the school year was to stride through the college woods during one of those last hot summer days. I always felt a curious sense of release when I did that. Looking back on it now, it must have been because I knew that everything that mattered to me was happening right there.

I know this similar sense of happening has not disappeared with the times; even though such things as morning chapel and curfews have. But surely, you say, there are other ways to measure change on the college campus. Yes, I could document the reconstruction of Pearson's, or for that matter, the demise of Memorial.

I could point out the changes in the Maryville College curriculum. Being only five years away from it, I know that my class was a vital part of its innovation. After all, as my classmates will concur, we were affectionately dubbed "the class of guinea pigs," since we were the first to experience from the beginning of our freshman year the 10–4–10–10 academic program. We were constantly being introduced to new teaching methods and to such concepts as: Man's Search for Meaning, Science Thought, not to mention nasty old Science Fundamentals, as well as the dreaded FFF class (Fun for Fatties class). Our class thus became the instrument for changes in the academic format that are now taken for granted.

But there is scarcely a university that doesn't brag about such growth and development. So I will not dwell on them. I am more interested in how people live together at M.C. The College is determined to remain a place in which roughly 80% of its students live in residence. It is determined to be a vibrant experiment in the myriad, heartbreaking and secret crises of 24-hour communal living.

I don't think you could find a better case history of the change in official attitudes towards campus reality than the past decade at Maryville College.

Eight years ago, for example, during my freshman year, the women were kept under strict restrictions. They had to sign out and sign in when they left the dormitory after 7 PM. We could not leave overnight or ride in a car without written permission from our parents. The entire system was careful, protective and complicated. On one side of the campus there were hundreds of young passionate men, and they were all in one building. On the other side of the campus there were hundreds of budding young women, and they were all in another building. After a certain hour every night none of these men could see any of the women. And so when that departing hour came, the corners, niches and alcoves of the outside walls of every woman's dorm were crushed with desperate and groping couples. Only it was the girl's wristwatch that would stop the action. This was followed by a mad rush to get in before the doors were locked.

But we were on the brink of change. By our senior year, women had keys and only signed out for overnights. There was visitation in both mens and womens dorms. Not many of us could adequately handle these measures. For some, it was too little; for others it was too much.

When I returned to the campus last fall, I found that the prevailing attitude was a nonchalant acceptance of these changes as the norm. There was even a residence where males and females lived together all the time.

And the sky has not fallen.

Last October I sat in a corner of the Student Center and remembered, and yes, with a certain amount of nostalgia, how it was. The secret parties behind muffled doors, staying up all night to finish a termpaper, the convoys to the package stores, the panty raid made by the boys of Dorm III, initiations, barnwarming, Easter sunrise, sack suppers on Saturday nights. Long time passing.

We knew one another in the most impressionable years of our lives. Few of us actually achieved what we meant to do. Time and circumstance have changed us all.

A group of bearded boys and jeaned girls came and sat down at the table next to me. They were not much younger than I. They looked bright and eager as they laughed and talked among themselves. They were not frantic and furtive, but open and honest . . . and I knew it was wrong of me to refer to them as boys and girls.

One of them looked across at me and nodded pleasantly. Suddenly I wanted to tell them, without appearing foolish, that whatever their complaints and however valid their grievances against the College may be, there are ways in which Maryville College is a miracle of change. Just to tell them that a time may come when each of them will wish it were possible to be here again, as they are now.

Fran Murphy '71

Friday Night's Diversion

The two one-acts, "Landscape" and "The Real Inspector Hound", that opened the 1975-76 season for the Maryville College Playhouse were not a huge success. It is unfortunate that the average theatre-goer can not see beyond a well-publicized musical and appreciate different techniques on the stage. Of course, it is possible that the word spread quickly that the productions were only average.

Harold Pinter is to be commended for the almost poetical dialogue, or more aptly, monologue, in "Landscape." It heightened the desolate theme of impossibility of communication between the two characters, each character and his own real self, and each character with the audience.

The music and lighting complemented the theme, and the small stage was effective.

Patricia Damon and Carl Swenson managed ably to carry the play with no action. Their only problem was that they sounded much too young for both their costumes and their reminiscing.

It might have been possible, also, to add a little action without destroying the theme. As it was, it was too much like watching a ping-pong match, looking from one side of the table to the next.

To complete the evening was Tom Stoppard's "The Real Inspector Hound." It was refreshing to see some new and young faces in this mystery melodrama. Hopefully the poor audiences—if Friday night was any indication—did not totally disillusion them.

The melodrama was played to the hilt with some good antics and a conventional set. Two of the better known faces on the M.C. stage, Don Tosh and Joe Carnevale, seemed to have advanced some in their talent in that they really got into their roles. Without exception, though, all the actors talked too fast at times to be understood. It was also noticeable Firday night that the timing was off as the play dragged.

Mrs. Drudge, alias Carol Burnett, alias Mary Story, was by far the best liked character of the evening. Her stooped, dirty figure was easy to laugh at. Like the two actors in "Landscape" though, her only problem was that she did not sound old enough or haggard enough for her makeup.

Though not productions to be held over by popular demand, the two one-acts were a diversion. It was clearly an evening of educational theatre for both the audience and the actors.

Deborah L. W

Who's Who Finalists Selected

Front Row, Left to Right: Cathy Bushing, Barb Kerr, Suzanne Phillips, Lisa McCaffree, Maggie Miller, Dorothy Bang, Lisa Wishon. Second Row: Peggy Leatherwood, Pat Johnson, Brenda Wilson, Beth Widener. Third Row: Bob Hines, Lynn Houlberg, Alex Carrick, Dan Bergner. Missing from picture: Gwen Guba, Penny Lopez, Scott Poland.

MC Receives Gift For Scholarship Fund

Maryville College has received a gift of $20,000 from Irene G. Peterson of Colorado in memory of her husband, Fred C. Peterson who passed away in March, 1974. Mr. Peterson was a member of the college's class of 1916.

The gift will be added to the Fred C. Peterson Scholarship Fund which was established in 1969 with an original gift of $5,000 from both Mr. and Mrs. Peterson. It was augmented in early 1975 by the first memorial gift from Mrs. Peterson in the amount of $25,000.

Annual income from the permanent endowment fund will be used to provide student scholarships awarded by the college's Student Financial Aid Committee. Prospective students interested in scholarships from the fund may obtain further information from the college Student Financial Aid Office.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson spent most of their married life in the Denver area. Before World War II, they grew strawberries and raspberries for distribution throughout the United States. Following the war, Mr. Peterson went to work for the United States Postal Service, remaining with the service until his retirement.

In commenting on the gift, President Joseph J. Copeland said, "The Petersons have made these generous commitments to Maryville College out of a deep sense of appreciation for its contribution to their lives and in the hope that they will assist young people who would not otherwise be able to attend college. Mr. Peterson benefitted from the aid program during his student days, and we are glad to be able to expand our student aid program for the present and the future through his generosity and that of his wife."

Kardatzke and Kennedy Art Show At MC

An art exhibit, "Clay Objects" by Merritt Kardatzke and Rosa Kennedy, will be held in the Maryville College Fine Arts Center Gallery Nov. 6–25. An opening reception will be held in the center from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 6.

Mrs. Kardatzke, a Cookeville resident, teaches art history at Tennessee Technological University and also teaches classes in her own studio, Raku-Yaki Clay Studio.

She has conducted workshops in Sparta, Tennessee, Cookeville, and most recently in Dillingham, Alaska, for the University of Alaska. She has also been a participant in workshops at Arrowmont and in Nashville.

In September Mrs. Kardatzke was assistant for the International Ceramic Symposium.

Her shows and exhibits include clay, pottery, printmaking, painting, and drawing.

She is a member of the American Crafts Council, Tennessee Artists, Craftsmen Association, and the Cumberland Mountain Crafts Association.

Mrs. Kennedy teaches in her Knoxville studio, Shadyland. She also lectures, demonstrates, and gives small workshops in the Knoxville area.

She has had shows in Knoxville at Dulin, the UT Center, and Rechenbach's; in Cookeville at Land of Eden Gallery; and in Oak Ridge at Wind Rock.

Mrs. Kennedy has conducted workshops in Sparta for the Tennessee Arts Commission and in Knoxville for the Tennessee School for the Deaf.
She was an assistant at the International Ceramic Symposium in September and will be an instructor for a Tennessee Art Commission workshop in November.

The Maryville College Gallery is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Pianist Breckenridge To Give Concert Tonight

The Maryville College Performing Artists Concerts will open with pianist James H. Breckenridge on Friday November 7 at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Breckenridge is a 1967 graduate of Maryville College where he was a student of Sallie Schoen. While at Maryville, he appeared as featured soloist with the Maryville College-Community Orchestra.

After leaving Maryville, he studied with Gui Mombaerts, pianist in residence, at Northwestern University in Chicago where he was awarded the Master of Music degree in piano. He has also completed course work at Northwestern toward the Doctor of Music degree.

Since 1968 Breckenridge has taught piano at Southwestern State University in Weatherford, Oklahoma.

In addition to teaching, Breckenridge has been active as a performer. He has appeared in concert in the Chicago area, Oklahoma, Dallas, Phoenix, and at the University of Arkansas at Monticello, the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff, and the University of Central Arkansas at Conway.

A native of Decatur, Alabama, Breckenridge began his musical training at the age of 13 when he spent a summer studying piano at the University of Alabama after winning the Young Artists competition.

Active in a number of musical organizations, Breckenridge served four years as president of the Northwest District of the Oklahoma Music Teachers Association and as a member of its state board of directors.

In his Maryville College concert, Breckenridge will perform works of Schumann: Carnaval, Op. 9, and Symphonic Etudes, Op. 13.

Three Other Performing Artist Concerts are scheduled for the 1975-76 season.

On Jan. 23 Sandy Blain, artist in ceramics at the University of Tennessee, will present a lecture-demonstration in conjunction with a gallery showing. On March 1 organist Marilyn Keiser will present a recital to be co-sponsored by the Knoxville Chapter of the American Guild of Organists. On March 8 the Columbia University Glee Club will appear under the direction of world-renowned conductor Gregg Smith.

General admission is $2; students $1.

Members of the staff and faculty and their families and students admitted by I.D.

Madrigal Singers to Perform

"Mother I Will Have A Husband", by Thomas Vautor, and the traditional "Coventry Carol" are just two of the 16th Century English madrigals to be performed on Tuesday evening, November 11, by the Maryville College Madrigal Singers. Miss Pamela Thomson of Gales Ferry, Connecticut, is a senior music major and she is directing the Madrigal Singers as a part of her Independent Studies, which is under the supervision of Dr. Harry H. Harter. Scott Denney, Tom Banfield, Bob Bishop, Genie Varker, Judy Thweat, Susan Coram, Carol Alette, Ingrid Gensler, Tom Peters, Joel Flint, and Charles Closz will assist Miss Thomson. So, friends of the performers, music lovers, and students of 16th Century English History, reserve Tuesday, November 11, at 7:00 P.M. as the time to journey to the Fine Arts Center Music Hall and enjoy a fine performance of the Maryville College Madrigal Singers. (This will not conflict with the irregularly scheduled CIV at 8:00 P.M.)

Cate Reads Paper At Folklore Meeting

Herma Cate, member of the English faculty at Maryville College and folklore columnist for the Maryville-Alcoa Times, read a paper at the recent annual meeting of the Tennessee Folklore Society at Austin-Peay University. The paper was entitled "The Social and Religious Influence of Camp Meetings."

Mrs. Cate is co-author of the book, Southern Appalachian Heritage.

RESEARCH PAPERS
THOUSANDS ON FILE
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025

Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

$33,500,000 Unclaimed Scholarships
Over $33,500,000 unclaimed scholarships, grants, aids, and fellowships ranging from $50 to $10,000. Current list of these sources researched and compiled as of Sept. 15, 1975.
UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS
11275 Massachusetts Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90025
☐ I am enclosing $9.95 plus $1.00 for postage and handling.

PLEASE RUSH YOUR CURRENT LIST OF UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS SOURCES TO:
Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
(California residents please add 6% sales tax.)

The Women Volleyballers

Women's Volleyball Shows Promise

The first year Maryville College Women's Volleyball team shows a mid-season record of 0–5. This record does not, however, reflect the skills gained by the individuals in this first season of intercollegiate competition. On October 29 the women participated in a tournament at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga where they played matches against Middle Tennessee State University and U.T.C. The respective scores of those games were 15–4, 15–10 and 15–7, 15–8. The Maryville squad plays a strong defensive game. Spikers Jean Erhardt, Betsy Bauer, Jill Holcombe, and Paula Hensley lead the Maryville offense which is possible only with the assistance of setters Pat Willin and Arlene Ignico.

This Saturday the Lady Scots travel to Milligan where they will play in another tournament competing against Clinch Valley, Virginia Intermont, Emory and Henry, Tusculum, King College and Milligan. Coach Brown is very hopeful for the hard working young squad as they are slated to gain still yet another Maryville victory at this event. A home game against Tusculum is scheduled for Wednesday night, November 12 at 6:00. And the women will then complete their season at the state tournament at Austin Peay November 13-15.

Scotties Drop Seventh

The Maryville College football team lost its seventh game of the season last Friday afternoon in Jackson, Mississippi by dropping a 27–0 decision to Millsaps College. Millsaps is considered one of the best teams in NCAA Division III. It was the first time since 1967 that Maryville has lost seven games during a season.

The two teams played even during the first half and most of the third period. The score was 0–0 at halftime with Millsaps breaking the scoring ice with 1:45 remaining in the third period as Ted Ruemke scored on a one-yard plunge to give the Majors a 7–0 lead. It was the first of Ruemke's three TDs.

Ruemke's second scoring play came with 8:30 remaining in the fourth period with another one-yard plunge to give the Majors a 14–0 lead.

Quarterback Rick Haygood's first of two TD passes came with 5:30 to go when he connected with Dees Hinton on a 41-yard play to give Millsaps a 21–0 advantage.

The afternoon's scoring was completed with :50 left when Haygood connected with Ruemke for a 16-yard TD pass. However, the conversion attempt following the score was blocked and left the Majors with a 27–0 final score.

Statistically, Maryville gained 146 yards of total offense to 452 yards for Millsaps. Maryville quarterbacks completed three of 11 passes for 50 yards as compared to 11 of 25 passes for Millsaps accumulating 264 yards. On the ground, the Scots gained 96 yards on 45 carries while the Majors gained 188 yards in 45 carries also.

bank of maryville

Your Bank
In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Walters State Squeaks By Soccer Club

The Soccer Club played their last home game last Saturday, against Walters State—and a rowdy and quite hostile crowd. It was a very fast-paced game and the Scots played with a strong offensive line, as proven statistically. Maryville's front line had 49 shots on goal against Walters State 7. Unfortunately, the opponents' goalie stopped all but one, and despite their efforts, the Scots lost 2–1. This goal was booted in by Will Way.

The Soccer Club played their last game of the season last Wednesday, again with Walters State. Hopefully, their fans gave the Scots a much better reception than we gave to Walters State.

Young Addresses TVPPA Meet

"One reason I personally like the use of solar energy is that it is using a natural, God-given resource of the sun that does not deplete resources on the earth, and I think this is good for the human spirit---to be in close contact with nature but not to use it up," Dr. David Young told members of the Tennessee Valley Public Power Association at their Gatlinburg meeting this week.

Dr. Young, who is Director of Futuristics at Maryville College, spoke on "Solar Energy: An Idea Whose Time Has Come." He said solar energy represents the use of technology that is not only increasingly economically competitive but also is one that does not degrade the environment via pollution or the tearing up of land to get at fuels.

He pointed out that solar energy saves on coal, gas, and oil which are beginning to be used up and are non-renewable resources, and it does not have by-products like nuclear wastes that are hazardous to human health and which must be stored for hundreds of years away from living systems.

Vespers

Vespers will be held in the Little Chapel Sunday, November 9 at 7:00 p.m. The BSU will be in charge of the program.

the flavor tree

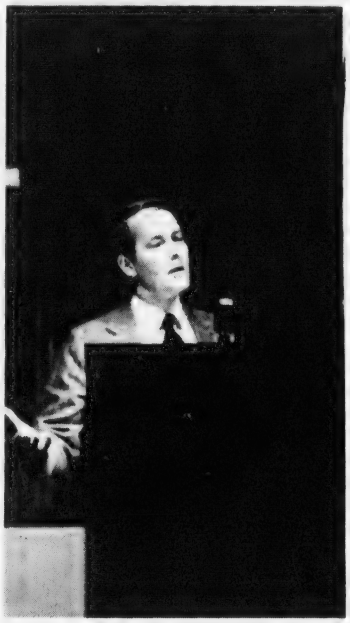
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

Phil, Mary, and Belinda say:
Munch with us

Mon.–Thur.
10 AM–8 PM
Fri.–Sat.
10 AM–11 PM

For your favorite deli. sandwich
— hot or cold — (From $1.00)

* Imported & domestic cheese
* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914



delicatessen

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 61. No. 8 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Nov. 14, 1975

Lamar Alexander Speaks On Political Parties

Lamar Alexander

This past Tuesday night the League of Women Voters sponsored Lamar Alexander as speaker of C.I.V. He spoke on the topic of "Citizen Action and Decline of Political Parties."

Lamar Alexander is a resident of Maryville, a lawyer and graduate of Vanderbilt University. He is also a new member of our Board of Directors, and was the Republican nominee for governor in 1974. In addition to his other political undertakings, he received an offer to join Ford's Re-election Campaign, but turned it down.

Mr. Alexander said that his speech would be non-partisan and would talk about politics in general. He went on to say that he was not against political parties, but that his speech should arouse what he felt was na essential question, "How can I as an individual have my maximum impact on an event?"

He began by stating that political parties were not provided for in the Constitution. Parties in the last 120 years have gained strength when they stood for something.

He believes the political climate of today is being changed from Democratic and Republican to Independent, especially in Tennessee, this is due to several factors, which are:

1. the lack of issues, such as slavery and industry;
2. the large amount of change in the world and America;
3. the large amount of youths in the '60's against the institution and the small number of people who were willing to defend tradition and the institution;
4. the dying of the institution, such as the family;
5. the television.

He felt that no one understood television, that people have not learned to deal with it. He was disturbed over the fact that people got their impressions from television since they were receiving it second hand.

Mr. Alexander noticed that the decline of political parties meant that there was a creation of a vacuum and the formation of special interest groups.

Mr. Alexander gave some predictions of political parties' futures in the next five to ten years.

1. the Democrats will outnumber the Republicans two to one but 70% of the voters will be Independents;
2. fewer quality people will run for legislative office;
3. there will be an increase in special interest groups;
4. new coalitions will develop, which will be based around political parties;
5. the Democratic party will split.

He felt that the people should join public interest groups and get involved in events.

Following the speech several questions were asked. One question dealt with the impact of new campaign spending on parties. Mr. Alexander said there was too much red tape, which restricted freedom of speech and hurt the coalitions.

Another question dealt with the importance of Presidential primaries. He did feel that the primaries should be regional or state, and not national.

A question about a nuclear reactor in Tennessee was asked. He replied that he was scared by Brown's Ferry. He felt that safety precautions must be met, but at low cost. He felt a nuclear reactor was, however, needed.

43rd Annual Messiah Presentation At MC

For the forty-third consecutive year, Maryville College is privileged to present to the community Handel's oratorio Messiah on Sunday afternoon, November 16, at 3:00 p.m. This production is made possible through the combined efforts of both the college faculty and students and community musicians.

The re-creation of this inspired spiritual work of art, 230 years old, can be an awesome religious musical experience for those who attend. A 150 voice chorus formed by the joint forces of the Maryville College-Community Oratorio Chorus and the Chilhowee Choral Society and selected soloists, accompanied by a forty piece orchestra with pipe organ and harpsichord, will perform this majestic oratorio. Hundreds of people from far and near have been drawn to the Maryville College campus to witness the grandeur of this musical presentation and to receive the inspiration of its message.

A unique feature of the College's performance of Handel's Messiah is the variety of soloists selected from student, faculty, and community singers.

An oratorio is usually similar to an opera in form, involving a full-scale plot with characters and action. Most oratorios also have a narrator who exposes the story and serves to connect the solo vocal selections with the choral and orchestral portions. Messiah is an exception as an oratorio; it is essentially non-narrative in the conventional senses and has neither specific characterizations nor narrator. Rather, the implied story evolves around the prophecies of the coming Messiah, the life of Jesus Christ, and the life hereafter. The set pieces typical to both opera and oratorio, including overture, recitatives, arias, and choruses, are employed by Handel in Messiah. The libbrettist, Charles Jennes, adapted passages of the Old and New Testaments of the Scriptures to form the oratorio's text. The work was premiered in Dublin, Ireland, with Handel conducting from the harpsichord. His performing forces consisted of only twenty-six singers including soloists with an orchestra of thirty-five. This oratorio is performed annually throughout the United States and Canada, usually during the seasons of Advent and Lent. Since its first American

Interim Refund

The policy of refunds for Interim this year will be as follows: a refund of one dollar ($1) per day will be made for each student who is spending his authorized Interim out of town and for a minimum period of one week or more. There will be no other refunds of any type or in any amount.

Attention

All students interested in forming a cr[illegible]ad on a club basis are aske[illegible] in Coach Taylor's office Thursday, Nobember 20, at 10:30 a.m.

Missa Solemnis To Be Performed

On Thursday, Nobember 20, at 8:15 p.m., the Maryville College Concert Choir will join with the Carson-Newman College Choir and the Knoxville College Choir to perform Beethoven's Missa Solemnis with the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Arpad Joo. Soloists will include Nancy Ogle, soprano, Delores Ziegler, contralto (a Maryville College graduate), Frederick Schreiver, tenor, and Edward Zambara, bass.

Beethoven's Missa Solemnis (Mass in D), op. 123, is considered the worthiest musical interpretation of this text that exists, with the possible exception of Bach's Mass in B minor. It is a deeply personal, yet universal confession of faith. The score incorporates historic musical and liturgical symbols to such an extent and such detail that an uninformed listener cannot be aware of them.

Although the Missa Solemnis is too long and elaborate for ordinary liturgical use, it is generally considered as a huge vocal and instrumental symphony using the text of the Mass. Yet it is more than simply a setting of the words; it may be called a "representation," both pictorial and symbolic, of the whole liturgy of the Mass.

The concert will be held in the Knoxville Civic Auditorium. Ticket reservations may be made by calling the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra at 523-1178. Tickets may also be purchased at the U-T central Ticket Office.

Social Committee Plans Night At The Movies

The Social Committee has planned an evening you will never forget. On Friday, November 21 there will be the main feature "A Man Called Horse". Richard Harris is a man called "Horse" by his captors in this extra-ordinary story of an English aristocrat in the 1700's who is captured by Sioux Indians. His only chance for escape is to prove his manhood in their savage culture, an effort which culminates in the ritual "Vow to the Sun", one of the most brutal events ever filmed. This is a totally authentic film based on the novel by Dorothy Johnson, a statement of the culture, the life, the courage, discipline, nobility, savagery and humanity of the Indians, as they were prior to the white man's plundering of their birthrights. But to start the evening we will present a coffee-house program of three short movies, two staring W.C. Fields and the other Laurel and Hardy. And as usual on movie nights there will be the famous Road Runner in "Chaser on the Rocks." All of this for the low admission price of $1.00. So don't forget to come. That's Fri., Nov. 21 at the Chapel starting at 7:30 for only $1.00.

mc forum

A Dean's Eye View

Many students are asking whether we are likely to have an extended Christmas vacation this year as we did last year. The answer is no. Our plans are to follow the dates announced in the Catalog. The Christmas vacation will begin on December 19, and classes will begin again on January 5.

Last year's decision to extend the vacation was prompted not by an attempt to save money, desirable though that may have been, but by our having no guarantee that we would have sufficient oil to take us through the winter. Therefore conservation seemed necessary to prevent suddenly finding ourselves without fuel and thus having to close at a less convenient time. Mr. Crawford says that he forsees no oil shortage this winter, although he estimates that fuel costs will be about four times higher than they were last year.

Everyone should note one slight change from the announced calendar. Instead of setting aside Monday, January 5, as registration day, we will begin classes on Monday and ask students to make necessary changes and complete registration between classes on Monday and Tuesday. This procedure, inaugrated last year, not only saved a day for class time, but helped to eliminate the long registration lines. It seems wise to continue it. The Registrar's Office will be making an official announcement soon.

This is the time of year seniors should keep in touch with the Career Planning and Placement personnel and check bulletin boards for information about scholarships and fellowships. An annoucement came in last week about the Harold Stirling Vanderbilt Graduate Scholarships awarded annually to fifteen students entering the Graduate School of Vanderbilt University. The awards, ranging upward from $3,500 plus tuition, are available in departments offering the Ph.D. in the College of Arts and Science, the School of Engineering, the School of Medicine, and the Divinity School. Further information is available on various bulletin boards and in my office.

Juniors and seniors planning to take the Graduate Record Examination should know that, for the first time this year, the GRE Board is making available a full-length sample Aptitude Test, which can be ordered for $1.25 from GPAM, Box 2606, Princeton, NJ 08540. This sample test is also included in the latest edition of the Graduate Programs and Admissions Manual. The Board hopes that a preview of types of questions and the scope of the test will set students more at ease and improve performance.

Carolyn Blair

"We All Got Suckered Into This"

Many students have found that the rosy picture of Maryville College that is painted by the Admissions Office is not the true picture. Of the freshmen who will be leaving Maryville between now and the end of the year, many of the ones interviewed felt that, as one said, "we all got suckered into this".

Of these freshmen who plan to transfer, six of the ones interviewed were disappointed in some way by the social life. One felt that there is "no social life unless you're a serious partier". New students arrived with the impressio that both Knoxville and the mountains were easily accessible. They found that it was virtually impossible to get to either place, and the freshmen who own cars wish they could have theirs on campus. Consequently, they would like to have more planned weekend activities. And of course there were the usual complaints about the no alcohol on campus rule.

One of the reasons that students are dissatisfied and therefore leaving is the lack of practical courses within the curriculum. Half of them felt bogged down in core courses, and would like to take more courses that are practical for their lives and future occupations. One freshman expressed disappointment that he would not be taking any major courses all year.

The above were the most prevalent reasons for dissatisfaction. However, other reasons were also given. Three who decided on the following majors—retailing, pharmacy, and early childhood education, are transferring to schools with departments in these areas. One student simply does not have the money to continue at Maryville. Other factors entering in are "too much emphasis on varsity athletics", poor quality of food, "too much work" and "it's like being back in junior high with all the rules".

The general mood towards M.C. seems to be, as one student put it, "they crack it up to be a whole lot more than it is". Although many of the causes for the dissatisfaction could be changed by the college community, these freshmen are not going to wait around for these improvements.

We are interested in finding out why students are leaving Maryville. If you are considering leaving, why don't you contact Karen Gerdetz, box 2326 or Dee Ann Dunwoody, box 2293 so we can include your reasons in a future article. There is a positive side to this—we are hoping that a lot of these things can and will be changed soon.

Letters To The Echo

Dear Persons:

An important feature of the recent heavyweight championship fight between the rat and the snake was overlooked in your story. As reported in your paper the rat (hereafter known as The Rat) was an upset victor, winning by a TKO in the sixth round when the snake was unable to continue.

The true importance of this match is that the snake faced no ordinary, uneducated river rat but rather a highly skilled technician, one who was able to pull off a masterpiece of psychological warfare. First, this Rat was in superb shape, having trained rigorously for three weeks at his mountain skinner box training camp. The twenty rounds a day of lever pressing enabled him to build up his biceps and tune his reflex arcs to razor sharp efficiency. It was of course obvious from the opening bell that The Rat could ill afford to slug it out with the snake, so in devising his strategy we decided to rely on speed and quickness. It was apparent from his lethargic appearance that the snake was woefully out of condition and that he was indeed ready to put on one of the more soporific exhibitions in recent times.

Second, it is likely that The Rat, who has had extensive first hand experience with behavior modification, (including the controversial new "thought stopping") had the fight won before the opening bell had sounded. His more effective techniques included; demanding a larger prize fund (not being satisfied with a life and death struggle), failing to arrive on time for the matches, not allowing cameras or spectators and generally psyching out his opponent by his dazzling footwork before delivering the coup de grace to his exhausted adversary.

One may wonder here if the snake had enough psyche to psych out. However, as several noble laureates in biology have pointed out in the sophisticated technical jargon of their trade, "The proof is in the puddin' ". Ah well, another triumph of nurture over nature.

Robert L. Williams

Sirs:

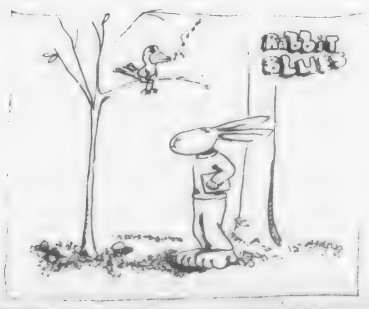
A note to those who are sporting at the ill-fortunes of our football squad.

As is the case with many academic types, I have a love-hate relationship with American football. Football is a game of violence ("football isn't a contact sport, it's a collision sport"—Duffy Daugherty), territorial rights (rites?), and para-military mores. More than virtually any other sport, American football has exploited young men by convincing them to get beat up in order to sell such things as big oranges. Unlike most other sports, football usually requires that its players be skillful at only one aspect of the game. For these reasons, I am skeptical about the values inherent in football. For exactly the same reasons ("woe unto me"), I turn up at each M.C. home game and faithfully tune in my TV to watch Mr. Joseph Greene trash Mr. Robert Griese.

My ambivalence notwithstanding, I am sure about one thing in respect to football or any other sport. It takes one hell of a lot more guts to practice hard and to play a game when you get clunked each week than it does when you are doing the clunking. As Robert Silverberg says, "Pain is instructive."

David R. Cartlidge

Dear Editor:



Re: Insulting Photos and Articles Directed at Athletes and Coaches.

Recent issues of The Highland Echo have been very disturbing to me.

Can you find nothing of value at Maryville College other than when you look in a mirror?

Twenty-five years ago Maryville College had another case of (your wor "The Great Football Tragedy." We lost all of our games and in so doing learned how to lose. While we did not enjoy losing, our team was not permeated by complainers and quitters. That football squad, which provided MC with no gridiron glories, has produced 3 Ministers, 3 Doctors, 3 High School and 2 College Coaches, 2 Bankers, several teachers, many successful businessmen, and no quitters!!

continued on page

Chiddie In Performance

Belinda Chiddie, a senior Speech-Theatre major from Winston-Salem, NC, will present her Independent Study performance Uneasy Lies the Head that Wears a Crown, a program of dramatic selections characterizing the lives of queens throughout history, on Firday and Saturday evenings, November 14 and 15, 1975. Performances will be presented at 815 p.m. nightly in the Studio Theatre.

Included in the program are selections from "Caesar and Cleopatra" by George Bernard Shaw, "Mary of Scotland" by Maxwell Anderson, and Eva LaGalienan's adaptation of "Alice in Wonderland". The interpretation of the characters presented in these and other scenes were researched and directed by Belinda in fulfillment of her Independent Study requirements.

Belinda Chiddie (left) and Marilyn Winbush

Assisting Belinda in performance will be Susan Chiddie, Phil Gibson, Phil Derpilbosian, Paul Kersey, Heidi Parunak, and Marilyn Winbush. Marilyn, a resident of Winona, Mississippi, is a Theatre graduate of Mississippi State University. In 1976 she will be touring with the New York Touring Company.

Belinda and Marilyn met while attending the National Shakespeare Company Summer Conservatory. Acceptance into the conservatory is considered by those in theatre to be a great honor, as only 24 students from around the nation are admitted for the 8 week program at Woodstock, NY. Belinda and Marilyn both attest that the skills acquired during this program have helped greatly in the preparation for this performance.

Tehcnical assistance will be provided by Carl Swenson, Stage Manager, and Martha Mainous, lights.

The public is invited to attend and will be admitted free of charge.

Contributions To "Impressions" Needed

"Impressions," a campus literary/arts magazine is extending its deadline to the fifth of December.

It is hoped that this extension will encourage submissions from all members of the campus community. The staff will be preparing to evaluate submissions—poems, short essays, fictional prose, black and white photographs, pencil sketches, pen and ink drawings and prints—during the interim period.

All submissions should be to box 2702. Questions and second thoughts should be directed to Tim Rahn, Lisa Wilson, or Linda Swackhamer.

Poetry Contest

A $1500 grand prize will be awarded in the current Poetry Contest sponsored by World of Poetry, a monthly newsletter for poets.

Poems of all styles and on any subject are eligilbe to compete for the grand prize or for 49 other cash or merchandise awards. Second place is $500.

According to contest director, Joseph Mellon, "We are encouraging poetic talent of every kind, and expect our contest to produce exciting discoveries."

Rules and official entry forms are available by writing to: World of Poetry, 801 Portola Dr., Dept. 211, San Francisco 94127.

Questions On Gym Use Answered

The use of this facility is restricted to Maryville College Students, Faculty, Staff, Members of their Immediate Families or their Guests.

All persons must check in at the Equipment Room (PEB 121B) and present their validated I.D. card in exchange for a building pass.

Guests must be accompanied by a host or hostess from the college and must check in along with their sponsor at the Equipment Room (PEB 121B). Maryville College persons are permitted only one guest at a time.

Independent visitors at the college should report to the Admissions Office for proper authorization and present this approval to the Equipment Room for their guest pass.

NORMAL PHYSICAL EDUCATION BUILDING HOURS

	Will Open	Will be Secured
Monday	7:00 a.m.	11:00 p.m.
Tuesday	7:00 a.m.	11:00 p.m.
Wednesday	7:00 a.m.	11:00 p.m.
Thursday	7:00 a.m.	11:00 p.m.
Friday	7:00 a.m.	11:00 p.m.
Saturday	12:00 noon	5:00 p.m.
Sunday	2:00 p.m.	5:00 p.m.

Hours may be changed for scheduled special events and the building will be secured immediately after the completion of these events.

ACCESS TO THIS BUILDING AFTER IT HAS BEEN SECURED IS STRICTLY PROHIBITED BY ALL PERSONS.

The following points may help to answer your questions:

Monday, 7:00-10:00 pm is Community Night (commencing approximately October and ending in April). Students, Faculty, Staff and Spouse are welcome and will be admitted free of charge upon presentation of their I.D. card. If the card is not presented, the regular charge for admittance must be paid.

All persons who anticipate making use of the facility are requested to rent a lock in the Physical Education Equipment Room (121B). A reserved area for staff and faculty has been designated in the main locker rooms.

Equipment may be checked out at the Equipment Room (Monday-Friday from 9 a. to 10 pm; Saturday from 12 noon to 5 pm. The Equipment Room will be closed on Sundays). You will be asked to file your I.D. card to receive the equipment. It will be returned when equipment is checked in.

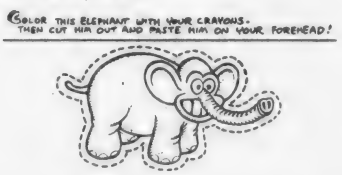
Faculty and Staff members are requested to have their families procure I.D. cards and to inform their family of the above procedures so that this facility can be enjoyed by all to the fullest extent.

MC Art Department Expands

The arts at Maryville College are expanding and constantly growing. There are now four new craft courses offered for the benefit of both art majors and those students interested in such classes as electives. The two-term, two-day a week courses are Jewelry (now in progress, to continue through Winter term), Enameling and Textile Design (both Winter and Spring terms), and Weaving (Spring and Fall terms).

In the Jewelry course each student has his or her own tools (rented) and various supplies with which to work. Here the various processes used in the making of jewelry are explored and result in about thirteen projects. Most projects involve the use of sterling silver wire and sheet metal. In the second section of the course most of the student's time will be involved in exploring the casting of metals and working with stones.

The Textile Design course is done in combination with Printmaking 304 (I&II). This course will include projects that utilize forms of tye-dying, batiking, resist dying, and discharge dying. More printing will be done with textile paints and dyes, stencils, relief block prints, and silkscreen. There is also a possibility that the class could gain experience in photographic silkscreening.



In Enameling 303 (I&II) there will be approximately twenty projects as well as works done independently. The classroom is equipped with three large electric kilns to be used for plaques and large bowls and three electric studio kilns for smaller pieces. Students, as in jewelry, will also have tools from which to cut their own designs.

The final new course is Weaving 303 (I&II). This class also required new supplies and is now equipped with twelve looms. Each of the weaving students will have his or her own frame and the opportunity to do work on one of the large looms. Such a project would be either a tapestry or a rug.

In every class there will also be some type of field trip. The jewelry class has already visited a local stone mason and taken an all day trip to the Gibson Mine in Franklin, North Carolina to dig for stones. In addition, there will be demonstrations by local craftsmen.

All classes have a student assistant who will attend the class as well as be present at night on predetermined week days. These courses will require a fee to cover the cost of supplies but the experience is worth the expense. While the jewelry class is closed, all the others remain open and any one who is interested is most welcome.

As a student, I have found that what is offered here for anyone interested is the opportunity to not only obtain course credit but an opportunity to grow and develop one's aesthetic sensibilities; to learn to create and express one's own unique personality.

RESEARCH PAPERS
THOUSANDS ON FILE
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

$33,500,000 Unclaimed Scholarships
Over $33,500,000 unclaimed scholarships, grants, aids, and fellowships ranging from $50 to $10,000. Current list of these sources researched and compiled as of Sept. 15, 1975.
UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS
11275 Massachusetts Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90025
☐ I am enclosing $9.95 plus $1.00 for postage and handling.
PLEASE RUSH YOUR CURRENT LIST OF UNCLAIMED SCHOLARSHIPS SOURCES TO:
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
(California residents please add 6% sales tax.)

Scotties Drop Eighth

The Maryville College football team, still looking for its first victory of the season, dropped its eighth game of 1975 and tenth in a row by bowing to the Lynx of South-western College in Memphis last Saturday, 31-0. It was the first time since 1967 that Maryville has lost eight games in one season. It was also the first Southwestern victory over Maryville since 1970.

The star of the game as far as the Lynx were concerned was running back Rick Fulwood who scored two TDs. His first one came with 1:28 remaining to play in the first period on a two-yard run. He crossed the goal line again with 9:42 left in the third period on a one-yard run. Other scoring for Southwestern was started by kicker Mike McConkey who booted a 24-yard field goal with 3:30 left in the third period. With 13:06 left to play in the contest, quarterback Craig Solomon scored on a one-yard blast. Southwestern concluded its scoring for the afternoon when Paul Blose scored on a one-yard run with only :57 remaining on the clock.

Maryville gained 174 yards total offense to 380 yards for Southwestern. On the ground, Maryville gained 33 yards on 23 carries while Southwestern gained 215 yards on 62 carries. In the air, the Scots completed 14 of 32 passes for 141 yards and two interceptions. The Lynx completed 11 of 18 for 165 yards and one interception.

The Scots will be looking for their first win tomorrow afternoon as they complete their season by facing Emory and Henry College in Emory, Virginia.

The Maryville B Team has scheduled a contest with the Mars Hill College B Team for Monday afternoon at 3:00 on Honaker Field. The Scots B team played one game earlier this season, but dropped a 20-3 decision to Marion Institute in Marion, Alabama.

Intramurals

In last week's flag football action the Bombsquad scored two convincing victories. It's first victim was the Mean Machine, who the Bombsquad routed, 45–0. Paul Bailey led the attack, accounting for three TD's. Steve Wright threw 2 TD passes for the winners. Victim number two was the Peoples. Steve Wright had a field day, picking apart the Peoples with three TD passes and a 10 yard TD run. When the battle was over, Wright and Company were the victors, 39–0. The Mean Machine bounced back from their loss to the Bombsquad with a 25–6 win over the Peoples. The Mean Machine rode the arm of Mack Stevens who passed for 3 touchdowns. The regular season is over and the records are: The Bombsquad, 7–0; The Mean Machine, 3–4; and The Peoples, 3–4. The play-offs are this week.

Victorious Volleyballe Go To State

The Maryville College Women's V leyball Team traveled to Milligan College for a small college tournam last weekend. Participating colleges were selected from within a 150 mi radius of Milligan, including 3 scho from Virginia and 5 from Tennesse The Lady Scots dropped their first match to Emory and Henry in the first round. However, in their matc against Clinch Valley College the gi started their winning streak by a co back from a score of 14–2 to win t game and match. From there the L Scots defeated Virginia Intermont rallied to a decisive victory over En and Henry. In semi-final play, the girls met Milligan and were defeate in a hard battle for second place honors: Maryville took third in th tournament between 8 schools.

It is indeed a rarity for a first-ye team to walk off with a trophy. Bu the women's volleyball team has sh that dedication and desire to partic pate can combine with skills to ma a winner.

Coach Brown is very proud of th success and feels the team will mak a good showing at the state tourna ment this weekend.

Letters to the Editor

continued from page 2

As I understand the educational process, we can learn by our experiences.

After thirty years of playing, coaching and officiating football at all levels, I find the tragedy of MC Football, 1975, to be in the lack of support by the "total" College Community.

In my present "game"—selling—you win AND lose, but you never complain or quit.

Please stop your criticism of the administration, coaches, food, curriculum, athletics, etc., and devote a few issues of your paper to the POSITIVES of Maryville.

Try spending more of your time in the appreciation of people and their efforts. Perhaps you could spend less effort on critical essays and go recruit some students.

"Winning," my young friend, is never "the only thing." True, any athlete tries his best to win (that's the reason they keep score), and if you think otherwise then your education has been neglected.

Several things about Maryville College need changing (including the editorial policy of the school newspaper), but I plan to continue to work for Maryville in spite of my impressions of her shortcomings.

You complainers might try that, too!

Go get 'em!

James P. Lester '51

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
Artie Banker
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

Van Metre School of Dance
HOME OF
MARYVILLE-ALCOA CIVIC BALLET
We Have Moved To Maryville College
3rd Floor of Fayerweather Hall (The Campus Center)

WAITING ROOM

BALLET STUDIO

Cheryl Van Metre, Director - Sarajune Owen, Instructor
Cindy Armfield — Jazz & Children's Ballet
Jenny Anne Cary — Children's Tap
Call for Registration — Studio 982-8463 - Home 982-3577
3 New Classes Begin Thursday, Nov. 13
★ Adult Tap ★ College Beginning Ballet
Studio Opens At 3:00 p.m.

the flavor tree
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

We Can't Promise You A Sandwich In A FLASH
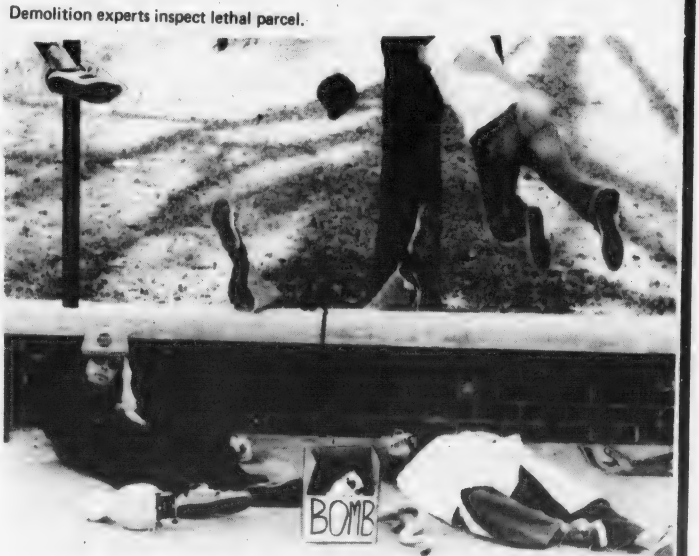
But Come In Anyway
Mon.–Thur.
10 AM–8 PM
Fri.–Sat.
10 AM–11 PM
For your favorite deli. sandwich — hot or cold — (From $1.00)
* Imported & domestic cheese
* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914

delicatessen



the Highland ECHO

Volume 61 No. 9 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Friday, November 21, 1975

Lloyd Receives Bomb Threat

Demolition experts inspect lethal parcel.

Debris scatters as bomb goes off.

Early Sunday evening a small brown box was left on the doorstep of Lloyd Women's Residence. Within minutes, a mysterious caller informed the head residents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Durant, that a bomb had been left at the dorm. Refusing to crack under the pressure, the Durants calmly notified the Campus Police and the city of Maryville's bomb squad. They then cleared the residence hall of its inhabitants.

Demolition experts soon arrived on the scene and examined the deadly cubicle. A note from the bomber was uncovered by the experts and given to Dr. Kramer, who now has the note in custody. Handwriting experts are being called in for an analysis and hopeful match-up. The "demo" experts removed the lid on the box and revealed, not a bomb, but a rabbit. However, while being checked for live wires, the rabbit was accidentally set off, injuring several students and prematurely retiring the demolition squad. The incident is under investigation at the present time. The lone survivor, though badly mutilated, managed to give this comment, "Ahhh—unnnh! Is this your idea of humor, Victor?

College Property Vandalized

This past weekend, vandalism struck the Maryville College campus. Several dorms along with Sutton Science Center seem to be the only victims.

The most serious damage was done to Dorm 1, which had one of it's doors kicked in. However, the student responsible for this damage admitted his guilt and offered to pay for it. Two windows were damaged by rocks in Dorm 3 and several students ran through the Davis lobby demolishing the house the girls built for Homecoming.

Besides the damage to the dorms, the Sutton Science Center sign was kicked out. Fortunately, the damage is easily repairable. Also, one of the biology vans was pushed onto the golf-course, apparently with someone at the wheel as no damage was done to the van. If this hadn't been so, damages could have been quite severe.

With the exception of the Dorm 1 incident, the source of all other damages is still unknown.

MC Briefs

Once again we would like to remind everyone of the great nights of movies planned for your entertainment this weekend. Tonight and tomorrow night we will show "The Great Chase" with W.C. Fields, "Laurel and Hardy Murder Case," "California Bound" with W.C. Fields, "Chaser on the Rocks" with the unsurpassable Road Runner, and our main feature "A Man Called Horse" starring Richard Harris. They will be shown both Friday, November 21 and Saturday, November 22 in the Chapel at 7:30 for only $1.00. Support your Social Committee.

As a result of last Friday's election, Bill Gannon is officially the Freshman ACC Representative.

The Bookstore is having a paperback sale. All paperbacks will be on sale for half-price, starting on December 1, and continuing as long as the supply lasts.

Tri-Beta is sponsoring a plant sale on Saturday from 12 to 5 in the greenhouse.

Schoen To Perform

Sallie Warth Schoen, pianist, will present a faculty recital at Maryville College Friday, November 21, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Mrs. Schoen, who is an associate professor of music at the college, has distinguished herself in the music world both as an accompanist and as a pianist in her own right. She has been acclaimed by music critics throughout the country, wherever she has appeared in concert.

Recent appearances as a piano soloist include the Carnegie Mellon Hall in Pittsburg, Lincoln Center Library in New York City, Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City, and at numerous colleges. She has been featured soloist with the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra, the University of Houston Symphony, and the University of Alabama Symphony.

One music critic wrote of her, "Observing her utter involvement and joy in her playing works toward bringing the audience into closer rapport with the performance."

As a registered accompanist with Columbia Artists Management, Inc., Mrs. Schoen has accompanied Metropolitan Opera soprano Brenda Lewis, tenor Walter Carringer, soprano Karen Roewade, baritone John Darrenkamp, soprano Margaret Kalil, bass Philip Steele, mezzo-soprano Margaret Mann, and soprano Sarah Beatty.

She is a graduate of Oberlin College Conservatory of Music and holds the Master of Music degree from Indiana University. She also holds a performance certificate from Mozarteum, Salzburg, Austria and has done post-graduate work at Indiana University.

She studied piano with Joseph Hungate, Walter Robert, Heinz Scholz, and Menahem Pressler.

Mrs. Schoen has taught at Maryville since 1955.

Mrs. Schoen

In Response To Your Fan Mail...

This essay's topic is twofold: first. about our editorial policy concerning the football team; second, in reference to our editorial policy in general.

We have recently been criticized for chastising the football squad because it has lost every game this season. It has been suggested that we should offer encouragement instead of complaints.

First, let us say that there is no lack of support for the football team here simply because it is a losing sport. For example, the soccer club and the new women's teams have all enjoyed a great deal of support, if only a few victories. The difference is that these teams have survived with little if any money from the school. Almost the entire effort has come from their own pockets.

There is no fun made of dedication, no matter what the result. Football has become the object of campus ridicule because of the financial importance placed on it. Promises of a new winning era in Maryville College Football without results have fed this attitude. It is a growing consensus that there is a great deal of money being poured into a useless effort.

The coaching staff has been criticized for being generally over-zealous and under-knowledged. This may or may not be true, but the fact that such comments have come from faculty members, students, the parents of players, and many of the players themselves has promoted a rather dim view of the brain behind Maryville College Football.

The editorial called into question in relation to football was that of October 31. This was a guest editorial. It was not written by anyone on the regular Echo staff, and it does not at all points reflect the attitudes of the editors. But, as Julian Harris and Stanley Johnson tell us in their book, The Complete Reporter, "publishers today assume that a newspaper has a social responsibility to seek out and publish the opinions of writers who represent all points of view which citizens of a democracy deserve to know."

We feel that the October 31 editorial reflects a widely-felt campus attitude.

We also printed a photographic caricature of the football staff. No malice was intended toward the football team, but we were reflecting what is rapidly becoming the general attitude toward the coaches.

We have not offered only complaints about Maryville. The very optimistic editorial in our November 7 issue bears this out. But to dwell on only the good points of Maryville would make the editorial page both boring and worthless. Suffice it to say that if we could find nothing good about Maryville, we would not have spent so much time and money here. But we feel a responsibility to raise questions.

It is our job to print the news. The good aspects of Maryville College are not editorial "news;" they are, for the most part, common knowledge. If satisfaction were considered newsworthy, this would be cause for alarm.

Pessimism is not necessarily the prerequisite for criticism. On the contrary, criticism in the Echo reflects the optimism that situations can be changed. The need for change is in great evidence. We have not promoted an attitude of discontent, but we have merely reflected that attitude that exists on campus to a great degree.

It is our editorial policy to honor all opinions and invite their inclusion in the Echo. Every signed editorial and letter submitted to us has been printed. We ask everyone to express their opinions. Our only policy is to promote an open rapport between all factions of the Maryville College community.

David Haimbach

A Dean's Eye View

Carolyn Blair

Since the Registrar's Office has set the last week of interim for necessary schedule changes, this seems a good time for a reminder about the change in the handling of Community Issues and Values credits. Students completing a CIV unit begun last year may continue without registering until that particular unit is completed. All who intend to begin a unit in the winter term, however, must register as they would for any other course.

Freshmen will remember that they were invited to attend CIV during the fall term on a voluntary basis but that they were to record their attendance in order to receive credit should they decide to register for CIV at the beginning of the winter term. The only step necessary for these freshmen to receive retroactive credit is to go by the Registrar's Office on the day designated for changes and officially add CIV.

Except for those mentioned above who are in the process of completing a unit begun last year, the Registrar's Office will no longer keep a record of attendance for those who are not registered. At the same time, all are welcome to attend any program on a voluntary basis. And we hope that the programs will continue to be pertinent enough to attract the majority of the college community and a large number of townspeople.

Mr. Jones, who has been in the center of the planning, says that the number for this year will probably total between thirty and thirty-five, approximately ten more than we had earlier anticipated. Several of the Performing Artist Concerts will carry CIV credit.

It is too easy on a small college campus to insulate oneself against the concerns of the rest of society. CIV remains one effective medium for focusing regularly on our common humanity, whether it is through the very excellent folk-life films produced on our own campus or the dramatic presentation of the impact made by a Martin Luther King or the discussion of political parties by a charismatic young politician. We need these reminders of other patterns of life and thought, and the CIV Committee is working hard to provide them.

College Receives Bequest

Maryville College has received a bequest of $36,000 from the estate of Herbert Ray Johnson, formerly of Tenafly, New Jersey. This brings to $84,000 the total of distributions from the estate to the college since Mr. Johnson passed away in 1974.

Mr. Johnson was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Englewood, New Jersey, of which Dr. Edward Brubaker, an alumnus of the college, was formerly pastor.

In recognition of Mr. Johnson's interest in the college, distributions from his estate have been allocated to a permanent endowment fund. Annual income from the fund will be used for scholarships to be awarded by the college's Student Financial Aid Committee. Prospective students interested in scholarships from the fund may obtain further information from the college's Student Financial Aid Office.

In commenting on the bequests, Maryville College president Dr. Joseph J. Copeland said, "We deeply appreciate this substantial commitment to the permanent resources of Maryville College. To my knowledge, Mr. Johns never visited Maryville or the college, but he became interested in both through the contribution of Maryville College alumni to his own community

Individualized Major Proposals Due

Students considering an Individualized Major are requested to submit applications before Interim. Information and registration blanks may be obtained in the Registrar's Office. The Individualized Major Committee will meet during the Interim to examine rationales, evaluate course listings, and make suggestions to the prospective majors.

A number of students have signed Major Cards indicating a desire to pursue the Individualized Major, but to date such applications have not been filed with the Registrar as specified in the booklet prepared for this purpose.

MC Chemistry Group Named Outstanding

For the third consecutive year, the Maryville College Chapter of Student Affiliates of the American Chemical Society has been designated as an outstanding chapter. This year the award went to 42 of the 609 chapters worldwide.

Dr. Gale Rhodes, head of the chemistry department, said he credits the success of the chapter to a succession of upperclass students who have been willing to accept part of the responsibility for their own education and that of others in their chemistry program.

"Over the past four years, including the present one, there have always been junior or senior chemistry majors who took pride in their contribution to this program. That pride and willingness to work is reflected in this award," Dr. Rhodes said.

Letters To The Echo . . . . . .

To the College Community—

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the students, faculty and staff that help make Maryville College Football possible. I realize we did not have a good season, but it was successful in setting the stagework for future success. I enjoyed working with the fine young men who worked endless hours to bring MC a victory on Saturdays. I would like to leave you all with this thought:

It is not the critic who counts, not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the door of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena; whose face is marred by the dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs and comes short again and again . . . who knows the great devotions and speeds himself in a worthy cause; who, at the best, knows in the end the triumph of high achievement; and who, at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat. (Theodore Roosevelt)

Richard M. Maloney

Co-Editors: David Haimbach and Gary Sloboda

Contributors: Ingird Gensler, Janet Pfarrer, Millie Brewer, Rose Wing, Diane Burger, Fred Strohl, Bonnie Holsinger, Pam McCroskey, Peggy Maher, Emerson Henderson; Photography: Marc Ward; Lay Out: Debbie Baker; Distribution: R.C. Stevens; Business Manager: Charlie Thompson; Advisor: Dr. E. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in to Box 2020 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Students Challange The College "Contract"

(CPS)---When a $300 stereo turns out to be defective, no one has any hesitation about returning it and demanding a refund. But does the same reasoning apply when a student pays $300 for a course and then discovers it is worthless?

A number of students across the country have sued their schools for breach of contract. Claiming that their college catalogue constitutes a valid contract between student and university, the students have charged that the description in the catalogue was a far cry from what they found in the classroom. Among the cases pending are the following:

A business education major has sued the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut for $400, claiming that she learned "absolutely nothing" in a course she took a year ago. "I've had bad courses before," said Illene Ianiello, "but this was ridiculous. The only thing that I learned was how to use the overhead projector."

In her legal brief, Ianiello charged that "classroom time was substantially devoted to the instructor reading aloud pamphlets and other materials he had already distributed to the class."

The Bridgeport administration is frankly worried about the suit. "If we lose this," said Vice President for Academic Affairs Warren Carrier, "every university in the country will be in trouble."

In Washington DC, an American University graduate has asked the courts to award him $150,000 in lost income and $500,000 in punitive damages after the university terminated him from a doctoral program.

The student, Herman I. Schaller, took an early retirement from his 30-year government job to pursue a doctoral program in "research and development management." He claims that after he enrolled, the university dropped its management program, assigned him advisors who were unqualified in the field and then discharged him two years before the time limit the college catalogue gave him to complete his PhD.

Even though he was enrolled in management, "at one point a special committee suggested that I write my dissertation on political theory," said Schaller.

For the school's part, according to a university spokesperson, "Schaller was given every opportunity but has failed to perform."

In another contract case, several students enrolled in New York's Queensborough Community College's nursing program were told in the fall of 1973 that they were ineligible for their final nursing course because they had failed to attain a C-minus average—a stipulation not mentioned in the school's catalogue.

The students lost their case in the courts, and decided to repeat one of the nursing classes to bring up their grade average. Their claim for damages is still pending.

In another part of New York, a graduate student at Syracuse University has sued for breach of the college catalogue contract. Asking for damages os nearly $4000 for back tuition, Thomas White has argued that the post-graduate philosophy department offered courses that duplicated those in other departments and that "non-philosophy specialists" were teaching philosophy courses that differed drastically from the catalogue description sent to prospective grad students.

According to White, the significance of his case is the "future of academic freedom." The University responded to his charged by slapping him with a $10,000 countersuit.

Last spring, a George Washington University student in Washington DC dropped out of a program she felt was "pure junk." Although the program was designed to prepare graduates for positions as landscape architects's assistants, "all we did learn was how to trace somebody else's blueprints," complained Veronika Nicolas.

"The charges are ridiculous," countered Margaret E. James, coordinator of the program. "no one else has complained."

In an attempt to recoup her lost tuition, Nicolas is suing the university for $900.

Hardly an issue a few years ago, the recent outbreak of college catalogue contract cases is due to "an increase in consumer-orientation," according to William Van Alstyne, a law professor at Duke University, in North Carolina, and an expert in contract law.

"Decisive gains have been made in commercial consumerism and interest has spilled over to the college campus," said Alstyne. "Contract law applies when colleges don't furnish what they promise."

The issue of whether the contents of a school's catalogue have the force of a legal contract promises to be a difficult one. According to the Harvard Educational Review, "the right to sue for economic (rather than physical) injuries resulting from negligence on the part of school personnel is both without precedent in the common law and without explicit mandate in legislation."

"It will prove an interesting battle," concluded Alstyne.

Trouble In Tempe

(CPS)---Arizona State University student Rich Hall veered off the straight and narrow, suffered a rude awakening and now faces a fail term for possession of marijuana.

Hall's troubles began when he drove his bicycle on a campus street while trying to avoid a puddle of water. A campus police officer was watching and slapped the speech major with a ticket for "failure to follow a bike path."

Hall ignored the ticket, thinking the police would forget about the matter. He was wrong. Three weeks later, Hall was jolted awake by a loud knocking on his door. It was the campus police, armed with a warrant for his arrest.

The campus police drove Hall to the local police station in Tempe where he was told to empty his pockets, Hall pulled out the small amount of marijuana, sending the campus police into a frenzy.

"They acted like they had just busted the Tempe connection," he said. But the local police were unimimpressed. "They looked at the ASU cops as if to say, ' you're not going to bust him for that, are you?' " But they did—apparently the first dope collar the campus force had made in some time.

"The ASU cops booked me for possession but they had to ask someone at the jail how to spell 'marijuana,' " Hall said.

First Ammendment Declared Dead In Utah

by Diane Auerbach

(CPS)---The US Constitution doesn't carry much weight in Utah. A recent Utah Supreme Court decision ruled essentially that the First and Fourteenth Amendments apply to the federal government but not to individual states.

In a ruling on a pornography case, the Utah Supreme Court decided that the First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of speech, religion and the press, as well as the right to assemble, does not necessarily affect Utah. The Supreme Court also ruled that the Fourteenth Amendment, which prohibits any state from abridging the constitutional rights of US citizens, was invalid.

Apparently, Utah has taken a liking to its newfound role as a maverick. In another part of the state, Brigham Young University recently declared that it had no intention of obeying federal regulations on sex discrimination. A university spokesman branded the Title IX regulations as both "illegal and unconstitutional."

Dan Osborne paid us five dollars to print this picture.

Soccer Season Ends In Victory

The Maryville College Soccer Club ended its 1975 season recently with a resounding thumping of Walters State, 8–1. Dan Osborne led the booters for the day with three goals plus an assist. Osborne's one man offense was aided by two goals by Craig Larsen and one goal each by Scott Cook, Doug Hardy, and Coach Dave Young.

The booters ended the season with a mark of 2–9. Craig Larsen led all scorers for the season with twelve goals followed by Doug Hardy (5), Will Way (4), Dan Osborne (3), Laurie Hill (2), and Kinsey Shilling, Scott Cook, and Dave Young with one goal each. Dan Bergner led the team in the assist department with eight.

The Soccer Club invites all interested participants to join them in their frequent Sunday scrimmages throughout Interim and Winter term.

Scotties Drop Last

The Maryville College football team concluded a winless season Saturday by dropping a 21–7 decision to Emory and Henry College at Emory, Virginia. It marked the first time Maryville has not won a football game in a season since 1965 when they were 0–9–1. The last time the Scots finished 0–9–0 was in 1958.

Despite the loss, this game was one of the best efforts for Maryville this season. The Scots gained a season high total offense of 284 yards with 51 yards rushing and 233 yards passing.

Quarterback Sam Horner, who played during most of the second half, completed 19 of 36 passes for 189 yards and one TD. Tight end Kenny Dickens was the main target of the Maryville passing game all day. Dickens caught 11 passes for 129 yards.

The Scots only scoring of the day came with about 4:00 remaining in the game as Horner connected with tight end Don Surrency from the one-yard-line. Tim L. Kelly's conversion kick completed the scoring.

Vespers

A Thanksgiving Communion Service will be held on the chapel stage Sunday, November 23 at 7:00 p.m. The Rev. Charles Fowler, Methodist minister from Oak Ridge, will condu the service. Rev. Fowler is the son of Dr. Elizabeth Fowler of the MC English Dept. and the Rev. J. Fort Fowl Special music will be by the MC brass ensemble under the direction o Charles Hurt, and Mike Dykes will si "Gifts" from Godspell. Dr. Dan Kinsinger will lead the congregational singing. Everyone is welcome.

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
Artie Banker
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

RESEARCH PAPERS
THOUSANDS ON FILE
Send for your up-to-date, 160-page, mail order catalog of 5,500 topics. Enclose $1.00 to cover postage and handling.
COLLEGIATE RESEARCH
1720 PONTIUS AVE., SUITE 201
LOS ANGELES, CALIF. 90025
Name _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

Van Metre School of Dance
HOME OF
MARYVILLE-ALCOA CIVIC BALLET
We Have Moved To Maryville College
3rd Floor of Fayerweather Hall (The Campus Center)

WAITING ROOM

BALLET STUDIO

Call for Registration — Studio 982-8463 - Home 982-3577
★ Adult Tap ★ College Beginning Ballet
Studio Opens At 3:00 p.m.

The Production Staff

Cheryl Van Metre
The Artistic Director studied at Royal Academy of Dance, London; The International Ballet Seminar, Copenhagen . . . holds Advanced Teaching Certificate from Dance Educators of America . . . . .

Sarajune Owen
Advanced Teaching Certificate from Dance Educators of America . . . . choreographed several musical productions . . . . . studied at Royal Academy of Dance in London.
Ballet Mistress for Apprentice Company

the flavor tree
404 church ave.
church ave. professional bldg.
just past gilbert's

We Can't Promise You A Sandwich In A FLASH
But Come In Anyway
Mon.–Thur.
10 AM–8 PM
Fri.–Sat.
10 AM–11 PM
For your favorite deli. sandwich — hot or cold — (From $1.00)
* Imported & domestic cheese
* Philadelphia-style hogies are our specialty 983-7914

delicatessen

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 10 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | January 16, 1976

Copeland Explains Faculty Cut-Backs

Recently there have been rumors circulating around Maryville College that there would be a wholesale layoff of professors. One rumor was to the effect that one professor would be released from each department. Another involved the layoff of several professors having low tenure.

In order to investigate these rumors, the Echo conducted an interview with President Copeland. When asked about these rumors, he stated that "No decisions of that nature have been made."

According to Dr. Copeland, Maryville College is currently in the process of reevaluating its curriculum. Part of this assessment is the program surveying the freshmen curriculum. Another part involves a long-term consideration of our student-faculty ratio. This change was first suggested by the Board of Directors about three years ago, as a means of keeping costs down over a period of years. Hopefully, this would include as few cutbacks as possible, and a policy which would allow a professor to retire without a replacement.

Referring to a study by the American Association of Colleges, President Copeland said that higher education has been hit hardest by the "horrible burden of inflation." Despite this trend, Maryville College has remained financially sound. So far, the '75-'76 year has been a good one as far as money is concerned. However, in order to meet the challenges of rising costs, small changes will have to be made.

Children's Film Festival Begins Saturday

The Maryville College Speech-Theatre Department has announced a Children's Film Festival January 17 through February 28. Films will be shown every Saturday starting at 2:00 p.m. Admission is 50 cents at the door or $3 for a season ticket.

The first film in the series, "So Dear to My Heart," is a Disney production and tells the story of farm life and a boy who looses his prize black sheep. In his search for the sheep, he begins to worry more about the ribbon he had hoped to win at the county fair than about the sheep itself. His "God-fearing" granny shows him which prizes have a lasting importance.

"Johnny Tremain," to be shown January 24, is in tune with the bicentennial theme of this year. The film authentically recreates the famous ride of Paul Revere, the Boston Tea Party, and the battles at Concord and Lexington. This is a film for the entire family.

On January 31 the film will be "Rascal." It is a story of a young boy who finds a baby racoon and names it Rascal. As Rascal is growing up, he puts his master in some hilarious situations involving his family and the towns people. Finally Rascal hears the call of the wild, and the boy must make a decision of whether or not to return it to the woods.

The fourth film will be "The Boy Who Loved Horses," a heart warming story of a boy who steals a horse in order to keep it alive. He takes the horse across the Danish country side to keep it away from its owners who want to have it killed because the horse is too hard to handle. The exciting adventures of the boy and the horse, who meet up with robbers, builds to a dramatic climax of a chase across the Danish countryside. This film will be shown on February 7.

On February 14 the feature will be "Light in the Forest." Set in pre-revolutionary times, this is the story of a boy who was raised by the Indians, then returns to claim his place in the early American society. Torn by his loyalty to the Indians and the tension created by the Indian-hating white man, the youth searches for a link between the two worlds.

"Run Wild, Run Free," to be shown February 21, is the tale of a young boy rendered mute by an early traumatic experience. The boy begins to speak again after a serjes of exciting experiences with a falcon and a mysterious white horse.

The last film in the series, on February 28, is "Fun and Fancy Free." This movie combines animation and live characters in a double feature. One is the story of a circus bear who is too long in captivity to fend for himself when he escapes. The other is the story of Mickey and the Beanstalk, the modern version of the magic beans.

Kodak Donates Chemistry Equipment

The Chemistry Department recently received a Dual-Solumn, Temperature Programmable Gas Chromatograph, valued at several thousand dollars, from Tennessee Eastman Co., Kingsport, Tennessee.

The instrument consists of three self-contained modules for the dual-column oven and gas-flow controls, the heater electronics, and the temperature programmer. Furthermore, it is capable of being interfaced with Igor, the Sutton Science Center computer.

Among the uses of the gas chromatograph is the quantitative as well as qualitative separation and identification of compounds in mixtures. The instrument has wide application in the health sciences and in basic chemical research.

The instrument is reported to be in fine condition, and the Chemistry Department expects the analytical tool to broaden the scope for Independent Study and for routine sample analyses.

Coordinating the transaction were Mr. Gary Godfey and Dr. J. McPherson of Tennessee Eastman and Dr. Robert Naylor and Mr. Hugh Crawford of the Maryville College Chemistry Department and Business Office, respectively.

"We are most grateful to Tennessee Eastman for this generous gift. Having the use of such an instrument will definitely enhance the undergraduate research possibilities at Maryville College," said Dr. Gale Rhodes, Chairman of the Chemistry Department.

MC Receives Johnson Bequest

Maryville College has received a bequest of $36,000 from the estate of Herbert Ray Johnson, formerly of Tenafly, New Jersey. This brings to $120,000 the total of distributions from the estate to the college since Mr. Johnson's death in 1974.

Distributions from Mr. Johnson's estate have been allocated to a permanent endowment fund. Annual income from the fund will be used for scholarships to be awarded by the Student Financial Aid Committee of the college. Prospective students interested in scholarships from the fund may obtain further information from the Student Financial Aid Office.

Mr. Johnson became interested in Maryville College through its alumni. He was a member of the Frist Presbyterian Church of Englewood, New Jersey, of which Dr. Edward Brubaker, an alumnus of the college, was formerly pastor.

Freshman Curriculum Revised

The Instructional Program Committee has formed a proposal that will be sent to the A.C.C. This proposal is concerned with the new orientation program for freshmen and a new required course called "Seminar" or "Venture" for the freshman.

The new orientation program will last for at least a week for the freshman. It will occur the week or so before the upperclass students come. There will be no charge for this period of orientation. Ten volunteers from the faculty will work with the freshman for this period on a 20 to 1 ratio. The faculty member that the student receives will be his advisor for the year.

During orientation the freshman will have social, academic, physical, and spiritual activities. The student will have already done some reading during the summer. In the groups they will learn about liberal arts schools, Maryville College, study habits, and writing techniques. This will help in the placement of the student.

The new course presented in the proposal for the freshman curriculum will probably take place in the first ten week period. The student will receive one course credit for it. The class will have a 20 to 1 ratio, as previously mentioned. The freshman schedule will consist of Venture, English, and an elective.

"Venture" is a course in which all the instructors of different departments will use a common theme such as the city, or the instructor can choose a topic of his choice, such as American Indian Heritage. The English professors and Venture professors will be working together. If the student chooses this subject for his major, the course will count as a credit toward his major. If he does not choose this subject as his major, it will count as an elective.

During the summer there will be a workshop for the faculty members participating in the program.

The Instructional Program Committee feels that these programs will bring about a better balance in social, academic, physical, and spiritual activities on campus.

If anyone has any questions on the new program of freshman curriculum, he can talk to Dr. Fowler, Mr. Jones, Dr. Lewis, Dr. Nelson, Mr. Powell, Dr. Ramger, or Dr. Young.

Doctor Young Resigns

Something's missing at Maryville College, or someone soon will be. If you've never taken the time to pick up a Futurethoughts bulletin, or felt you didn't have the time, or just flatly didn't care, I doubt if this article will involve you very deeply. And even if you have, I'm afraid most of us will still have the same attitude. The fact is that Dr. David P. Young, Director of the Futuristic's Program, will not be here next fall. Dr. Young is also our Religious Life Coordinator and whether his absence will affect us personally or not, his reasons for going should concern us all. Dr. Young has expressed some feelings that I recognize deeply, and brought up some facts that have been alarmingly real to more than just a few. The truth of the matter is that something is missing at Maryville College.

Since the beginning of the year when disenchanted freshmen let us know that they were talked into something that wasn't here, I couldn't quite put my finger on it but I too had missed something. Now it is only too real what that is. It seems to be fact that this is quite an apathetic campus we live on. I for one am growing all too tired of the grumbling we constantly hear, and although criticism can be a constructive thing it becomes senseless until the critic is willing to do something about the problem. I feel we've been too quick to stay locked away in our little campus hide-out and expect wrongs to right themselves, or others to do it for us. The tendency seems to be to let the college run itself and we'll let it know what we don't like. If something's not to our liking it gets chalked up on our list of grumbles.

I'm afraid we have to share the limelight however. As far as I can see, Maryville College is fast becoming Maryville Business Incorporated. With so much emphasis being placed on our almighty dollars and less and less on the student himself, this institution is defeating the whole purpose of a small, "liberal arts," college. The appeal here is supposed to be the personal touch, however I feel only stronger alienation between student body and administration. The small college degree supposedly sets us closer to the world by developing not only our memory for learning but our character as well. This is supposed to be a climate for growth and change, at least that's what the catalogue says. But with students content to sit around merely pointing out problems and an administration whose attempts to economize seem more and more like efforts to profit, I'm afraid the catalogue deceives us. When a college has to allow a part of its faculty to leave, that's bad. Especially when others so richly deserve this consideration more. But when a person feels that he can do no more good here and can't find a reasonable excuse to stay, that's even worse. As Dr. Young said, "You must realize that since becoming interested in futuristics and generalist education, it has become important to me to broaden my horizons and experiences. This desire is a strong factor in my decision to seek another position. However, there do exist disappointments in the present. Expressing frustration is impossible because of its very nature. Let me try by saying that I believe that significant changes are needed by liberal arts colleges if they truly desire to meet the challenge of being a prophetic voice in a world emerging into a new order and ethic. Dreams die. My dreams for MC's meeting this challenge have died. But other dreams exist here nad some will bear life. It is simply time for me to dream/do something else somewhere else."

In sincerely hope that my memories of Maryville College can be made to bear more fruit than simply a degree and four years of indifference.

Doug Taylor

Dear Andy

Many of you may have asked where "good old Andy Hall" has been for the past couple of months. Many more of you probably never noticed I was gone. I first noticed this reaction when I recently arrived back on campus. Throwing open the Echo office door, I dropped my bags and shouted with rejoice, "I'm back!" Dave and Gary looked up from their stacks of paperwork and replied, "You were away?" They obviously didn't know what they were missing.

For those of you who were curious about my whereabouts, I've been taking a "holiday" of sorts at a nearby resort in order to relax far from the outside world. After my last column in the paper, the editors decided I needed a rest. A van soon arrived to wisk me away to three months of leisure.

I really missed my work and sent numerous requests to the editors to let me come back. However, the postal service made a series of blundering errors, sending the letters back marked "Refused" or "No Forward Address Available."

Disheartened, I realized I was destined to be on vacation for awhile. The resort where I stayed was fairly comfortable, although its operation was totally out of the hands of its guests. The activities coordinators made a great effort to provide us with stimulating discussion and programs. However, some of these programs were less than well-planned or publicized, and I often found myself standing in line for an event they forgot to tell us was cancelled.

But with all its faults, the "institution", as some called it, was advantageous in that it was sheltered from the world outside, although we were often reminded that's what we were being prepared for.

My release came unexpectedly when an attendant spotted me lounging about the premises and asked what I was doing there. "I don't know," I replied. This was sufficient reason to let me leave.

Coming back to Maryville was not as harsh a transition as I was afraid. The highly protective atmosphere of the resort was not too far removed from our own. I almost repeated the editors' question, "Was I away?"

Regardless, I'm here now, ready to answer the many questions you have sent me.

Dear Andy,

These rumors have to stop! I'm sick and tired of it all. I've never been anywhere in my life where one area has been permeated by so many vile and disgusting rumors. I mean like the one that went around about the biology department and a certain breed of grazing animals other than cows. Well, that was disgusting! So was the one about a certain dean and certain establishments (that I won't mention) where her bike has been seen parked in front of at strange hours. Not to spread rumors or anything but what about what happened to that buxom freshman girl that lives over in Davis who accidently walked into the men's locker room when the wrestling team was in there? Well what happened to her was just awful! Really now, I just don't know how rumors like this get started. I think it's time to put a stop to these malicious lies.

An Innocent Recluse

Andy: It's a crying shame! What happened to that girl? I didn't hear that one.

Dear Andy,

I confess. It was me. I couldn't help it. It happened in a moment of weakness. I just lost my head and didn't realize the potential harm of what I did. I was going to use the excuse that I was drunk at the time but I figured that I had better tell the truth or I would regret it. It will be hard enough to live with what I did let alone add to it all by lying. What can I say? I didn't mean to do it? Sorry.

Me. I did it.

Andy: I'm glad you owned up to it.

Dear Andy,

No, Andy he's lying. I did it! He's just saying that. The man's obviously a gluttant for punishment. I won't stand still and let someone else take the credit. I did it and I did it on purpose.

Andy: Did you ever not know who to believe?

Dear Andy,

I would like to use this space to squash the rumor going around that the entire faculty is going to be fired and replaced by student assistants at $1.86 per hour. However, I can't. It's true. Believe it. I swear.

A Man You Can Trust

Andy: That's what I've heard.

Andy Hall

WANTED

A NEW EDITOR OF THE HIGHLAND ECHO. Applications are now being accepted for prospective editors. Deadline for all applications is January 26. Apply at Box 2814. Include your name and box number and a list of your tentative staff.

Painting Hung In Proffitt Dining Room

The last of a series of commissioned paintings was hung in the Proffitt Dining Room at Maryville College during the recent holidays.

The paintings by Kenneth Cox of New York were commissioned by the family of Dr. and Mrs. David Proffitt for the dining room. The first five paintings are flowers of the East Tennessee area. The new painting includes the tower of Anderson Hall and trees of the area: cedar, amgnolia, mimosa, sourwood, dogwood, and maple.

The artist, whose subjects are mostly animals and still life, paints primarily with a pallet knife on a black background. He does, however, use some brushwork.

He has studied at Art Students League and New School in New York and at Academe Julien in Paris. Mr. Cox who has been painting for ten years, was an interior designer before becoming an artist. He recently had a show in La Jola, California.

The Proffitt Dining Room is a beautifully decorated private dining room in Pearsons Hall that was given to the college by the Proffitts.

Dr. and Mrs. Proffitt (Gray Webb) met at Maryville where both were members of the class of 1916. All of their sons attended the college, and three grandchildren are Maryville graduates. Both the Proffitt and Webb families have had a long relationship to the college.

Ceramics Lecture At MC

Sandy Blain, Knoxville potter, will present a lecture, slide presentation and gallery talk at Maryville College Friday, January 23 at 8:15 p.m. The evening will begin in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center, then move to the gallery.

The slide presentation will be entitled "International Ceramic Symposium—Idea, Processes and Completed Pieces." As the program moves into the gallery, Ms. Blain will talk informally with viewers.

Ms. Blain's works will be exhibited throughout the week of January 19-23 in the Fine Arts Center Gallery. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Ms. Blain is an assistant professor of ceramics at the University of Tennessee. She has exhibited nationally since 1964 and has received a number of awards for ceramic work throughout the United States.

Admission is $2; students $1. College faculty and students will be admitted by I.D.

MC Receives Robinson Bequest

Maryville College has received a bequest of $21,585 from the estate of Dr. Gilbert Robinson of Senath, Missouri. Dr. Robinson, a 1916 Maryville graduate, was a member of the basketball team and captain in 1915-16.

The bequest was designated for a permanently endowed scholarship fund, the annual income from which will be used to provide scholarships for athletes. Interested prospective students may contact the Student Financial Aid Office of the college for further information about the scholarships which will be granted for the first time in the fall of 1976.

Dr. Robinson received the M.S. in education and the Ph.D. in Psychology from the University of Missouri. He served as a teacher; a missionary to Thailand; superintendent of schools in Coldwater, Kansas; dean of Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Oregon; and as administrator of the National Youth Administration for Missouri. For two years he was in personnel work with Kaiser Shipyards, eventually retiring to look after business interests in Portland.

A few years ago Dr. Robinson moved back to Senath. He died in 1974.

RUMMAGE SALE

Theta Epsilon will sponsor a rummage sale on Saturday, January 17, 9:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. Interesting items of clothing, jewelry, books, albums, shoes, and other knick-knacks will be sold inexpensively. Come, look, and buy!

MC "Top Dog" In Pigeon Ratings

The following article is re-printed from a recent edition of the Orange and Blue of Carson-Newman College.

Maryville College took advantage of victories by defending champion Texas Christian and Western Michigan to come in the back door and capture the 1975 PIGEON RATINGS championship. Last year TCU won the coveted title in similar style when season-long leader Wake Forest unexpectedly won its last game.

Maryville (0-9) wrapped up its perfect campaign with a 21-7 loss to tenth-rated Emory and Henry (2-9). TCU (1-10) ended a twenty-game losing streak and gave away the title by upsetting Rice 28-21. The Horned Frogs fell to eighth in the final RATINGS. Western Michigan (1-10) upset Eastern Michigan, 24-14, and dropped from third to ninth.

Virginia's Cavaliers (1—10) charged into second after being on probation for having a well-known coach. That well-known coach was fired after the final game, a 62-24 loss to Maryland. That was the ghird time U. Va. had given up over 60 points in a contest this season.

Bluefield State (1-9) moved up a notch to third while Utah (1-10), Texas-El Paso (1-10), Oregon State (1-10), and Davidson (1-8) each advanced two spots.

The top ten squads finished with a combined won-loss record of 10-95 which computes to a percentage of .095. Consistency is the key to success. Applications for coaching positions are now available from the respective athletic departments.

Special PIGEON RATINGS recognition goes to Idaho (4-5-2) for losing to Washington State, 84-27. Even more recognition goes to Farleigh Dickenson for losing to Bowie State, 83-0.

The worst game of this week (regular season) is Tennessee vs. Hawaii. The worst bowl game of the season will be the Rose Bowl.

Here are the final RATINGS starting with the worst:

1. Maryville	(0-9)
2. Virginia	(1-10)
3. Bluefield State	(1-9)
4. Utah	(1-10)
5. Texas-El Paso	(1-10)
6. Oregon State	(1-10)
7. Davidson	(1-8)
8. TCU	(1-10)
9. Western Michigan	(1-10)
10. Emory and Henry	(2-9)
11. Houston	(2-9)
12. Holy Cross	(1-9)
13. Cornell	(1-8)
14. Kentucky	(2-8-1)
15. Wyoming	(2-9)
16. Columbia	(2-7)
17. William and Mary	(2-9)
18. Miami (Fla.)	(2-7)
19. Clemson	(2-9)
20. Air Force	(2-8-1)

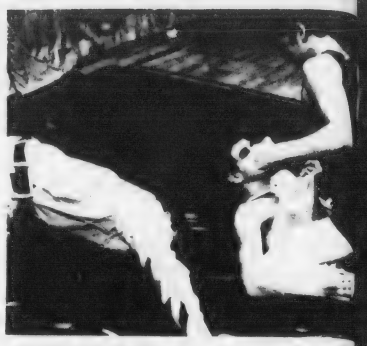
TRACK

All students interested in participating for the "Scot" intercollegiate track squad should meet with Coach Taylor, Friday, January 16, at 4:00 p.m. in room 162 of the Physical Education Building.

Winter Sports Begin

Maryville College's three Winter sports teams returned to action last weekend after the long Christmas break, but it was not the most outstanding showing as all three teams, wrestling, mens' basketball, and womens' basketball, had trouble with their opposition.

The weekend got off to a good start on Friday night as the Maryville wrestling squad soundly defeated Southern Tech University of Marietta, Georgia, 37–3. In that match, eight Maryville grapplers came out victorious in their respective matches. Only one match saw a Tech wrestler come out on top. 126 pound Freshman Ralph Melia was the only individual to win on a pin.



top teams in the South with four All-Americans, beat the Scots, 41–3. 190 pound Bob Valentine was the only Maryville wrestler to win.

The Scots showed an opposite performance on Saturday afternoon when they wrestled UT-Chattanooga. The Moccasins, rated as one of the

The Maryville College Lady Scots basketball team lost their third game of the season Saturday night by dropping a 71–37 decision to Walters State Community College of Morristown. The Lady Senators' LeAnne Hance was the game's leading scorer with 36 points. Betsy Bauer paced the Scots with 19.

Following that game, the mens' basketball team dropped a 111–66 verdict to Milligan College of Elizabethton. A very physical contest, Milligan outmuscled the Scots during most of the game and frestrated the home team. Randy Lambert lead the Scots with 28 points.

Vespers

The bread—the cup—the blessing—a special Passover meal—all events leading to the cross. But He rose and gave witness to His death for Our life.

The bread—the cup—the blessing—a special vespers celebration of the Last Supper to be held at Morningside, the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Copeland in the college woods. Time: 7:00 p.m. Sunday, January 18.

The invitation to eat of the bread and drink of the cup is open to all who profess a belief in the Life that died for us.

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

bank of maryville
Your Bank
In Blount County
Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowie
A FULL SERVICE BANK
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Uniquely Unforgettable! Spectacular! Incredible!
It's Unbelievable!

MARYVILLE. UNBELIEVABLE

If I said it of a Harvard or a Yale,
You'd believe it.
If I said it of a Dartmouth or Cornell,
You'd perceive it.
But a Maryville?
UNBELIEVABLE!

Unbelievable that Maryville
Can be going through rough times
With the comfort and the room
That it portends.

Unbelievable that Maryville
Really teaches in a fashion
To arouse the very envy
Of my friends.

UNIQUELY UNFORGETTABLE!
SPECTACULAR!
INCREDIBLE!
Unbelievable that a small school could be the envy of my friends.

For further information, see your lo college recruiter today.
BASE PRICE $2750. ★
Subject to change with preparation and tions.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 11 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | January 23, 1976

Ussery And Cate To Publish Book

Mrs. Clyde Ussery and Mrs. Herma Cate

"We the People of Blount County," a folk history by Herma (Mrs. J. H.) Cate and Clyde (Mrs. William) Ussery will be published in 1976.

The book will actually be written in part by the people of Blount County. The two writers are asking that residents of the county submit family histories and stories about experiences in the settlement and development of the county. They also want photographs.

Mrs. Cate, who writes a folklore column for The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, said, "We want people to feel free to send us material. It will be a real contribution to future generations."

She said they want stories about families, churches—circuit riders, camp meetings, brush arbor meetings—courtships, social activities connected with school and church, memories of World War I, harp singing, the lumbering industry, treatment of childhood disease, the coming of electricity and the telephone, and any other stories about life in the early days of the county.

The book will be 9 x 12 inches, bound in a hardback cover and contain between 500 and 600 pages.

Information is being mailed to residents of the county, Mrs. Ussery said.

"If anyone needs further information or help in writing their story, they should contact us by writing to Box 506, Maryville, or by calling 984-7056. A lot of work has already been done on the book, but we can go no further without the people's contribution. The book will be complete to the extent that the people of Blount County cooperate with us."

An advisory committee has been named to work with the writers and editors in preparing the unique volume. The members are Mrs. Bert Anderson, Edwin Best, Miss Elsie Burrell, S. P. McNiell Sr., Joe L. Marshall, and Ted Tindell.

Books can be purchased prior to publication only as only the number ordered will be printed. The pre-publication price is $25 per copy with the money received to be held in a trust account until the project is completed.

Mrs. Cate is a member of the Maryville College English faculty. Mrs. Ussery is director of communications at the college. They co-authored "Southern Appalachian Heritage," which was published by Holston Publishing Co. in December 1974 and is now in the third printing.

Food Committee To Take Poll

Yes, that's right! We may no longer have to load the whole quad into the car and head out for Burger King. No more vegetarian meals or carbohydrate diets. It seems that at the last meeting of the All College Council (ACC), a proposal was made to enable Saga to upgrade the meal program in a couple of obviously lacking areas. The suggestion is as follows:

Saga could:

1. Have a solid meat each night at the dinner meal. Some of the main entrees would be—Fried Chicken, Roast Beef, Roast Pork, Pork Chops, Corned Beef, Veal Cutlets, Chicken Fried Steak, Swiss Steak, Baked Ham, Fish, Bar-B-Q, Turkey, Lamb, etc! This would be the main entree, plus Saga would offer two other entrees at the dinner meal.
2. Saga would feature a hot sandwich twice per week at lunch, plus, two other entrees. The hot sandwich would be—Hot Turkey Sandwich, with gravy, Hot Roast Beef au jus, Hot Reubens, Hot Hoagies, etc.
3. Saga would offer a steak night one per week. This would be a 7—9 oz. top butt steak, 8—10 oz. Sirloin Strip, 8—10 oz. T-Bone, or 7—9 oz. Rib Eye. This would normally be offered on Saturday night, with the Gourmet Steak night continuing once per month.
4. Our present contract calls for the Sunday noon meal to be the heavy meal. We could explore this to see if a "Sunday Buffet" would be more popular and appeal to the after church groups. Many schools have dress codes on this particular meal.

Pricing structure:

Sagas charge to Maryville College would be $2.18 per boarding student per day, under the present feeding calendar. This would mean that for @25 cents extra per day we can improve one of the more recognized problems on campus. What's more important is that we, as a student body, will have an opportunity to decide, for ourselves, what we want.

On Monday, during the lunch and dinner meals, a poll will be taken. If we vote this proposal in it will return to the ACC upon whose approval we all should enjoy our meals a little more.

Payment would most likely be made during registration of Spring Term, costing an additional $18.20 for the term.

Programs Offered In Spain

For the last eleven years, summer programs have been offered to students in the U.S. and Canada to travel and study in Spain. Last summer 69 students from 28 states departed from JFK Airport in New York and flew to Malaga and then to Madrid, where the 11th summer program was held.

Plans are already in progress for the 12th Summer School in Spain, and the City of Tarragona (south of Barcelona) has been chosen as our headquarters in Spain in 1976.

Tarragona is a very historical city, capital of the Old Roman Empire in Spain. It is surrounded by the most beautiful beaches on the Mediterranean Coast.

Students attending our program will have the opportunity of swimming in the Mediterranean every day, enjoying a wonderful summer while learning Spanish in Spain.

Tours are prepared to visit London, Paris, as well as Barcelona, Madrid, Toledo, Avila, and Valle de los Caidos.

All persons interested should write as soon as possible to:

Dr. Arjibay Doreste
Augustana College
Rock Island, Illinois 61201

February Meetings Celebrate 100th Year

February 1976 will be a special month in the history of Maryville College in that it will contain the 100th celebration of February Meetings. This tradition began in 1877 in a chapel on the second floor of Anderson Hall with Rev. Nathan Bachman leading. These times of spiritual emphasis in the years following have represented important memories to thousands of Maryvillians. We doubt that many colleges in the country can boast of a 100 year tradition of a time set forth each year to probe and pray as a campus about the religious issues of the day.

The 1976 edition of February Meetings will be developed under the theme of Who Speaks For Man? Can any nation, religion, or person speak for man? With this theme we plan to address ourselves to the movement of the religious spirit in our heritage, our present, and our future.

In addition to campus leadership, two persons will lead us: Dr. Phyllis Trible, Professor of Old Testament at Andover Newton Theological School and Dr. Patrick Henry, Associate Professor of Religion at Swarthmore College. Details as to the CIV's, seminars and related events will be released in following weeks.

In addition, Norman Cousins, editor of Saturday Review, will be a CIV speaker on March 5 to follow up from his international perspective, thoughts on the theme Who Speaks For Man?

First Of A Series Dr. Copeland Speaks On The State Of The College

Maryville College is well known as a reputable, influential liberal arts college. It has been for 156 years, and it can be for the decades ahead.

From our origin, Maryville has offered quality education in an environment of Christian concern for the individual.

Realizing that we live in a different kind of world now, but also realizing that many of the basic needs of the human being remain the same, our real problems lie in determining what to change and what not to change.

Emerging out of people most concerned for Maryville—faculty, students, administration, Board, alumni—come many considerations. Some have become plans and projections. Others are still in the initial steps of consideration. Daily new concepts and convictions appear.

Such considerations fall into four major areas of the college life: the academic, admissions, finances and student services. First, I merely list some of these major considerations in these four areas, and thereafter I shall detail more fully each section.

1. In the Academic:
   - A. Objective: Liberal learning with career achievement—some refer to it as career oriented.
   - B. The present Freshman curriculum considerations refined and implemented for next September.
   - C. Our Continuing Education program greatly extended and other auxiliary education programs added.
   - D. A program proposal prepared by Maryville College to meet the academic needs of a junior college in the event the County and State propose such for this area—Maryville remaining a private, four-year Liberal Arts College while contracting with the state to meet their additional needs.
   - E. Further thorough examination and re-evaluation of our total academic program to bring it into conformity with our specific statements of purpose, our financial circumstances and the needs of the students whom we serve.
   - F. A serious consideration for devising ways and means of measuring our sensitivities concerning human values as well as that of gaining knowledge.
   - G. Clearly defined qualifications for academic staff to meet our purpose and objectives; such measurements to be used regularly in interviews for contracting and continuing evaluation.
   - H. Adjust the size of the faculty and staff as per the Board's request, projecting and perfecting a meaningful salary scale overcoming inflationary costs. (Faculty:Student ratio 1:18)
2. In the area of Admissions:
   - A. Objective: Eight hundred qualified, informed students, which is the ideal number for the maximum utilization of adjusted faculty and staff.
   - B. Involvement of not only the admissions staff but faculty, students, administration, Board, alumni, et cetera in our admissions program, with focus upon the junior college graduate and accenting the qualities of Maryville College with specific dignified salesmanship.
   - C. Student aid at a maximum level to achieve our objective of offering quality education to worthy students who might not be able to meet the full costs.
3. In the area of Finances and Fund Raising:
   - A. Complete our long range planning goals and translate them into dollar objectives with a clear case statement and public relations program to support it.
   - B. Balance the current budget every year.
   - C. Seriously consider a major fund-raising campaign in 1977-78:
     - To remove Health & Physical Education Building indebtedness ($360,000)
     - To add One Million Dollars to our endowment funds
     - To establish faculty chairs
     - To underwrite our program of deaf education, career guidance and auxiliary health services
     - To increase student scholarships
4. In the area of Student Services:
   - A. To secure a full-time, qualified, ordained chaplain
   - B. To continue to enhance our career guidance and personal counseling services.
   - C. To build a meaningful campus social/recreational program and to secure the staff to man it.
   - D. To implement decisions resulting from present projected survey on improvement of food services. (All-College Council Minutes, January 14)
   - E. To involve total personnel—faculty and administration—deeply with our students in our residential life program as well as the religious and academic.
   - F. To continue to work for the Tennessee grants program for needy students—$1100 per year where need warrants.

Each of these considerations has major significance for all of us. For instance, the balancing of the current budget for this coming year could be done with 690 qualified students, $200 increase in fees, $400,000 in gifts and a 1 to 18 faculty:student ratio.

Permit me to deal more fully with the financial picture in a later article, detailing more fully now some of the matters mentioned in the academic area.

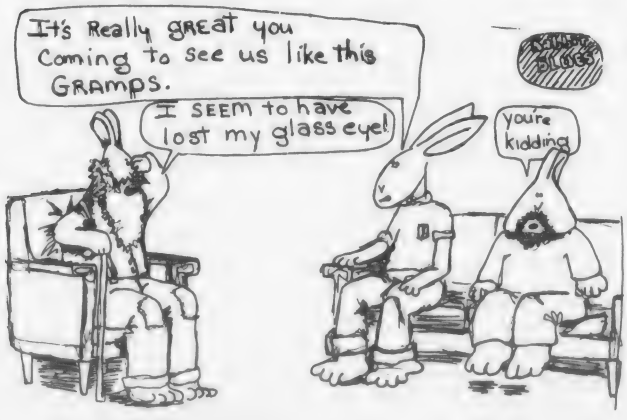
In this world of almost unlimited technological growth, the inner being who determines the use of THINGS must grow even more. Learning for learning's sake must never be abandoned for the hollow, momentary grasping of that which makes man appear to be strong with things outside while trembling with insecurity of non-direction from within.

A flexible liberal arts college can motivate, expose to and cause to be experienced broad, general learning while at the same time aid the student in career preparation, and this without becoming a trade school. Learning how to learn is career preparation. Experiencing exposures to the sources of knowledge is career preparation. Developing a value system leads to meaning in business or profession. There is no reason why learning how to live and knowing how to make a living should be in conflict. Certainly the "soul" is more important than "security;" yet as long as our liberal learning leads us to this understanding and commitment there is nothing damnable about having resources to support our inner convictions.

Last week at the All-College Council approval was given to two basic concepts of the new curriculum for Freshman:

First, that we initiate for all freshmen a week of orientation immediately preceding the opening of school. Activities will include testing and placement; seminars on summer reading; discussions of the liberal arts concept, Maryville College history, purpose and procedures, et cetera. The plan is to have ten groups, each composed of twenty freshmen and a faculty leader who will serve through the year as advisor for the freshmen in his or her group.

Second, that the first term for freshmen include one course, tentatively called Freshman Venture, designed as an in-depth treatment of either a theme or topics of the instructors' choice, using the disciplinary approach. Should the student choose to major in that discipline, the course would count as a major requirement. Should he or she choose another major, it would count as a core requirement. This course would be closely coordinated with Freshman English. The third course would be an elective.



Change is always threatening, yet change is constantly required of us. If we refuse "absolutely" to change, then change is forced upon us from outside and we have surrendered the determination of our own destiny. Throughout its century and a half of liberal arts leadership, Maryville College has changed its curriculum many times. Each generation must determine what is most pertinent for its age and time. Each generation of Maryville College must determine what to change and what not to change. This means a constant examination and re-evaluation of our total academic life in keeping with our present statement of purpose, our financial circumstances and the needs of the students.

Many of our present frustrations lie in the fact that learning is participation; a college is a participating institution. Participation is cumbersome; common denominators are often dilutions. Maryville College is honestly attempting to CHANGE through vital and intelligent participation.

With this process I concur. For its full effectiveness, change this time must come soon and be extensive. Therefore I shall continue within my full capacity to be an agent of the right kind of change.

No problem confronts Maryville which it cannot conquer. This college has in its 156 years confronted and conquered far more difficult problems than any now facing it. Let us view our contemporary problems within the proper perspective. Faculty, students, administration, Board members and alumni can and will conquer. These are but a few of the considerations whic can lead to success. I will continue to elaborate on them in the next Echo.

Joseph J. Copeland

Joe Carnevale and foundling child

Baby Abandoned On Campus

A near tragedy has ended in bliss for Maryville junior Joe Carnevale and an abandoned infant. While riffling for breakfast Wednesday morning, a campus security guard discovered a child left in the dumpster behind Pearson's Hall. The baby was immediately taken inside. It was there that a dramatic episode took place in the life of Joe Carnevale. As soon as he set eyes on the child, Joe fell in love with him. "He was just so cute. I had to have him." The baby is now in Joe's care and appears to be as delighted as his new guardian.

New Financial Aid Forms Mean Less Money For Students

(CPS)—A student applying for financial aid this winter may be bilked of hundreds of dollars to which he is legally entitled.

Two government-approved systems for estimating financial need routinely brand students as less "needy" than do other financial need setups, according to columnist Neil Klotz of "Con-Pro." At stake is several million dollars worth of financial aid which students at more than 1000 institutions may not receive.

The financial snafu revolves around need analysis forms that school financial aid offices use in determining how much a student's family can be expected to contribute toward school costs.

In a financial aid office gives a student the wrong forms, he could be cut out of his fair share of financial aid from College Work-Study funds, Supplementary Education Opportunity Grants and National Direct Student Loans.

The problem began several months ago when the US Office of Education (OE) issued regulations that require all private "need analysis" firms like the College Scholarship Service (CSS) and the American College Testing Program (ACT) to submit the formulas they use to figure a student's financial need for federal approval each year.

These firms' estimates of how much a family should contribute to a student's education would have to approximate almost exactly new federal benchmark figures, ruled OE.

Yet if a school did not want to pay CSS or ACT for their analysis services, OE announced, it could use two other systems—the income tax system or the Basic Grants system—which are free, already approved and ready for use.

The catch is that these two systems call for families to contribute amounts way above the benchmarks that OE has just set up. Although a family with an annual income of $12,000 and assets of $20,000 would be required to pay only $500 a year toward their child's college education under the federal benchmarks, OE's Basic Grant system requires them to dole out $1240 and the income tax system demands a $1410 contribution.

The snafu is compounded by the fact that the free systems are at present the only ones officially sanctioned. OE is telling all schools that have been using the private contractors that they will have to "stand by" until their formulas have been approved.

Since financial aid deadlines are nearing, "several schools" have turned to the income tax or Basic Grants systems, according to an OE official. And since those two systems mean no cost to colleges, even more are expected to do so.

OE admits that it works under a double standard by promoting the use of two systems which produce contribution figures far above its own standards. "The difference is recognized," said an OE spokesman, "but the Commissioner does not consider it desirable to force institutions to use the services of a need analysis contractor."

The result is a considerable savings for the government and colleges at the expense of college students and their families, according to Klotz.

CIV Committee Seeks Student Ideas

The CIV Committee is currently seeking extensive student input of ideas for CIV programs and formats, according to Dr. Robert Naylor, representing the subcommittee for future programming.

To generate this input, members of the CIV Committee will be available next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, between 2:30 and 5:00 p.m., in the snack bar of the Student Center to talk with students about their ideas and also to discuss their concerns about CIV programming.

In addition, students will be encouraged to express their thoughts in an informal questionnaire prepares especially for evaluating the CIV experience. The questionnaire will be available at the dining hall next week.

"Members of the CIV Committee are looking forward to talking with as many students as possible to develop further ideas for future CIV programming. We really would like to get more student involvement in recommending program ideas and formats. In this way, we can be better assured that we are providing students with the variety and types of program offerings which they will find most desirable," Dr. Naylor said.

He also noted that now is the time to express preferences, not after the program for 1976-77 has been finalized. "To paprphrase an old saying: 'Gripe now . . . or forever hold your peace!' Seriously, though, we really do want to hear what each student has to say about CIV," he stressed.

Other members of the committee who will be participating in next week's sessions are Julie Clements, Dave Lundell, Ed Peterson, and Doug Taylor.

Reflections

Taking time out—pausing—meditating—praying—idling—worshiping—being silent—reflecting—or whatever are important parts of the rhythm of life.

Out of a study of changes in curriculum has come the desire to give more structure and time in our daily schedule to the general area of the spiritual: that is, those dimensions of our lives that bring us in to contact with the awareness of Other—The One—God—or a power greater than that which resides in our "self."

To respond to this sense of rhythm and desire to grow spiritually, two daily periods of REFLECTION have now been formed, from 10:40-11:00 a.m. or 12:40-1:00 p.m. in the Little Chapel. As the weather improves the meetings will sometimes move outside.

REFLECTIONS will present a wide variety of experience to reflect on: reading of prose, poetry, scripture, etc; listening to music or silence; looking inward and outward; sharing promises and pains and prayers; and being alone and together or together and alone.

REFLECTIONS is open to all the campus community. Join with us to share and reflect.

MC SPORTS

The mens' basketball team won their first game of 1976 and first one since December 13 on Saturday night as they scored a 97-95 overtime victory at Tusculum College. Captain Randy Lambert scored the winning points for the Scots with :13 left in the overtime period with a basket. Lambert was the leading scorer in the game with 38 points. Other Scots achieving double figures were Kenny Talbott (19) and Mike Morton (16). The victory brought the Scots to a record of 4–5.

Earlier in the week, Maryville dropped a 77-62 decision to Sewanee. Lambert scored 29 points in the Tuesday night encounter. On Thursday night, Maryville dropped a 60-56 ballgame to Covenant. Lambert and Ty Limbaugh each scored 14 points for the Scots.

The Lady Scots basketball squad lost both of their games last week as they stood at 2–4. They dropped a heartbreaking 57-53 loss to Carson-Newman last Thursday. Maryville was in the game until the end. Chris Curran lead the Lady Scots with 13 points, followed by Betsy Bauer and Sharon Youngs who had 12 each. On Saturday night, the girls suffered a 58-47 loss at Tusculum. Sharon Youngs pumped in 19 points.

The wrestling team went winless week also. A three-way match at Morehead, Kentucky on Friday night saw the Scots lose both to Morehead State and Virginia Tech. Wayne Risko, Bob Valentine, and Bob Von Mitch had two victories apiece. In a B team match at Chattanooga State on Friday, Maryville lost 28-16. Four Scots, including Rich Ramos, Ray Oliveri, Tom Biamon, and Mark Thedofrd, all won their respective matches.

The Maryville grapplers dropped a 28-21 match to Middle Tennessee State on Tuesday. The Scots got off to a poor start, but came alive towards the end as the last four matches were decided on pins. Maryville victors included Wayne Dunn, Risko, Valentine, and Von Mitch.

There will be two basketball games at the gym tomorrow. The Lady Scots will host Tennessee Temple beginning at 1:30 p.m., while the men play Emory and Henry at 7:30 p.m.

Ceramics Lecture At MC

Sandy Blain, Knoxville potter, will present a lecture, slide presentation and gallery talk at Maryville College Friday, January 23 at 8:15 p.m. The evening will begin in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center, then move to the gallery.

The slide presentation will be entitled "International Ceramic Symposium—Idea, Processes and Completed Pieces." As the program moves into the gallery Ms. Blain will talk informally with viewers.

Ms. Blain's works will be exhibited throughout the week of January 19-23 in the Fine Arts Center Gallery. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Ms. Blain is an assistant professor of ceramics at the University of Tennessee. She has exhibited nationally since 1964 and has received a number of awards for ceramic work throughout the United States.

Admission is $2; students $1. College faculty and students will be admitted by I.D.

WANTED: NEW EDITOR

The Highland Echo is looking for a new editor. To apply, simply submit your name and box number to Box 2814 by January 26. The Communications Committee will contact you. Apply now for the infinite benefits this glamorous, prestige position holds.

Pictured above are three Maryville College students who recently took part in a federally financed study on the effects of heavy, long-term marijuana usage. The test data has not yet been compiled but the results are expected to be disturbing at the least.

Archaeology

Anyone interested in working this coming summer on an archaeology field project or in attending an archaeology field school may pick up applications from Dr. Nichols in SSC 214.

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

We Invite You to Visit Us at Seven Convenient Locations
The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Tallest And Closest To The Campus
Downtown
Alcoa
Airport
Broadway
McGhee Tyson
Seymour-Chapman Hwy.
Townsend

THE MARKET PLACE

102 W. Broadway
983-9220

A Community Of Small Stops in Downtown Maryville At 102 Broadway.

NOW OPEN
★ The Acoustic Music Shop
★ Greenleaf Fancy
★ Rams Arcade

OPENING SOON
★ Danrich Photography
★ The Golden Carrot
★ Bluegrass Coffee Shop
★ Blue Goose Gifts
★ Wacky Tobacy (Tobacco Stop)
★ Others to open in future

Bluegrass Jam Every Saturday Night

Hours: 10-9 Mon. - Sat.
Sun. 1-9. Closed Wed.

theHighland ECHO

where people REALLY care!

Vol. 61 No. 12 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | January 30, 1976

Norman Blake Appears February 6

For the past fifteen years Norman Blake has been one of the most respected and requested studio musicians in Nashville. On Friday, February 6, he will be appearing at MC's Wilson Chapel.

Norman Blake's music includes bluegrass, mountain and plain old country styles. He has played with many famous Nashville talents, including David Bromberg, Doc Watson and John Hartford.

Blake was born in Chattanooga in 1938, and was raised on the southern side of Lookout Mountain in Sulphur Springs, Georgia. He began to play guitar at age eleven, learning his first songs from his grandmother. A cousin who was a fiddler and a friend named Cripple Creek furthered his early training. At sixteen he quit schoo to play mandolin with the Dixieland Drifters, a group playing radio jamboree shows around Chattanooga and Knoxville.

By 1960 he was touring with June Carter, and through that association he got a chance to record behind Johnny Cash in 1963. For the next seven years he played on every Cash album, as well as Cash's ABC television show in 1969.

Cash introduced Norman Blake to Bob Dylan, and Dylan requested that Blake join him on his album Nashville Skyline. As a matter of fact it is Norman Blake—not Bob Dylan—doing the picking on the "Nashville Skyline Rag."

During these recording sessions Blake was introduced to Kris Kristofferson, and wound up recording on almost all of Kristofferson's albums. Through Kristofferson, Norman Blake met Joan Baez, and did the flat-top picking for her hit single "The Night They Drove Old Dixie Down."

In 1971 he recorded his first album Home in Sulphur Springs, which has been the consistently best selling LP on the Rounder Record label. Since then he has cut two other albums: The Old Post Office and Beginning and End.

He will be appearing at 8:00 p.m. on Friday, February 6 at our own Wilson Chapel. Tickets are $2 and can be purchased at the post office.

Fund Raising Campaign Sets Goal

The goal for the Maryville College-Community fund raising campaign has been set at $120,000.

The campaign will begin Tuesday, February 3, at 7:30 a.m. with an orientation-assignment meeting and breakfast at the college. Two other orientation meetings are scheduled for Wednesday at 12:00 noon (lunch) and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. (dinner).

Chairman of the steering committee Harold D. Lambert said more than 100 workers have been enlisted for the campaign.

Division chairmen of the steering committee are: Fred R. Lawson, Advance Division; Robert N. Navratil, Professional Division; Walter Y. Thomas, Jr., Friends Division; and Mrs. Robert C. Jackson, Edwin J. Best, and James W. Hitch, co-chairmen of the Alumni Division.

Mr. Lambert said, "I believe we have set a realistic goal. With the strong community leadership we have, we expect this year's campaign to be more successful than ever before. The College means a lot to our community in education, leadership, and the economy. As private colleges everywhere face tight budgets, Blount Countians will assure the continued strength of Maryville."

Tutt Bradford, chairman of the college directors' fund raising committee, expressed his appreciation for all who are helping in the campaign and for the interest and support already shown. Advance gifts already total $70,000, he said.

"College directors, alumni, and friends are giving renewed support to Maryville College to assure its financial stability and quality education," Bradford said.

The Blount County campaign is part of a national fund raising program on behalf of Maryville College. Solicitations are now underway in Chicago, Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia, with plans for fund raising activities in Chattanooga, Birmingham, Atlanta, and Florida.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Elects New Members

Four new members are to be inducted into the Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Scholarship Society of Maryville College on Tuesday, February 3. Brenda Wilson, Robert Hines, Kimberly Darden and Milton Bush were elected to the society on January 27. Other members will be elected at the end of the winter term.

Alpha Gamma Sigma is a local society with requirements similar to the national society Phi Beta Kappa. Members elected to Alpha Gamma Sigma must have a grade point average of at least 3.33 for all college courses taken at Maryville or elsewhere and be a resident for at least five full ten-week terms or the summer school equivalent.

Hiking Club Revitalized

The Maryville College Hiking Club has been revitalized by Beta Beta Beta Biological Honor Society and the Social Committee, and the first hike of the year took place this past weekend. Thirteen students, two faculty members, and a few assorted townies made up the group that intended to hike from Cades Cove to Russell Field, from Russell Field to Spence Field, and then back to Cades Cove. The expected snow had been melted by balmy temperatures on Friday and Saturday, so the melted snow combined with an overnight rain left the trail muddy and slippery. Occasional strong gusts of wind also added to the pleasure of the hikers. The group left the parking lot at Cades Cove at 9:20 AM, and the first group of hikers reached Russell Field shortly before 11:00 AM. After a short time on top of the field, they were driven by the strong winds and cold temperatures into the shelter where they built a fire. The last of the stragglers reached the shelter shortly after noon, and everyone ate lunch or a reasonable facsimilie. The group then voted on whether to continue on to Spence Field or whether to go back to the vans along the shortest possible path. The vote was 16-0 in favor of getting out of there as fast as possible. After a brief snowball fight and a round of picture taking, everyone got their frozen bones moving again and headed back to Cades Cove.

The next hike is planned for mid-February, and everyone on campus is invited to attend. Posters will be placed on campus when the destination is determined for the hike. The club is basically unstructured and has no meetings other than hikes. Feel free to attend only when you have the time and inclination. For more information, and for any suggestions on hike destinations, see Dr. Ramger or Mr. Taylor.

MC Rip-off Day

This Saturday at 9:00 a.m. the removal of the college farm house will begin. If we are to preserve this 150 year old log house, we must begin immediately as the county health department hopes to begin its construction on this site soon. In order to finance the removal of the house and expected reconstruction on Maryville's campus, we want to hold an auction of all the salvageable materials from the house and barn. Tomorrow we will be sorting all the materials to prepare for the auction next weekend, and we need all the hands and tools we can get to help out. Please come down anytime Saturday, put in a few hours of work, get a few blisters and have a good time. Let's show Maryville College that we can really accomplish something.

Second Of A Series

The Cost of Higher Education

"If you consider the cost for education to be excessive, then please consider the cost of ignorance." During these days of drastic inflation, all of us are forced to consider the cost of every aspect of our lives. Inflation having hit higher education harder than any other phase of our American life, we have to consider the cost of education even more seriously. In response to the invitation from the Echo editors for this series of articles, I choose to deal with the dollar cost of education in next week's article. Today, let us look at the cost of higher education in terms of personal involvement.

In recent meetings of the administrative officers I sought their judgment as to the ideal number of students for Maryville College, taking into account our facilities, program and staff. Without excessive struggling, they produced the figure 800. With 800 well-informed, committed students here really seeking a liberal arts education with career focus, Maryville College would be making maximum use of its facilities and staff in our objective of quality education at the most reasonable cost.

Then it seems logical: For success in the Seventies, it's time we launched a bold new program of admissions for those 800 qualified students.

Such a program must be based on the qualities of Maryville College beginning with our philosophy of education. Learning is not confined to accumulation of facts. Learning is involvement in life experiences. The exact body of facts accumulated is no more important than what happens to us in our relationship of faculty and students and staff in the process of accumulation. What we actually do with the information we acquire, how our lives are affected, what commitments result therein—these might well be more important than the major selected and the actual organization for distribution of that knowledge. In our admissions program this philosophy of education must be made evident so that students coming here immediately become a part of the partnership of learning.

Growth in value concepts—this has been a fundamental objective of Maryville College since its origin in 1819. Last week I mentioned as one of the considerations for success in the Seventies that we ought to devise a way of measuring our progress of sensitivity to values. In higher education we measure in various ways our accumulation of knowledge. Why can't we likewise devise means to measure our growth, our advancement in understanding and commitment to values—values that are essential to intelligent living.

On acceptance of a student at Maryville, we require certain academic criteria. In evaluating his status of abilities to make value judgments, we could have an open admissions policy. Our only requirements would be his desire to consider the whole realm of values and his willingness to be committed to an environment whose objective is to aid him in forming his own value judgments and move forward toward achieving a life in keeping with such objectives. Surely we could devise ways and means whereby we could have periodically a mutual understanding of his progress. Progress would be our only requirement, but sufficient progress, during the four years, must be evidenced for the conferring of a Maryville College degree.

Many recent developments are converging to encourage this element in our lives. The open thinking of the faculty committee on freshman curriculum culminating in the introduction of the idea of "Reflections," a period each day when the entire community would wind down and reflect upon what ought to be done with what we have learned

The establishment of the office of a full-time chaplain should stimulate our entire community—faculty and students and staff—aiding us in giving the same integrity to growth in the realm of the spirit as growth in the realm of the mind.

The enlargement of the effectiveness of our career guidance center can and will also support this concept of education.

In our Title III application, a program in which we are projecting many of our vital, enriching experiences, we can secure the funds for strengthening not only our office of admissions but also our career guidance office. In visiting the Office of Education in Washington this week, I was assured we can use such funds granted us through Title III for these purposes.

This kind of education and admissions will cost. It will cost involvement of each of us. No education can actually be experienced on this campus without the deep involvement of faculty, staff and students. Involvement is agonizing, but there is no true education without it. The achievement of our basic educational philosophy requirements involvement.

So does the achievement of the objective of 800 students require involvement. Dr. Kramer and his admissions staff will never be able to do the job alone. Our present student body, joining with Dr. Kramer in admissions, our faculty and staff joining with Dr. Kramer and his staff, can achieve the objective of 800 qualified, informed students. Our alumni, our Board of Directors, deeply involved in our total admissions objective, can aid in assuring the achievement.

An example of potential response to these ideas was experienced earlier this week. I was attending an alumni meeting in Washington, D.C. There I had stated the need of full alumni involvement in the contemporary life of Maryville and especially to our admissions program. They started pushing me to be specific as to ways of alumni involvement, and I responded by saying "You can assist us in locating 300 graduates of Maryville College who will come back to the campus, update themselves on our academic program, our physical facilities, our life styles and our personnel and then become 300 different geographic centers working with our admissions office in finding those 800 qualified students." They pushed still further, and I responded by saying "You can find 4 or 5 intelligent and sensitive graduates who have just retired, or who have their own resources and need no salary, who will give their full time to organizing these 300 other alumni in working with our admissions office." They pushed still further, and I responded still further, "If all of you tonight can, list the senior high students you know in your neighborhood, in your school system, in your church, in your family circle who are worthy of consideration and who ought to be ocnsidered potential students for Maryville College."

The next night an alumna brought me a list of some 70 names of high school young people she considered met the criteria. Bear in mind the fact that she is a Chemistry major from Maryville and is now a science librarian in a reputable institution of higher education.

INVOLVEMENT by our faculty, students, staff in our present program of learning is true education. INVOLVEMENT by our admissions staff, faculty, students, Board and alumni is the solid basis for guaranteeing our future enrollment. If you think involvement is costly, then consider the cost on non-involvement.

Next week I will deal with the dollar cost of education at Maryville College.

Joseph J. Copeland

Let Us Make Ourselves Well

A week of spiritual-philosophical assemblies occurs every February at Maryville College. This is no accident. Just as the intangible is the most neglected constituent of man/woman in the last half of the twentieth century, so February is the shortest month. This year, at Maryville, woman has been slighted, and a game, Who Speaks For Man, has been devised to take our minds off things secular and routine.

I do not know who speaks for man. I do not know who speaks for me. When the time comes I suppose I shall speak for myself. At present, however, there is too much speaking and too little accuracy and veracity. Words are going soft in both meaning and intent. Lately I am uncertain what you mean when you say presently (now or soon?), double value (twice the price or half?), or general consensus (a consensus on consensus?). And how do you expect me to believe the statement, "No decision has been made. We have no wounds. We are doing well," when I can feel the irritation and see the infection?

Many students are leaving Maryville College before graduating. Maryville's enrollment is below a healthy level. Students who stay resent the lack of social activity and lack of faculty enthusiasm. Students who want a break go to Knoxville or drink beer in Carnegie. Or do nothing. Ennui breaks wills (and windows). But then, I leave Maryville every day.

Maryville College is in financial difficulty. We need money to operate. Something will be done if Maryville is to survive. A few faculty and staff members will leave or tuition will be raised or more students will be recruited or more donations will be sought or any combination of these will be used. Perhaps there are other ways to raise money.

Maryville is, and always has been, an excellent school for a liberal arts education. Maryville, like a mother, has always been concerned with the whole being of her progeny—spirit, body, mind. I suggest that the spirit lives in things secular and routine and that Maryville, being of the earth, best serves the spirit when it uses its body and mind. Who speaks for Maryville? All of us. Let none of us deny the truth. The truth is that Maryville is ill, and this fact is being confronted in many ways. Some do nothing. Some deny the fact, which neither eases the pain nor prolongs life. Some tell the truth in the belief that it can set us free.

Maryville is a mother. She speaks for her children, but she speaks in many voices. Let us make ourselves whole again. This year use February Meetings to ask many and specific questions about the spirit and the body and the mind of specific men and women. Demand the truth; it is strong medicine. Let us make ourselves well.

Who speaks for man?
Who speaks for woman?
Who listens?

"An empty house is like a stray dog or a body from which life has departed." —Samuel Butler

"Do not be angry with me if I tell you the truth."—Socrates

David Powell

Campus Vandelism Wave Raises Tuition

(CPS)—Students blame it on outsiders who sneak through lax dorm security systems. University administrators blame it on mischievous students who may have had too much to drink. But regardless of who is responsible for increasing vandalism and theft on the nation's campuses, the bill boes to all students in the form of higher tuition and fees.

Campuses are easy marks for "transients," who are often indistinguishable from students, many campus security guards agree. "We look like hors d'oeuvres on a tray to the criminal element, especially under today's economic condition," explained Jack Brick, director of public safety at California State University, Long Beach.

One problem is that many students are lulled into a false sense of security while they are on campus. Students, especially freshmen away from home for the first time may feel to secure in their dorm rooms, said a member of the Kent State University police. At home you wouldn't lock your door if you went to a room down the hall. Here it isn't a bad idea to lock everything up.

Administrators are baffled by the problem of catching vandals in the act or prosecuting them later. "Students are reluctant to 'rat' on one another," the director of housing at East Carolina University said. "I wish individuals would understand it is not the administration, but the students who suffer when vandals go uncaught."

The housing director at the University of South Carolina agrees that students are the key to preventing theft and vandalism in dorms. Last year a security system was set up in two dorms at South Carolina to keep outsiders out, but apparently dorm residents felt the new locks kept insiders out as well. Of the 21 locks installed, 20 were damaged a few weeks later. "You can't protect students if they don't want to be protected," he complained.

Vandalism at King's College in Wilkes-Barre, PA has affected smoke detectors and exit signs in the dormitories. The college business manager warned students there that because of inflation, repair costs have increased and because the college can only afford a certain amount, the remainder must be borne by students. The entire dormitory population will ultimately pay for repairs, he explained.

We Challenge Anyone!

Professors Baird, Largen, Spurlin, Lewis, and Kramer wish to challenge a coed team of five students to a bowling match. Any group wishing to take on this challenge should contact Coach Baird. The first team to make arrangements with Professor Baird will be the faculty team's opponent.

If the student team should happen to win, the faculty bowlers will take them to lunch.

Co-Editors: David Holmbeck and Gary Shields

Contributors: Ingrid Gensler, Janet Pfarrer, Millie Brewer, Rose Wing, Diane Burger, Fred Strohl, Bonnie Holsinger, Pam McCroskey, Peggy Maher, Emerson Henderson; Photography: Marc Ward; Lay Out: Debbie Baker; Distribution: R.C. Stevens; Business Manager: Charlie Thompson; Advisor: Dr. E. Fowler.

Letters to the editor must be signed, preferably typed and turned in by Sun. 2000 before dinner Monday. Names may be withheld upon request. All other items for publication should be turned in by this time to insure publication that week.

The editor reserves the right to edit and abridge all submissions over 300 words when necessary.

Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, the staff, and/or the College Administration.

Choir Tours Spring Break

The Maryville College Concert Choir's annual spring tour itinerary has been established and plans are being completed for its trip March 12-22 to citites in Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, and Georgia. The appearances are as follows:

Friday, March 12:	Broad Street United Methodist Church Cleveland, Tenn. 8:00 p.m. concert
Sunday, March 14:	Morning worship service—open
	Trinity Presbyterian Church Fairhope, Alabama 8:00 p.m. concert
Monday, March 15:	Weirsdale Presbyterian Church Weirsdale, Florida 8:00 p.m. concert
Tuesday, March 16:	Community Presbyterian Church Deerfield Beach, Florida 8:00 p.m. concert
Wednesday, March 17:	Chapel by the Sea United Presbyterian Church Fort Myers Beach, Florida 8:00 p.m. concert
Thursday, March 18:	Westminster Presbyterian Church Bradenton, Florida 8:00 p.m. concert
Friday, March 19:	Westminster Presbyterian Church New Port Richey, Florida 8:00 p.m. concert
Sunday, March 21:	First Presbyterian Church Athens, Georgia Morning worship service, 9:00 and 11:00 a.m.
	Northside Presbyterian Church Chattanooga, Tenn. 7:30 p.m. concert

The choir will also give a pre-tour concert Sunday evening, March 7, at 8:00 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church in Harriman, Tenn.

The choir tour is a self-sustaining enterprise, entirely financed by fees collected from the sponsoring churches and organizations.

Midnight Movies

Friday January 30th

Davis Lobby

Only 25¢

Featuring

Charlie Chaplin Laurel and Hardy

Buster Keaton Little Rascals

MC SPORTS

Story On Page Four

The MC mens' basketball team won two and lost one last week as they were able to get their season record back to .500 at 6–6.

The Scots got their week off to a poor start on Monday night by dropping a 103–77 decision at Milligan. The only positive aspect about this game was senior captain Randy Lambert going over the thousand-point career scoring mark. Lambert was the game's high scorer with 28 points.

On Thursday night, the "Fighting" Scots came from behind to defeat Centre College, 61–59. Trailing 31–26 at halftime, the Scots scored 35 points in the second half to win.

The Scots won again on Saturday night over Emory and Henry, 63–57. Lambert again lead the way in scoring with 14 points, while Mike Morton (14) and Jeff Draper (10) also hit double figures.

The Lady Scots basketball team was 1–1 last week. The girls won their first game after losing four in a row by defeating Tennessee Temple on Saturday, 52–47. As was the case with the men on Thursday night, the Lady Scots trailed at halftime, but came from behind in the second half to win.

Earlier on Thursday, Tennessee Weslyan downed the women, 63–51. Forward Sharon Youngs lead all scorers with 20 points.

In wrestling, the Maryville grapplers got their record back to .500 at 6–6 on Saturday night in Georgetown, Kentucky by winning both ends of a three-way match with Georgetown and Seina Hts. Five Scots, including Gary DeAlmo, Ralph Melia, Wayne Dunn, Wayne Risko, and Bob Valentine, won two matches each in helping to defeat Georgetown, 27–15, and Seina Hts., 54–6. Four other Maryville grapplers, including Jay Hendershot, Carlos Perez, Mark Thedford, and Bob Von Mitch, won one match each during the evening. The double victories by Dunn, Risko, and Valentine all resulted in victories by a pin.

Tomorrow night, the Lady Scots will be at home to face St. Mary's College at 7:00. They are home again on Thursday night to meet Hiwassee Junior College at 5:30. That game will be the first of a basketball doubleheader that will see the men host Covenant College in the nightcap starting at approximately 7:30 pm.

MC Briefs

The gym and all of its facilities will be open to students this Saturday night after the girl's basketball game. It will be open every Saturday night from now on until 10:30 p.m.

There will be a ski trip to Gatlinburg this Saturday. The price is $13.50.

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

E-Z CURB
8-11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

Budweiser	12-oz. (While it lasts)	$1.89
Strohs	16-oz.	$2.18
Strohs	12-oz.	$1.79

Picnic Supplies
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
8 - MIDNIGHT

GUIDE TO MONEY FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

Guide to more than 250,000 Scholarships and Financial Aid Source — items valued at over $500 million dollars.

Contains the most up-to-date information on:
Scholarships, grants, aids, fellowships, loans, work-study programs, cooperative education programs, and summer job opportunities; for study at colleges, vocational and technical schools, paraprofessional training, community or two-year colleges, graduate schools, and post-graduate study or research; funded on national, regional, and local levels by the federal government, states, cities, foundations, corporations, trade unions, professional associations, fraternal organizations, and minority organizations. Money is available for both average as well as excellent students, both with and without need.

BENNETT PUBLISHING CO.
Dept. 214, 102 Charles Street, Boston, Mass. 02114.
Please rush me ____ copies of GUIDE TO MONEY FOR HIGHER EDUCATION at $5.95 plus 50c for postage and handling for each copy.
I am enclosing $ _____ (check or money order).
Name _____
Adddress _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
© Copyright 1976 Bennett Publishing Co.

102 W. Broadway
983-9220

A Community Of Small Stops in Downtown Maryville At 102 Broadway.

NOW OPEN
- ★ The Acoustic Music Shop
- ★ Greenleaf Fancy
- ★ Rams Arcade

OPENING SOON
- ★ Danrich Photography
- ★ The Golden Carrot
- ★ Bluegrass Coffee Shop
- ★ Blue Goose Gifts
- ★ Wacky Tobacy (Tobacco Stop)
- ★ Others to open in future

Bluegrass Jam Every Saturday Night

Hours: 10-9 Mon. - Sat.
Sun. 1-9. Closed Wed.

Editors Set New Record

Paper Put Together In Fifteen Minutes

the Highland ECHO

... where people REALLY care!

Vol. 61 No. 13 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | February 6, 1976

Dr. Kramer and Dr. Copeland

Kramer Receives Award

Dr. George A. Kramer, dean of student relations at Maryville College and former vice provost and dean of admissions at Rutgers, has been selected as one of 15 persons in the nation to receive the Edward S. Noyes Award for Outstanding Service to the College Entrance Examination Board.

The Noyes Award, established as part of the College Board's 75th Anniversary observance, was presented to Dr. Kramer February 5, during the annual meeting of the organization's middle states regional assembly in Hasbrouck Heights, New Jersey.

Named in honor of a former Yale English professor, Edward S. Noyes, who served the College Board in many capacities from 1916 to 1967, the award recognized those individuals who have provided outstanding service through long and active involvement in the programs of the 2,300-member educational association.

Dr. Kramer began his almost 25 years of affiliation with the Board in 1952 when he served as a member of the committee which planned the Colloquium on College Admissions. Later he became involved in the Committee on Membership, the Committee on Sponsored Scholarship Services and Relations, the Committee on Guidance, and the Ad Hoc Trustee Committee on Membership Structure and several others.

Dr. Kramer began his long association with Rutgers University as an undergraduate in the early 1930s. In 1946 he joined the staff as assistant director of admissions and served at Rutgers until 1972 when he joined the administrative staff at Maryville.

From 1948 to 1972, Dr. Kramer was a member of the New Jersey State Secondary Schools Evaluation Committee of Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. He was co-author of High School-College Relations, a 1958 publication of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Officers of Admission.

Students Invited To Social Welfare Conference

NASHVILLE—The 61st Annual Meeting of the Tennessee Conference on Social Welfare has been planned for March 24-26, 1976 at Nashville's Hyatt Regency Hotel.

Mr. Tommy Perkins, President of the Tennessee Conference on Social Welfare said, "we expect some 1,000 professional social workers, caseworkers, educators, administrators, politicians, citizens and students to attend the three day event."

A special invitation is being made to all students enrolled in social work classes in Tennessee and other students who are concerned with social welfare problems. Students are admitted free to all conference activities.

Perkins said, "membership to TCSW is normally $10.00 a year." He added, "membership entitles an individual to attend free each of the five regional meetings held every fall across the state, the annual meeting in Nashville and includes your name on the TCSW mailing list."

I think the free membership to all students is a great asset and especially important to young people presently enrolled in social work programs in Tennessee. It's a real opportunity to hear firsthand of the problems facing Tennesseans in the immediate future—and after all—todays students will be our problem solvers tomorrow," Perkins said.

Mrs. Linda Williams, Program Chairperson for the annual event expressed particular delight at the workshop agenda. Mrs. Williams said, "sessions include "Outreach Services in God's Waiting Room" which deals with the problems facing the elderly in institutions like nursing homes and mental health hospitals; "From the Cradle to Kindergarten" which deals with preventive services and child development programs for pre-schoolers; "Responding to Community Expectations for Better Planning" which will attempt to develop priorities for planning and evaluation and achieving fiscal responsibility and accountability. There are several other sessions planned dealing with mentally retarded, the family of the future, the needs of rural communities, crisis intervention and much much more." "We have gone all out to develop workshops which are timely, informative and appealing to a wide variety of social welfare professionals and I think we have succeeded," Mrs. Williams added.

TCSW has initiated a new feature for the 61st annual meeting. Six major social welfare groups have agreed to exhibit in Nashville this year. The National Association of Social Workers, the University of Tennessee/Nashville—Graduate School of Social Work, Tennessee State University, Department of Social Welfare, Meharry Medical Schools' Sickle Cell Research and Treatment Center, the Tennessee Department of Human Services and the Metro Social Service Commission.

For more conference information and/or a membership application write: Tennessee Conference on Social Welfare, P.O. Box 2863, Nashville, Tennessee 37219.

Concluded

Dollar Costs At Maryville College

Joseph J. Copeland

In the attic of the log farm house Saturday morning was found a Maryville College catalog of 1913. As Glenda and I carefully separated pages, students and others in the room responded in various ways to the interesting facts revealed. During the year of 1913, the total cost of tuition, room and board at Maryville College was $97.50. Tuition was $6.00 per term!

Today the total cost of tuition, room and board is $2895. During each decade the costs of higher education in the nation have doubled. The same thing has happened at Maryville College. But ten years ago our total costs were much lower than comparable colleges offering comparable programs. Today we are still lower in our total costs than those comparable colleges.

Recently the college scholarship service for the College Entrance Examination Board published a bulletin entitled "Meeting College Costs." This guide for parents and students shows that typical college costs for a resident student at a private college in America today are $3500 for tuition, room and board. This year ours is $2895.

This year the Association of American Colleges published the results of a definitive study it made of one hundred representative private colleges and universities. That report shows that during the years from 1970 through 1974 current revenues in the private college sector rose twenty-five percent; so did tuition and fees go up twenty-five percent. In 1970 our tuition and fees were $2200; today they are $2895.

As indicated in the Maryville College budget published at the end of this article, both our income and expenditure budgets are divided into four major categories. It is our objective to make each major section of the budget self-balancing, but one readily notices that while the income in the educational and general budget is projected at $2,393,000, the expenditure amounts to $2,496,000.

In the student financial aid section, it is noticed that our expenditure is projected at $199,000, and the income in that section is projected at the same $199,000; but in order to have an income of $199,000 for student financial aid, it is necessary for us to transfer from current funds a total of $84,000. In addition to this $84,000, we are using $42,000 from income from our endowment funds and depending upon $20,000 in gifts—all to be used in our student financial aid budget in order to total the $199,000 that we have actually committed to students. Everyone is aware that we still do not have sufficient funds in this financial aid budget to meet the justified needs of students of Maryville College.

Our basic philosophy of financial aid is based upon need, and we are constantly putting forth efforts to increase the money available for student aid because we know the need exceeds the monies available.

To help bear the burden of increased costs through inflation, in all probability our total fees, including room, board and tuition, will increase this coming year—perhaps $200 or more. The same elevation is being experienced in other higher education institutions, and in order to absorb the needs of our present student body who cannot afford the increase in costs, we will be forced to increase our student financial aid budget to absorb the maximum amount of those costs. We have been following this kind of a program in recent years, and we will continue to do so even though it throws our financial aid section of the budget into an unbalanced position.

Another major trend in the financial life of Maryville College is an ever increasing dependence on private gifts for current budgets. In 1960 our budget showed we were depending upon $102,000 from current gifts. Today we are depending upon $420,000 from current gifts. Total gifts and grants to the college each 12 months for a seven year period averaged over one million dollars. In the past two years it exceeded $700,000 each year. That is vivid expression of deep confidence in the college. This trend also prevailed in the hundred other private colleges in the study mentioned above. This "increasing dependence on private gifts increases vulnerability to economic depression, to changes in tax laws, and to adverse changes in donor attitudes." (Association of American Colleges study)

The December 22, 1975, U. S. News and World Report published an article on the Association's study. I quote from it:

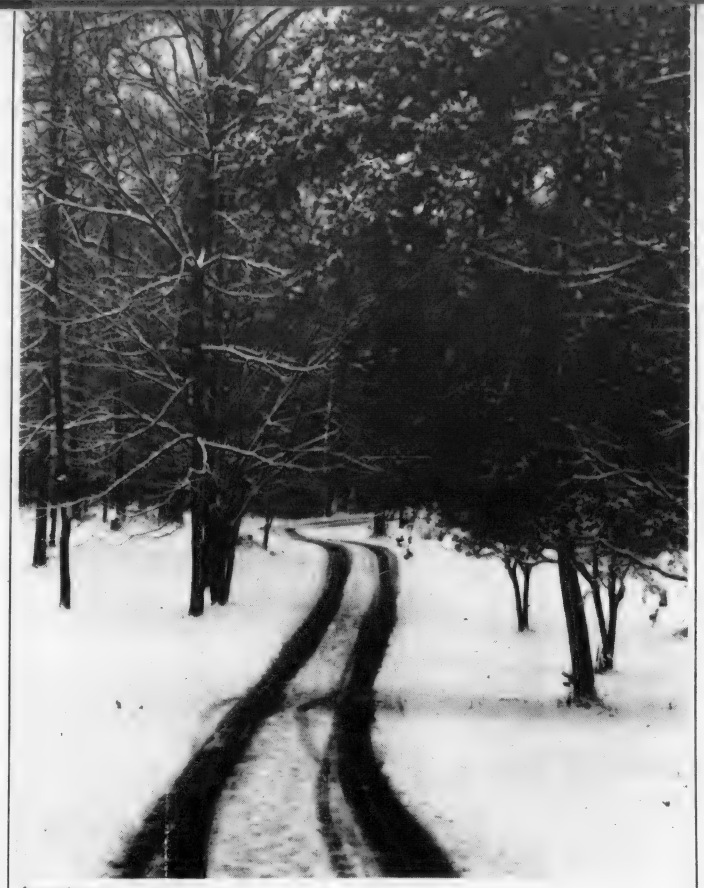
> Gloomy predictions that the American private College would disappear are turning out to be far off the mark.

That report goes on to list the pluses and the minuses as follows:

> Pluses. Money resources grew faster than inflation from 1970 through 1974. Revenues and expenditures were substantially in balance. Enrollment went up 8 per cent from 1969 through 1975, with no significant decline in admission standards. Academic and student-service programs expanded.
>
> Minuses. Most institutions were unable to enroll as many students as they wanted. Faculty compensation increased less rapidly than wages and salaries in general. And there was a decrease in the share of total expenditures going to such basics as instruction and research.

The over all financial condition of Maryville College is solid. We have more than $15,000,000 in total assets. Our total liabilities are $3,500, 000. Our greatest financial difficulty lies in the necessity to balance the current budget. During the past four or five years, we have missed that balancing, sometimes as much as $200,000.

Our objective now is as it has been through the decades: a quality program at reasonable cost to students. We must achieve this objective of a quality program within a balanced budget, and that's what a great part of the current emphasis on CHANGE is all about.



Maryville College
1975-76 Budget
Income

		Unrestricted	Restricted	Total Present Budget
I.	Educational & General
	Tuition	$1,182,500		$1,182,500
	Other Student Changes	169,389		169,389
	Endowment	105,400		105,400
	Gifts	400,000		400,000
	Federal Gov't Grants		255,000	255,000
	Organized Educational Activities	13,275		13,275
	Tremont	177,300		177,300
	Other Sources	90,941		90,941
	Total Educational & General	$2,138,805	$255,000	$2,393,805
II.	Auxiliary Enterprises
	Dining Hall	$ 347,610		$ 347,610
	Bookstore	76,080		76,080
	Printing	24,800		24,800
	Vending	8,000		8,000
	Snack Bar	3,000		3,000
	Concessions	1,000		1,000
	Dormitories	236,000		236,000
	Total Auxiliary Enterprises	$ 696,490		$ 696,490
III.	Student Financial Aid
	Gifts- Scholarships		$ 20,000	$ 20,000
	Endowment		42,000	42,000
	Federal Government Grants		53,072	53,072
	Transferred from Current Fund	$ 84,000		84,000*
	Total Student Financial Aid	$ 84,000	$115,072	$ 199,072
IV.	Plant
	Federal Interest Subsidy	$ 23,500		$ 23,500
	Transferred from Current Fund	26,375		26,375
	Total Plant	$ 49,875		$ 49,875
	TOTAL	$2,969,170	$370,072	$3,255,242
				84,000* listed twice
				$3,255,242

October 15, 1975

MARYVILLE COLLEGE
1975-76 BUDGET
Expenses

		Unrestricted	Restricted	Total Present Budget
I.	Educational & General
	Instructional	$ 727,720	$210,700	$ 938,420
	Organized Educational Activities	48,793		48,793
	Community Service
	Library	89,342	18,700	108,042
	Student Services	209,195	16,100	225,295
	Oper. & Maint. of Phys. Plant	505,945		505,945
	General Administration	215,242		215,242
	General Institutional	424,852	9,500	434,352
	Depreciation Reserve on Ed. Plant
	Contingency Reserve	20,000		20,000
	Transferral to Financial Aid
	Total Educational & General	$2,241,089	$255,000	$2,496,089
II.	Total Auxiliary Enterprises	$ 510,206		$ 510,206
III.	Student Financial Aid
	Scholarship and Grants	$ 84,000	$115,072	$ 199,072
	Total Student Financial Aid	$ 84,000	$115,072	$ 199,072
IV.	Plant
	Interest Physical Ed. Bldg.	$ 49,875		$ 49.875
	Total Plant	$ 49,875		$ 49,875
	TOTAL	$2,885,170	$370,072	$3,255,242

A scenic way to take up space.

Burned Fingers Are Better Than A Burned World

Bernie McGraw

It was a penetrating 19 degrees on that memorable morning. As the sun majestically rose over the tip of Pearson's Hall at 9:30, I began pouring that icy water into the storage tank for the solar water heater outside of Sutton Science Center. It took a few minutes for my numb hands to open the valve and start the pump. Doubtingly, I placed my fingers below the return pipe to see if the water coming from the collector might be a little warm. It took a few seconds for me to realize that the water running through my fingers was severely scalding me! I grabbed my hand and, showing it to those around me, excitedly and jubilantly proclaimed, "It burned me! It burned me! It really burned me!" I became a firm believer.

Later that day while contemplating my early morning experience, I remembered reading some of the technical reports for the Liquid Metal Fast Breeder Reactor. It was easy to conclude that no one man could ever fathom all the necessary technical data essential to such a program. Wait a minute, I also remembered reading in TVA Perspective (an obviously pro-nuclear magazine) that nuclear energy was essential for future energy "needs" because the technology for sloar energy and other alternatives was not here, and it probably would not come for 20 or 30 years—maybe not till well after the turn of the century (so they claimed). How deceptive!! It is easy for anyone, even me, to understand what makes a solar collector work—and they tell me that solar technology isn't here?

If you really begin to look into the pro and con of nuclear energy, you, too, will find how shockingly dangerous it is—and expensive. You will be surprised at the 3rd grade logic used to answer some very serious questions about the safety of the nuclear program. It is time for citizens to "get very active, very loudly, very fast."

This evening's wrestling match with Georgetown will be video-taped and replayed tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 on WTVK-TV channel 26.

Young Speaks In S.C.

Dr. David Young, director of the Project on Futuristics at Maryville College, presented two talks at Presbyterian College in Clinton, South Carolina, recently.

Dr. Young spoke to a biology seminar on "The Big Engine that Could—Where Biomedical Science Is Going," a talk on biomedical ethics. He also spoke to a psychology class on futuristics. The title of his talk was "Where Will You Be Yesterday?"

MC Observes February Meetings Centennial

> So profound is the influence of the February Meetings on the moral and religious welfare of the College that it would be very hazardous indeed to intermit the series even for one year.
>
> The Annual meetings are as much a part of the annual program as are the holidays; and the authorities of the institution would be as apt to give up Commencement Week as to surrender the College Meetings as they are called.

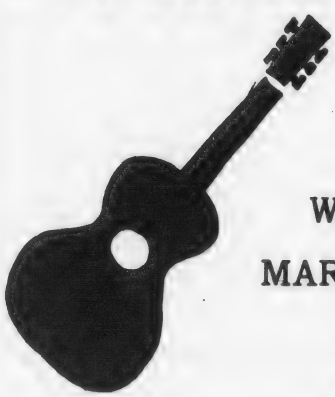
These sentiments of the President and Faculty of Maryville College in the early 1900's affirm that February Meetings have long been central in the College calendar and life. This year marks the hundredth year of this institution at Maryville College.

In 1877, when Dr. Nathan Bachman opened the first series of college revivals, "the footprints of the rebellion", as a then member of the student body reminisced, "were still visible." Only a decade had passed since Professor Lamar, after earnest endeavors, had succeeded in reopening the college on a new campus, the buildings of the old having been destroyed by the Civil War. General Sherman at one time occupied the campus. One early reporter indicated that it was to General Burnside, then encamped on the campus, that General Sherman sent a note, "Hold the Fort, I'm Coming", a phrase that was taken over into evangelistic hymnology and travelled the English-speaking world. It was only a little more than a decade since Lt. General Weaver of the Confederate Army had arranged his artillery on the ridge just back of the future site of Baldwin Hall and by throwing a few heavy shot over the courthouse dislodged a small union force and persuaded them to surrender. Anderson Hall was scarcely seven years past the laying of its corner stone; and, as President Wilson recalled, students could then jump over the cedars in the central campus, while much of the surrounding area was heavily forested.

In 1876, students arrived on the campus via horse, railroad or on foot. This year, none of these means of transportation is being used. As one would logically expect, the vehicle for delivering the religious spirit has also changed over the past century. As we observe our centennial this February, with the theme of Who Speaks For Man?, perhaps the question that we need to consider is: "Is the spirit of the meetings still as vital as before?"

Dr. Arda Walker

Attention!



All Sophomores and Juniors interested in Teacher-Education at any level.

The screening program for admission to and retention in the Teacher-Education Program for 1976 is beginning.

A meeting will be held on February 18, B hour in 201 Thaw. All sophomores and juniors MUST attend. Procedures will be discussed and forms distributed.

The hearing test, a part of the screening, for all sophomores and any juniors who did not complete this examination last year, will begin on February 9. A sign-up sheet and the appropriate forms will be posted on the door of Room 130 Sutton Hall. Students should go to Sutton, sign-up for a particular time, and take a form. This form should be returned, with the student section completed, at the time of the examination.

NORMAN BLAKE

WILSON CHAPEL
MARYVILLE COLLEGE

$2.00

FRIDAY FEB 6
8:00 PM

TICKETS AVAILABLE

MARYVILLE: MARYVILLE COLLEGE POST OFFICE
THE MARKET PLACE

KNOXVILLE: UT CENTRAL TICKET OFFICE

MC SPORTS

Last week was a good one for sports at Maryville College. The wrestling team placed second in a field of 11 institutions at the Mid-South Tournament in Murphreesboro, the mens' basketball team won its two games, and the Lady Scots won both of their basketball games.

Finishing second to only Southwest Louisiana at the Mid-South Tournament on the campus of Middle Tennessee State University, the Maryville grapplers placed eight people out of a total of nine who made the trip. This included three weight classification champions for 167-pound Wayne Dunn, 190-pound Bob Valentine, and heavyweight Bob Von Mitch. Dunn and Von Mitch successfully defended their titles from last season's Mid-South Tournament. Von Mitch won on a pin.

In other placings involving Maryville wrestlers, 177-pound Wayne Risko finished runner-up in his division. Ralph Melia took third at 134 pounds. Three fourth-place finishes were recorded by Gary DeAlmo at 126 pounds, Jay Hendershot at 142, and Carlos Perez in the 150-pound category.

Earlier in the week, the grapplers dropped a dissappointing 26-21 decision at Eastern Kentucky. The four Maryville victors included DeAlmo, Dunn, Valentine, and Von Mitch. The former two won by pinning their respective opponents.

The loss dropped the wrestling squad's season record to 6-7.

After sinking to a record of 2-6, Sharon Brown's Lady Scots rejuvenated themselves by winning their next three games in succession to stant at an improved 5-6.

The Lady Scots had a rather easy time of it against St. Mary's Nursing School of Knoxville on Saturday night at the gym. Freshman center Sharon Youngs was the scoring star as she contributed 20 points for the evening. 14 of those came in the first half. Lib by Lowry, normally a reserve, was inserted into the starting line-up and pumped in 14.

During the previous Thursday night, the Lady Scots defeated Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate by a score of 46-39. The women had a rather wide lead over their hosts that was cut to four points during the closing minutes of the contest. The Lady Scots held on to win, however, as Youngs lead the team in scoring again with 16 points.

The mens' basketball team had a real "barn-burner" at Emory and Henry College in Emory, Virginia on Saturday night. It took two overtime periods before the Scots escaped with a well-deserved 83-80 win over the Wasps.

This was the fourth victory in a row for the Scots as they improved their season record to 8-6.

Jeff Draper made good on two free-throws with 16 seconds remaining in the second overtime period to virtually sew the Scots' victory. For double measure, Mike Morton made Maryville's final basket with five seconds to go.

Kenny Talbott kept the Scots in the ballgame during the first overtime when he contributed a bucket with 12 seconds left that tied the score at 75-75 and forced the second overtime.

Randy Lambert, ranked 16th in the nation in scoring among NCAA-Division III players, lead all players in this contest with 28 points. Talbott contributed 20, while Ty Limbaugh had 18.

The Scots won another overtime game last Tuesday night at King College in Bristol by defeating the Tornado, 100-94. Trailing by seven at the half, the Scots came back in the second half to knot the situation and force the extra five-minute stanza. Lambert and Talbott lead the comeback effort as they scored 35 and 23 points respectively.

The men will be back in aciton tomorrow evening when they host Tusculum College beginning at approximately 7:45. It will be the nightcap of a basketball double-header at the gym that will feature the Lady Scots going against Chattanooga State in the opener at 5:45 p.m.

The women will be at home again on Tuesday night when they meet Bryan College starting at 7:30.

The wrestling team will conclude its home season this weekend. The grapplers host Georgetown College tonight beginning at 6:30. Their final home match will be tomorrow afternoon when they host Chattanooga State at 1:30.

MC Rip-Off Day II

Last Saturday about twenty students, faculty, and staff came down to the farm house to help out. Some of the jobs accomplished included taking the tin off the roof of one of the buildings, tearing out the ceiling in the upstairs rooms, removing sheet rock, pulling nails, and sorting through old magazines and letters found in the house. Most of the wood and the tin will be salvaged for an auction to earn money for the reconstruction of the house on the college campus.

Although participation was good last week, we need a lot more people down there if we are to ever move the house. The faculty and the administration feel this should be primarily a student project, so let's show them we can carry through on this. If anyone has any questions about this project or would like to donate any tools please contact either Dr. Nichols or Suzanne Phillips. See you down at the farm house any time after 9:00 a.m. Saturday.

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

GUIDE TO MONEY FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

Guide to more than 250,000 Scholarships and Financial Aid Source — items valued at over $500 million dollars.

Contains the most up-to-date information on:

Scholarships, grants, aids, fellowships, loans, work-study programs, cooperative education programs, and summer job opportunities; for study at colleges, vocational and technical schools, paraprofessional training, community or two-year colleges, graduate schools, and post-graduate study or research; funded on national, regional, and local levels by the federal government, states, cities, foundations, corporations, trade unions, professional associations, fraternal organizations, and minority organizations. Money is available for both average as well as excellent students, both with and without need.

BENNETT PUBLISHING CO.
Dept. 214, 102 Charles Street, Boston, Mass. 02114.
Please rush me ____ copies of GUIDE TO MONEY FOR HIGHER EDUCATION at $5.95 plus 50c for postage and handling for each copy.
I am enclosing $ ____ (check or money order).

Name _____
Adddress _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

© Copyright 1976 Bennett Publishing Co.

102 W. Broadway
983-9220

A Community Of Small Stops in Downtown Maryville At 102 Broadway.

NOW OPEN

- ★ The Acoustic Music Shop
- ★ Greenleaf Fancy
- ★ Rams Arcade

OPENING SOON

- ★ Danrich Photography
- ★ The Golden Carrot
- ★ Bluegrass Coffee Shop
- ★ Blue Goose Gifts
- ★ Wacky Tobacy (Tobacco Stop)
- ★ Others to open in future

Bluegrass Jam Every Saturday Night

Hours: 10-9 Mon. - Sat.
Sun. 1-9. Closed Wed.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 14 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | February 13, 1976

MC Rip-Off Day II

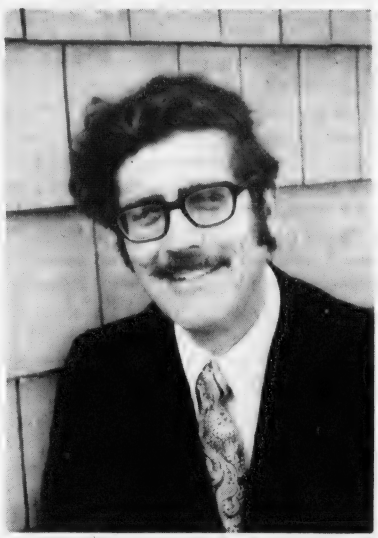
Last year Maryville College sold the property on whic h the MC farm house is located. It was purchased by Blount County for construction of a health center. The farm house has been part of our campus for most of its existence. It is an estimated 150 years old, and some speculation has been made that it is actually closer to 200 years old.

After the sale, Suzanne Phillips, president of the ACC, and Dr. McNeil, a member of our History Department, found a shared concern over the fate of the farm house. Together with Dr. Nichols they began a movement to save the house. They were granted permission to try to preserve it, with the stipulation that an organization be responsible for it and that it cost the college no money.

To begin the rescue, a chapter of the Tennesseeanthropology Association was formed. Then, armed with a $50 grant from the UT anthropological department and a desire to save the house, Ms. Phillips, Dr. McNeil and Dr. Nichols began to organize the plans for the actual work involved.

It was determined that the house would have to be torn down and then moved to another location. The individual pieces would be labeled and photographed in place, with reconstruction taking place on a designated plot in the college woods.

A little over two weeks ago the first steps were taken to dismantle the building—this was MC Rip-off Day. The idea was to salvage any usable materials for an auction to be held later for financial support of the movement. Also, the house was searched for any historical evidence that would give clues as to its age and about its former occupants.



A lot of useful material was removed, including tin roofing, bathroom fixtures and an old desk. However, the job required still more work—and so a second Rip-off Day was held last week. This last rip-off yielded a lot of useful wood and partial removal of the porch was accomplished.

This has been a student—oriented project and requires volunteer help from students. The college itself cannot provide anything except land for the reconstruction of the house. Dr. Nichols stated that the project had "virtually no funds" and that volunteer help is the only kind that can be used.

This undertaking has need of a variety of student skills. Help is needed to write a history of the house, to aid in the archeological work in aad around the house, and lastly (but most important) in the physical labor involved. There is even a plan to have a course involving work on the project.

In any event, help is needed nowfor the dismantling and study of the structure. It is an excellent opportunity to get outdoors and work with both students and faculty for a common goal. Volunteers can see Dr. Nichols (in SSC) or Suzanne Phillips if they wish to help. Or, if they can simply show up on Saturday at 9:00 a.m. at the farm house.

Henry, Trible To Present Program

Dr. Patrick Henry is Associate Professor of Religion and co-ordinator of Medieval Studies at Swarthmore College. He holds a B.A. in history and literature of England from Harvard University, a B.A. and M.A. in theology from Oxford University and a Ph.D. in history of Christianity from Yale University. He has held a Marshall Scholarship, Kent Fellowship, and a National Endowment for the Hunamities Younger Humanists summer stipend. He is currently on leave from Swarthmore as a Fellow of the Institute for Ecumenical and Cultural Research, Collegeville, Minnesota.

Dr. Phyllis Trible is Professor of Old Testament at Andover Newton Theological School. She holds a B.A. from Meredith College and a Ph.D. from Union Seminary and Columbia University. She has taught at Wake Forest University, Seinan Gakuin University, University of Virginia and has been a research associate at W. F. Albright Institute of Archaeological Research, Jerusalem. In 1974-75 she was awarded a Younger Humanist Fellowship by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

February Meetings Vespers
CIV Credit (Chapel)
Dr. Phyllis Trible and Dr. Patrick Henry

New Ideas Proposed For CIV

Student input generated by the recent CIV questionnaire as well as by conversations with individual Committee members will be an enormous help in formulating the CIV schedule for 1976-77, according to a Committee spokesman.

Suggestions for future programs included: having more student-originated programs, such as debates and panel discussions, presentations of selected special studies topics, or student recitals; a travelog program from the Kiwanis; a fine arts "potpourri"; an energy symposium; trouble-shooting of cars; devil cults; ceramics; Blue Grass music; and any topic currently in the news.

Other ideas for progrfam topics are: to have more films; to stage musical and theatrical productions; to attend off-campus art and cultural exhibitions; to sponsor a "Sound Off" program where students can say what's on their minds; and to have faculty members present skits.

Among those suggested as possible program participants

continued page 3

WILL WE OR WON'T WE?

The issue is the same year after year, yet it seems to keep itself cleverly hidden under less important, but more obverse problems. One of its more favorite hiding places seems to reappear each year on a regular schedule. Recently another group of concerned students began to circulate another petition involving everyone's favorite controversy: alcohol. Now before all the, "Well, here we go agains" begin, let me continue. Of course there was the usual flurry of enthusiasm and, "student support," by the signing of names. And almost certainly will the petitions fill. But I'm afraid that's as far as it will go for far too many. Between the people who are only too eager to sign and then watch, and the rest who are satisfied with the Let-things-slide-technique, I seriously doubt if any issue can be resolved in any length of time. Whether we're discussing student's rights, or a change in curriculum, it takes a united group of people acting in a responsible manner to initiate any kind of structural change. First we must throw aside the idea that everytime we make a proposal it will be rejected. And although the tendency toward any sort of change in policy at Maryville seems to be slow, that should only serve as impetus for a stronger, more organized presentation of ideas. It takes a definite stand and not a wishy-washy "I guess so." As far as the issues go, our own lack of cooperation can be our worst enemy. As long as anyone retains a defeatist attitude, he can expect to get very little if anything done. I'm afraid that as long as the administrators insist on running things from the inside of Anderson looking out, and the student body would rather not get too involved, these stalemates will continue. The problem does not lie in any lack of means, the proper channels are there, they always have been. The question is not can we or can't we, but rather will we or won't we?

Doug Taylor

Letters to the Echo

Dear Sir:

This is in response to the report concerning intercollegiate athletics at Maryville which Mr. Brahams presented to the ACC on the 4th of this month. The report proposed various guidelines for all sports which I feel are, in some cases, particularly football, too restrictive. The investigation recommended that intercollegiate football submit to: 1) a forty—four man player limit; 2(a reduction of the present schedule to eight games; 3) a cutback in recruiting efforts; 4) the payment of only two coaches.

While these proposals were submitted with the intention of curbing Maryville's financial burdens I fail to see how these can possibly bring about any result other than further monetary difficulty. My reasoning supporting this thesis is that continued abuse of athletics, especially football, will in turn reduce enrollment, the prime source of income, because the intercollegiate sports programs will gradually become substandard and be of little value in recruiting prospective student —athletics.

To sustain this argument I conducted a survey among most present and former football players enrolled in school. This poll posed the question: "Would you have attended Maryville College if there had not been a football program?" Out of 96 athletes interviewed, 85.4½ responded with a very demonstrative "NO" and most added that they came to school with football being the motivating factor, not the acedemic life. This poll is very indicative of the general consensus among all athletes toward his or her prespective sport. It clearly illustrates, as much as many administrators and faculty mem bers will hate to admit and probably will not, that students do attend school for athletics as much as, yet probably more than, academics.

If athletics serve as such a major "drawing card," how can this institution continue to degrade them? Prospective student—athletes will look elsewhere once they discover that Maryville College has little regard for intercollegiate sports and offers them to more or less round out their concept of liberal arts education. These students will not be searching for an athletic Utopia, they will simply seek a school which offers the best in a small college athletic program and that is something which this institution is capable of providing.

The administration and faculty can help correct the various problems confronting Maryville College. However, continued cutbacks and general abuse of athletics is not the answer; thus, current policies must undergo radical reorganization.

Sincerely,
Keith Goodwin

P.S.-The list of those polled is available for all interested persons. Contact Box 2350.

Sssh! Quiet. Library
Rrrring...rrring...rri—"Hello.
Do we have what? No, that paragraph of that page of that volume of that magazine has been torn out. Good bye."
Sssh! Quiet. Library.
Bang, bong, crash—jangle
Thump thump thump
Creeeaakk—thud!
Do the radiator boogie.
Ssh! Quiet. Library.
"Ma'm, where would I find the magazine Mod—" "I'm sorry, try UT library."

As the Maryville College student attempts to research and write his reports and papers, he is met with extremely adverse conditions in our library. The atmosphere is not the most conductive to quiet study and reading; the phone rings every few minutes, the conversations (heard by all) last longer, the radiator pipes clang and thud endlessly, and private conversations are broadcast for all to hear.

I realize that being a smaller school we do have some limitations and a short supply of funds. But would it be possible to put a mechanical device on the phone to soften the tone, or move it to a more private area of the library? Could the radiators be examined to determine the cause of their cacophony?and Last, but not at all least, could there be some sort of re—evaluation of present research materials, books and periodicals to determine the present student needs? Could this be done departmentally?

Hopefully, these comments and suggestions will be noticed and acted upon to make our library a better place for study and research.

Kit Williamson

Happy Valentine's Day from the Echo!

Experience Maryville

Dwell with me for a minute if you will on a little conceptual trip through Maryville. I've been partly aware lately of this experience we are a part of, sometimes referred to as "those college years... or the good old days." It's thought by some that those "good old days" weren't as great as they were made out to be ...

And then there was the college student who upon receiving his diploma was heard to exclaim, "boy, I wish I could do that again or, man am I glad that's over with!"

Stop what you're doing and think about your "experience" through Maryville. Let's not wait until February meetings to find out too late who speaks for man. Come out and join us in the addition of a new experience at Maryville.

A number of people interested in doing something are holding a Coffee House this Friday night from 8-10. There will be a variety of activities including live music, card games, short movies, hopefully some surprises, and coffee and tea of course. Bring yourself and any games or other ideas you might have.

We encourage everyone to come and have a good time. Oh, I almost forgot. Lloyd basement's the place, It's too bad good things have to start out in obscure settings. We shall overcome once again. After all, that's what the Maryville experience is really all about.

J. Frederick Frost

A Dean's Eye View

It is February again, which usually means the worst of times on college campuses. The weather is uncooperative, spring vacation is far in the future, and seniors begin to haunt the post office looking for letters from graduate schools, not sure when they do come whether they dare open them.

But this February the seniors I have talked with are more relaxed and optimistic, in spite of the gloomy economic outlook. Fewer seem to be going directly to graduate school. More are exploring the job market, confident that they will find something to do. Perhaps the confidence may be attributed to the help they are receiving from the Career Planning and Placement Office in writing resumes and letters of application and going through simulated interviews. As one senior remarked, "It's great to know hoe to go about it and to realize what the possibilities are."

Perhaps also Maryville seniors are reflecting a nationwide shift in attitude toward jobs. In an article in the current Change, entitled "Educating for Underemployment," Francis D. Fisher, directgor of the Harvard Office of Career Services, points out that college seniors no longer expect to enter a career immediately upon graduation.

"Partly this is a sensible reaction to the job market," he says; "partly it is because such a commitment would for many be inconsistent with a timetable allowing for additional schooling, travel, or a taste of several different kinds of work before settling down. The situation of the underemployed college graduate should be viewed as a natural, and probably a desirable, phenomenon."

We are reminded that in the future underemployment will be endemic. Fisher concludes: "As educators review their tasks, it will become apparent that most workers will need three kinds of learning: a tangible skill for what it is hoped will be the short-term job of relatively menial character, the broad educational underpinnings for variety of eventually challenging work, and the capacity to fulfill oneself apart from the job."

What better argument for a broad liberal arts base, some attention to education for leisure, with specific skills gained on the job?

Carolyn Blair

What are we going to do with all these rotting fish?, A play by Richard Udahl will be presented Friday, February 13, at 8:15 p.m. ...Rotting Fish?

Trial Editor: Doug Taylor Staff: David Brown, Pat Hurley, Debbie Fields, Joel Cannon, Carl Reardon, Lee Struble, R. C. Stevens, Bob Boone, Will Way, Fred Stohl, Charlie Blair.

continued from page 1

A Summer Experience Abroad

Have you ever dreamed of studying and traveling abroad? For years I had hopes of someday going abroad, not merely as a tourist, but as an experience to encounter other cultures by actually taking part in the lifestyles of other peoples.

This past summer provided me with such an opportunity. Through the American Institute for Foreign Study, I was able to travel both on an organized tour through a few continental countries, hitting high spots such as Paris, Brussels, and Amsterdam, as well as to venture on my own through Scotland and England.

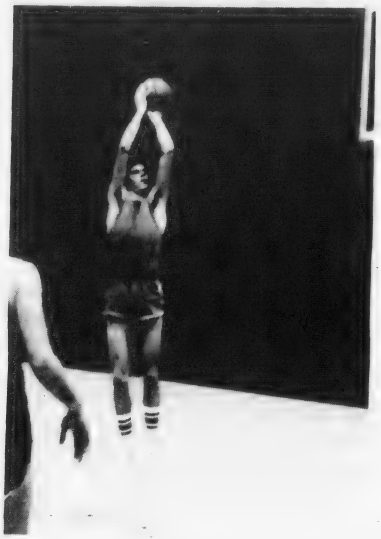
While traveling I realized how much we Americans have which we take for granted, such as free drinking water, available only for a price in Europe. Although I missed many of our American conveniences, I found it meaningful to adapt to the new situations, leaving the U.S.A. behind for a few months.

Summer school began after my initial tour. For the first term, I chose two courses at the University of London (Birkbeck College). Both were taught by British professors, or "tutors". Though the United Kingdom education system is set up quiet differently, the classes resembled those of ours involving lectures and discussions.The tutors were helpful to American students, offering tips on where to go and how to get there. Discussions were usually held over "tea" in the refectory.

For the second term, I participated in an Outward Bound course in Aberdeen, Scotland, called "City Challenge". This was my most meaningful experience, for I worked with other students from the United Kingdom in various work situations such as psychiatric and geriatric hospitals, homes for unwed mothers and distrubed children, alcoholic shelters, and other community services.

These students as well as people I met in the actual work situations helped me understand the varied accents, taught me their "slangs", and made me feel at home with their graciousness and generosity. It is different being a foreigner for a change.!

I cannot express the impact my summer abroad has had on my education and on me as a person, but will always hold these meaningful experiences with me. I do want to encourage anyone why has the ambition and the interest in a broadening experience to consider seriously study abroad. A.I.F.S. and many other organizations have many program offerings in various countries through which college credit may be obtained. I am certainly thankful to Dean Blair for her interest and encouragement to pursue what at one time was a dream and is now a memorable experience. There are many possibilities for you, too.



Amy Wynn Lancaster

were: Senators Baker and Brock of Tennessee; Hank Aaron; the "Happy Hooker"; Dan Whitesides; any Presidential hopefuls who might be in the area; a football coach from a major university; a park ranger from the Smokies; and spokesmen representing the Circle K and Afro-American Club organizations.

If you have any other suggestions for progrfam topics and/or people to present such a program, in addition to those listed above, please give them to Dr. Robert Naylor, Room 229 SSC, or Box 2812. "The Committee appreciates the effort that many students made in presenting their thoughts. Any other comments will also be most welcome," Dr. Naylor said.

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

MC SPORTS

Randy Lambert zeroed in for 18 points Saturday night against Tusculum. The Scotty center ranks 16th in the nation in scoring among NCAA-Division 111 players.

The Maryville College mens' basketball team suffered two losses last week as their season record dropped to the .500 mark at 8-8. The Lady Scots basketball team had a better week as they won one and lost one.

The nightcap of a basketball doubleheader at the gym on Saturday night saw the men suffer their most disappointing loss of the season so far as they dropped a 75-73 decision to Tusculum College. Tusculum guard Steve King tipped in a rebound just a split second before the final buzzer to give the Pioneers their two point margin of victory.

It was a humiliating loss for the Scots considering that they enjoyed a seemingly comfortable 18 point lead early in the second half, 48-30. The Pioneers began to get accurate shooting and moved their way back into contention before evening the score at 73-73 with 1:05 left to play. That set the stage for King's winning basket as time ran out.

Maryville's leading scorers were Randy Lambert and Kenny Talbott who each had 18 points. Mike Morton contributed 16 and Jeff Draper had 12.

The men had earlier dropped a close 81-79 decision to Covenant College on Thursday night at the gym. The visitors got their winning points from Dave Raih who made two free-throws in the closing seconds. Lambert leads all scorers with 29 points, while Talbott had 17 and Draper 12.

Thursday evening's mens' game followed the Lady Scots 69-50 to Hiwassee College. The Tigerettes, one of the toughest women's collegiate teams in Tennessee, dominated most of the contest. Still, Lady Scot Coach Sharon Brown seemed pleased by the effort her girls made. Pam Patton lead the home team in scoring with 13 points followed by Chris Curran's 12 and Terrie Topham's 11.

It was a better story for the Lady Scots on Saturday night as they triumphed in the first game of the doubleheader by defeating Chattanooga State, 69-43. Directly opposite to the case of Thursday night, the Lady Scots dominated this game most of the way. The only time that Chattanooga State enjoyed any kind of lead came during the opening minutes when they jumped out in front, 6-2. After that, it was clear sailing for the Lady Scots the rest of the way.

In the course of the victory, which brought the Lady Scots season record to 6-7, Sharon Youngs was the top scorer with 22 points. Libby Lowry added 12 followed by Curran's 11 and 10 by Patton.

February 26, 1976

Knoxville Civic Coliseum
Knoxville, Tennessee —
Marshal Tucker
Elvin Bishop
Outlaws

What Are All Those Wrestlers Doing?

by Lee Struble

The Maryville College '75-'76 Wrestling team comes off of two strong performances last week-end with high hopes of returning this week-end from the SEIWA Championships in Chattanooga with a few championships under their belt. The last time Maryville College had a SEIWA was back in 1971. Coach Don Elia stated that even with the stiff competition of the SEIWA, he still had alot of confidence in his upper weight classes which have proven to be very dependable throughout the course of the season.

Friday and Saturday of last week MC soundly defeated Georgetown University (31-11) and Chattanooga State (40-6). Ralph Melia was credited with two pins as Joe Arvidson scored a pin and a decision in the lower weight classes. In the upper weight classes Wayne Risko received a decision and a pin as Bob Valentine also scored a pin in his only outing. These two wins boost MC's record over the .500 mark with a 8-7 record.

Five Maryville wrestlers have already qualified for the Nationals by way of fine performances in the Mid-Southern Championships held in late January. The five qualifiers include Ralph Melia as well as all four of the upper weight classes with Wayne Dunn, Wayne Risko, Bob Valentine and Bob von-Mitch. Bob Valentine boost the best overall season record with an 18-1 mark as Wayne Dunn (16-2) and Bob vonMitch (16-3) are also having fine years.

Coach Elia expressed his concern for the depth on this years' squad. He blames this on the new NCAA ruling which established a 12 man limit on the traveling squad. This ruling caused many good young prospects to drop wrestling because they felt they had little chance to participate due to this new ruling. Coach Elia is optimistic, however, about next year as he stated that recruiting has been very successful to date as he expects an unusually high caliber of academically strong wrestlers to enter in the fall.

A little note of interest on the side:

The MC wrestlers this year have had to go it alone most of the season due to a lack of interest on the MC campuses' part. This is evident in the poor attendance and lack of support that has plagued our grapplers all season. However, I have some inside info that our wrestlers are more successful abroad than they seem to be on the home front. What I mean by this is that I heard that there are some gals in Georgetown who seem to enjoy our wrestlers' moves off the mat as well as on the mat. In fact, the new influx of mail from Kentucky has so completely snowed down our under-staffed post office and filled the mail boxes of B. Valentine and W. Risko that it's no wonder I've been receiving my letters two or three days late. Some guys have all the luck.

E-Z CURB
8-11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

Drewery's	12-OZ.		$1.69
Pabst	12-OZ.		$2.02
Miller "Ponies"	7-OZ.	8 Per Pk.	$2.03

Picnic Supplies
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
8 - MIDNIGHT

GUIDE TO MONEY FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

Guide to more than 250,000 Scholarships and Financial Aid Source — items valued at over $500 million dollars.

Contains the most up-to-date information on:

Scholarships, grants, aids, fellowships, loans, work-study programs, cooperative education programs, and summer job opportunities; for study at colleges, vocational and technical schools, paraprofessional training, community or two-year colleges, graduate schools, and post-graduate study or research; funded on national, regional, and local levels by the federal government, states, cities, foundations, corporations, trade unions, professional associations, fraternal organizations, and minority organizations. Money is available for both average as well as excellent students, both with and without need.

BENNETT PUBLISHING CO.
Dept. 214, 102 Charles Street, Boston, Mass. 02114.
Please rush me ____ copies of GUIDE TO MONEY FOR HIGHER EDUCATION at $5.95 plus 50c for postage and handling for each copy.
I am enclosing $ _____ (check or money order).
Name _____
Adddress _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
© Copyright 1976 Bennett Publishing Co.

THE HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 15 | Maryville College | February 20, 1976

MC orators at the top

Two Maryville College seniors ranked among the top collegiate public speakers in Tennessee at the recent Tennessee Intercollegiate Forensics Association Tournament held at Middle Tennessee State University in Murfreesboro. Milton Bush, of Washington, DC, placed fourth in persuasive speaking competition. Michael Johnston, of Huntsville, Al, finished fourth in the after-dinner speaking category.

Mr. Bush, speaking on the need for a redirection of higher education, focused on the purpose of a higher education as personal enrichment rather than job security. He called for a shift in academic values to encourage the "emancipation of the individual and the world for their supreme recognition of human capabilities."

Mr. Johnston, to point out the absurdity of the commercialization of the bicentennial, suggested that this commercialization be put to use to solve present social problems. He expounded on the possibilities of combining "good old-American ingenuity with the B-U-Y-centennial spirit."

Mr. Bush and Mr. Johnston competed against the top speakers from thirteen other Tennessee colleges and universities. Their high placement marks one of the best tournament showings the Maryville College Forensics Team has had in recent years. Mr. Blair Beasley, sponsor of the MC Forum for Speech and Debate, remarked that he was "very happy with our overall performance." Members of the Forum noted that Mr. Beasley has been the driving force behind the Forensics Team's growth and successes in the past four years.

ECKANKAR

At 7:00 p.m. on February 20 a lecture will be given in SSC on ECKANKAR and the Ancient Science of Soul Travel covering such topics as consciousness expansion without drugs, the immortality of SOUL, and spiritual freedom here and now. ECKANKAR is not a yoga, meditation or hypnosis. It is simply a direct way to Self and God Realization in this lifetime. "The weakness of the human consciousness is that we do not realize that we make our own laws or considerations, but generally we follow out what somebody else, or a society, gas given us. The root of all success, be it spiritual or material, is this: we make our own laws and follow them out, and if anything goes wrong, then we are to blame ourselves and nobody else."
Paul Twitchell

BSA presents program

The month of February has been designated as "Black History Month" in the US as part of the nation's observance of its 200th anniversary. Maryville's Black Student Association has accordingly planned several programs that will focus on the history of Black Americans.

Beginning at 7:00 p.m. February 24, in the Experimental Theatre, the "Poetry of Black America" will be read by several of the black students on campus. On February 25 at 7:30 p.m. BSA President Emerson Henderson will lead a discussion on "The Black Student and Maryville College." The discussion will be held in the Black Cultural Center and will focus on the peculiar problems of black students at Maryville.

To climax the week's activities, a special program of song, poetry, and prose tracing the history of Black Americans, will be presented on February 26 at 8:00 p.m. in the Experimental Theatre. The entire campus is invited to participate in these functions.

Thirty inducted into Society

Thirty women students were initiated as charter members of the Maryville College chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta, national honor society for freshman women Friday evening at the college. Maryville is the 189th chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta.

The college has had a Freshman Women Honor Society for two years but has not until now been a member of the national group.

Initiated as honorary members were Dr. Carolyn Blair, academic dean; E. Frances Massey, dean of students; Dr. Kathryn Nelson, chairman of the sociology department; and Dr. Arda S. Walker , chairman of the history department.

Faculty adviser for the group is Dr. Elizabeth Fowler of the English department. She was a charter member of the society as a student at Birmingham Southern College.

Officers of the chapter are: Donna Baines, president; Jean Shultz, vice president; Linda Stritter, secretary; Deborah Burton, treasurer; Margaret Maher, historian; Cynthia Mantey Stockdale, editor; and Lisa Wilson, junior adviser.

Saturday night at the gym

Another Saturday night and you have nothing to do? The gym is open now on Saturday nights from 8:00 to 10:00 p.m., or 9:00 to 11:00 p.m. after home basketball games. Swimming pool hours are from 8:00 to 10:00 p.m., regardless of ball games.

Fund drive proceeds

More than $90,000 in gifts has been pledged in the first two weeks of the Maryville College Community Campaign, a 42 percent increase over this time last year. Goal for the community campaign is $120,000.

Administrative Vice President Neil McDade said the college needs a total of $420,000 in gifts this year to balance the $3 million budget. He explained that the college's income includes approximately $2 million from students, $250,000 from the government, and $150,000 from the endowment. The college depends on gifts from alumni and friends for the remainder.

McDade said more than half the students receive some financial assistance, an average of $600 per student. This means that $130,000 for student aid is not covered by endowment or government funds and must come from the current budget.

He said due to inflation, there will probably be an average tuition increase of $150 a year. But for every $150 increase, the college will have to provide an additional average of $30 per student for scholarship aid.

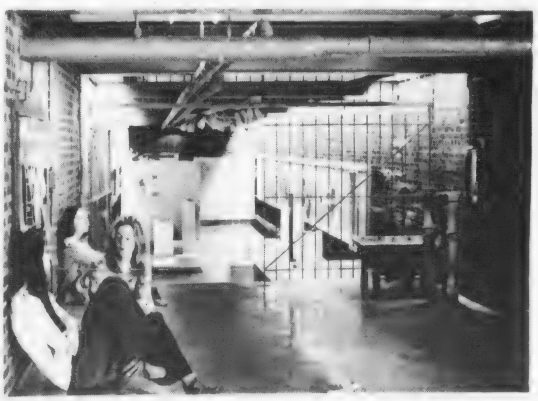
McDade said there has been a gap between income and expenditures of $100,000 to $250,000 for the past several years, but the college is doing its part with internal economies and intends to go into the next year on a completely balanced budget.

"Happiness" presented tonight

"Pursuit of Happiness," a romantic comedy about the quaint old New England custom of bundling, will be presented at the Maryville College Theatre Friday and Saturday, February 20-21, at 8:15 p.m.

The comedy by Lawrence Langer is the Speech-Theatre Department's salute to the Bicentennial according to director Thomas E. Jones, head of the department.

Sally Smith and John Morton will play the lead roles of Prudence and Max. Prudence is the innocent young daughter of once-bundled Connecticut parents, and Max is the young Hessian who falls hopelessly in love with her. This causes all the conflicts and thus all the laughs.



The parents are played by Ruth Cartlidge and Don Tosh. Others in the cast are Heidi Parunak, Joe Carnevale, Ed Fort, Cliff McKennett, Carl Swenson, Phil Derpilbosian.

RuthAnn Wilbanks is assisting Mr. Jones. Others in the production crew are Belinda Chiddie, stage manager; Martha Mainous, set designer; Leland Blackwood, Charlie Blair, Robin Dillingham, Cynthia Evans, Pat Hines, Sally Smith, Don Tosh, Ruth Cartlidge, and Heidi Parunak, costume construction.

Murane-Paris Recital

Two Maryville College students will present their Junior Recital in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall on Tuesday evening, February 24, at 7:00 P.M.

Carol Paris, a junior piano major from Owensboro, Kentucky, is currently studying under Sallie Schoen. She has been a winner of the Philip Steele Award as well as rising class scholarships in piano. She is also a member of Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women, and Tau Kappa Chi, Honorary Music Society at Maryville College. In addition to performing Beethoven's "Waldstein" Sonata, Op. 53, and a Chopin Ballade in g minor, Op. 23, Miss Paris will also accompany mezzo-soprano Cindy Murane, a junior from Hickam AFB, Hawaii. Miss Murane, currently studying under Dr. Dan Kinsinger, has demonstrated her talents to the college community as a Messiah soloist. Also a winner of the Philip Steele Award, she is an officer of Delta Omicron and member of Tau Kappa Chi. In addition to performing operatic selections, including Lola's Ditty from Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana and Marguarits's Song from Boito's Mefistofele, Miss Murane will also sing a recitative and aria from Bach's Kantata No. 51 and four of Mignon's Songs from Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister" by Schumann. She will be assisted by organist David Adcock.

25th anniversary for FAC

see page 3

Feb Meetings debate

Is it worth it?

February Meetings '76—success or failure? Perhaps the deciding factor lies in what one was hoping to find.

If one entered into February Meetings expecting answers to the query of "who speaks for man," a disappointment was in store. The almost uniform opening line for the seminars seemed to be "Now I don't have the answer. . ." To those who took the Meetings sub-title, "Can any Person, Nation or Religion Speak for Man?", as a simple yes or no question, it may have come as a shock that their input was also expected.

But were the students completely to blame for the apparent general lack of enthusiasm? One finds that hard to believe. Some seminars did seem to portray a lack of planning or deep thought on the part of the faculty leaders. One student expressed the view that he felt one seminar was a complete waste of time.

Time also was the deciding factor of whether or not to even attend any of the seminars. One student explained her abscence from the meetings because of three major tests during the week. Although continuation of classes does seem advisable due to past experience, it would appear that most major tests and assignments could wait a week.

No matter how one looks at it, the question is bound to arise,"Are February meetings relevant?". That question leads to another, "Is a 100 year tradition a good enough reason to continue February Meetings?" When the general response of students ranges from "My only response is sleepiness," to "I could care less," I believe the time has arrived for reevaluation.

Karen Amos

Probably

Each year at this time Maryville College goes through a period it calls "February Meetings." Despite the grumblings of my fellow students, I perhaps see a glimmer of academic vitality in our yearly excursion into neo-renaissance.

In their original form the meetings were designed as evangelical worship services. They have developed into a forum for the discussion of relevant issues that confront all of us as human beings. This discussion is important to an academic community if it is to remain alive and viable. Without exchanging views academic stagnation sets in and with that stagnation, the question of justification of existence. February Meetings, CIV, and Interim, if handled properly, all provide opportunity for this type of debate. Fresh ideas brought by outsiders bring stimulation and thought provoking questions that mean the very life of a college. This year, February Meetings have raised these questions.

The basic premise, for me, is that these meetings are both worthwhile and valuable. The complaint that exists, however, is perhaps justified; like everything else, not all is perfect. I, for one, question the validity of the "Presbyterian revival." Why place academic inquiry under the roof of worship when it is really not meant by the community as a whole? To me, the whole concept of worship should be one of spontaneity and honesty, not stiffling and confining as we have made it. The truth is that worship that is too formal and confining turns me off, as it does with many others. Why surround something that is alive with a dead shell from the past?

February Meetings then have wandered from the world of the secular to the world of the profane, although that realization is not universal. They exist as a vehicle for scholastic excellence, or at least scholastic inquiry. This year the level of scholarship was excellent both in terms of speakers and seminars. Again, another valid complaint raises its head.

As a student, I am opposed to anyone telling me what is academically good for me. Moreover, I take the well of scholarship to be one that is taken from freely; to force feed from that well apalls me to no end. The whole concept of offering CIV credit is seen as a method of force feeding. This giveaway of credit, in exchange for nothing, has a habit of attracting the insincere and dis-interested. That, to me, defeats good scholarship. By imposing any type of a credit requirement, big brother is intruding on my academic freedom.

I see February Meetings then as a prospective area of academic inquiry and discussion. We need to divorce it from its religious connotations and silly credit impositions and make it the credible means of expression that it should be.

Ed Loper

P.G. Evergreen & Sun

"An American Way of Life" Excerpt from Fireside Short Stories for the Young and Old.

Victor and Vera Void reside in a humble little frame house in a Baltimore suburban district. As the clock strikes 8, Victor sets down his empty decaffinated coffee cup after a well balanced breakfast with a menu complete with all minimum daily vitamin requirements.

Their children, Virgil and Victoria pick up their respective lunch boxes and shuffle out the door to the bus stop.

"Bye Mom, Bye Dad"

"Bye Mom, Bye Dad"

"Bye Kids - Good Bye Dear"

With a swift peck on the cheek, Victor opens the garage door and steps into his shoulder harness of his beige Dodge Dart. Observing the "Children at Play" sign he slips the car into reverse and heads for Lacey's Dept. store where he is employed as a safety pipe fitter.

As Vera awaits her phone call from the local Garden Club Chapter, she eagerly prunes her Petunias and hybrid geramiums for the Club flower show. She has a good chance at winning, but if not, there's always next year.

****

Did Virgil brush his teeth?

Did Vera put "Ding-dongs" in both lunch pails?

Has Victor had an auto safety check lately?

Would spaghetti be a nutritious dinner?

Can geraniums be grafted after all?

Ps. The answer to these questions and more in our next fast-moving episode of . . . . "Perfect Everything" or "V is for Void."

staff

Tim Rahn—Trial Editor, Ed Loper, Ruth Wilbanks, Karen Amos, Trippy Banner, Lisa Wilson, Mike Johnston, Fred Strohl, Typist—Kathy Lane, Photos— Joe Showalter.

Chosen in good faith

ACC and the terminal farce

Anyone following the recent ACC debate on the IPC Calender Proposal will recognise that two particular questions need to be raised.

The first concerns the ability of the council to act within the realm of "representative goverment." It is in this concept that a specific object lesson can be shown. A lesson pointing towards the ability of the student representatives to serve within the capacity of representatives. It is in the rallying cry of the student representatives, "We need to know these things," that we can begin to see the beginning of this point. It was also this cry that led to the endless, seemingly terminal farce of the whole issue.

As I am to understand representative government, the representatives are elected "in good faith" by their constituents that they may act accordingly without constant communication. In the case of the Calender Proposal, the representatives saw that their job was to seek and feel every pulse and throb of every student in an attempt to represent them. In effect this defeated their role as representatives. (Chosen to act in good faith, remember?) The paradox rests that in the attempt to represent the students, the representatives turned about as if they were second guessing the faith the students had expressed in choosing them—representatives are choosen to represent not to conduct opinion polls.

Furthermore, it may be added that the ACC meetings are open thus allowing anyone to come and voice concerns on council matters. Therefore, the Town Hall Meeting in this situation was unneeded. Essentially this and the other events leading up to the final decision to nix the proposal had the appearance of a soap opera: the same faces, same numbers, and same arguements were burbled and reburbled until everyone was blue in the face.

The second point to some extent negates all the aforementioned hulabuloo. Here we must assume that the council did act in the interests of all concerned. Then, if we are interpreting the Council, we must conclude that it is saying the Interim is and will be an academically viable program. This is the way they heard the students, "We are willing to see that the Interim time remains or becomes academically viable." This may have been the voice of students attending the meetings, however, as Interim exists now (and is to be as maintained by vote of the council) it is for the most part the perpetration of an academic namby-pamby-ism and complacency. Interim may work for some, but as a whole it is merely a play-time or break from intellectual rigors.

Where does all this point? Right back to the student. No longer can the motivation come from the faculty or administration. If the interim program is to exist it should and must be perpetuated by the student who has asked that this time remain in the best interests of academics.

Tim Rahn

FAC offers timelessness and integrity

By Tim Rahn

The buildings of an institution, such as Maryville College, are a unique feature, for they alone stand essentially changeless in the face of their transient occupants. Mute, they offer unusual glimpses into times and memories that are for the most part carried away.

One such building on the College campus which itself has "stories to tell" is the Fine Arts Center, known to most as the FAC. For a change, however, it is the story of the building itself that is more outstanding, especially as it completes its 25th year of academic operation.

The conception of the Fine Arts Center in theory no doubt began somewhere in the post war rush of WWII when the fine arts (mainly music and some art) were located in the crowded confines of the basement of the Elizabeth Voorhees Chapel. This area was soon swept away in the fire that destroyed the Chapel in 1947. However, a gift was made to Maryville College by Mr. and Mrs. Glen A. Lloyd of Chicago which provided for a separate building for the fine arts. (Lloyd was the brother of the college president at the time, Ralph Waldo Lloyd.) This building was to be a memorial to the Glen Lloyd's deceased daughter.

Architects from the Knoxville area were asked to come up with plans for the building. Their designs and drawings provided for a Georgian style that went along with the established architectural style of the campus. Mrs. Glen Lloyd, after seeing these first plans, asked if she might consult some friends in Chicago about designing the structure. These friends, the architects Schweikher and Elting, agreed and were hired to design the center.

Before they began planning the building, Schweikher and Elting, first came to the college to look over the building site. It was also in their predesign plans to consult the occupants--mainly faculty--as to their concepts of a fine arts center. From this, Schweikher and Elting were able to interpret the center as it looks now with few major differentiations.

The original designs and models caught the attention of the Architectural Record, which in turn displayed it twice upon its pages, the first of which came during the construction. The second time the magazine devoted the cover and twelve pages of photographs to the features of the building. The editor of the Architectural Record was prompted to say that it was the most important building built on a college campus in 1950.

The style of the center was influenced by what has become known as the "Chicago School" of architecture. Directly it is an outgrowth of the style that Frank Lloyd Wright began developing at the turn of the last century and reached its full fruition in the mid-1930's. It advocates what Wright called "organic architecture." The following statement by Wright is the embodiment of the concept of organic architecture:

> . . .to properly put it on a human level, a higher order of the spirit has dawned for modern life in this interior concept of lived-in space playing with light, taking organic form as the reality of the building; a building now an entity by way of native materials and natural methods of structure; forms becoming more naturally significant of ideal and purpose, ultimate in economy and strength.

While this may have been called organic architecture by Wright, Schweikher and Elting called it "honest architecture." This in a sense deviates from organic architecture in that it allows for the exposure of the functional aparatus of the building. It is for this reason you see the use of grey while the bricks, pipes, radiators, and electrical conduit remain uncovered. In all other aspects--particularly the use of native materials and the allowance of the building to age naturally--the Fine Arts Center shows this style as initiated by Wright.

The ability of the Fine Arts Center to do this allows it to become more a part of the environment rather than creating a whole new environment. This is exemplified in the way the center "hugs" the hillside and also in its relatively low profile.

Yet, this architectural background does not tell the whole story--now the integration of the architectural concepts with the idea of a fine arts center must show just how the building works. As was said earlier, interreaction between the architects and the building's occupants was essential in establishing the particularities of the building. It was through this cooperation that Schweikher and Elting were able to develop the concept of segregating the various academic functions of the building, while at the same time giving a particular entity to the arts.

This is evident in the separation of the practice wing from the studio lecture and art wings. The very fact of the direction that the practice room windows point shows the cooperation. Originally the rooms were not to have the angular "sawtooth" arrangement they now have. Instead the plans provided for a conventional hall configuration with windows opening as regular windows. This, however, was brought to the attention of the architects as producing noise conflicts with the studio wing that stands perpendicular to the practice wing. Thus the rooms were turned to their present positions eliminating this conflict.

Another concern which the architects took into account was the possibility of expansion. Here the idea was to allow for the least disturbance to the building if this came about. To achieve this, Schweikher and Elting placed plate glass or other easily moved materials in the places where the expansion was most likely to take place.

The proof of the architects' ability and the integrity of the structure rests in the achievement of these variations at a minimal cost to the quality and function of the building.

All of this is not to preclude the fact that no difficulties were or have been encountered in the functionability of the center. To begin with there were the usual conflicts between the builder and the architects. In this case, however, it was intensified by the fact that the constructors had never built a structure with the center's particular style. It was probably this factor coupled with the use of new types of materials by the builders that accounts for some of the roof leakage that has occured through the years.

Other difficulties arose from doors too small to fit pianos through, rooms exposed to a maximum amount of sunlight, and the inavailability of aluminum sash windows.

Nonetheless, these and other problems were either corrected or lost in the rush and revival that was precipitated by the construction of the building. A revival that not only stimulated the arts at Maryville College but also all the buildings that were built within the following decade. Yet, since the additions of the band room and visual art wing to the building in 1961, the maintenance of the center has gone virtually unheeded. And now in the 25th year of operation several areas are in need of attention and the visual arts department is in need of expansion.

There need be no more comment upon the architectural integrity of the building. It is as Dr. Harter says, "A building that never grows old. Something about it is very refreshing--artistically pleasing." To reinterate this idea of timelessness Victor Schoen claims that it is "remarkable" to consider that the building is 25 years old.

Thus, in 1976, the Fine Arts Center becomes a quarter of a century old; virtually unpreturbed in a style that for now is timeless.

Course seeks alternative energies

By Trippy Banner

For those interested, all the banging of hammers and sawing of wood around the white garage behind Willard House is a project being undertaken by the Alternatives Energy Course (Science and Technology 201). By the will of the students in the course, we have decided to find out first hand whether there are alternative forms of energy which would be feasible for small non-centralized uses.

We hope that by the end of the term to heat the house with solar energy, and heat water and possibly a gas stove with a methane generator. Before building these things we have had to insulate the garage and renovate the inside of it. (Many of the resources for the renovation have come from the farm house which is presently being dismantled.)

Anyone interested in how to make usable methane gas from cow manure or have heat bills of less than ten dollars a month, drop by the garage someday and look, listen or lend a hand.

Massage parlor / Coffeehouse

Following the play this evening, the Coffeehouse in Lloyd Basement will be open to massage your brain with poetry and recorded music. Poems will be both original and selected from various famous (and some not so famous) poets through the ages. The music will be jazz oriented. Coffee and tea will be served.

Next Friday eve the featured entertainment will be the MC Jazz Quartet. The atmosphere for both occurances will be easygoing--stop by and have your brain rubbed.

MC sports round-up

After enjoying seemingly continuous success during the past couple of weeks, the MC mens' basketball and wrestling teams fell on hard times last week. Coach Boydson Baird's basketball squad won one game and lost two, while Don Elia's wrestlers finished quite low on the list of participants during a two-day wrestling tournament.

The basketball team averted a winless week on Monday night when they soundly defeated Clinch Valley College in Wise, Virginia, 116-89. Captain Randy Lambert was the scoring star of the evening as he lead all players with 36 points. The Scots' victory gave them a season record to date of 9–10 with three games left on the schedule.

The basketball story was not as positive earlier in the week. The Scots lost to Bryan College in Dayton, Tennessee on Thursday, 88-63, followed by another loss to Sewanee on Saturday, 84-58.

Thursday's game at Bryan proved to be a frustrating loss for Maryville. The Scots enjoyed a slim edge at halftime, 38-36, but were not able to hold that lead during the second half as the Lions literally ran them off the court. Kenny Talbott lead the Scots with 17 followed by Lambert's 16.

Saturday night's loss at Sewanee was humiliating for Maryville. Trailing by only ten points at halftime, 40-30, the Scots were the victim of a Tiger run-away during the second half. Lambert was Maryville's leading scorer with 16 points followed by Talbott's 10.

Only two Maryville wrestlers placed at last weekend's Southeastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Tournament in Chattanooga. 167-pound Wayne Dunn finished runner-up in his weight classification, while 190-pound Bob Valentine finished in third place in his group. Elia was not particularly pleased with his team's performance as he believed before last Friday and Saturday that the Scots would do better as a team.

The Maryville grapplers will have a chance tomorrow night to redeem themselves when they travel to Clemson, South Carolina to face Clemson University in a dual match. The Scots defeated Clemson last December when the two wrestled each other in Maryville.

The mens' basketball team will also be back in action tomorrow evening. The Scots will conclude their 1975-76 home season by hosting Bryan beginning at 7:30. It will be sandwiched between two TSSAA District Tournament games at the gym.

Following that contest, the Scots will conclude their season on the road in Virginia. Maryville will travel to Radford on Tuesday evening to face Radford College. On Wednesday night, the Scots will be in Lexington to close out their season against always tough Washington and Lee College.

PE Building schedule

The District III Small High School Basketball Tournament will be held in the Maryville College Gym beginning Thursday, February 19 and concluding Saturday, February 28. The Health and Physical Education Building will be reserved for this activity beginning at the following times on the following dates: Thursday the 19th, 4:00 p.m.; Friday the 20th, 5:00 p.m., Saturday the 21st, 2:45 p.m.; Monday the 23rd, 5:30 p.m.; Tuesday the 24th, 4:15 p.m.; (Wednesday the 25th and Thursday the 26th, no schedule); Friday the 27th, 6:30 p.m.; Saturday the 28th, 6:30 p.m.

Couzen's cross country challenge

I would like to challenge the student body to a cross-country race. To anyone who finishes before me I will see to it that they get an apple pie, blueberry pie or other available fruit pie. The race will take place on February 29 at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at the entrance to the campus on Washington Street. The race will end at the airport overpass on highway 129. All contestants will please sign up in the Admissions Office (second floor of Anderson Hall). Anyone and everyone in the student body may enter. In case of death beforehand, Tim Kelly (Florida) and Joe Genualdi will act as my seconds.

Matt Couzens

SNEA - teacher career program

The second annual Professional Day for seniors in education will be Friday, February 27th, in the Proffitt Dining Room, from 9:00 until 3:30. One purpose of this program is to provide an in-service experience for those who will become certified teachers. All seniors in education will be excused from classes or student teaching in order to attend. All other interested seniors are invited to attend if their schedules permit.

The program will include several noteworthy speakers who will cover the following topics: hiring practices with advice to prospective teachers, the process of evaluating new teachers and what criteria are involved, interpersonal relationships among teachers and administrators, discipline problems in the classroom, and career alternatives to traditional classroom teaching.

World Scene

Henry Kissinger is currently on a trip to Latin America outlining a six point program to strengthen economical and political ties between Latin America and Washington.

Washington officials have announced that Cuban troops are being withdrawn from Angola at the Soviet Union's request. This comes in the interest of detente.

President Ford has proposed revision of the organization of the intelligence community calling for a new chain of command and different operational procedures.

Patricia Hearst, standing trial for bank robbery in San Francisco, has testified that the SLA gave her the choice of either allying herself with them or death.

The attorney for Hearst, F. Lee Bailey, according to different accounts will make anywhere from $100,000 to $1,000,000 for representing Hearst.

Many colleges are saying that by 1980 their enrollment will increase by 10%. The money to operate the schools, however, is expected to remain the same.

Film to be shown

Elvira Madigan, the Swedish film starring Pia Degermark and Thommy Bergren, will be shown Wednesday, February 25, at 9:20 a.m. and 8:15 p.m. in the Theatre.

Critics for New Yorker Magazine and Newsweek called the film "the most beautiful movie in history." Pia Degermark's performance won the "Best Actress" award at the 1967 Cannes Film Festival.

Director Bo Widerberg makes excellent use of tone and lighting in the film, as well as some innovative techniques for its day. Some of Widerberg's other accomplishments include Thirty Times Your Money (1966) and The Ballad of Joe Hill (1971).

E-Z CURB
8-11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

Drewery's	12-OZ.		$1.69
Pabst	12-OZ.		$2.02
Miller "Ponies"	7-OZ.	8 Per Pk.	$2.03

Picnic Supplies
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
8 - MIDNIGHT

COLLEGE CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVE

Needed to sell Brand Name Stereo Components to Students at lowest prices. High Commission, NO INVESTMENT REQUIRED. Serious inquiries only! FAD Components, Inc., 20 Passaic Ave., Fairfield, New Jersey 17006.
Arlene Muzyka 201-227-6884

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy-a lot For A Little!

theHighland ECHO

Vol. 61 No. 16 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | February 27, 1976

Model home?

Alternative Energy Becomes Reality on Campus

by Laura Dance

At the beginning of this term, a proposal was put forth by the Science and Technology (Sci 201) class: "to demonstrate that workable, practical, and economical alternatives do exist" for energy sources other than fossil and nuclear fuels. It was to be accomplished (unlike federal projects) with maximum efficiency at minimum cost. The project had the potential to be an asset to Maryville College. According to the proposal, the project would not only serve as a demonstration of alternative energy sources, but could also bring public attention to the college and "serve as an information center and meeting place for students in this area." Since that time, interested students on campus (some from the class, some not) have been meeting together daily at the garage behind Willard House in order to make the proposal a reality.

Starting with a budget of $800, the students have managed to cut costs considerably by the use of scrap lumber and nails from the college farmhouse. At the present time, expenditures are at less than $300.

Anyone looking at the 20x20x8 foot garage would be amazed at the changes made. The walls have been insulated and paneled, the ceiling is in the process of being installed and insulated, and the 1500 gallon tank for the methane generator has been placed upon its concrete supports. About twenty feet to the right of the building, a foundation for the solar collector house has been laid. Work continues daily on the solar collectors in Sutton. Four different collectors are being used for experimentation. One is the water collector built last year by Trippy Banner, and the other three are being designed and built by students at MC this term.

The three being built this term are "air collectors"-which heat air, rather than water, through the system. The basic solar collector consists of a two by eight foot insulated box which is covered by a flat black aluminum surface that absorbs the sun's heat rays. A glass or fiberglass top is used to capture and contain the heat (from the sun). In an air collector, the air is blown through the box between the aluminum and the fiberglass top, where it is heated and then stored in tanks for later use.

One collector being built this term was designed by Bernie McGraw, an environmental engineering major. Instead of one layer of aluminum, this collector has two layers os that heat can be trapped in a lower layer where no sun strikes. This will hopefully trap a greater amount of the sun's heat.

A second test collector, designed by Peter Xiques, is being built with additional flanges which act as baffles for the air passing through. This will create eddies of air, thus slowing down the air traveling in the collector. Again, the object is to capture even more of the sun's heat.

The third collector is being built by the class, and is going to be constructed of scrap materials and aluminum beer cans. This collector is intended to show how easily and inexpensively a collector can be built by the average citizen.

Once all three collectors are completed, they will be installed in the collector house beside the garage. There, they will be tested for efficiency and practicality.

Another alternative energy source—methane power— is being tested. The 1500 gallon tank sitting next to the house is for this experiment. Methane gas is produced by the decomposition of organic materials such as manure, SAGA food, etc. If these wastes are placed in a tank with certain bacteria over a period of time, methane gas is produced. This gas can be used as a source of power to heat water, cook food, or even to turn turbines for transportation or the generation of electricity.

continued page 3

Norman Cousins to Speak at MC

Many interesting and challenging people meet our campus from the forum of the CIV. However, on Friday, March 5, we will be host to a man who brings an international reputation second to none in the world scene today.

This man is Norman Cousins, editor since 1940 of Saturday Review, a weekly magazine with a worldwide reporting of the arts, literature, science, education, the media, and travel.

Mr. Cousins has recently been the focus of a draft a nonpolitician for President movement. A committee composed in part of Steve Allen, Stringfellow Barr, Yehudi Menuhin, and Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein has proposed through a New York Times advertisement that the country needs a candidate for President who will creatively speak for and deal with global issues. There is no question but that Mr. Cousins record substantiates the claim that he has had a career of global dimensions. He has been counselor/advisor/discussant at large with many world leaders and the recipient of numerous national and international awards, among them the 1968 Family of Man Award and the 1971 Peace Medal of the United Nations. He has written and edited over a dozen books, including Who Speaks For Man? (1953), Dr. Schweitzer of Lambarene (1960), and The Celebration of Life (1974).

In an October 4, 1975 Saturday Review editorial, Mr. Cousins wrote: "Who, then, will step forward to fix the attention of the world's peoples on the danger that confronts us all but that can unite us in creating a common sanity and a sommon safety?"

The February Meetings committee has asked him to give his answer to that kind of question in our CIV on March 5 at 9:20 a.m. in Wilson Chapel. Whether you will agree with his answer or not, missing his presentation would be to turn your back on the pressing issues of our globe and on one of the most globally oriented figures of our time.

Jazz Ensemble Plays Coffee House

The Jazz Ensemble, (left to right): Steve Lowry, Charles Hurt, Jim Gray, Curtis Leonard, Rick Carl, (not shown - Don Barnard, Trip Ziegler).

This Friday night, February 27, the Coffee House will present our own MC Jazz Ensemble. The ensemble, which is donating its time to the coffee house, is composed of Maryville College students and one faculty member.

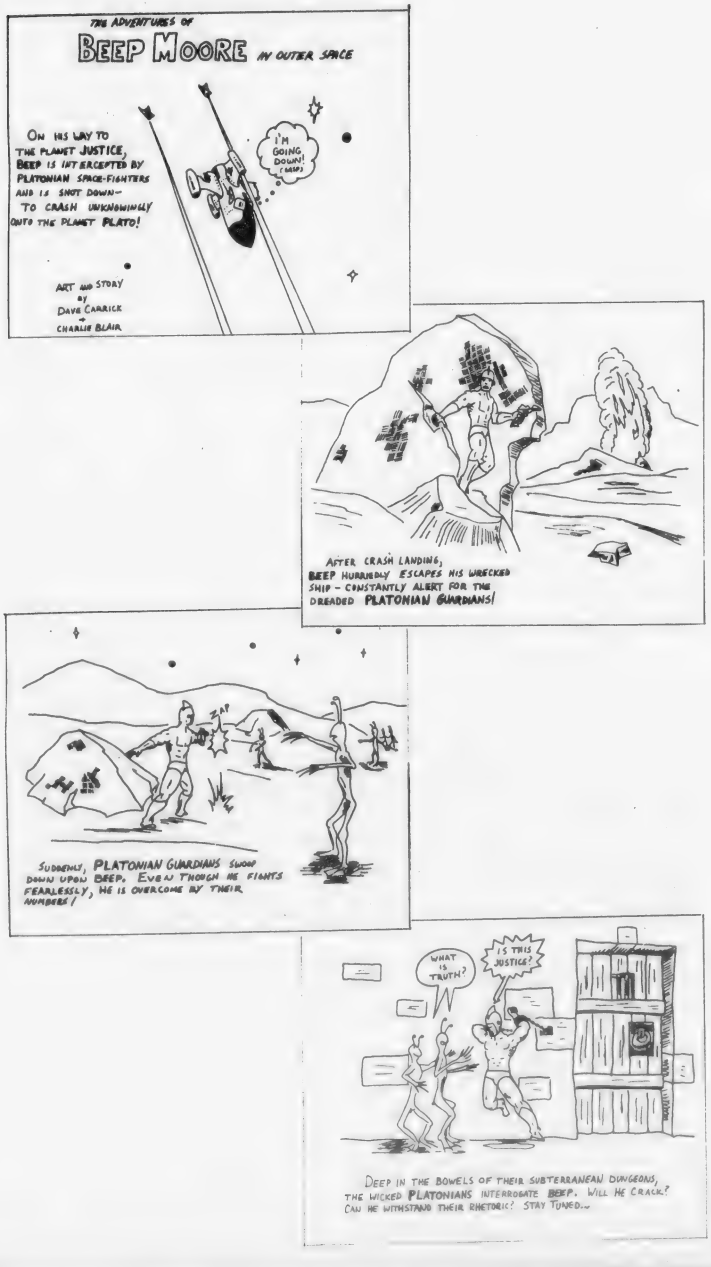
The event will begin at 9:30 p.m. in the basement of Lloyd. Coffee and doughnuts will be available at a slight cost, and activities such as cards, scrabble, and backgammon will be provided. The music and games will last as long as people are there. Students are encouraged to attend this informal event in order that the committee sponsoring the activity will have probable cause for sponsoring another one.

Editorial — Questions "We Don't Ask"

When one is a small child, he or she is often told by their parents that there are certain questions that "we don't ask." Sometimes this is because the subject is delicate, or perhaps the parent doesn't really know the answer himself. The child is told that once he is older and is more mature he will discover or learn the answer through experience. However, more often than not he learns why the question is not asked rather than the facts that lie behind it. College life sometimes appears to have even more of that same type of evasion.

Here at Maryville College there occasionally arises a situation that requires solving only through the difficult and sometimes painful grinding of our judicial means of action. These events are not of the type that can be summarily dismissed by administrative finesse or bureaucratic doctrine. They must be discussed and debated by the ACC or judicial council, and their nature involves a judgement that must be made with a fair presentation of all sides. Such incidents often involve the sticky problem of whether or not a student should remain at MC; they center around the very system of enforcing the rules here.

The problem is not of fairness to the student involved, rather it is a problem of fairness to the students not involved. The fact is that the students are rarely, if ever, informed of the workings of our judicial system. The reasons for this are presented as ones of "diplomacy," and often so as to not bias the case or hurt someone's feelings. Again we learn that there are questions that "we don't ask." The result is the almost total ignorance of the judiciary methods here.



A system of any kind cannot have the trust of the people that it serves if it will not inform them as to how it works. We know there are processes here for solving problems of this type, but are never shown how they work. How long would our national system of trial by jury last if all of its actions occured behind closed doors? How long could it last if the American public was simply informed of its judgements by heresay and rumor? It is doubtful that any public institution could operate under total cover without revealing any of its methods; witness the CIA investigation of late.

It is no wonder then, that there is a certain type of mass apathy here; the type created by the feeling that the student is dealt with behind his or her back. This lack of concern is not always caused by the students themselves—it is brought into existence by the hundreds of rumors and half-truths that float around here without ever being honestly dealt with. People cannot be actively concerned and involved without being actively informed. The students know that it is useless to harp on a subject that they know nothing (accurate) about. They also fear and mistrust that which is hidden from them by a bodyguard of "diplomacy."

We have the instruments to change this situation, or so it is thought. We supposedly have the ACC as our representatives to delve into and solve these matters; but if the proof of that lies in results, then the ACC has a pretty sorry track record. We also have the Highland Echo, supposedly a mouthpiece for "what's happening" on campus. The Echo has the possibilities for becoming a printed forum to solve these issues—and the least it should do is to present these problems in a fair and objective manner. Again, the record speaks (or rather whimpers) for itself.

It all comes back to what we started with: questions "we don't ask." If we do ask, we are given reasons for not answering the question or even a flat denial of pertinent information. What is needed is a more honest and straightforward presentation of our judicial methods—the public has a right to know. This is a serious arena, one which demands honesty and fairness to everyone in order to remain consistent with itself. The students must be informed of the consequences of breaching the rules—otherwise the rules are useless except as dogmatic excuses for an inherent weakness in the system. We do not wish to go back to our childhood of easy, non-existent answers. The students should not be held back from learning what the world is about, and least of all about the world that is Maryville College.

Joel Canon

College Life

The People's Dorm

by Keith Henderson

Until this school year there has been only one coed dorm at Maryville College, in the form of Pearson's. This year, however, marks a change in this status. That change is Dorm I, or more affectionately the People's Dorm, the first coed freshman dorm.

The relative success or failure of this monumental "experiment" has rested solely upon the shoulders of the people living within the walls of their home away from home. Just as with any new endeavor there were problems that needed to be worked out.

Even as early as spring term of 1975 the wheels were set into motion that would set down the initial rules and regulations that any group of people living together msut abide by. From the beginning of school through Interim the internal government of the People's Dorm has been in the hands of the sophomore aids. Now, this government is representative of all of the different classes housed there. The freshmen have a more powerful voice in what will happen in the months to come.

The incoming freshmen were asked (in a letter sent before school started) if they would like to live in a coed dorm. Each freshman had their own reasons for saying yes or no, but those reasons are probably not the ones they would say are the points of life in the People's The reasons for living there h changed, just as the people h changed.

The first few days of scho to set the tone of the actions students for the rest of the y people thought the freshmen not be able to cope with this sponsibility. However, the n dents have proven that they handle the responsibility tha along with living in a coed do

There is a respect for the pr to those of the opposite sex, a mutual understanding betwee men and women. The situatio conducive to good studying h because of this respect and un standing.

There have been problems, any innovation, but these hav relatively minor compared to all well-being of the People's D The persons living there have to a new head resident with li no difficulty, and for the info of those who don't know her, Richardson is a very nice pers

The general consensus of th living at Dorm I is that coed good for the body as well as But maybe actions do speak than words—and the People's can certainly speak for itself.

Trial editor: Joel Canon
Business Manager: R. C. Stevens; Ad
Blair and David Carrick; Sports: Fre
Photography: Carl Reardon; Layout
Kees; Contributing Reporters: Laur
Keith Henderson, Doug Taylor.

Keiser to Perform Monday

Marilyn Keiser, organist, will be presented in a Performing Artists Concert at Maryville College Monday, March 1, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. The concert will be co-sponsored by the Knoxville chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Miss Keiser is organist and director of music at All Souls Parish in Asheville, North Carolina, where she is also music consultant for the Episcopal Diocese of Western North Carolina.

In addition to these posts, whe was artist-in-residence during 1974-75 at Lenoir-Rhyne College in Hickory, North Carolina.

A native of Springfield, Illinois, Miss Keiser received the Bachelor of Sacred Music degree from Illinois Wesleyan University where she studied with Lillian McCord. She graduated summa cum laude from Union Theological Seminary with a Master of Sacred Music degree.

Before assuming her present positions in North Carolina, Miss Keiser was assistant organist of The Riverside Church in New York, the associate organist and choirmaster at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York.

Constantly in demand as an organ recitalist, Miss Keiser has appeared throughout the United States in recitals sponsored by churches, colleges, and chapters of the American Guild of Organists. In 1972 she was a featured artist for the National A. G. O. convention in Dallas. She has played for several regional conventions of the A. G. O. and has been a recitalist for A. G. O. mid-winter conclaves.

Miss Keiser has been heard in radio broadcasts over WRVR and WRFM in New York and has recorded for Lyrichord Records and the Wicks Organ Company.

Admission for the concert is $2; students $1. Students, faculty, and staff of the college will be admitted by I.D.

Music Societies Present Cantata

Through the combined effort of Delta Omicron (the National Professional Music Society for Women), and Phi Mu Alpha (the National Professional Music Society for Men), Mary E. Caldwell's The Freedom Song will be performed in the Maryville College Fine Arts Center Music Hall on Sunday, February 29, at 4:00 p.m. The Freedom Song, a patriotic cantota, will feature a chorus with instrumental accompaniment selected from the members of the two music societies. The cantata will be under the direction of Peggy Leatherwood, a senior music education major.

Admission is free, and donations will be used to offset the cost of the performance and fund the general finances of Delta Omicron and Phi Mu Alpha.

THE FIGHT AGAINST

NUCLEAR ENERGY

GOES ON

Bill Shobe, a law student at Vanderbilt University, will be visiting the Maryville campus this weekend to share some of his knowledge concerning nuclear energy. Bill, a member of Friends of the Earth, has spent some time in Washington, D.C. lobbying against nuclear energy in the U.S. The new move toward atomic power as a source of energy poses great threats to our environment, and action is being taken up on the M.C. campus to stop this dangerous thrust. All students and faculty are invited to participate and are urged to learn more about nuclear energy and its dangers by hearing Bill speak Saturday night (Feb. 28) in the back lounge of Davis Dorm. Come join the fight to protect our environment.

Nancy Miller

MC Profs Attend Conference

Four members of the Maryville College faculty are attending the seventy-first annual meeting of the Tennessee Philological Association at King College in Birstol this weekend, February 26–27. They are Dr. Charlotte H. Beck, Prof. Arthur S. Bushing, and Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler of the English Department and Dr. Ralph Collins, chairman of the Foreign Language Department.

On Thursday evening Dr. Fowler read her paper entitled, "Vachel Lindsay, the Hero-Worshiper," and on Friday Dr. Beck read "Something of a Dramatic Form": "The Ruined Cottage" and "The Excursion," based on last summer's research at the University of California in Berkeley. Dr. Beck will also chair the Saturday morning session on Twentieth Century Literature.

The Tennessee Philological Association includes in its membership faculty members in the English and foreign language departments of college and universities throughout the state.

Wanted: Old Playboy or Playgirl magazines. They will be torn up so I only want those that are to be thrown away. If anyone has extra copies that they don't want, please leave them at my office Friday. Thank-you.

Bob Ramger
Room 105 Sutton

Energy, continued from page 1

What you've read so far may sound like the explanation of some scientific experiment—by strict definition it is. However, it is also the embodiment of the concern of a group of students for your future. It is the concern about the depletion of fossil fuels, and the concern about the hazards of nuclear power and the effect it may have on you and your children for years to come.

Our future depends on the development of practical, economical, fuel sources that exist in harmony with the environment. The garage behind Willard House is a peek into the future. Why not bring your tools—or even just yourself—and join in? This project is one which can allow a student to both have fun and gain a great deal of knowledge about his or her future, too.

Trojan Women to be Shown Tonight

The movie, "The Trojan Women" starring Katherine Hepburn, Vanessa Redgrave, and Genevieve Bujold will be shown in the MC Theatre on Friday, February 27 at 9:00 p.m. The film, produced, directed and written by Michael Cacoyannis and adapted from the great play by Euripides which was first presented in Greece in 415 B.C., is the dramatic story of the fall of Troy and tragic fates of its women. It is considered by many to be the greatest anti-war story ever. The film is being sponsored by the February Meetings Committee and admission is free.

The Maryville College Band under the direction of Charles R. Hurt will present a winter concert on Thursday March 4, at 8:15 p.m. in the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel. There is no admission charge.

Interim Proposals Wanted

Now that ACC has voted to keep the Interim in December as a part of every students' course, some suggested plans have been drawn up for its revitalization.

Students are being given the opportunity to shape their own projects. This does not mean merely presenting plans for individual interims as has already been practiced, but it includes group plans as well. In other words, a group of five to ten students may design an interim, ask a professor to sponsor it and present the plan to the Interim Committee.

Proposals for all such projects by upcoming sophomores and juniors should be completed by March 12 and sent to Dr. Parker. Senior interims will be under the sponsorship of major departments, but they too will provide opportunities for student input.

Brochures of previous interims have been placed on reserve at the library. Here is a way of identifying special interests of faculty members and getting ideas of former projects.

This does not preclude the proposals of professors who have ideas they would like to offer. They too are being asked to list their topics with brief explanations as has been past practice, sending them to Dr. Parker by March 12.

Early in the Spring Term, the Interim Committee will review all proposals, and those accepted will be announced in the April 2 issue of The Echo. From April 5–12 the list will appear on the bulletin board outside the Registrar's Office providing an opportunity for tentative registration. Final registration will be completed at the same time as pre-registration for Fall Term.

Here's the opportunity students have been waiting for—a chance to design meaningful interims that will be sources of enrichment and will merit academic credit. Within a few days letters will be mailed to all students with specific details and deadlines.

Please take time to plan for a worthwhile experience.

Herma Cate for the Interim Committee.

Passion Play Auditions to be Held

Acting auditions and technical interviews for the 1976 season of the Smoky Mountain Passion Play will be held from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Saturday, February 28 in the Fine Arts Building at Maryville College. The auditions and interviews will be conducted by drama director Barry Lewis and producer-general manager Robert Temple, and are open to the public.

Auditions will be held for 25 principal roles and for the 20 members of the Young Actors' Guild. Those auditioning for principal roles should prepare two readings from one to three minutes in length, which should be memorized. At this time, all roles in the drama are open, and assignments will be made following the drama association's final auditions at the Southeastern Theatre Conference in Memphis March 4-6.

Technical interviews will be held for the positions of assistant stage manager, electrician, sound technician, costumer and property person. Interested persons should bring a complete resume.

All acting and technical positions are salaried. Persons interested in either an acting or a technical position should present a wallet-size photo to the auditions registrar, or a photo can be made there for a charge of 50 cents. Pre-registration is not necessary, although the association recommends arriving early.

The outdoor drama of the life of Jesus had a 57% average nightly attendance increase in 1975 and was presented to over 25,000 people. Rehersals for the drama's fourth season will begin June 1, and the production season will be Juen 18-August 29 at the Passion Play Amphitheatre in Townsend.

For further information, contact the Passion Play office at 108½ Magnolia Street in Maryville, or call 984-4111.

MC SPORTS

Highlights of last week's Maryville College inter-collegiate sports' activity included the wrestling team winning a dual match, while the mens' basketball team was losing a game in overtime, and the Lady Scots basketball team was losing two games.

Winter sports activity is winding down now as the warm weather is arriving. Coach Baird's mens' team concluded their season this week, while Coach Brown's Lady Scots will finish their regular season this weekend. The wrestlers finish their dual match schedule Saturday before getting ready to send several representatives to the NCAA Championships next weekend.

The wrestlers had the best performance of the three sports by far on Saturday afternoon by defeating Clemson University in Clemson, South Carolina, 40—14. Maryville did not lose an actual match all afternoon. Clemson won matches in the 118 and 134-pound categories as the result of Maryville forfeits In the heavyweight division, Bob Von Mitch wrestled his opponent to a draw.

The seven Maryville winners were Gary DeAlmo, Jay Hendershot, Mark Thedford, Joe Arvidson, Wayne Dunn, Ray Oliveri, and Bob Valentine. DeAlmo and Hendershot won their respective matches on decisions with the former winning, 14—1, and the latter ahead at the end, 13—8. Thedford, Arvidson, Dunn, Oliveri, and Valentine won as the result of pins.

Valentine's victory in the 190-pound division was his eighth pin of the season. That ties a record for most pins in one season that is also held by Jim Batchler from last season, Wayne Risko in 1972-73, and Gary DeRidder way back during the 1934-35 campaign.

The Scot grapplers, now 10—7 for the year, return to action tomorrow when they go to Marietta, Georgia to wrestle Southern Tech. Next weekend, several Maryville wrestlers will travel to Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa for the NCAA Championships.

The mens' basketball team was not as lucky on Saturday night as they dropped a disappointing 75—70 overtime decision to Bryan College at the gym. The Scots had trailed for most of the contest, but tied the score at 62—62 with 2:35 remaining in regulation time.

With the score tied, 66—66, after the 40-minute regulation segment, the Lions controlled the action during the extra five-minute period which allowed the visitors to win by five points.

The game was Maryville's final home game of 1975-76 and put the Scots at 9—11. This means they can finish the season no better than with a .500 record.

Kenny Talbott, one of four Scot seniors playing their final career home game, was the contest's high scorer with 22 points. Senior captain Randy Lambert concluded his home stint with 16 points. Ty Limbaugh had 11.

Last week was a rough one for the Lady Scots. They dropped a 65—49 decision at Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City on Tuesday night. Returning home on Thursday, Tennessee Weslyan came from behind to defeat the locals, 58—55.

Tuesday's game at Carson-Newman saw the Lady Scots trail early, but get into the thick of the contest during the latter stages of the first half. Maryville only trailed by three at halftime, 32—29, but could not keep their momentum during the second half.

The Eagles had the upper hand for most of the final 20 minutes and practically coasted to their victory.

Libby Lowry was the top scorer for Maryville with 12 points.

Thursday's game with Tennessee Weslyan was a wild one to say the least. The Lady Bulldogs played poorly during the first half much to the utmost displeasure of their coach who did everything from receiving two technical fouls in the course of 30 seconds to accusing Coach Brown of hiring unfair officials.

Weslyan was down by 11 points at halftime, 40—29, but came out fired up for the second half as the Lady Scots did not have a chance. It was a rough game from start to finish. A lot of physical contact took place that burned some tempers. Upon fouling out with about five minutes to go, one Weslyan player went as far as to make an obscene gesture at the Maryville bench.

Anyway one looks at it, the loss to Weslyan was a big dissappointment as the Lady Scots dropped to 9—9 on the year.

Their regular season will conclude this weekend with two games. They will be in Williamsburg, Kentucky tonight for an encounter with Cumberland College. Tomorrow night, they travel to Morristown to play Walters State Community College. This will be their final tune-up before the start of the Tennessee State Small College Basketball Tourney next weekend.

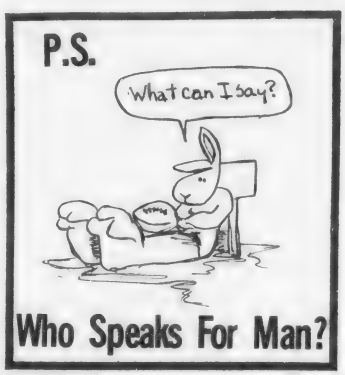
Women's Basketball Tourney Held at Maryville

Girl's Basketball Coach Sharon Brown

Maryville College is this year's host institution for the Tennessee State Small College Basketball Tourney for women that will run from next Thursday, March 4 through Saturday, March 6. A total of ten schools from across the state of Tennessee will be represented during the three-day affair that will work on a double-elimination basis.

The ten schools participating will be Maryville College, Union University of Jackson, Tennessee Weslyan College of Athens, Fisk University of Nashville, Carson-Newman College of Jefferson City, Austin-Peay University of Clarksville, Lambuth College of Jackson, Tusculum College, Knoxville College, and the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Tournament action will start on Thursday morning at 11:00 with two games going at the same time with the use of two gyms. The first two contests are Tennessee Weslyan vs. Fisk and Lambuth vs. Knoxville.



Two more games will follow at 1:00 pm. The Lady Scots will face Carson-Newman, while Austin-Peay plays Tusculum. At 3:30 pm, UT-Chattanooga will play the winner of the Lambuth-Knoxville game, while Union goes against the victor of the Weslyan-Fisk affair.

Thursday's action will continue with two games each at 5:30 and 8:30 pm.

Activity for Friday will start at 9:00 am with two games. Two additional contests will be held at 1:30 pm. That night, action will continue with a single game at 6:00 followed by another contest to immediately follow at approximately 7:30.

The tournament will conclude on Saturday with two games. The first one will start at 9:00 am. The championship game will be played that afternoon beginning at 1:30.

MC Lady Scot basketball coach Sharon Brown is the coordinator for this season's tournament. Miss Brown has been working on its details for the past couple of months and is looking forward to a strong and competitive tournament.

What's your beef, Stu?

DANCE
Davis Lobby
Friday, February 27
9:30 p.m. - 1:30 a.m.
25 cents
Live Music - Refreshments
For advanced ticket sales
See any Davis Dorm Resident

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

E-Z CURB
8-11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

Drewery's	12-OZ.		$1.69
Pabst	12-OZ.		$1.93
Miller "Ponies"	7-OZ.	8 Per Pk.	$1.78

Picnic Supplies
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
8 - MIDNIGHT

Special Bicentennial Issue

We're looking for Americans who haven't forgotten how to stand

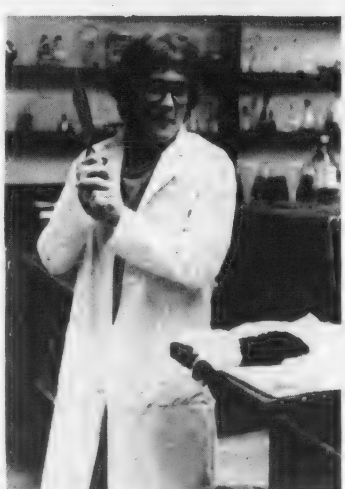
The Highland Echo

Vol. 61 No. 17 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | March 5, 1976

Norman Cousins At MC Today

Norman Cousins, internationally known editor of Saturday Review, will speak at Maryville College Friday, March 5 at 9:20 a.m. in Wilson Chapel.

In an October 4 editorial, Cousins wrote: "Who, then will step forward to fix the attention of the world's peoples on the danger that confronts us all but that can unite us in creating a common sanity and a common safety?" The February Meetings committee at the college has asked him to give his answer to that kind of question.



Dr. David Young, director of the college project on futuristics, said, "Whether you will agree with his answer or not, missing his presentation would be to turn your back on the pressing issues of our troubled globe and on one of the most globally oriented figures of our time."

Cousins has recently been the focus of a "draft a non-politician for president" movement. A committee composed in part of Steve Allen, Stringfellow Barr, Yehudi Menuhin, and Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein has proposed through a New York Times advertisement that the country needs a candidate for president who will creatively speak for and deal with global issues.

Cousins has had a career of global dimensions. He has been counselor/advisor/discussant at large with many world leaders. He has been the recipient of numerous national and international awards, among them the 1968 Family of Man Award and the 1971 Peace Medal of the United Nations.

Cousins has written and edited over a dozen books, including "Who Speaks for Man?" (1953), "Dr. Schweitzer of Lambarene" (1960), and "The Celebration of Life" (1974).

Netzley Revealed As Psychopathic Killer

"They just think they're so damn cute" exclaims Robin Netzley as he prepares to "lop off" yet another.

Robin Netzley, a junior chemistry major from Ohio had an interesting hobby until recently. When bored or looking for "kicks," Netzley, who is believed to be a distant cousin to Charles "Texas Tower" Whitman, would pull the heads off of unsuspecting rabbits. Because he raised many of the herbivores and treated them with kindness when others were around, his friends were led to believe that Robin was a true animal lover. In reality he hated the furry little creatures. "They just think they're so damn cute," Netzley said recently. "I first began to catch on to Robin's fettish a few weeks ago," reported one of his professors. "Working late one night I heard several crunching thuds and loud "pops" followed by demented laughter coming from the chemistry lab. I thought nothing of it at first, but in the following weeks other students started coming in and telling me that they had heard the same noises, late at night. I decided to hide in the lab one night and that's when I caught Robin in the act. Startled by my presence he babbled something about it being part of a lab. I called the police." Why and when Robin started this habit is unknown. One student blamed it on the pressure of his school work load. "The dude's just plain bonkers," reported another. Netzley is currently in custody and under drug treatment by the well known German physician, Wilhelm Bone.

The Great Book Store Rip-Off

by Michael Johnston

The Kraeger Price-Patrol, an informal alliance of students concerned with the spiralling cost of education, released its first report during a press conference in the Student Center on Tuesday. Their findings should be of particular interest to seniors completing Independent Studies.

In a comparison of the cost of several items necessary for Independent Studies, the Price Patrol found the on-campus distributer of supplies consistently higher than several Knoxville establishments. Eaton's Corrasable Bond typing paper was priced at $2.25 per 100 sheets on-campus. Knoxville outlets, particularly those surrounding the University of Tennessee, were found to have varying prices that fluctuated around $1.75 per 80 sheets.

The biggest discrepancy noted was in the price of black binders. On-campus these are sold for $8.00 apiece. A Kraeger Price-Patrol buyer reported purchasing an identical binder in the U. T. area for $3.05, including tax.

The Price-Patrol's report suggested that the large differences in price of these items can be partly accounted for by the fact that U. T. area merchants must maintain competitive prices, while the on-campus facility has a virtual monopoly on these items. The Price-Patrol noted that the atmosphere in the U. T. area stores was one of catering to the students needs, rather than the "take-it-or-flunk-out" atmosphere found elsewhere.

Wider implications of this situation were noted by one Price-Patrol member who suggested that the Maryville College administration consider this situation as an integral part of growing student dissatisfaction and attrition.

Petition Against Nuclear Energy

Bill Shobe, a member of Friends of the Earth, talked to the Alternative Lifestyles group last Saturday night. Bill, who has lobbied against nuclear energy in Washington D. C., distributed a nationwide petition to members of the group. The petition reads, "I, the undersigned, petition my representatives in government to sponsor and actively support legislation to: (1) develop safe, cost-competitive solar electricity and sloar fuels within ten years or less, and (2) phase out the operation of nuclear power plants as quickly as possible."

If you would like to sign or discuss the petition, contact a member of the Alternative Lifestyles group. You are also invited to join our discussions on nuclear energy and alternative energy sources, which meet every Tuesday night at 7:30 in the Davis back lounge.

Oratorio Chorus Still Open

On Sunday, May 9, a special bicentennial concert will be held in Wilson Chapel at Maryville College featuring a composition for chorus and orchestra by Dr. Harry H. Harter.

The composition, Fantasia on Shape-Note Tunes, is a thirty-minute piece which was commissioned by the Tennessee Arts Commission in cooperation with the National Endowment for the Arts as part of the state's celebration of the bicentennial.

The composer chose to base the composition on shape-note tunes from music collections published in East Tennessee. Two of the selections are called "Maryville;" a third tune is called "Knoxville."

These tunes were found in the rare book collection of the Knoxville Public Library. The Knoxville Harmony Music Made Easy was published in Pumpkintown, Tennessee (now Madisonville) in 1840; Unior Harmony: or Family Musician was published in Maryville in 1837.

Dr. Harter chose to incorporate these shape-note tunes in the body of the composition in such a way that would involve audience participation with the concert choir.

The Tuckaleechee Harp Singers and Old Harp Singers of Knox County have been invited to be special guests of Maryville College and join in the singing of the tunes at the premiere performance.

The Doyle High School Mixed Chorus, under the direction of John Ribble and his associate Allan S. Hoke, will join with the College Concert Choir and the Maryville College-Community Oratorio Chorus to form the choral union. The Maryville College-Community Orchestra, under the direction of David G. O'Dell, will join with the chorus in the premiere performance which will be directed by the composer.

Rehearsals are currently in progress, but Dr. Harter says there are still openings in the oratorio chorus for community singers. Rehearsals are at 7:00 p.m. each Monday in rooms 101-102 of the Fine Arts Center.

The Editors' Last Address To The Great Unwashed– Young Toughs On The Rocky Road To Manhood And White Punks On Dope

...Good Golly, Miss Holly...

Scene: A car pulls over to the shoulder of the highway somewhere on Interstate 81. The driver leans out of the window to speak to the worn and haggard hitch-hiker who has just run a quarter mile to reach the vehicle. The driver queries, "Taking a trip?"

The hitch-hiker, having the attention-span of a chrysanthemum, is momentarily distracted by the deafening roar of a passing truck. "What's that?"

A more decisive shout. "Taking a trip!"

"Yeah."

"Where to?"

"I don't know. Wherever I end up, I guess."

"Boy, I wish I were you."

"Really? Well, hang in there."

The car pulls away, leaving the lone figure standing breathless on the roadside.

This incident, or one similar to it, is probably happening right now as I venture forth on my retirement vacation, leaving behind only my parting words to the throngs on campus who have long awaited them.

Since this is my last editorial, it seemed of the utmost importance to pass on a particularly significant quote, aside from the old "Sturm and Drang." I pondered the philosophy of Merlin in T. H. White's The Once and Future King, "Education is experience, and the essence of experience is self-reliance." I considered Ed Bluestone's observance, "Education is the key to the future if you own a college." Both surged in me a tugent spang.

The question to the two aforementioned answers is, of course, "What is education?" My answer was, "I don't know. Whatever it ends up, I guess."

If I might stray for a moment and make a point, it is simply that once we get beyond the complaints, governmental philosophies, and the unfounded presuppositions that the administration is opposed to change and student ideas, we should realize that we can do anything we want here. Issues that are dredged up regularly to display "concern," such as the alcohol debate, should be allowed to die like old laws that, once they pass their utility, are allowed to be forgotten. Rules such as these are forgotten because they are broken regularly, usually without infringing on anyone else's rights. To argue over changing them on paper is a waste of time and energy.

Hopefully at Maryville education is the key to the future because we all own the college. Hopefully the experience can be one of self-reliance. And hopefully we can all take advantage of the fact that our education is what we make it. And some of us will barely make it. Our education at Maryville can be tailor-made. So, with almost four years under my belt, I can still tighten it a couple notches. Buenos notches.

David Haimbach

Like A Fish Needs A Bicycle...

This is it! Our last paper. My last editorial. The past year that Dave and I were editors has been truely enjoyable. We've had a lot of fun bringing you the news. The people we came in contact with were very helpful, interesting, and often extremely influential. Our staff was absolutely tremendous. Hold on . . . . I can't go through with it. I hated it! The job was a hemorroid. Working in the dishroom would have been more enjoyable. The hours are better and vegetables don't talk back. Scratch that! There are certain places on campus where vegetables do talk back. While you members of the great unwashed were getting chuckles and guffaws from the Echo, I was getting migrains. Anyone who wants this job can have it and anyone who takes it is crazy. In parting, I borrow a thought from Kehlog Albran, "Musicians strummed harps and wooden instruments as the drums pounded dance rhythms. It is said that magical evening actually lasted for over a fortnight. And then was gone. The music and revelry ended one evening as mysteriously as they had begun. All that remained was a barren field, its silence broken only by the sound of the wind rustling past discarded Polaroid wrappers."

Gary Sloboda

Letters To The Echo

To the Editors:

I have tried valiantly this year not to respond to the many letters that have been published in the Echo concerning the All College Council. Since I am so involved with it, I assumed my remarks would be taken as a personal bias, but the last two editions of the Echo have moved me to disregard this concern and air my views.

Mr first reaction while comparing these two editorials was "the All College Council just can't win," as the first editorial criticized the A.C.C. for not making the Interim decision on itw own, while the second editorial criticized the Council for not being more open and accessible to the students. My theory of representative government is that a representative should inform the constituents of proposals, listen to their views, synthesize this information and make a decision that will represent the best interests of the most people. This theory I am sure is different than many of the other people on the Council and different than others of our community but on our most recent question, whether or not Interim is a vital academic experience and one we should continue to have at Maryville, the Council decided to go back to the community again to hear their responses. A Town Hall meeting was called, signs plastered all over campus two days in advance, advertising it and informing the students, faculty, and administration that we wanted to hear your views. I would approximate that there were about fifty people at the meeting and these were the same people who had already voiced their opinions at the last A.C.C. meeting. With a response like this, I assumed that these were the only people who were concerned and so tried to represent what I heard and voted to keep the Interim. Since this decision, I have heard many complaints from faculty and students that their ideas have not been listened to. How can they expect to be listened to if they never attend a meeting and open their mouths, which seem to open quite well when they have the opportunity to complain after the decision has already been made?

Now we have this past week's paper that criticizes the Judicial Council of the A.C.C. Since the editorial did not specify what judicial action was taken behind the community's back, my comments can only be made in generalities also. The Judicial Council has representatives from the faculty, students, and the administration on it, as do the other A.C.C. committees. My experience with the Judicial Council has been very good in that as soon as a decision has been made the Council has been willing to divulge its decision and explain it if necessary. The editorial spoke of the U.S. judicial system. A trial by jury is exactly what it says—a trial by a representative group of people. The fate of a person is decided by this jury with instructions by a judge, not by the gallery of spectators that may choose to attend the trial.

A suggestion I would make to the future editor of the paper is to have a reporter at every A.C.C. meeting, perhaps then we can have an informed community, without the "hundreds of half-truths that float around here without ever being honestly dealt with." At the March 10th meeting of the A.C.C. a petition, if approved by the Residential Life Committee will be presented to the Council conerning the good old alcohol rule. I certainly hope to see all of you who feel "the rules are useless except as dogmatic excuses for an inherent weakness in our system" at the meeting, expressing your views and trying to help us get this rule changed. The meetings are open to everyone on every other Wed. at 2:30 in Anderson 304.

Perhaps if we would all take the initiative, our "we don't ask questions" would be answered.

Sincerely,
Suzanne Phillips

Dear Sir:

I am not one to complain about the gripes I receive from other students concerning the Dining Hall procedures. But now I am going to voice my own thoughts about the matter.

First of all, many students upon placing their trays in the dish window complain about how the food was cooked and how it tasted. They show this by shoving their dishes into the window telling us their opinions. I do not mind the opinions but I don't like people pushing their dishes into the window. Perhaps they don't realize that glasses and plates can be and many times are broken by this method of showing disgust at the meal. If you have a beef, (no pun intended), talk to Mr. Miller—I am sure he will tell you what goes on in the kitchen with respect to the cooking of the food. Talk to him because the dishroom workers do not cook the food.

The other thing that aggrevates me to no end is the famous cry of the students: "There aren't any glasses out here!" In the first place, the workers in back cannot wash the glasses if they are in use out in the dining area. And it also doesn't help when the ones being used are accompanied by 5 or 6 others on the same tray. What I am saying is that people are taking too many glasses at one time. At the beginning of the year, SAGA had well over 1000 glasses in the dining hall—that number has been reduced to 360—plus now because students (not all of them) have no sense of property value. I know of some students who have as many as 10 or more glasses in their room. Nor do students realize that it costs money to replace these items as well as glasses: trays, plates, and silver ware. Since it costs money to replace equipment, I don't see what right anyone in the Student Body has to complain about the food since it also takes money to buy food—money which has to be used to replace "borrowed" glasses or trays from the dining hall.

It seems to me, then, that the right to register gripes does not belong to the students but to the members of the Dining Hall.

Name not withheld,
George Lundy

Dope Does Not Wreck Your...Ur...Mind

by Allan Rabinowitz

(CPS)--The physical and psychological effects of marijuana smoking are still the subjects of many scientific studies, and the results of these studies are often vague and conflicting. While one study shows that pot actually causes the brain to shrink, another shows that people who have smoked the equivalent of ten joints a day for seventeen years have sufferen no mental impairment. While one study concludes that marijuana is more carcinogenic than tobacco, another condludes that marijuana is useful in fighting cancer by reducing nausea in cancer patients undergoing chemical therapy.

Currently, the majority of evidence leans in the direction that marijuana causes no permanent or irreversible physical or mental damage, if it causes any at all.

Even as outspoken a pot critic as Dr. Robert DuPont, Director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, has recently reversed his stand and stated that "there is no question that alcohol and tobacco are causing us far more health problems than marijuana does."

As late as last October, DuPont had stated that, although he was against jailing marijuana offenders, he felt that the drug posed a greater health threat than tobacco and liquor combined. He also concluded that many people using marijuana regularly today would show evidence of permanent brain damage in the future.

There is no evidence, DuPont added in his recent change of stand, that marijuana impaired the academic performance of college students. However, said DuPont, one recent study showed that college tokers "had greater difficulties than non-users in deciding career goals and were more likely to have dropped out of college to reassess their goals."

At a recent conference in New York on chronic marijuana use, further evidence was given that marijuana does no real physical harm and does not damage the functions of the brain.

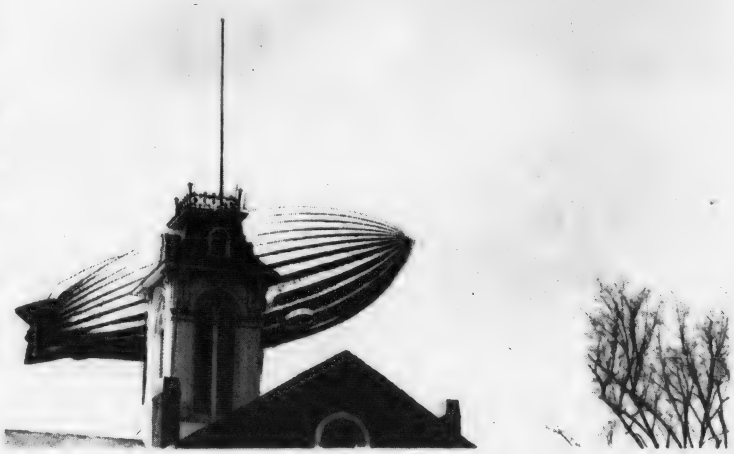
The conference, sponsored by New York Medical College, the New York Academy of Science and DuPont's National Institute on Drug Abuse, examined thirty studies of chronic pot users in Jamaica, Costa Rica and Greece. In Jamaica, the marijuana used may be as much as ten times more powerful than that available in the United States. Many users have smoked as much as twenty-five joints of this high-grade dope and hash everyday for the last seventeen years. Still, there was no brain damage found, and the ability to concentrate on work was no less than that of non-smokers.

The reports on dope, however, are not all favorable to the nation's twelve million regular users. A recent study at the University of Indiana indicates that the substances present in marijuana are more carcinogenic than tobacco smoke. In addition, researchers at Washington University in St. Louis have found that frequent marijuana usage can depress male sex hormone levels, possibly causing impotency in some men.

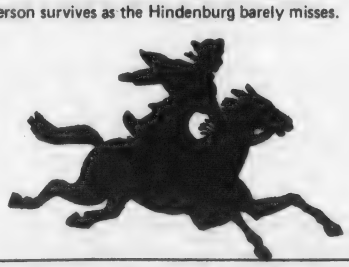
Marijuana is growing increasingly popular in this country. Six states and a number of cities have already decriminalized its use. It is estimated that twenty-nine million adults have at least tried pot. A recent report by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare indicates that for the first time, a majority of college age youth have smoked the weed. The report also said that pot is rapidly becoming the "recreational drug" for younger children as well. In a survey of teenagers by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, more than 10 percent of the children between the ages of twelve and seventeen said that they have not only tried marijuana, but currently use it.

With its increasing use, studies of marijuana will also continue. Whether the numerous results will be any more final or less conflicting is open to question.

Currently, there seems to be only one definite conclusion about marijuana that is supported by the results of all the various scientific studies: It does get you high.



A Bicentennial Special



Maryville's Role In The Fight For Freedom

May 2, 1942: "The Seige of Thaw." German tanks surrounded the building but fearless librarians held their ground.

June 2, 1917: Anderson survives as the Hindenburg barely misses.

Bergner, Denney To Give Recital

Tenor Daniel P. Bergner and organist F. Scott Denney will present their junior recital Friday, March 5, at 7:00 p.m. in the Maryville College Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Bergner, a senior chemistry major from Orchard Park, New York, is a student of Dr. Dan Kinsinger. In addition to singing in the College Concert Choir, he has performed as a Messiah soloist. He is a member of Tau Kappa Chi, Honorary Music Society at Maryville College.

He will perform a recitative and aria from a Bach Cantata as well as songs of Wolf and Debussy. He will be accompanied by Peggy Leatherwood.

Denney, a junior organ major from Green River, Wyoming, is studying under Dr. James Bloy. As a member of the Worship Committee, he has played for numerous vesper services and is organist at Highland Presbyterian Church in Maryville. He is a member of Tau Kappa Chi and the Maryville College Concert Choir.

For his recital, Denny will perform a J. S. Bach Prelude and Fugue in b minor, BWV 544, and Hindemith's Second Sonata for Organ.

Blount History Contest

The Fourth Annual History Contest, sponsored by Blount County History teachers, will be held Wednesday, March 31 at Maryville College.

Contest categories are: Grades 6-9, Tennessee History to the Present; Grades 7-9, U. S. History through the Civil War; Grades 7-9, World History to 1500 (Ancient, Medieval); Grades 10-12, U. S. History since 1865, Grades 10-12, World History, 1500 to Present.

Examinations will be 75 minutes in length and include 75 objective-type questions and one essay style question.

An individual student may compete in a single category, however, each school may enter two students in each category.

Registration will be in Wilson Chapel Courtyard from 9:00 to 9:30 a. m. Following the examination, there will be a tour of the campus, lunch in Pearsons Hall as guests of the college, and recreation in the Physical Education building. Those who want to swim should bring a suit.

First place winners in the two high school categories will be granted a $200 scholarship award to Maryville College.

The Columbia University Glee Club will present a concert at Maryville College Monday, March 8, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

MC SPORTS

The Maryville College Winter sports schedule winds down to a conclusion this weekend as the Winter term draws to a close five days later. Four Scot wrestlers will be competing at the NCAA Division III Championships in Iowa, while the Lady Scots basketball team will be home to host the Tennessee State Small College Basketball Tourney.

The 1975-76 season has already ended for the mens' basketball team. The Scots concluded their season last week in Virginia by dropping two games to finish the year with a record of 9-13. Maryville lost to Radford College on Tuesday night, 91-80, before dropping a 110-84 decision to Washington and Lee University on Wednesday evening.

Randy Lambert lead all scorers in the Radford game with 35 points. Also scoring in double figures for the Scots were Mike Morton with 18, and Jeff Draper with 11. Radford lead at halftime, 44-32.

The final game of the year for the Scots found Lambert conclude his four-year career by again claiming high scoring honors with 31 points. Another senior closing out four years of play, Kenny Talbott, contributed 24. Ty Limbaugh had 13. The two other seniors playing their final basketball game for Maryville, Mike Morton and Larry Walko, scored four and two points respectively.

The Lady Scots were originally scheduled to play two games last week, but ended up with only one. Despite this, the Lady Scots were credited with two victories.

Scheduled to host Lincoln Memorial University on Tuesday night, the Railsplitters forfeited the game as a result of disbanding the team due to internal conflict. The forfeit gave Maryville an automatic victory.

The Lady Scots earned their win on Thursday evening by defeating a rough Cumberland College, 62-53, at Williamsburg, Kentucky. It concluded the Lady Scots' regular season with a record of 11-9.

Senior Captain Terrie Topham was the leading scorer for the visitors with 16 points. Chris Curran, Sharon Youngs, and Libby Lowry contributed 14 points each.

The victory was spoiled by the ankle injury to freshman reserve guard Kathy Kaplan. She is lost for competition in the weekend tournament and narrowed Maryville's squad size down to only six players.

The wrestling team concluded its dual match schedule over the weekend by defeating Southern Tech on Saturday afternoon in Marietta, Georgia, 29-26. The victory gave Maryville a record of 11-7.

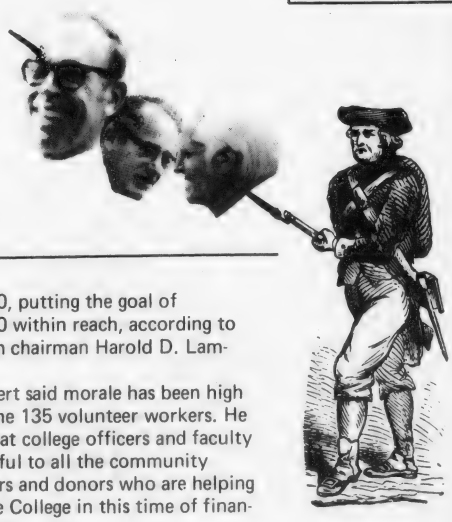
The match was highlighted by Bob Valentine's record-breaking ninth pin of the year. The 190-pound freshman broke the record of eight formerly held by Jim Batchler from last season, Wayne Risko during the 1972-73 season, and Gary DeRidder in 1934-35.

Other Maryville victories during the Southern Tech match were recorded by Gary DeAlmo, Mark Thedford, Wayne Dunn, and Risko. The heavyweight match involving Bob Von Mitch ended in a draw.

In addition to Valentine, Risko also won his match as the result of a pin.

A total of four wrestlers will represent Maryville at the NCAA Division III Chapionships at Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa this weekend. They include Valentine, Dunn, Risko, and DeAlmo.

IF STANDING UP FOR AMERICA ISN'T YOUR THING... We've already told you about the Bicentennial toilet seat. You know, the one with red, white and blue stripes on the top of the lid, and a gold embossed eagle on simulated mahogany underneath.



Small College Basketball Tourney Continues

The Tennessee State Small College Basketball Tourney, involving a total of ten womens' teams from across the state, continues today and tomorrow at the MC gymnasium.

The highlight of today's action is scheduled for 7:30 tonight with the championship game on tap. This will be the sixth and final game of the day.

Friday's schedule calls for two games to be played simultaneously at 9:00 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Prior to the championship game, there will be a contest starting at 6:00 p.m.

The tournament concludes tomorrow morning with the consolation game which will start at 9:00.

MC Briefs

Saturday morning March 6 at 10:00 a.m. there will be a sale of items removed from the farm buildings. The procedes from this sale will go toward the reconstruction of the log house. Items for sale include: various dimensions of cleaned, used lumber; lap siding; paneling; roofing tin; desks; doors; antique fixtures; and, many others.

A gift from ALCOA has brought the total of community campaign gifts to Maryville College to more than $115,000, putting the goal of $120,000 within reach, according to campaign chairman Harold D. Lambert.

Lambert said morale has been high among the 135 volunteer workers. He added that college officers and faculty are grateful to all the community volunteers and donors who are helping Maryville College in this time of financial stress.

The division chairmen and captains are asking all their workers to complete their assignments this week and report the results to Bill Mooney at the College Development Office.

E-Z CURB
8-11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

Drewery's	12-OZ.		$1.69
Pabst	12-OZ.		$1.93
Miller "Ponies"	7-OZ.	8 Per Pk.	$1.79

Picnic Supplies
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
8 - MIDNIGHT

102 W. Broadway
983-9220

NOW OPEN

- ★ The Acoustic Music Shop
- ★ Greenleaf Fancy
- ★ Rams Arcade
- ★ The Golden Carrot
- ★ Blue Goose Gifts
- ★ Wacky Tobacy

Bluegrass Coffee Shop and Bluegrass Jam Every Saturday Night

Hours: 10-9 Mon. - Sat.
Sun. 1-9. Closed Wed.

THE Highland Echo

Z 703

Vol. 61 No. 18 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | March 26, 1976

Anna-Maria and David Holmes, the featured guest artists at tonight's presentation of 'Swan Lake' by the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet.

'Swan Lake' tonight

Three area ballet companies comprising approximately 43 dancers will perform the classic ballet Swan Lake March 25 and 26 in the Maryville College Theatre at 8:15 p.m.

The companies will be performing with the international dancers Anna-Marie and David Holmes along with Geoffery Thomas who will dance the role of von Rothbart. The majority of the large troupe is the Maryville-Alcoa Civic Ballet with guest dancers from the Knoxville Ballet Company and the Oak Ridge Civic Ballet.

Mr. Thomas was formerly a member of the San Francisco Ballet Company while Mr. and Mrs. Holmes now operate out of London, although they began their careers in Canada. Natives of Vancouver, Mrs. Holmes started her lessons at the age of three, while Mr. Holmes got a late start at 20 after first training to be an opera singer. From Vancouver they moved to Winnipeg and its Grand Ballets Canadiens. Europe then beckoned where they danced with major companies of Holland, Germany, and Great Britain.

By now the Holmeses have performed in 32 countries and continue to travel to four or five every year. Their record for travel was while they were with the Chicago International Ballet. Within three months they had toured 70 western cities only to turn around and duplicate it in the east.

While the Holmeses were dancing with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, they met quest artists from Russia. Friendship developed and the Russian dancers invited them to come to Russia to study. After several months of study they were told that the best way to learn was to actually dance parts in the ballets currently being performed. The Holmeses consented, were well received and later were invited to become a part of the celebrated Kirov Ballet. They extended their six month stay to two years and they were given an open invitation by Soviet officials to return.

Home Concert Sunday

By Scott Denney

After its return from a 2500 mile eleven day tour of cities in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida, the Maryville College Concert Choir will present its home concert on Sunday evening, March 28, at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. The program will be presented in salute to the nation's bicentennial, representative of 200 years of sacred choral music in America, reflecting man's traditional and contemporary expressions of his relationship to his fellow man and God.

The program is in three parts. Part one opens with America the Beautiful Fanfare introducing choral works of the Revolutionary days. O Magnify the Lord with me, music by contemporary American composer George Lynn, uses a text from the 1850 Bay Psalm Book. Two works by William Billings, America and Easter Anthem, portray the spirit of the New England states in early America. Arrangements of two spirituals by present day American musicians, James Laster (Maryville graduate of 1957) and Robert Shaw, reveal the spirit of the South: Lord, I want to be a Christian and If I got my ticket, can I ride? Part one continues with three shape note tunes, indiginous of East Tennessee and the Western Applachian regions; they are curiously named Maryville (L.M. and C.M.) and Knoxville. The group closes with Soe Wee May Sing, another Bay Psalm Book text, set to music by Norman Lockwood of Colorado.

Part two opens with the Southern folk hymn Wondrous Love by Paul Christiansen, son of the famous F. Melius Christiansen, pioneer in the college a cappella choir tradition, and whose Love in Grief from his choral cycle From Grief to Glory will follow. Urbs Syon Unica (City of high renown), a cappella chorus from Horatio Parker's oratorio Hora Novissima (The celestial country) represents the late nineteenth century composition of our country. Part two closes with two works by 20th century composers: Easter Chorale by Samuel Barber and O Be Joyful (Psalm 100) by Ainslee Cox.

Opening part three will be the highlight of the concert, a medley of choral selections from the musical Godspell by Stephen Schwartz. The program closes with an exulting setting of the benedictus from Luke I, Blessed Be the Lord, composed by the choir's conductor, Harry Harter.

Traditionally, the choir closes its concert with a paraphrase of the Twenty-Third Psalm to the Scottish Psalter tune, "Crimond," and Peter Lutkin's "The Lord Bless You and Keep You."

Tour impressions

After a week of daily rehearsals before the tour, the choir had its traditional service in the little chapel

continued on page 3

The Choir relaxes before pre-tour tradition of singing the Alma Mater. Their Home Concert will be presented Sunday at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

ACC--alcohol issue and Saga pondered

At the last ACC meeting (before the break) major discussion centered in the alcohol debate, the SAGA food service and dining room problems, and a proposal by the IPC to change the Religion Department curriculum. (See related story.)

The alcohol issue was not debated in full by the Council, instead Dean Massey explained the attempts by students to alter the present College policy on alcohol. Before their proposal to alter the policy can come before the Council it must be approved by the Residential Life Committee. This is expected some time early this term.

The largest area of discussion centered around the vandalism, stealing, and general misuse of the cafeteria and food service utensils and glassware. Several situations existed at the time, they included the loss of approximately 600 glasses, the leaving of trays on tables following meals, and the consistent neglect of some students of showing their ID cards at mealtime. This latter issue raised the question of the number of people who are

continued on page 4

Archaeology course offered

Students, faculty, and staff will have the opportunity during the spring term to attend a Continuing Education course on Current Research in Archaeology to be taught by a team of University of Tennessee archaeologists. The course is scheduled for Monday evening 7:30 - 9:00 p.m., beginning March 22 and ending May 24. The fee for the course will be $15.

The content of the course will relate to current archaeological research as demonstrated by excavations in Africa, Europe, Southeastern United States, and Mesoamerica. Excavations in these areas will be used to demonstrate the latest techniques and interpretations in archaeology. The course will require no previous knowledge in the field, and the content will vary from that of the Introduction to Archaeology offered spring term 1975.

Any sociology major interested in attending and developing a realted reading course (Soc. 350) for credit should contact Dr. Nelson (983-3555 or 983-8351).

Judicial committee

The Judicial Committee recently acted against three students that were accused of reckless driving on the college campus. Specifically the committee found the three to be guilty of driving irresponsibly, intimidation to others with the potential of bodily harm, and the illegal change of license plates.

The committee was unanimous in their decision. They were also unanimous in the recommendation of punishments, which ranged from disciplinary probation either to the restriction or rescinding of motor vehicle privledges.

editorial/comment

How should the paper serve?

"It is a newspaper's duty to print the news and raise hell."
Wilbur F. Storey 1861

A newspaper, in order to pursue its proper course, must work within its responsible means to, as Mr. Storey said, "print the news and raise hell." If it fails in either its responsible means or its ability to raise hell then it does not achieve the essence of being a newspaper.

The central issue involved here is the role of a newspaper. Mr. Haimbach, in his final editorial several weeks ago, stated something to the effect that issues "should be allowed to die like old laws, that once they past their utility, are allowed to be forgotten . . . . . To argue over changing them on paper is a waste of time and energy."

The specific reference here is the "alcohol issue," long the focal point of lots of talk and little positive action. This alcohol issue occurs against the facade of "toleration" or the "look the other way syndrome" as a particular college policy is violated. The aim of this editorial, however, is not to promote the alcohol issue or urge for change, but rather to point out that it is an issue that effects our every day lives and as long as the present situation exists as an issue it is deemed both reportable and debatable by the newspaper.

Newspapers, at all levels—from a metropolitan daily to a high school monthly—have the same duty: to confront the issues head on. Once confronted, a succession of reporting follows where the issue is objectively featured and then debated on its merits as they are relative to the community.

This, together with investigative reporting (as in the Watergate reportage), gives the newspaper a unique place in community—that of a "watchdog," a plausible and fruitful sense of balance that exists for the good of all. This is integral to duty, and it gives the newspaper the ability to comment when all other institutions and their internal "watchdogs" fail.

Therefore, the "essence" of a newspaper is duty—duty to readers to provide responsible and fair reporting. Duty is an impartial yet integral part of community where as a force both creative and pertinent it can serve the best interests of all.

Tim Rahn

P.G. Evergreen & sun

By Lisa Wilson

There's a feeling in the air, a new feeling. Perhaps it is linked to a change in the wind, a kind of breathy, persistent blowing that is too young and excited to rest. Some would say the feeling is caused by a difference in the tone of bird song. It is true that notes are somehow sharper and clearer and that the pitch rises to an almost shrill sound of anticipation. The air has grown warmer. As a child sticks one toe hesitantly into cold water, so the adjustment occurs.

I remember having a subconscious knowledge of this feeling when, waking up of the morning, smells were of grass and green and leftover rain and the world seemed painted mysteriously with wet light before my eyes.

And nights. The darkness seems to not know quite what to do with itself in this in-between of almost-ending and barely-beginning. The moon smiles a cold light, smug and reluctant to be overcome by the sun, and stars melt and drip shine that nearly reaches the ground before it spreads and disintegrates. Crickets are affected by the feeling and sing out their uncertainity with loud and boasting tones. At night in sleep, the fetal flowers stir and begin to reach out through the dark. The earth prepares to give birth.

Once when I was young I caught a jar full of fireflies that were invisible until a splash of yellow struck the surrounding dusk. I knew they were magic insects because they were born at night and faded with the darkness in the still hours before morning. Their flashes of light blinked saying, "It's time! It's time!" and holding them was like tasting medicine that is bitter but turns sweet as it goes down. Their tiny legs struggled like live hair and they left a scent of firefly-sweat on my hands when I stuffed them into a mayonnaise jar. I had provided them with a fist full of grass and a hole the size of a small nail, but in the morning they were dead, legs clutching blades of grass, some of them with their lights still on.

Like a crack in ice or the seconds before sleep, changes occur. Sometimes we are aware of what is happening; other times our world is

continued on page 4

staff/policy

Editor—Tim Rahn; Assistant Editor (Photography)—Ed Loper; Assistant Editor—Ruth Wilbanks; Layout Editor—Deborah Huffman; Business Manager—Jim Dewhirst; Circulation Manager—Alan Regenbrecht; Reporters—Scott Denny, Karen Amos, Charlie Craven, Debbie Welch, Trippy Banner; Proof Readers—Karen Gerdetz, Lisa Wilson.

Echo Philosophy: The Highland ECHO is the campus community newspaper of Maryville College. The primary concern of the staff is to communicate the news and issues of the campus to all concerned. This is to be achieved through objective news reporting, investigative reporting, and feature stories. Further representation is through the use of creative efforts poetry, prose, photos and two dimensional art.

Recognizing the concept of responsible and objective journalism, the ECHO will publish rebuttals in either story form or as letters to the editor to all issues raised. These may be addressed to the editor through Box 2820.

All type for the ECHO is composed by Kathy Lane in the College Print Shop, then printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Something is definitely missing

As student teaching moves into full swing during the Winter and Spring terms; the necessity for a re-evaluation of the Teacher Education program at Maryville becomes painfully apparent. In the past few years this program has been basically adequate, but with the current job market crunch, a strengthening of our program is a must if Maryville graduates can hope to find teaching positions.

There are several prominent areas of this program which need revamping. The first of these areas is the grading system. Although we are constantly told that grades as such don't matter; a student teaching grade can have serious repercussions when a student applies for his/her first teaching position. As the program now operates, the Education Department and the student's Dept. Supervisor decide among themselves what grade the student should receive, taking into consideration the cooperating teachers evaluations of the students work. This is a simply marvelous idea, however . . . . . During the past term there was a serious communication breakdown in more than one instance, and the cooperating teachers evaluations somehow got lost in the shuffle. Very interesting, don't you agree. After all that little oversight can't be that important, cooperating teachers are just the people who work with the student every day during the term. Also, faculty members from the students major field of study and the Education Department are required to observe the student teachers at least once a week. This aspect of the program was not carried through with last term. How can a student expect to receive a fair grade when there is no possible way their improvement can be noted and their work adequately reviewed?

Another area of major concern should be the students academic preparation before entering into this new and somewhat frightening endeavor. Although the courses now offered are enought to secure certification, a few more would not hurt. It is more than a little ridiculous to expect a Physical Education major to be adequately prepared to teach on the elementary level with only one course in elementary games.

English and History majors have also found themselves to be at a disadvantage during their term as student teachers. In most cases they find themselves trapped into an already tightly structured program on the secondary level. There is little opportunity for creativity on the students part if everything is already preplanned.

I find myself at an extreme disadvantage when it comes to offering alternative plans of action. Realistically, Maryville College is joining the rest of the world in suffering the effects of inflation, and we had best resign ourselves to more budget cutbacks and fewer new programs. However, training the educators of tomorrow is an extremely important fact of this institution and these students should not be viewed as, "here today, gone tomorrow." They should be adequately prepared, fairly reviewed, and greatly encouraged. Hopefully Maryville College will correct its past mistakes, tighten communication, and give these student teachers the consideration they deserve.

Ruth Wilbanks

Letters To The Echo

Dear Editor:

Is there ever a time when a small detail deserves being called to attention? Obviously I think so, or I wouldn't be writing this letter.

During the last week of Winter Term I realized the old Anderson Hall tower bell is never heard any more. Since Christmas it was rung briefly only once at Dr. Copeland's request to open February Meetings.

Thinking that this was only because no one could take the time or find someone else to ring it, and thinking that hearing it would be especially appropriate to the special occasion of Norman Cousins' being here, I stopped by the Business Office that Friday morning and volunteered to ring it about five minutes before CIV was to begin.

Business Office personnel thought the idea was a good one, and suggested I come back at 9:00 a.m. to see Mr. Crawford, who would give me the final OK and the key. But at 9:00 a.m. I learned a monkey wrench had been thrown in: a faculty member whom Mr. Crawford consulted said he did not want the bell rung. The only reason I heard given was that it "was not customarily rung" before a CIV, and that this person "didn't want to hear it."

Is the Echo space this letter is taking unjustified? I am thinking of that as I write. But I am also thinking of the small details that make life on a small campus like Maryville unique, and I judge the mellow, echoing sounds of that bell to be one of them. Perhaps we can't bring about major changes this year to make life here more pleasant. But to take care of small—even seemingly trivial—details that, when added up, add a flavor to this campus which can't be found at a place like UT—that is something we can do.

Thus it bothers me just a little that because of a faculty member's opinion we probably won't hear the bell at all for the rest of this year, for we certainly will have no occasion more special than the Norman Cousins visit. I hope this person can explain the opinion stated Friday, and recommend the times we should hear the bell.

Charlie Craven

Wanna write?

As of yet the ECHO staff could use a little rounding out. If you have ever had the interest to write for a newspaper or if you have ever written for a newspaper and still have the urge to seek the big "scoop" the editors would like to know about your interests and the possibility of incorporating your talents into the development of a quality news publication on campus.

Particularly, the staff needs some more beef in the sports area. Right now a lot of "ifs" and "maybes" exist here without any positive response to the possibility of working for the ECHO. If your cup of tea is not in the realm of sports reporting, the ECHO is always in need of good straight news reporters who do not mind writing a news story or two on a weekly basis.

If you have any inclinations along these lines, let one of the editors know or drop a note in Box 2820.

Tour, cont.

after its dress rehearsal on Thrusday evening. This year, each member wrote on a card what he wanted to give on the tour and cards were exchanged. During the candelight service, the cards were read, with responses ranging from wanting to give correct pitches to love, friendship, and God's word. The next day, the choir sang the college Alma Mater on the chapel steps before departing to Cleveland, Tennessee.

Some of the events which made the tour more arousing included beach time in Florida, singing in the ocean, having chicken for dinner at all but two of the churches, a bus decorated with streamers for Saint Patrick's Day, and a bus driver named Jimwhoaged 10 years in 10 days.

The flat tire incident occurred en route to Florida, and with a little help from the girls, who stood by the road and lifted their pant legs, three trucks had pulled over within ten minutes.

Most would agree that the most memorable concert was in New Port Richy, Florida, due to the outstanding emotional communication with the audience. During dinner of the day of the last concert in Tucker, Georgia, the traditional faux pas, or social blunder, was held, in which gifts are presented reminding individuals of their most outstanding events. This year, the girls wore their best dresses and presented each male member with a flower and a kiss! The gifts included cans of deodorant, tooth brushes, monkey posters, and the tenors were presented with cheese to be cut before the concert. Among the other items of paraphernalia was a jar of suppositories to replace the jar stolen from the first aid kit. Another choir tour was concluded with the singing of the Alma Mater on the Chapel steps at 2:45 a.m. on Tuesday, March 23.

Religion curriculum

At its last meeting, the All College Council approved a recommendation from the Instructional Program Committee to revise the core requirement in Religion. A student is now allowed to choose any 200 course as core, or any 300 level course with the permission of the instructor. It should be noted upper level courses are more specific and should be taken only if genuine interest exists in the subject matter.

This change in requirements is part of a general restructuring of the Religion curriculum. Keeping with the present trend of academic study rather than strict Christian Bible study, the department has been streamlined with the regrouping of related courses, the addition of others, and offerings in the relationship between traditional religion and modern culture. Such courses would deal with topics in the areas of biomedical ethics, environmental concerns and modern warfare. In addition there will be rotating offerings in the traditional areas of academic religion.

City sewer line explained

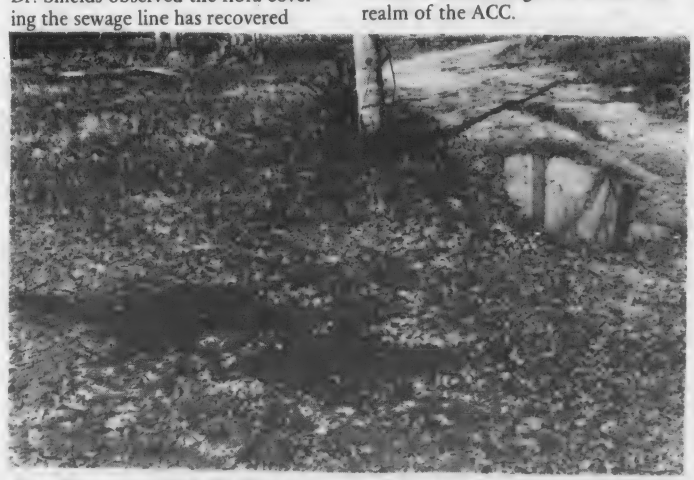
This shows the path the Maryville city sewer line takes through the College Woods. Many questions have arose since the construction was completed as to whether or not the area would be restored.

By Ed Loper
and Trippy Banner

In recent years the college woods have experienced the pains of progress. The Maryville city sewage line crossed the college property in two seperate sites. When the school first learned of the city's wishes to use part of the college woods, the school immediately became concerned over the impact the construction of the sewage lines would have on the ecology of the woods. In cooperation with the city the school was able to alter the originally proposed routes, such that minimal damage would occur to the woods.

The school persuaded the city to run the two sewage lines along Duncan Branch (beside the old picnic area) and along Brown Creek to avoid high ground. The creek areas were ideal paths because they represented low lying areas. When the school arranged for the passage of the two sewage lines through the college property an agreement was met on how the city would leave the construction sites upon completion of the projects. When construction began Maryville College retained an engineer to protect her interests and to supervise the projects. His function was to help avoid any unnecessary damage to the woods and creeks. In an interview with Neil McDade in reference to the construction of the sewer line he stated, "every effort has been made by Maryville College to maintain the integrity of the college woods".

The construction of the sewer lines have now been completed and hopefully minimal damage has been inflicted upon the college woods. In the late fall Neil McDade, Dr. Shields, and the engineer retained by the school observed the areas of construction. The school wished to verify whether the changes and reclaimation of the construction sites were in compliance with the stipulations outlined in the agreements between the city and school.



Thus far, the findings of the school's observation reveal the agreements have been met or soon will be met. The agreement to clean the areas inflicted have been carried out, and a final cleanup of the creek's debris (tree tops and logs) will be completed by the spring. Grass has been planted at both construction sites and is growing well. There was no agreement about planting trees where trees once existed; therefore, no trees have been replanted. The city prohibits the obstruction of the terrain within a twelve foot path above the sewage line. However, trees could be planted in the surrounding areas.

Damage to Brown Creek is minimal. There was little silting which occurred and the prexisting habitats in the creek have been maintained. Dr. Shields observed the flora covering the sewage line has recovered heartily and the plant habitats developing are quite interesting.

The impact on Duncan Branch is somewhat different. It is for sure the stream has been adversely affected and will not change for quite a few years. The silting of the creek is still occurring, but it is expected that silting will stop soon. Dr. Shields believes once the silting stops it will take several decades for the creek to be flushed of the silt. The silt has changed the plant and animal habitats of the stream, and similar habitats will probably develop before the silt is gone.

Other than cleaning the creeks of debris, the areas will be left as they are. Officially, the college has no plans for replanting trees or further cleaning. Debris and marshy areas will be left as they are and new habitats will be allowed to develop naturally as they now exist. No plans exist as of now for the restoration of the picnic area along Duncan Branch.

Dr. Shields has suggested planting pine trees in the inflicted areas. If anyone has an interest in restoring the picnic area or mending the scared terrain, it is suggested that any moves in this direction might be within the realm of the ACC.

Standing water—this will offer a unique look into the development of different eco-systems in the area.

adrift

"America's real mad," he always said, "Lester myboy Lester." He's proud of that name, stood on winter sidewalks with him. "And guys like C-o-d-y," pronouncing the name with his teeth, relishing it, "guys like C-o-d-y in America. Crazy."—Jack Kerouac

MC sports . . . . . .

Track

The 1976 M.C. Track and Field team looks like a team composed of David and Goliath. In the track events, there is a small talented David who can pack a punch. There are but six runners to cover eight events and two relays. Mr. Everything of the runners is senior Mike Osborne. Mike runs both the high and intermediate hurdles, is a member of the mile relay, and throws the javelin. In the sprints are junior, Gary Petree and sophomore, Ron Lasley. Gary is a fine sprinter who can run under 10 in the 100 and 23 in the 220. Gary, Ron, sophomore, Steve Harrison, and sophomore, Bill Straher, make up the 440 relay. Steve has excellent speed and is a good shot putter. Bill is the 440 man, a member of the mile relay, and is a triple, long and high jumper. He has done well in all three jumps. The distance events are covered by sophomore, Joe Whitehead. As yet, the events that Joe will run are undetermined. He will probably be running the 880, the mile, or either a leg of the mile relay or the 3 mile run. The only freshman runner is Phil Lloyd. Phil is presently working on both hurdles and is untried as a quarter man. Phil has the potential to become a very fine runner.

Now for Goliath. There are fourteen men involved in seven field events. Phil Lloyd, Bill Straher, and Gary Petree will be doing the long jump, triple jump, and high jump. In the javelin there is freshman Mike Miller, sophomore Ron Lasley and senior Mike Osborne. Ron and Mike both throw around 150 ft. In discus there is junior school record-holder (132' 10") Tom Duling, junior Lee Taylor, who throws a 130', and two freshmen, Alvin Richmond and Tim Handler. In the shot put, there are two men who throw over 40' easily—senior Mark Keahon and Steve Harrison. Pole vaulters are Scott Cook, who does 13'6" consistently and freshman Randy Reagan, who as a senior in high school cleared 14'6".

The team has much talent, but little depth in the track events. A single injury to any runner could be bad news for the team. If there is anyone who has any running ability, please come out and show your stuff.

Baseball

A half dozen returning veterans and lettermen plus a host of newcomers are eagerly looking forward to the 1976 Maryville College baseball season. The outfield will be filled with new names, but the infield returns intact except for the catching position.

Bobby Fitzgerald will take over the catchers spot. Last year as a freshman Bobby caught the second game of doubleheaders and was the usual designated hitter with a .332 average.

First baseman Wayne Risko, second baseman Vince Fucci (the leading hitter last year with a .340 average), third baseman Paul Bailey (an excellent fielder along with a .333 batting average), and Joe Moffett will return to form the nucleus for this year's team.

The pitching staff will be led by junior Kevin McKinstry, a returning letterman with a 12-3 won-loss record accumulated over the past two seasons. He will be joined in the starting rotation by Danny Thomas, a promising sophomore, and Mike Flagler, a converted third baseman.

Fighting for starting jobs will be returning lettermen Steve Wright who has great potential and Rich Ramos, a good fielding outfielder. There may be another one or two men yet to report from last year's squad that could help carry the load.

Along with these returning players will be several freshmen and transfer students fighting for jobs in the outfield, infield, and on the pitching staff.

Moore receives karate awards

Miss Laraine Moore, a Maryville College sophomore, was the recipient of two trophies at the Southeastern Isshin-Rye Karate Championship on March 13th in Athens, Tenn.

More than two hundred persons from five states participated in the Athens tourney. Miss Moore was awarded two of the twenty-seven trophies presented. She received 2nd place in the free style competition and 3rd place in the form division.

In the free style exhibition she performed Kumite, the art of fighting, while for her form demonstration she did Kata, a series of exercises judged on the basis of speed, power, technique and balance.

Laraine, who has trained for two terms in the Continuing Education Program at Maryville College, was also recently presented with the Orange Belt in Karate.

A new Karate class, open to both men and women, was started at the college Thursday night, March 25th.

Who's a fool?

"April's Fool of Surprises" will be the theme of the program to be presented in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall on April 1 at 8:15 p.m. Sponsored by Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women, the program will feature both student and faculty comedy acts ranging from a recorder and harpsichord duo to a Swingle Singers group. Admission price is $1.00, and the income will be used for scholarships for incoming freshman of the music department of Maryville College.

Suits & showers

In order to keep chemical treatment costs down and to simplify pool vacuuming and filter operations, notice is hereby given that SWIM SUITS ONLY will be allowed . . . no cutoffs or gym shorts.

For the same reasons we ask that every swimmer comply with the request to take a soap shower before entering the water.

ACC, cont.

possibly using these ID's to obtain free meals.

Several suggestions were made in ways these problems could be remedied. These ranged from charging entrance fees to those that forget their ID to a campus room check to recover lost glassware. No action was taken by the Council in any of these directions.

It was noted that the Board will be conducting an objective evaluation of the ACC during this term. They will be talking with members of the Council and are looking for outside opinions from those that may be interested in expressing their opinions.

A final reminder that all petitions for ACC nominations are due at 5:00 p.m. today.

World scene

The site of the Battle of Hastings will be auctioned as part of a 573 acre estate on June 24 unless it is sold privately before that time. Hastings, where William the Conqueror overtook the forces of Harold, is not regarded as sacred ground to most Britishers as many historical places are in America.

Karl Hess is predicting the Republican party is in its final days, and the "showdown" between Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford is little more than its funereal dirge. Hess, one of the primary authors of the Republican Party platform in the early '60's, stated in an essay in Rolling Stone that "Long a minority party, it has moved towards microscopic representation . . . becoming simply what the old cartoons said it was—the party of the very rich, the global set and the angle shooters."

The cast of the Democratic party hopefuls continues to wane and blossom as the early primaries are taking their toll. The lastest comers are Jerry Brown, Governor of California, and Ramsey Clark of New.York. Milton Shapp, Governor of Pennsylvania and Sargent Shriver of Massachusetts have for all intensive purposes dropped from the running.

The 21 month rule of President Isabelle Peron, of Argentina, ended Wednesday with a military coup. She was arrested and escorted to an unknown destination pending possible exile. It is expected that the military junta will move closer to the United States and away from Communist influences.

The Ford administration has resolved to meet any new commitment of Cuban troops still in Africa with "swift and vigorous response against Cuba itself." Henry Kissinger has stated that the United States cannot accept Cuban military excursions. It is not known what explicit action the United States might take.

A bugging device has been found in the office of a George Wallace campaign official. It is suspected that it has been placed there by the Carter organization or a close supporter. The matter is being investigated.

continued from page 2

altered with the suddenness of thunder in the night. The earth shifts its weight, faces in windows replace other faces, mountains slowly stoop with age, and rivers never pause in their pilgrimage to the sea. As home always leaves the map and moves to the heart, so winter slowly turns to nurse its wounds and crawl out of hiding renewed. People know this change and blink their eyes more quickly in an effort to hurry its happening. And trees, murmuring proudly of their newborn green, whisper among themselves, "It's spring!"

bank of maryville

Your Bank
In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

THE Highland Echo

Z 703

Vol. 61 No. 19 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 2, 1976

Nine new members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society were formally inducted on Monday evening, March 29. They, along with the four members inducted winter term, were recognized during the CIV on Wednesday, March 31. These thirteen members are Milt Bush, Debbie Coppage, Laura Dance, Kimberly Darden, Linda Davis, Pat Hines, Bob Hines, Barbara Kerr, Kathy Kirkhart, Penny Lopez, Larry Walko, Brenda Wilson, and Lisa Wishon. Membership in the society is limited to ten percent of the senior class.

England interims

Would you enjoy studying with new college friends in England? Have you ever wondered how their educational programs are structured? Are their interests and concerns the same as yours? The interim project, Comparative Education, in Brighton, England, should answer such questions and many more.

This interim is planned to provide knowledge of an educational system in another country in order to understand better your own. What are our mutual concerns and what alternatives do we find for solutions to our problems?

Specifically the interim will include two weeks affiliated with Brighton College in Brighton, England and one week in London. The two weeks in Brighton will be devoted to observation and participation in area schools and seminars. The college will also provide lectures and sightseeing within the area. The week in London and environs will include sightseeing, shopping, and theater.

Although all details of the trip have not been finalized as yet, it is estimated that the maximum cost per student for transportation, tuition, lodging and some meals for 22 days will be approximately $750 from New York.

If you have any interest or any questions, further information will be given, Tuesday, April 6 in Thaw 201 at 10:30 a.m.

King Arthur Interim

Students planning to go to England "In Search of King Arthur" during interim are requested to indicate their continuing interest by signing their names on a list posted outside Mrs. Cate's office (Anderson 217). The 22 day trip is expected to cost less than $900, New York to New York.

Long range planning

A committee, The Long Range Planning Committee of Maryville College, is currently in the process of formulating future plans for the College. The first step of the committee is to adopt a set of external and internal assumptions on which to base the plan.

The first draft of assumptions to be considered by the committee has been written. The draft, based on discussions within the administrative staff, has been distributed to heads of academic and administrative departments so that faculty and staff will have a chance to respond to the early draft.

In order for interested students to have an input into the process of formulating this long range plan several copies of the draft are available in the office of Raymond I. Brahams in Anderson Hall. Anyone who would like to read the draft and having suggestions for revisions, deletions or additions is asked to turn in those suggestions in writing prior to April 10.

While April 10 is the deadline for response to this preliminary draft, the Long Range Planning Committee of Maryville College realizes that planning is a dynamic and continuing process and student ideas on the subject are welcome at any time.

The finalized long range plan is to be completed in October and to be revised annually or more often if necessary.

Forensic winners

Members of the Maryville College Forensics team once again received high honors in intercollegiate competition during the Pi Kappa Delta Province of the Southeast Convention and Tournament held March 26-28 at Tennessee Technological University in Cookeville, TN.

Milt Bush, an MC senior, placed second in the persuasive speaking competition. Using a newly revised version of the speech that brought him high placement in the TIFA Tournament in February, Mr. Bush again impressed judges and contestants with his imaginative plan for the redirection of institutions of higher education.

Ruth Cartlidge, an MC freshman attending her third intercollegiate competition, placed fourth in Oral Interpretation. Miss Cartlidge interpreted "The Thirteenth Floor", a poem by Ogden Nash; "A Banal Miracle", a short, short story by Tim Reynolds; and a cutting from Eva LaGallienne and Florida Friebus's play "Alice in Wonderland."

Meredith Leach, a junior, was ranked fifth in Oral Interpretation. Her program was made up of two poems by Anne Sexton, a cutting from Ayn Rand's novel Anthem, and a scene from "Uncle Vanya" by Anton Chekhov.

All three contestants are newly installed members of the Tennessee Alpha chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, a national honorary forensics fraternity. Maryville College has the distinction of being the first college in Tennessee to receive a charter from Pi Kappa Delta.

Meredith Leach, Milt Bush, and Ruth Ann Cartlidge—finalists at recent speech meet.

'Gamma Rays'

Auditions for The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds were held on Monday and Tuesday, March 19 and 30. Director Blair E. Beasley announced Wednesday morning that the cast will consist of Nancy Miller as Tillie, RuthAnn Wilbanks as Beatrice, Sally Smith as Ruth, Holly Hutcheson as Nanny, and Jill Mihalow as Janice Vickery.

The play will be performed in the Maryville College Theatre on May 13, 14, and 15 at 8:15 p.m. Admission price is two dollars for adults and one dollar for students.

Soprano Barnes concert

On Friday, April 2 The Maryville College Performing Artists Concerts will present soprano Sheila Barnes at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Miss Barnes received the Bachelor's degree summa cum laude from Trinity University in Texas. She studied with Phyllis Curtin at the Yale University School of Music where she completed the predoctoral studies on a fellowship, and was chosen for the leading role in Britten's "Turn of the Screw" in 1972 and Poulenc's "Les Mammelles de Tiresias" last February. A winner of many competitions in Connecticut and Los Angeles, Miss Barnes received a fellowship to study German lieder and opera with Erik Werba and Rita Streich at the Mozarteum, Salzburg in the summer of 1973, and was presented in concerts. Subsequently that summer, she accepted an invitation to study with Pierre Bernac at the Academie Maurice Ravel in St.-Jean-de-Luz, France. She was selected to appear as the princess in the academie's production of Ravel's "L'Enfant et les Sortileges" in Bordeaux last September. In the summer of 1974, Miss Barnes was a vocal fellow at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center and performed both traditional and contemporary music. Her New York City debut recital took place this past December in Carnegie Recital Hall as winner of the 1975 annual East & West Artists competition.

Accompanist for Sheila Barnes will be Thomas Muraco, in a program including works by Mozart, Strauss, Ives, Debussy, Britten, and Walton. General Admission is $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for students. College personnel will be admitted by I.D. There will be CIV credit.

Sheila Barnes

Fred Hope auction

It's Fred Hope Fund Auction time again. What's the Fred Hope Fund Auction? Where were you last year when Tom Taylor auctioned off pies, cakes, a 10-speed bicycle, breakfast in bed, ten back rubs, a sketch of tennis shoes, homemade pizza and cherry pie for 4 and an Uncle Sam Morse Code Key Set (for which Tom got Mike Dykes' dog to bid 75 cents!).

Sponsored by the World Concerns Committee, the auction last year raised $308 in money in a fun filled evening that left behind hundreds of fond memories of good times at Maryville College. The money was donated to provide self-development aid for the drought stricken Sahel Desert area in Africa.

Since 1900, when a student at Maryville named Fred Hope led a drive to collect $50 to pay the salary of a Chinese pastor for one year, the College community has participated each year in an overseas missionary enterprise. Since 1910 this effort has been called "The Fred Hope Fund."

Fred Hope spent his life in Africa teaching the people

continued, page 2

Let the sleeping dog lie

I can still recall picking up The New York Daily News and seeing the typically gaudy headline "NIXON QUITS" in what seemed to be six inch print. I can also recall a sigh of relief passing across my mind with the thought that all of Watergate is behind us and finally we can turn our collective minds to other things; I have never been more wrong. "Some old dogs just refuse to die" and Watergate, or to be more specific, Richard Nixon has proved the point.

I have just finished reading the first installment of Woodward and Bernstein's latest work called The Final Days. To be perfectly frank, I am revolted; but not for what one would suspect to be the usual reasons. I walk away frightened by what might have happened, and thankful that it did not.

We have in this effort a picture of a sick and broken man. The account takes place in the final, closing days of Watergate when everything went sour all at once. In almost painful detail we see an incoherent President sobbing, pounding rugs, drunkenly babbling into telephones and acting in a less than sane manner. We find out what Kissinger really thought about Nixon and what Nixon really thought of Kissinger. Alexander Haig was running the country. The general lack of respect was apalling—Nixon's words speak for themselves and Kissinger had nothing good to say about the President—behind his back: He spoke constantly of a "meat-ball President" who could not understand "anything more complicated than a Reader's Digest article" and who, if he had his way, would have a "nuclear war every week." Nixon brooded drunkenly in his office paying almost no attention to affairs of state and all of Washington was running around looking for a "smoking gun." The potential for disaster was endless. We were pretty lucky.

I would be one of the last to stand up in support of Richard Nixon—now or then. After reading this Newsweek article, I am struck to the core, however, with a sickness and revulsion. As far as I am concerned, the whole issue of Watergate is history. Except for reasonable insurance that the whole thing will not happen again, we can forget the mess. The story was news then, I see it as capitalistic exploitation now. What is there to be gained by dragging a sick and broken man through the news media again, again, and again? Why kick a man who is so obviously down? Although not technically proven guilty—it was strongly suspected that he was—the man has been punished again and again. The place that he will find in history will punish him more than any legal sanction ever could. He has lost just about anything that he had hoped to gain.

I do not propose to say anything about Mr. Nixon that could be construed as praise—I really will not say anything totally against him either—silence is a much better medium. Perhaps the time has come to show just a little bit of human compassion and let "old dogs" die at last. The past can never be forgotten, but it cannot be continually relived in every painful detail. To my mind, the latest Watergate statement has little constructive purpose—Americans need to face today and turn to tomorrow.

Ed Loper

The following television review is reprinted with the full knowledge and consent of its authors, Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dee, with a little help from their friends.

A Bicentennial Salute or Hat's Off To Larry

If any of you early evening television fanatics missed Lawrence Welk's Bicentennial Tribute to all our favorite tunes of the 50's, 60's, and 70's last Saturday night, all I can say is Whew! "Hats Off to Larry" was a stirring attempt by Lawrence and his show biz gang: Bobbie and Sissie, the dynamic dancing duo; the Lennon Sisters, everybody's girlfriends; Guy and Ralna, the wedlocked songbirds; and Norma Zimmer, the quarter-keg queen—all worked together to convince the American public that they have not died of overexposure or a shortage of Haley's M.O.

The tacky, trashy, but always flashy Lawrence, started the evening of entertainment with a bang with his version of "It's My Party and I'll Cry If I Want To," accompanied by his famous orchestra. The band members, trying to get into the spirit of the 50's, had somehow managed to cram themselves into a phone booth complete with instruments! Fat Norma could be seen offstage necking with Bobbie as he attempted to sip on a Nehi and munch on a Moonpie—twenty-two scadoo, gang!

After a clever commercial about laxatives and their effects upon marriage, Lawrence and his lovable goofs returned to reflect upon those ten wild but wonderful years of political unrest, social revolution, and far-out trips to Shranri-La, better known as the 60's. To set the mood, the Lennon Sisters sang a harmonious version "We All Live in a Yellow Sub~~marine,~~" coupled with "She Came in Through the Bathroom Window." Not to be outdone, Norma Zimmer let down her titian locks and wailed out "Harper Valley P.T.A.," quickly followed by "Purple Haze," an old Jimi Hendrix favorite. (Move over, Rover; let Jimi take over.)

The atmosphere takes a swift shift to that of tolling church bells and pastel altar boys, as an anonymous tenor mellows into "Jesus is Just Alright With Me."

After popping several Doan's Pills and miscellaneous snorts of Geritol, Mr. Music and his Melodic Merry-makers returned to attempt Mission Impossible, that of portraying the 70's. To heavy disco sounds, Bobbie and Sissie flitted on stage to demonstrate the ever popular dances—the Hustle and the double Bump. Sissie was heard to mumble throughout their number; "Dancing and Swinging was all I ever really wanted to do!" Meanwhile Lawrence, "You're as young as you feel", Welk danced with the ladies in the audience, all the while humming, "I Want to Do

Letters to the ECHO

To the editor:

In your editorial last week, you quoted a past comment of mine on the alcohol issue as a reflection of my idea of the role of a newspaper. It was implied that I promoted a policy of journalistic ignorance and laissez-faire. My words were taken out of context and misconstrued to fit a purpose for which they were never intended. Not only was my statement misinterpreted, but you have falsely illustrated my view of the role of the news media.

The stand I took on the alcohol issue in my editorial of March 5 was that there were more worthwhile issues with which to belabor ourselves. We don't need a "watchdog" to bark at something so lifeless. I felt that action spoke louder than the ACC on many issues, and the history of the alcohol issue bears this out.

I never said that issues should be ignored, and we never promoted this policy in the Echoes of the past year. The proof of this is in the papers themselves as well as my past editorials.

I agree fully with your statement that it is the responsibility of the newspaper to "confront the issues head on." But you, as editor, also have a responsibility to those whose words you quote to use them in their proper context. As a point of constructive criticism, I would suggest that you be more conscientious in the future. Thank you.

David Haimbach

MATHHTAM

Last weekend, March 26 and 27, members of the mathematics club sponsored by Dr. Nichols and Dr. Dent attended the Southeastern regional mathematics conference, M.A.A., in Charlotte, N.C. Several 20 minute talks were presented by students and professors Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. A renowned mathematician, Ivan Niven from the University of Oregon presented a lecture on "Maxima and Minima Without Calculus". Any student struggling through Calculus or convinced that math is a bag of tricks would have appreciated this man's approach to maximizing and minimizing.

Penelope Lopez

Book sale

The American Association of University Women is sponsering a book sale today from 9:00 to 5:00 and Saturday from 9:00 to 12:00 at Sterchi's Department Store.

All types of books and related materials will be available at low prices. If you care to donate books, records, tapes, and puzzles contact Sterchi's or leave in designated bins at the store.

Auction, cont.

there to be self-sustaining through learning trades, growing better food, expanding education, and putting local dialects into print. He also introduced the first saw mill in Equatorial Africa and began a school for children of missionaries. Fred Hope died in 1946 but his daughter and son-in-law, Arta Grace Hope Shields and Dr. A. Randolph Shields, are still an active part of our campus.

Through the years the spirit and witness of Fred Hope has moved our College to raise thousands of dollars for support of mission projects all over the world, as well as for nearby aid in the Appalachian mountains. We hope to do double the $308 in this year's auction, so look for the signs on campus as to how to participate.

The second annual auction will be held on April 10, at 7:00 P.M. in the chapel courtyard with Tom Taylor returning as auctioneer. Last year's auction featured the duo of Bob Sturge and Ken Atchley singing new favorites such as "Maryville Woman", "Truckers Lament," and a house bringing down rendition of "You Heartless Maryville Woman, You Old Scottie Dog." This year's entertainment will be announced later, so watch for the breaking news.

David P. Young

staff/policy

Editor—Tim Rahn; Assistant Editor (Photography)—Ed Loper; Assistant Editor—Ruth Wilbanks; Layout Editor—Deborah Huffman; Business Manager—Jim Dewhirst; Circulation Manager—Alan Regenbrecht; Reporters—Scott Denny, Karen Amos, Charlie Craver, Debbie Welch, Trippy Banner; Proof Readers—Karen Gerdetz, Lisa Wilson. Faculty Adviser—Elizabeth T. Fowler.

Echo Philosophy: The Highland ECHO is the campus community newspaper of Maryville College. The primary concern of the staff is to communicate the news and issues of the campus to all concerned. This is to be achieved through objective news reporting, investigative reporting, and feature stories. Further representation is through the use of creative efforts—poetry, prose, photos and two dimensional art.

Recognizing the concept of responsible and objective journalism, the ECHO will publish rebuttals in either story form or as letters to the editor to all issues raised. These may be addressed to the editor through Box 2820.

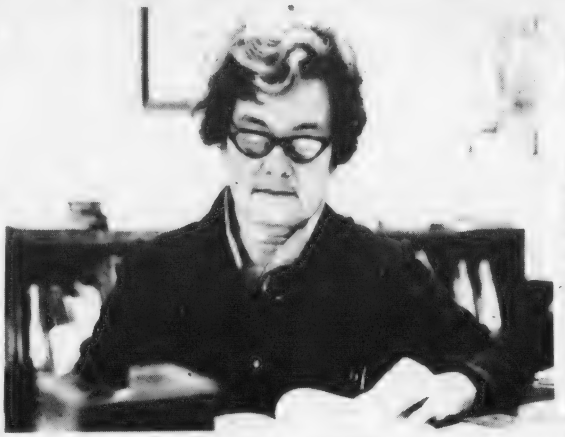
All type for the ECHO is composed by Kathy Lane in the College Print Shop, then printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Walker paper

Yes Virginia – there is scholarship at MC

by Tim Rahn

Few students notice the other roles their instructors have outside of their regular teaching duties. Instead, they take for granted the fact that professors "know it all" or merely dispense the facts of the course.



While teachers deliver lengthy lectures and ever-so-hard tests, students struggle to maintain GPA's and academic peace of mind. Somewhere along the way—caught in the academic peace of mind. Somewhere along the way—caught in the academic fury—students lose touch with the instructor's own scholastic and academic interests and abilities.

Thus instructors, too, have their viable scholarly interests which they pursue within a particular speciality. Once in a while in these scholarly pursuits—mind you these are scholarly pursuits, not motivated by anything more than a will to learn—culminate in the form of a paper or presentation that perhaps gives new insight into an academic area.

For instance, Dr. Russell Parker recently returned from presenting a paper at a conference and Dr. David Cartlidge published last April an article dealing with the Christian sex ethic in the Pauline tradition. (Specifically I Corinthians 7.) In this article, Dr. Cartlidge used Biblical scholarship to point out a particular problem in the text and reinterpret it according to what he saw within that text.

The Cartlidge article has been well received by other Biblical scholars as representative of good scholarship. When Dr. Phyllis Tribble was here as a guest during February meetings she spoke of it in this vein, pointing out how it was and is relative to much of the current work by scholars.

The most recent example of a Maryville College faculty member achieving "high marks" by way of scholarship and research was Dr. Arda S. Walker. Dr. Walker, while at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Regional Medieval Institute in Tallahassee, Florida, March 4-6, presented a paper titled: "Cult of Mary, Cause or Product of Women's Liberation in Twelvth Century France?"

Dr. Arda S. Walker, head of the History department, has just returned from presenting a paper at the Southeastern Regional Medieval Institute.

Dr. Walker, head of the History Department and a teacher at Maryville for the past 25 years, has earned the reputation of being a fine lecture teacher and one who has a wide variety of academic interests. Outside of her position at Maryville she has served the past three years on the Board of National Presbyterian History. This year Dr. Walker is participating with approximately forty other scholars as a Bicentennial Editor to The Presbyterian Outlook.

In her paper Dr. Walker reverses the previous assumption by many historians that the Virgin Cults or Cult of Mary precipitated the liberation of women that was occuring within France during the Twelvth Century. According to Dr. Walker, the article was the focal point of much of the discussion at the meeting in Tallahassee—a meeting attended by scholars from Berkeley, NYU, and other schools of a high academic reputation, and a meeting where one of the better American historical scholars, Lyn White, Jr. also delivered a paper.

While several people asked Dr. Walker for copies of her paper, it was also suggested that she might publish it; however, presently she has no plans to do such, stating that she does not have the time to finalize it for print at this time.

Previously this year Dr. Walker completed a comprehensive history of the February Meetings which will soon be published. This writer happened to get a sneak preview of this paper and found it quite unique in its overview of the development of religious patterns throughout the past century.

Houlberg art show

Lynn Houlberg, a senior art major from Miami, Florida, will present her senior art exhibit in the Fine Arts Center Gallery April 5-17. Miss Houlberg has been the recipient of the Davies Fine Arts Award as well as scholarships for rising art majors. The exhibit will consist of two dimensional media, including drawings, pen and ink, water color, and oil. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Prez sinks

(CPS)—at private schools where tuition has soared during the past decade, new plans of action for reducing costs to students have been devised by thrifty administrators.

At Franconia College in New Hampshire, cutting tuition almost $700 a year has put the college's president and its dean of students in the dining hall washing dishes while students try their hands at cooking, running the bookstore, keeping the school's books and recruiting next year's freshman class.

The changes are all part of a radical reorganization which has cut the administrative staff by 40 percent. The idea, according to Franconia president Ira Goldenberg is to attract students of more modest means (although tuition is still $4,985 a year) and help the college break even financially next year.

More important, Goldenberg claims, is starting to take "the concept of community seriously. Even if we were in fat city, we would be doing the same thing."

Interim choice

The choice is yours.

No longer is it feasible to offer interim courses for only a few students, a circumstance which means that the number of projects offered in 1976 will be limited. However, this limitation need not keep you from choosing.

To give 1976 sophomores and juniors a change to select their interim topics, tentative registration during the week of April 5-9 is necessary. Several teachers have proposed projects, but only when all students indicate preferences can desirable projects be identified and the less attractive ones eliminated.

Of course seniors will work with their major advisors on interim plans.

You will find brief descriptions of proposed projects posted in the Dining Hall, the Post Office, the Library, and outside the Registrar's Office.

When you have chosen one of the proposed topics, indicate your interest by contacting the supervisor during the week of April 5-9.

If you wish to submit an independent project, you must present the proposal with the signature of your faculty sponsor to the Interim Committee by April 12 (Box 2863). You will register for the independent project at the time of registration for fall courses (May 3-7).

Take a little time now and get into a project which appeals to you. Final selections on all projects are to be made this spring.

Career Day

April 7 is the date for this year's Career Day sponsored by the Career Planning and Placement Office. A series of workshops will take place during the regular CIV time with credit being given for participation in any of the workshops.

Workshops presently scheduled are Health Careers: A New Horizon; Work, Study and Travel Abroad; Career Values: What Really Counts?; Affirmative Action: Women, Work, and the Law; Making Career Decisions. The leaders for this event will be from UT, University of Cincinnati, and University of Virginia.

The exact locations to the various workshops will be announced on April 5.

Frankenstein

The fantastic film Frankenstein by Andy Worhol will be presented this coming week in the Theatre. The dates and times to remember are April 9 at midnight and April 10 at 10 p.m. and midnight. Admission is only $1.

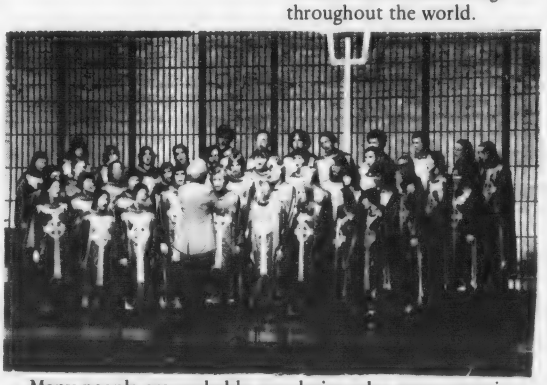
Food day

The city of Maryville along with many other towns across the nation will celebrate April 8 as Food Day in recognition of the world food crisis by parading from the New Providence Church to Midland Shopping Center.

The parade will begin at 3:45 p.m. and procede to Midland where a Food Affair will take place. This Food Affair will consist of various displays and exhibits by agencies and community organizations.

The following is a proclaimation by the mayor of Maryville so designating April 8 as such:

Recognizing that the present world food crisis is real and massive, and that one billion people live on the equivalent of $4 a week;



Recognizing that, worldwide, of every 100 babies born, 40 will die before age six and another 40 will risk permanent health damage because of malnutrition;

Recognizing that while the United States comprises 6 per cent of the world's population and consumes 30 per cent of the world's resources, still, many Americans live on unhealthful diets and are malnourished and hungry;

Recognizing that in a day of inflation and growth in corporate farming, the family farmer is finding it more difficult to remain independent and earn a livelihood;

Recognizing that justice for farmers, consumers, poor people everywhere, and for generations yet unborn requires that all citizens become informed and active in developing a responsible national food policy;

We urge that you make FOOD DAY, April 8th, a time of awareness, education and commitment to the issues of food, nutrition and hunger throughout the world.

Many people are probably wondering why we are running another photo of the Concert Choir after featuring it quite extensively last week. Well, if you attended the Home Concert last Sunday night you would know that no real explanation is needed: the Choir simply did what it does best—sing. Once again Dr. Harter should be proud of the Choir he brought to the stage; they were able to achieve that rareness of sounding very good while at the same time inspiring.

Art workshop

Jim Darrow, instructor at the University of Tennessee, will present a creamics workshop on Monday, April 5 at 6:15 p.m. in the ceramics room in the Fine Arts Center. Using his own wheel, Mr. Darrow will demonstrate the entire process involved in making a pot, from throwing to decorating.

MC sports

Tennis

Tennessee Tech will host the Maryville College Women's Tennis team as the Scots open their season today at 2:00 P.M.

The team roster includes Captain Shada Overton, Co-captain Betsy Bauer, Lisa Harrowood, Kathleen Daugherty, Debbie Ackerman, Lee Henderson, Kay Munn, Laraine Moore, Holly Eckert, Lee Adcock, Lynn Rogers and Coach Sharon Brown.

Maryville will be the site of their second match as the Scots take on Carson-Newman Saturday at 2:00 p.m.

Soccer

In their season premiere, Maryville College Soccer team takes on Tennessee Weslyan tomorrow at 2:00 p.m. on the home field.

Captain Dan Bergner states that although the team lost some players from last year and is still in the growing stage, they are optimistic about the upcoming season. Bergner feels that the team is made up of a lot of good athletes and the team's progress since last fall leaves him hoping for a good season.

Maryville will play U.T. here Wednesday, April 7th at 4:00 p.m.

Track

The Maryville College Track Team finished fourth in their season opener Tuesday against Lenoire-Rhyme, Emory and Henry, and Ferrium Junior College at Emory and Henry.

Individually, the young team fared better, with two firsts by Mike Osborne in both hurdle events and another in the pole vault by Randy Reagan. Joe Whitehead took second place in the mile. Ron Lasley placed third in the javelin throw as did the mile relay team. Bill Straher took third in the 440 yard dash. Gary Petree and Mike Osborne gained the fourth place spots in the 100 yard dash and the javelin throw respectively.

The team will travel to Cookeville tomorrow to participate in the Tennessee Tech Invitational Meet.

Tom Duling sets to throw

Spring Soccer Schedule

April 3	2:00 P.M.	Home	Tennessee Wesleyan
April 7	4:00 P.M.	Home	U.T.
April 10	2:00 P.M.	Home	Walters State
April 17		Away	Covenant
April 21		Away	U.T.

New PE requirement

The All-College-Council, at its February 23 meeting, approved a recommendation coming from the Instructional Program Committee concerning some major changes in the Physical Education Core Requirement.

Beginning in September, 1976, the three-course physical education core activity requirement will be dropped. However, students will still be required to pass beginning swimming before graduation and the department will continue to offer an elective physical education program for students who desire to develop skills in lifetime sports.

These elective physical education classes will be offered on the following basis. Each of these activity courses will be equal to one-third course credit. Students can continue to be graded on either a S-U basis or recieve a letter grade; no more than two course credits may be counted toward the graduation requirement, and tuition for each activity course will be one-third of that for a regular course.

Any juniors and seniors who may have problems in making the transition should go to the Registrar's Office and have them worked out on an individual basis.

World scene

The Ford administration is pushing for the most massive inoculation of the American populace in history against a flu virus that was reported to have been found at Fort Dix, New Jersey during the past winter. The virus stands the possibility of reaching the epidemic proportions of the 1918 outbreak that killed 20 million people world-wide.

The 1976 summer Olympic Games in Montreal will go on as scheduled in the uncompleted controversial $13 billon stadium complex. There is still an air of anticipation as workers, on the job 24 hours a day, race to finish construction in time to hand the site over to the Olympic committee before June 6.

Washington officials have reported that the Soviet Union has agreed to a reciprocal plan allowing for on-site inspection privileges at underground nuclear testing sites. This coincides with the effective date of another US/Soviet treaty limiting nuclear-weapons test explosions to 150 kilotons. No plans have been made concerning peace time nuclear devices.

United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has accepted an invitation from Ray Blanton to visit Tennessee. Similar invitations were delivered by hand to each of the 144 nation delegates to accompany Waldheim. This unique invitation will mark the first time that the UN has convened outside of New York in recent years. Businesses and industries of Tennessee are funding the project.

Roger Morton has replaced "Bo" Callaway as President Ford's campaign manager. Ford expressed confidence that his old friend Callaway would be cleared of allegations that he used undue governmental influence in private business ventures.

Ronald Reagan has abandoned his Wisconsin primary campaign due to a lack of funds. He is counting on using national television appearances to raise money to cover his rising debts.

ACC--meeting; nominations

The All-College Council met on March 31 in what was one of the briefer meetings in its history.

In a span of 30 minutes the Council touched four areas: upcoming plans of the Social Committee, The Fred Hope Fund, the ID situation with the cafeteria, and the question was raised once again as to when the alcohol proposal will appear before the Main Council. No definite answer was given to this. The ID situation which has raised considerable concern lately, was the only thing that warranted serious attention. Yesterday the Food Committee was to have looked into the situation in greater detail.

Neither President Copeland or Suzanne Phillips, co-chairman, were present for the meeting.

The ACC Elections Committee is cranking-up for this year's main council elections to be held April 12.

Dr. Wallace Lewis spoke with the Echo about the committee's plans for promoting the elections. As was the situation last year with the freshman ACC elections, interested students were requested to petition fellow members of their class for signatures.

With the exception of the present sophomore class (where there are but two nominees to fill two positions) more than enough students were able to petition for nomination. A run-off is to be held today to reduce the number of the juniors to four from five and the number of freshmen from seven to two.

Speeches will be given at a CIV program by all who are running for position on the Council. These presentations will be April 9 at 9:20 p.m.

Dr. Lewis said that elections will be held all day on the twelvth. Tentatively, the Elections Committee would like to hold the balloting in a both type arrangement.

Dogwood fair

April 8-11, Knoxville's West Town Mall will be the site of the Dogwood Arts Festival State Crafts Fair.

Featuring a carefully juried selection of the finest crafts from across the state of Tennessee, the Fair will include demonstrations by all participating craftspersons. Examples of traditional quality craftmanship in every medium will be on display.

The Fair, a part of the annual Knoxville Dogwood Arts Festival, will be open to the public, free of charge, 10 am to 9 pm on April 8-10 and 1 pm to 6 pm on April 11.

Sponsors for the State Crafts Fair are the West Town Mall, the Dogwood Arts Festival, the East Tennessee Crafts Council, the East Tennessee Chapter of the Tennessee Artists-Craftsmen's Association, the Knoxville Arts Council, and the Tennessee Arts Commission, a state cultural resources agency.

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.

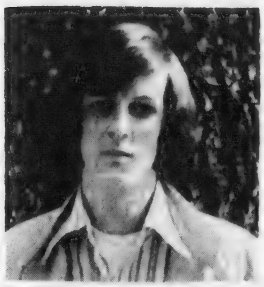
Poems wanted

THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS is compiling a book of poems. If you have written a poem and would like our selection committee to consider it for publication, send your poem and a self-addressed stamped envelope to:

THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS
P. O. Box 6304
Chattanooga, Tennessee 37401

P.G., cont.

Something Freaky to You (Oh Baby)". To complete the 70's scene, Norma Zimmer reappeared in a peach toned V-neck pup tent, complete with matching Earth shoes and P.O.W. bracelet. The Quarter-Keg Queen treated her audience to the current disco sounds capture the limelight, bounced and boogied in their Aqua Velva jumpsuits provided by the people at Williams Lectric Shave. Just a little kinky, wouldn't you agree fans?



Dressed in colonial costumes, the entire cast marched single file on to the stage to perform the closing Bicentennial medley, selectively synchronized by Lawrence's sister-in-law of Stuart, Florida, the sailfish capitol of the world. This fantastic medley of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home/I Wanna Hold Your Hand/On The Day We Fall In Love/Love Roller-coaster/Love to Love You Baby/Take It To The Limit/ and God Bless America" brought the audience to its feet in an effort to rush out the doors before the cast was rushed to the nearest home for the totally BONZI!!!

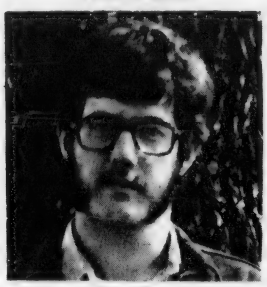
It was a stirring, if not totally unexpected, evening of entertainment and get well cards for Lawrence and his Lovable Goofs should be sent to the following address; Squire Jack's Palace of Worldly Pleasures; Rt. 4; Olympia, Kentucky 20914.

THE Highland Echo

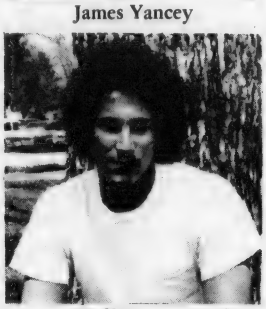
Vol. 61 No. 20 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 9, 1976

ACC Elections held Monday

Grant Bartelt



Vicki Parsons



James Yancey

Bonnie Holsinger

Tom Peters

Jeff Genualdi

Grant Bartelt is a Junior Sociology major from Charlotte, N.C.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College Council?

A: To try to re-orient Maryville into dealing with priorities.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's Council?

A: To gain a feeling of smallness at the college where the individual has a say and the majority of needs are met.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: I think that it accomplished some changes but more need to be made to give Maryville a feeling of smallness and community.

Vicki Parsons is a Junior History major from Charleston, West Virginia.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College Council?

A: I have been here for three years and after watching all this time from the outside looking in, I feel that it is time for me to "get involved." I am interested in Maryville College and it's future and I feel ACC is a place one can serve towards this goal.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's Council?

A: A definite improvement of recruitment of new students and any other helpful means of getting Maryville College back on a sound financial basis—security for the future.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: Government of any type has problems with time—people demand change faster than it can be achieved. Keeping this in mind, I feel ACC has done an adequate job this year.

Veronica Sawdon is a Junior English major from Saginaw, Michigan.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College Council?

A: I've felt a need, since returning to college, to become more active in the academic and social areas that affect me. I think that by being a member of the ACC, I could achieve these goals.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's Council?

A: I would like to see more organization on the part of council members during the meetings. Issues to be discussed should be announced for full college participation. I'd like to see a humanistic approach (versus "let's get the meeting over!—business), and attitude.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: This year's Council had some good ideas and participation by its members. I believe more issues could be approved if committees were more informed before the bi-weekly meetings.

James Yancey is a Junior Political Science major from Charlotte, N.C. and a current member of the All-College-Council.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College-Council?

A: I decided to run for ACC because I am highly interested in the operation of the ACC. I feel that I can contribute to this operation in a positive way while, at the same time helping the ACC to become a more viable body on campus.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's Council?

A: I would like to see next year's Council establish a more meaningful relationship between itself and the rest of the students, faculty, administration and staff.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: On a whole, I feel that the actions of the Council were fairly well thought out. However, at times, the discussions were bogged down in too many insignificant points.

Bonnie Holsinger is a Sophomore English major from Holdrege, Nebraska.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College-Council?

A: This past year, I became concerned about the student apathy on this campus. Af-

continued on page 4

Elections for the members of next years All-College Council will be held April 12. As of press time no place or time has been released as to the whereabouts of the elections

All members of the campus community will vote on across the board basis determining in each area—students, faculty, staff, administration—who will serve on the Council. (See page 2 for nominees from the faculty, staff, and administrative positions.)

The more carefully watched race among the students will be between the four seniors, Grant Bartelt, Vickie Parsons, Veronica Sawdon, and James Yancey, to determine the co-chairmanship with Dr. Joseph J. Copeland.

ID crackdown

In a statement released this week, Dr. George Kramer, Dean of Student Relations, announced that as of Monday either a valid Maryville College ID or a one dollar student fee will be required for admission to the Pearson Hall dining room.

This action comes as a result of an epidemic of forgotten cards and unauthorized persons signing in and being served. Each free meal that is served directly affects the quality and quantity of food that paying students receive.

The requirement is consistent and a continuation of an existing agreement between Maryville College and SAGA.

Summer Theatre

The tenth anniversary of the Maryville College-Community summer play season will begin with Walter Kerr's "Sing Out Sweet Land." The play is a cavalcade of American folk music and is the Summer Theater's salute to the Bicentennial.

"Rip Van Winkle" will be the second play of the season to be presented July 15-19. A large cast of boys and girls aged six through fifteen will be needed.

Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's musical "Brigadoon" will be the final play of the season. It will be presented on August 19-23. Tryouts for the last two plays will be announced at a later date.

Thomas E. Jones, Executive Director of the theater, urges participation of people in the Maryville-Alcoa area to make this a banner year for the playhouse.

SAGA contract is clarified

Nearly four academic weeks have passed since the new food plan at SAGA has gone into effect. It appears that there has been a slight misunderstanding among students as to what that new plan would include. This week Bob Miller spoke with The Echo in an attempt to clarify the contract.

Ninety percent of the meal change will occur during the evening meal. There will be three entrees—one of which will be a solid meat; the other two will be standard SAGA fare. According to the provisions of the contract, they are menu items normally served in SAGA dining rooms and might well consist of such things as waffles and hot dogs in addition to other usual entrees. The remainder of the dinner change includes wider variety at the dessert table and salad bar.

The remaining ten percent of change occurs at the luncheon meal. There will be one solid meat twice a week—not at every meal. Again, minor changes have been made in the dessert table (more variety and four sherbet flavors) and the salad bar (variety and fruit jello). On Sunday the order of meals is reversed; the solid meat will be served at lunch.

Saturday night is steak night. There will be three entrees as in other meals. However, students will be limited to one entree and one serving—THERE WILL BE NO SECONDS—except for vegtables and desserts. The contract calls for a steak between six and nine ounces. Our money is best invested in a good six ounce steak rather than a poorer quality, larger one. Therefore, the tendency will be toward the smaller steak. Second entrees have included, so far, shrimp and fried clams.

The people at SAGA are anxious to determine student reaction to the changes that have been made. If you see anything that you particularly like, or particularly dislike, please let Mr. Miller know what is on your mind.

Academics versus athletics

For quite some time a confrontation has been developing on the Maryville College campus between the respective roles of academics and athletics. Lately, it has become a very touchy situation that involves just about every little nook and cranny of the campus from admissions standards to academic standards to athletic standards to the housekeeping in the dorms. In this, it has deeply affected everyone's personal and academic life.

Two essential motifs standout from this confrontation. The first is the fiscal dilemma that Maryville College has found itself in these past several years. The second is the present conflict (not confrontation) of academic ideals with athletic spirit.

The financial situation speaks for itself, rather, everybody speaks for the financial situation bending and beating ears towards one solution or the other. In any case, everybody knows two things: 1) Maryville College needs a certain quota of students to supplement their own moneys and survive; 2) the financial mess is just that—a mess.

Correlating athletics and money is simple. All that need be considered is that student athletes bring in money and money is required to support the athletic programs. Correlating athletics with academics at Maryville College is considerably harder to do.

Whether we are willing to admit to this or not is inconsequential for one fact holds true: The chance to participate and the recruitment to participate in intercollegiate athletics has somehow started to far outweigh the drawing power of participation in the academic community.

This is not to slight or slam intercollegiate athletics. When intercollegiate athletics are integrated into an academic program they can only enhance and round-out the programs and personalities involved. This should go for any other extracurricular activity—band, choir, publications or otherwise; when these activities begin to place a drain upon the academic community they undermine the intents and purposes of education.

While the academic and scholarly community has had its bright spots recently, these seem few and far between. In fact, the disregard for the academic community has prompted some to say that academic deterioration is the moral issue at Maryville College.

This is a serious statement because despite its importance, the academic community is taken for granted. Yet, its ability to remain free and untarnished by monetary mismash is essential to the survival of integrated education.

To achieve this Maryville College will need to avoid the academically undisciplined and recognize that the classroom is the central location for education. At the same time it must accomodate itself to the fact that all else is a viable learning experience.

Athletics will continue to be a hotbead of issues at Maryville College. Until both the community of scholars and the community of scholar-athletes make a sincere effort to bridge the chasm that this conflict has thrown us into, we can expect it to remain as such.

Tim Rahn

Easter week

Observance of the Lord's Supper on Maundy Thursday will be the first of four services planned for Holy Week on Maryville College campus. Traditionally, this service commemorates the Passover meal Jesus ate with his disciples "on the same night that he was betrayed." The communion service is scheduled for 10:30 A.M. in the Proffitt Dining Room with William H. Mooney, Director of Development, officiating. Students and faculty unable to participate in the full ritual at the break may partake of the consecrated elements at any time throughout the day until 5:00 P.M.

Good Friday

Reviving the traditional Good Friday service, the students, faculty, and staff will present the Seven Last Words spoken by Jesus from the cross as recorded in one or more of the gospels. Meditations, prayers, poems, Scripture reading, and hymns will depict the events of the crucifixion. Responses composed by a Maryville College alumnus will be sung by the choir under the direction of Dr. Harry H. Harter. The choir will also sing the anthem "Ave verum" by Mozart.

Participating in the Good Friday service will be Tom Banfield, Dean Carolyn Blair, Elizabeth Huber, Mrs. Herma Cate, Tim Rahn, Dr. David Young, Martha Hess, Ed Loper, and Dr. Elizabeth Fowler. Scott Denney will be at the organ. Time of the Good Friday service is 11:00 A.M. The service will be held in the chapel.

Holy Week

Maundy Thursday—April 15, Holy Communion in Proffitt Dining Room 10:30-5:00

Good Friday—April 16, Good Friday Service in Wilson Chapel 11:00 a.m. No C hour classes—Business offices closed

Easter Sunday—April 18, Sunrise Service at Maryville College Amphlitheater—Dr. Copeland in charge Easter Vesper Service in College Woods 7:00 p.m.—David Cartlidge in charge

FRED HOPE FUND AUCTION
Saturday, 7:00 p.m.
April 10, 1976
Chapel Courtyard

TOM TAYLOR, auctioneer
Come, buy some fun and help others at the same time!

Reward offered

$500 REWARD offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who slashed tires on an automobile parked across from Anderson Hall Saturday night, March 27th.

Information should be given to Mr. Crawford or Mr. McDade.

Nominees for ACC

Administration/Staff—President and Academic Dean automatic members; Administrators—3 of 4

Raymond Brahams — E. Frances Massey
Hugh Crawford — William Ribble

Staff—1 of 2

Vickie McClelland — Elaine Spurlin

Faculty—Secretary of faculty automatic member

1 to 5 year
Sharon Brown — Dr. Robert Naylor

6 to 15 year
Dr. William Dent — Dr. Elizabeth Fowler
Dr. David Cartlidge

Over 15
Arthur Bushing — Dr. Arda S. Walker
Dr. Robert Ramger

Concerning ACC nominations

After reading the responses of the ACC nominees to the Echo's questions on their candidacy I feel my pulse start to quicken, the blood rush to my head, and the urge to scream begin to take hold. As a current member of the ACC I feel a great sense of frustration, some anger, and yes, even a little hurt.

The general feeling expressed by the candidates seems to stress that this year's Council was composed of unfeeling, noncommunicant, and inactive members. You are so wrong, wrong, wrong!

As Keith Fredericks points out, this year's ACC accomplished a great deal. In the academic field, the Freshman curriculum has been vastly improved for next year, the P.E. and Religion Core requirements have been altered, and due to student pressure the Interim proposal was batted down. Acting on proposals from the various committees of the ACC, 24 hour lobby visitation was enacted along with a change in sign-in procedure. Also, a Coffeehouse was organized, and the future of the Farm house seems fairly secure. We even managed to do something about the Food Service. What more did you honestly expect?

It may be true that the student body did not know everything the Council did but I resent the implication that it was our fault. There was never a member of last year's Echo staff at our meetings. Also, Suzanne Phillips made a definite effort to inform the College Community about important issues and Town Hall meetings. I guess next years student representatives should publish a newsletter or go door to door in an effort to properly serve their constituents. Frankly I feel that any member of the student body, had he/she cared enough to bother, could have found out quite easily anything they wanted to know about the ACC.

Since my term on the ACC is about to end, there are a few closing remarks I'd like to make. While at times we did get bogged down, we were only trying to make the right decision for everybody in the college community. I saw no lack of consideration for each other during our meetings, and there was no faculty pressure to keep proposals from being passed. Strange as it may seem ot some of you, I actually enjoyed being a member of the Council.

Even though Suzanne and I differed on several issues, she was one member of the Council who wasn't in it for the glory. She deserves a great deal of thanks from all of us, because without all the hard work Suzanne put in the ACC would still appear to be a figment of Maryville College's imagination. I sincerely hope next year's Council can live up to their current expectations. It takes a great deal of diplomacy, hard work, dedication, and patience, so please take these things into consideration as you begin your terms as Council members.

Ruth Wilbanks

Staff/policy

Editor—Tim Rahn; Assistant Editor (Photography)—Ed Loper; Assistant Editor—Ruth Wilbanks; Layout Editor—Debbie Huffman; Business Manager—James Dewhirst; Circulation Manager—Alan Regenbrecht; Reporters—Scott Denny, Karen Amos, Charlie Craven, Debbie Welch, Trippy Banner, Sophia Shomaker; Proof Readers—Karen Gerdetz, Lisa Wilson; Photography—Joe Showalter; Faculty Adviser—Elizabeth T. Fowler.

Echo Philosophy: The Highland Echo is the campus community newspaper of Maryville College. The primary concern of the staff is to communicate the news and issues of the campus to all concerned. This is to be achieved through objective news reporting, investigative reporting, and feature stories. Further representation is through the use of creative efforts—poetry, prose, photos and two dimensional art.

Recognizing the concept of responsible and objective journalism, the ECHO will publish rebuttals in either story form or as letters to the editor to all issues raised. These may be addressed to the editor through Box 2820, typed, double spaced, no later than noon Tuesday.

All type for the ECHO is composed by Kathy Lane in the College Print Shop, then Printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Fine Arts Review

Houlberg show – flying colors

Reviewed by:

Michael Johnston

On rare occasions, if we are lucky enough to be in the right place at the right time, we may see excellence. One such rare right place/ right time is the Fine Arts Center Gallery where an exhibit of works by Lynn Houlberg, senior art major, is on display until April 18.

To simply say that Ms. Houlberg has learned her art lessons well is to miss the point. It is immediately evident that she has mastered the techniques of the media she uses—pen and ink, pencil, oil, acrylic, watercolor—and the varieties of stype—impressionistic, expressionistic, realistic, fantasy. But this competence is not exploited for its own sake, as one might expect in student art. Technique is kept well balanced and serves to complement, not compete with the subject matter.

Ms. Houlberg's choice of subject matter reflects a deep sense of affinity for the things she sees. After viewing a series of watercolors of scenes from the Miami, Florida area, one senses that if these places have not been enshrined, they well should be. There is a richness and grandeur about these works that set them apart from the usual fare of pointless, dull landscapes.

Much closer to our location, and our hearts, are scenes from east Tennessee. Most striking among these is "Painting for a Friend", an impressionist rendering of a Smoky Mountain stream that delivers the full energy and vivid color of the scene in a way few of us could see on our own.

Interspersed throughout the exhibit are some "early" works that show some technical problems now solved. Ms. Houlberg's willingness to experiment with new styles and subjects, and most importantly of all, the humanness of the artist as a whole person is evident in viewing her works past and present.

Through her mastery of numerous techniques and styles and her sensitive selection of subject matter, Ms. Houlberg achieves excellence in that area of artistic endeavor no classroom can teach: the ability to effectively communicate the artist's emotional response to her subjects.

Lynn Houlberg examines one of approximately 40 art works in her senior show, currently on display in the Fine Arts Gallery.

M-club plans

For all the MC bathing beauties, M-Club is sponsoring a Pool Day next Wednesday, April 14 from 4-5. This hour of water fun should prove to be quite an interesting affair for MC women. There will be races, contests, and plenty of disco music.

Thin-clads place

The Maryville College track and squad placed in five events April 3, at the Tennessee Tech Invitational tournament.

Maryville won two 2nd place awards, Tom Duling in the discus throw and Mark Keahon in the shotput. Mike Osborne placed 3rd in the 120 yard hurdles. Steve Harrison finished 4th in the shotput and Alvin Richmond finished fifth in the same event.

The team will travel to Mars Hill and Lees McRae Monday, and Sewanee and Mars Hill on Wednesday, for their next two meets.

WOMEN'S TENNIS SCHEDULE

1976

April 9th	Tusculum	2:00	away
April 10th	Carson-Newman	2:00	away
April 17th	Covenant College	1:00	HOME
April 20th	Tusculum	3:00	HOME
April 24th	Covenant	2:00	away
April 28th	Tn. Wesleyan	2:00	HOME
May 4th	Tn Weslevan	2:00	away

Once again - comps

Since 1937 Maryville College has offered springtime and "comps" in the same breath. This year is no exception as seniors prepare for the Undergraduate Record Exams (URE) on Thursday, April 15, and the Departmental Exams on Friday, April 16.

With reactions ranging from indifferenct to common hysteria, seniors prepare, review, and analyze four years of intensive study trying to "bring it all together." This is exactly what Dr. Edwin R. Hunter under the presidency of Dr. Lloyd desired when he initiated the departmental exams in 1937. It was hoped that Maryville graduates would have the ability to integrate the subject matter in their particular field.

Though students, especially in the late 60's, requested that the purpose of the exams be reviewed, faculty, administration, and alumni have consistently opted in favor of the testing. Alumni have reported a better preparation for graduate school as a result and a sense of satisfaction in "bringing it all together." Reportedly, this comes 3-4 years after the "comps" are taken.

The URE'S were first offered in the late 60's with the general purpose being to rank this institution against others of higher learning. Over all, Maryville students have ranked average or above average with some departments consistently doing well.

As a reminder to all seniors the URE's will be Thursday at 1:30 p.m. in the chapel. You must take 2 sharpened no. 2 pencils with you. The departmental exams will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday in designated rooms according to major fields. Music majors must remember that they have another test Thursday morning at 10:30 in Room 106 in the FAC.

On a slanted note of optimism, the exams can be taken 3 times, but must be passed within 2 years.

Dean Blair suggests to all freshmen that the review for these exams should be continuous throughout the 4 years. For those past that point she suggests an intensive review in the last month and a good night's rest the night before.

Tim Kelly goes after the ball in last Saturday's action at Honaker Field. The Soccer Club dropped their game to Tennessee Wesleyan by a 9–0 score.

PE lockers robbed

Two major thefts occured Winter Term from lockers in the PE Building according to Dr. Boroviak, head of the PE Department.

Dr. Boroviak said that these thefts were in the amount of $60.00 from David Hood. His locker showed no sign of visible entry. The second was forced and $12.00 and a ring were taken from David Lundell's locker. Both thefts happened between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m.

The PE Department has set up a system to prevent such thefts. PE instructors urge students not to bring valuables to class. If they must, it is suggested that they turn them into the Equipment room. As a second preventive measure, the Department rotates locks each year to new part of the building.

"There will always be occurrences of theft in a facility such as our's," said Dr. Boroviak ", but we have not had a major incident in two years." At that time the PE Building was broken into and all the track uniforms were stolen.

Dr. Boroviak also stated that "our" security has improved 200% since that time. Partly this is due to the fact that the Department now has two Equipment Room Managers who guard and check out equipment between 9:00 a.m. and 11:00 p.m.

Weaving workshop

Ann Ragan, graduate student at the University of Tennessee in fabric and ceramics, will present a workshop on double weave techniques on Monday, April 12 in the weaving room in Fayerweather on the second floor.

Ms. Ragan will set up the loom Monday morning from 8 a.m. till noon. Interested students may drop by during this time for discussion and questions. Weaving techniques will be demonstrated at the workshop which will begin at 6:15 p.m.

Frankenstein

Tonight in the Maryville College Theatre at midnight the Social Committee of the ACC will present Andy Warhol's Frankenstein.

Tomorrow night the feature will be shown twice, at 10:00 p.m. and at midnight. Admission will be $1.00 and refreshments will be available at a nominal cost.

April 16, David Biola, an entertainer from the Atlanta area, will present a coffeehouse in Pearson's Dining Room.

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations

The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.

31
Buy 1 Banana Split
Get 2nd One
WITH THIS COUPON ½ Price
BASKIN-ROBBINS
MIDLAND SHOPPING CENTER OPEN TILL 10 DAILY

Nominees, continued

ter attending a few ACC meetings, I began to see a connection between the student apathy and the lack of communication between the council and the students. As an ACC representative, I could be a communicating link between the students and the Council.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's Council?

A: Aside from dealing with concrete issues effectively and achieving a better line of communication, I would like to see the spirit of the council change. From my viewpoint, there is a certain disunity to the ACC. In order to work effectively, the faculty, administrative members and students must work together as a unit. As it stands, there is not this necessary harmony. If the concept of the ACC is too idealistic, then perhaps we need to take a closer look at the council and its effectiveness as the governing body of Maryville College.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: On the negative side, I do not think the students knew three quarters of what the council did this year. But, when dealing with issues directly involving the students, the council listened to them, and took into account their desires as well as the desires of the administrative and faculty members.

Thomas T. Peters is a Sophomore Music Education major from Richmond, Indiana.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College-Council?

A: Because I enjoy being involved in different school activities. But most important I believe as a person, and with my wide background, I think I have a lot I can contribute to the ACC.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's council?

A: Next year I would like to see the council continue to attempt to meet the needs of students and the faculty. I would like to see the council and the students come close together again. I would also like to see more interest on the part of the students.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: I think the action taken by the ACC on the Cafeteria and farm house were two positive actions taken by the ACC. I have no real negative feelings other than the gap between the ACC and the students which I believe this year's council let get a little too wild.

Keith Frederick is a Freshman Art major from Columbia, Tennessee.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College-Council?

A: After a month of fall term, I began to realize that Maryville College was not fully reaching its total potential. It is a place that can offer us as students the chance of a life time, but only if students, faculty and administration recognize that fact. By running for ACC I hope to be able to help that idea grow and to have a direct effect in what I feel to be the ideas of the concerned students have on campus.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's Council?

A: A re-examination of Maryville College as a whole, which includes a direct look at what we as a small Presbyterian liberal arts school stand for. This will also need to include what steps the college will take in developing its "own personality." I hope that next year the ACC will continue to recognize the importance of action on questions or concerns that arise throughout the year.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: This year I was pleased to see some major accomplishments achieved by the ACC. Among these were the actions concerning visitation hours in Lloyd lounge, P.E. requirements and orientation for next year's freshman class. Projects that were passed such as the coffee house and the farm house were great in that they provide forms of activity on campus. I was not pleased with the Council's decision to keep interim as it is now. If the new proposal had been passed, I feel it would have opened all types of new activities and opportunities for us as students and at the same time broadened the use of college facilities.

Jeff Genualdi is a Freshman Chemistry major from Miramar, Florida.

Q: Why did you decide to run for the All-College-Council?

A: Instead of complaining about things that I don't think are right, I feel the ACC should give one a chance to do something about them. The college was built for and is basically composed of students (we are spending three-quarters of a year living on campus) who I think should not let things slide. They should take on the responsibility and make things happen.

Q: What would you like to see accomplished by next year's Council?

A: Better communication, especially pertaining to sports and social events. More social functions and things to do on the weekends. Improvement of the student center, gameroom. Student involvement.

Q: What did you think of the actions of this year's Council?

A: Some good ideas on the development stages. A flaw is that I don't see a lot of these ideas being carried out. Too much faculty influence.

Editor's Note: Due to technical problems, pictures of Veronica Sawdon and Keith Fredricks were unavailable at press time.

Production began earlier this week for the play The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds. The cast standing (l to r): Sally Smith, Holly Hutcheson, and RuthAnn Wilbanks. Sitting are Nancy Miller and Jill Mihalow. Blair Beasley is directing. The play will be performed May 13, 14, and 15 in the Maryville College Theatre.

World scene

The FBI has stepped in to do a fingerprint investigation to legally identify the body reported to be that of Howard Hughes. No plans have been made in the disposition of the huge Hughes empire.

Jimmy Carter's front running position in the Democratic Presidential race has been slowed by Morris Udall's narrow loss in Wisconsin. The confusion that Udall's stronger position leaves the party in gives Hubert Humphrey new hope for a deadlocked convention. Jackson's victory in New York was less than the landslide he wanted, but it was decisive.

The Politboro of the Chinese Communist party has ousted First Premier Teng Hsia-ping, successor to Chou En-lai. Military force has been used to curb demonstrations honoring Chou and the moderate politics they represent.

The New Jersey Supreme Court has ruled that Karen Quinlan may be allowed to "die with dignity" as long as there is no hope of her recovering. The landmark decision allows that there is a point where the individual's rights overcome the state's interests." This opinion opens the way for similar decisions in other terminal cases.

Poems wanted

THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS is compiling a book of poems. If you have written a poem and would like our selection committee to consider it for publication, send your poem and a self-addressed stamped envelope to:

THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS
P. O. Box 6304
Chattanooga, Tennessee 37401

bank of maryville

Setting the Pace
In Blount County

Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee • Sky City

A FULL SERVICE BANK

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

PABST	12-OZ.	$1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE	12-OZ.	$1.69
PEARL LIGHT	12-OZ.	$1.59
MILLER "PONIES"	7-OZ.	$1.83

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

THE Highland Echo

Vol. 61 No. 21 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 16, 1976

ACC winners announced

James Yancey was chosen on April 12 by election of the campus community to serve as co-chairman with Dr. Joseph Copeland on the 1976-77 All-College Council.

Yancey said that he was "elated and glad that the students and faculty have put their faith in me" when asked of his reaction to the election. He went on to state that he hoped to make next year's Council more "viable." The Council has to be "viable before it can do anything."

Yancey was chosen, along with a host of other candidates from the student, faculty, administration, and staff bodies, to fill the vacancy to be left by Suzanne Phillips. The other senior elected to the Council was Vicki Parsons.

The two junior positions were uncontested for the second year in a row as Bonnie Holsinger and Tom Peters sought Council seats. Keith Fredrick was selected to fulfill the job of sophomore representative.

Raymond Brahams, Hugh Crawford, and William Ribble were elected as administrative members to the ACC. Elaine Spurlin, despite her concern that she may not be able to serve the Council adequately due to the obligations of her office, was chosen for the second consecutive year to the staff position.

Filling out the faculty positions on the Council will be Dr. Robert Naylor (1 to 5 year), Dr. William Dent and Dr. Elizabeth T. Fowler (6 to 15 years), and Dr. Robert Ramger and Dr. Arda S. Walker (over 15 years).

See editorial, page 2.

A spokesperson for the Elections Committee of the ACC reported that the turnout this year was one of the best in recent years. Approximately 299 students voted in the trailer parked outside the Post Office.

It has also reported that the faculty turn-out was one of the better ones in quite some time. Of the 48 member faculty 50% voted.

Drive tops goal

The Maryville-Alcoa community campaign for Maryville College has raised $132,904 in gifts and pledges with $119,500 already paid. Almost 500 assignments have not yet reported. The goal for this year was $120,000.

Chairman for the campaign was Harold D. Lambert. Division chairmen were: Fred R. Lawson, Advance Gifts Division; Robert D. Navratil, Professional Division; Dan J. Lawson, Business Division; Walter Y. Thomas, Friends Division; Mary McKnight Jackson and Edwin J. Best, Sr., Alumni Division.

"The success of this year's community campaign is the result of strong leadership from Blount County citizens and the help of 135 community volunteers, both friends and alumni," according to campaign director Bill Mooney, Director of Financial Advancement at the college. "It also shows the community's awareness of the importance of Maryville College to the educational, cultural, and economic health of the community."

Higher education is failing

by Allan Rabinowitz

(CPS)—America's system of higher education is failing.

Studies conducted by government agencies and well-respected foundations are coming to the conclusion that many disgruntled students have been expressing for a long time: America's system of higher education is failing.

The interpretations and recommendations of these various studies may conflict, but the general conclusions about college occur: The hallowed institution is crumbling.

David Biola

Coffee-House tonight

Biola to appear

David Biola, an entertainer from the Atlanta area, will appear in a coffeehouse at Pearsons Dining Hall tonight, April 16 at 9:00 p.m. His appearance here is sponsored by the Social Committee and is free of charge.

Biola is a self-trained vocalist and guitarist who has met with success in night clubs and resorts, as well as in television appearances, such as WSB-TV's "Today in Georgia". He writes much of his own music, including the score for an hour-long documentary about the Mississippi River. It was while composing in California, following the success of the music for the documentary, that his well received appearances at the Troubador Night Club in Hollywood on "New professionals night" took place.

Refreshments will be available tonight at a nominal charge. Other events planned by the Social Committee for the remainder of the year include a Day at the Races and May Madness.

Fred Hope auction nets $600

Tom Taylor broke his year old MC auctioneering record of $308 on April 10 by badgering with a new rubber mallet a crowd of over 100 into bidding $500 for some 60 items.

The most spirited bidding of the evening broke out between Dr. Walker and Dean Blair in a checkbook to checkbook showdown for the services of Grant Bartelt doing 16 hours of cleaning and yard work. Dr. Walker's checkbook had $50 in it, one dollar more than Dean Blair's!

A table laden with fresh cakes and cookies enticed many persons and groups to hock their future allowances for a chance at some home made cooking. Examples: $20 for a chess pie baked by Dr. Fowler (to Gary Lewis and company); $15 for a pecan pie baked by Mrs. Kramer (to Dr. Copeland); $14 for a German Chocolate Streusel Cake baked by Jane David (to Lee Gaskin and company); and numerous apple pies, pumpkin pies, coffee cakes, etc. for $5 to $9 each.

A 3-speed used bicycle went for $37 (to Betsy Wood), a black and white tv for $45 (to John Nash), and an African Daishiki for $30 (to Karen Amos). Although Dean Blair lost out on the yard work, she went after the art work and came away with a Hugh Bailey watercolor for $12 (donated by Jane Richardson) and a Lynn Rumbley print for $7.

The first ever appearance of the Maryville Gulley Jumpers was a rousing, stomping success as they sang an original ballad, "I'm Proud to be a Maryville College Scottie," "Phantom 309," and "When It's Hog Calling Time in the Ozarks." The MGJ's, Bob Sturge, Charlie Closz and George Lundy, were decked out in their Tuesday finest. And when they left the stage, Col. Sturge, ret. was heard to exclaim that he'd be coming out of retirement soon, so keep those cards and letters coming!

It had been previously announced that the proceeds from the auction would go, as last year, for self-development projects in Africa. However, a recent letter received at the college from Dave and Sara Scotchmer, 1965 MC grads working in Guatemala, ahs so eloquently stated the need for aid in relief after the February earthquake that the money will go there instead. Additional donations can be made in the Chaplain's Office.

Dave Young

MC observes Easter, two services planned

All four gospels agree that the visit to the empty tomb took place "very early in the morning the first day of the week . . . ." For a number of years the Maryville College community has commemorated the resurrection in a Sunrise Service in the College Woods. This year the tradition will be continued.

A brass quintet will go from domitory to dormitory, beginning at 6:00 A.M., to awaken students who will proceed on foot to the amphitheater. (Cars will park near the entrance to the college woods so that the spirit of worship can be maintained before, during, and after the service.)

The concert choir, directed by Dr. Harry Harter, will sing appropriate anthems and lead the congregation in the Easter hymns. The meditation will be given by President Joseph J. Copeland.

Vespers will consist of an Emmaus Walk through the college woods to the garden at Morningside. So named because of the encounter of two disciples with the risen Christ "on the road to Emmaus" on Easter evening, this walk will begin at 6:30 in front of the P. E. building. Like the first Emmaus walk, this one will culminate in the experience of breaking bread together. Dr. David Cartlidge will lead this service of worship. In case of rain, vespers will be held in the Little Chapel.

Erratum

Last week we reported that Scot Denny was to be the organist at today's Good Friday Service in the Chapel. We are sorry: it should have been Sandy Murphy at the organ.

CIV to feature percussionist

The Community Issues and Values program of Maryville College will present Kakraba Lobi, Ghana, West Africa, percussionist, in a program, April 21, at 9:20 in the Samuel Tyndale Wilson Chapel. The appearance here will be Lobi's first here in Blount County on his current tour of the U.S.

Lobi is an expert in the playing of xlophone, drums and other African instruments in his native Lobi tribe in Northern Ghana where he was employed by the Institute of African Studies at the University of Ghana.

He is appearing here through the support of the Tennessee Arts Commission and the University of Tennessee. In addition to the program, he will conduct a seminar-lecture with the Non-Western course at the college, and a demonstration and workshop with the Music Department.

There will be no admission charge for the 9:20 a.m. program and everyone is urged to attend this most informative program.

Student recital in morn

Five Maryville College music majors will present a recital this Saturday at 10:30 a.m. in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center.

Featured are Julia Ramsey (soprano), Marion Hummel (soprano), Judy Thweat (soprano), Tom Banfield (tenor), and Betty Carol Zinavage (pianist). These recitals are a required part of the music majors program and prepare the student for the junior and senior recitals.

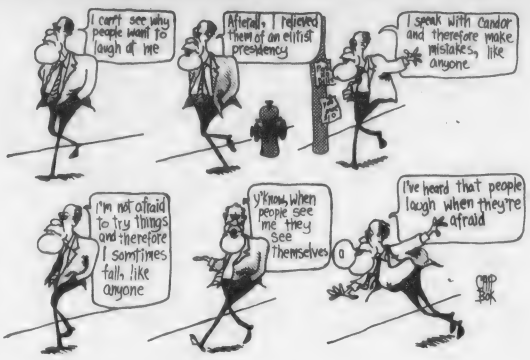
an editorial

Again–concerning the ACC

In the past several weeks, Maryville College has been subject to a barrage of publicity about the All-College Council. A great deal of this publicity has been passed on in the pages of the Echo. Other information has appeared in signs and posters posted by the Elections Committee.

A greater part of this publicity has been for the ACC elections. This electoral process, however, has left a lot to be desired.

Anyone in attendance of the speeches by the candidates (The word "candidates" must be used with a great deal of trepidation here.) last Friday morning could see this. The general and not too mistaken impression given to the audience was 1) Faculty, staff, and most administrators approach the Council with caution and occasionally remorse; 2) students, as usual, approach their position with a genuine abundance of the need for change.



Two faculty and staff members stated right out that they neither sought the position or could adequately answer to the demands of the Council. This raises a very serious question of the merits of having an ACC: Why must members of the faculty, staff and administration be thrust into a situation that they do not want nor openly pursue?

As with all the other parts of the council these members are selected nominated by their peer group. Faculty select faculty, students select students, and so on. The difference, however, is that students openly seek nomination and election and faculty find themselves on a ballot some Tuesday morning.

This points at one of the fundamental inadequacies of the ACC. The loss of continuity and an unwillingness to meet the demands of being a Council member. The elections Committee has assured the quality of the student members (if enough of them run) by having the students seek nomination through their classmates. The Committee should investigate the possibility of doing the same for the other areas of the Council.

As the Board of Directors continue to evaluate the feasibility of the Council this is one way that the Council could perhaps achieve a better "workability" than what it presently has. If the Council is going to have to become more "viable" as James Yancey has said, then the Council should consider how in the upcoming year they can reach back and answer the demands of this particular area.

Tim Rahn

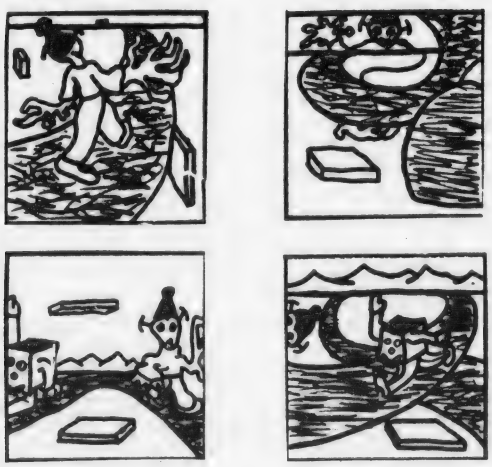
Meeting held for WCLA

Interested in an internship in Washington? Maryville College is now affiliated with the newly organized Washington Center for Learning Alternatives, a non-profit, independent, educational institution.

The WCLA program allows college juniors, seniors, and graduate students the opportunity to serve for approximately three months in Congressional offices, executive agencies, public interest groups, judicial departments, or community related programs.

In addition to internships, WCLA offers seminars on such issues as the legislative process, administrative decision making, budgeting, executive privilege vs. Congressional power, contemporary political issues, public interest groups, lobbying techniques and related concerns.

Housing accomodations are provided in the WCLA building, which has 132 efficiencies and 40 one-bedroom apartments. The Center plans a full extra-curricular program to take advantage of the diversified culture of Washington.



The WCLA calendar meshes neatly with the Maryville College calendar so that students may choose any one of four terms, including the summer, for which they may receive three course credits, including the internship, a seminar, and independent study. Registration and the assigning of credit come through the home college, with the Center providing evaluation. Costs are roughly the same as for a term at Maryville.

Those who want more details are invited to meet with Dean Blair at 4 o'clock Tuesday, April 20, in Anderson 206.

by David Morrison

staff/policy

Editor–Tim Rahn; Assistant Editor (Photography)–Ed Loper; Assistant Editor–Ruth Wilbanks; Layout Editor–Debbie Huffman; Business Manager–James Dewhirst; Circulation Manager–Alan Regenbrecht; Reporters–Scott Denny, Karen Amos, Charlie Craven, Debbie Welch, Trippy Banner, Sophia Shomaker; Proof Readers–Karen Gerdetz, Lisa Wilson; Photography–Joe Showalter; Faculty Adviser–Elizabeth T. Fowler.

Echo Philosophy: The Highland Echo is the campus community newspaper of Maryville College. The primary concern of the staff is to communicate the news and issues of the campus to all concerned. This is to be achieved through objective news reporting, investigative reporting, and feature stories. Further representation is through the use of creative efforts–poetry, prose, photos and two dimensional art.

Recognizing the concept of responsible and objective journalism, the ECHO will publish rebuttals in either story form or as letters to the editor to all issues raised. These may be addressed to the editor through Box 2820, typed, double spaced, no later than noon Tuesday.

All type for the ECHO is composed by Kathy Lane in the College Print Shop, then Printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Dean's eye view

by Dr. Carolyn Blair

"We keep hearing about Title III," a student remarked. "What is it?" An Echo reporter asked recently if it were true that Title III funds were being reduced and, if so, what the story was. Perhaps some explanations are in order.

About ten years ago through the efforts of Dr. Copeland and the Development Office, Maryville College began receiving federal grants under a program designed to strengthen developing institutions in three areas: faculty and curriculum, administration, and student services. The College each year submits a proposal outlining projects that cannot be supported by the regular budget but that promise to enrich current offerings and result in more efficient operation and administration.

A major objective of Title III is to develop programs that will eventually become self-sustaining, thus making further outside funding unnecessary. One example is the interpreter program, now in its second year of Title III funding. Pioneering in interpreting and educating the deaf in a normal hearing environment involves a financial risk that few colleges can take on their own. In spite of our enthusiasm when the idea was conceived, we could not have launched the program without Title III to underwrite the salaries of the staff and to provide equipment that we could not otherwise afford. With Title III support, the interpreter program is attracting national attention and new sources of funding. It promises to achieve the original objective of becoming self-sustaining and of permanently enriching the curriculum.

Other examples of curriculum enrichment include the crafts program, begun this year with Title III funding for such equipment as jewelry making kits and looms; the cardiac rehabilitation program, with Title III providing released faculty time for planning and for major equipment like the treadmill; and the business administration major, for which Title III has underwritten the salaries of adjunct professors from the community to provide more variety and expertise than a small college could normally afford.

Title III funds have made possible the Career Planning and Placement Office and staff, the addition of certification in early childhood education, the development of Non-Western Studies, better liaison between Tremont and the main campus, and the continuing education program. Title III provided the released time for a group of faculty members to work on the new freshman curriculum, as well as numerous departmental and interdepartmental workshops during the summer. In the past, it has provided leaves for faculty study and research.

In non-academic areas, Title III funds have been used for additional recruiters, for improving fund raising and development programs, for coordinating student help services, and for establishing new management procedures.

Although no official announcement has been made, it looks as if we will have the same total funding next year as for this year. A smaller percentage, however, will go to curriculum in order to have more in admissions and administrative improvement, where the need seems greater.

Nevertheless most of the programs in the academic area will be continued because they require less funding now that they have been established. The major new program for next year will be a preparatory school in the arts for East Tennessee pre-college students. We will try through the Echo to keep the college community better informed about this, as well as all of the other Title III projects.

Rings and jobs for MC couple

by Debbie Welch

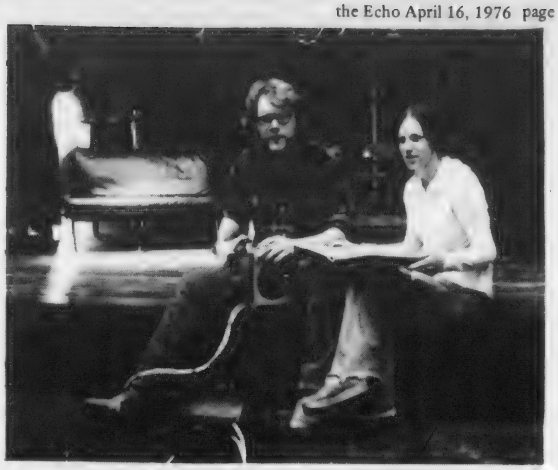
"Mr. Johnston, you wanna get your crew together so we can start this rehearsal?"

"Sure thing, Mrs. Johnston."

During the week of May 24 through 28, Mary Story and Mike Johnston will sign two contracts—one with each other to become husband and wife and one with Opryland and the Theatre of American Music to work on the seasonal musical "I Hear America Singing."

Mary, a senior Speech-Theatre major, will be stage manager for the show. Mike, also a senior with a individualized major in communications, will be the stage technician. Being consistent in this liberated world, Mary will be Mike's immediate boss.

But, the unique partnership of Mary and Mike initiates another excitement. They are two of, hopefully many more, Maryville graduates who have found jobs in their chosen fields of interest and who will enter the world of professionalism with promise for more to come in the future.



Excited about what they consider a big step, perhaps the best they could do at this point, Mary and Mike also realize the problems that ensue and are prepared to meet them head on. Competition will be the most difficult to fight, but as mature adults, both believe they can be comforted in each other's knowledge.

Both Mary and Mike are preparing themselves for their jobs under the curriculum of Maryville College. A 321a course offered by the Speech-Theatre department enables Mike and Mary to develop individualized courses designed to strengthen areas of study. Mary's course under Blair Beasley deals with professional stage management which includes the M.C. show, "The Effects of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" opening May 13th. Mike gains competence under Mr. Beasley, also, with a course in advanced stage lighting design.

The flexibility, encouragement, and support by the M.C. Playhouse has given Mary and Mike a working, sellable knowledge of the theatre and many other forms of communication. This priceless attribute boils down to the ability to communicate in an educated manner with prospective employers. Both Mary and Mike agree that their experience and degrees were second to the confidence they showed in being prepared thoroughly for the interviews when it came down to deciding who got the job. Of course, they don't deny the influence of a good resume, a degree, references, and recommendations.

These jobs for Mary and Mike drop a stepping stone for the future. They hope to meet influential people from all forms of communication that will help them to reach still higher goals. Someday, Mary hopes to manage a television newsroom. but like Mike she is leaving all of her options open. They do hope to travel extensively and wish to stay in the academic atmosphere of experimentation and creativity by staying in school off and on.

Mary and Mike look forward to being in Nashville setting up an apartment, visiting the night spots, and just spending plenty of time together. This couple is aware of their upcoming partnership in both job and marriage and intend to love each other as individuals and respect each other as professionals.

Mike Johnston and Mary Story—at home in the theatre.

ACC meeting held

The All-College-Council met in a regular meeting on April 14. Various proposals, ideas and concerns were heard in a meeting that lasted little more than an hour.

Dr. David Young presented the results of the Fred Hope auction and spoke of the upcoming Easter services. Dean E. Frances Massey informed the Council of future plans of the Social Committee.

A representative from Tennessee Intercollegiate Student Legislature offered the Council a chance to join the organization. TISL is a state-wide organization of colleges and universities that is concerned with the issues surrounding the State of Tennessee. They were instrumental in Governor Ray Blanton's re-institution of the Tennessee Educational Grant. The Council decided to refer the matter to the Ways and Means Committee to decide where the membership fee will come from.

It was announced by Dr. Joseph J. Copeland that the Board of Directors will be here April 22 and 23 to decide the fiscal policy for the upcoming academic year. A delegation from the Council will meet with members of the Board to discuss Council action.

Dr. Copeland proceded to tell the Council of a recent budgetary discussion of the executive staff. He gave a rough idea of one of the plans for stop gap measures involving voluntary work force from the campus community.

Frosh society oks men

In their regular meeting, Monday, April 5, Alpha Lambda Delta members elected officers for the 1976-1977 school year.

Elected were Pris Book, president; Elaine Dorward, vice-president; Margaret Fitch, secretary; Caryn Olsen, treasurer; Laurie Allen, Historian; and Sharon Youngs, news editor. Peggy Maher was elected junior advisor for the coming year, and Mary Gundlach was chosen as senior adviser. Dr. Elizabeth Fowler was unanimously selected as faculty advisor for another year.

The members also voted unanimously to accept a constitutional change allowing men to become members of Alpha Lambda Delta. All students meeting membership requirements during their first year of college are now eligible.

The next scheduled meeting is Monday, April 19, at 5:00 P.M. in the Proffit Dining Room. All members are urged to attend.

MC receives grant

Maryville College has received a grant of $3,000 from the Cities Service Foundation of Cities Service Company's Copperhill Operation. A check for the amount was presented by B. F. Hyde, manager of community relations at Copperhill.

Cities Service has contributed to the college in increasing amounts over a period of several years.

The company contributes to more than one hundred colleges and universities each year through the Cities Service Foundation. A personal representative of the company always visits each school in order to see the program to which the company contributes.

In addition to these grants, the company provides national merit scholarships for children of Cities Service employees and matched gifts of employees to more than 200 colleges and universities.

In national survey

Tuition up for 76-77

(CPS)—Most students returning to campus next year will be slapped with an eight percent increase in college costs over last year, according to a recent survey of more than 2,500 colleges and universities.

The most startling price jump was an estimated 29 percent tuition hike at public two-year colleges next year, which have historically had low or no tuition.

The survey, conducted by the College Scholarship Service of the College Entrance Examination Board, identified five components of the total cost of going to college: tuition and fees, room and board, books and supplies, transportation and personal expenses.

Average total college costs for the 1976-77 academic year will range from $4,568 for a resident student attending a private four-year college to $2,223 for a commuter at a public two-year college, the survey found.

In spite of the dramatic increase in tuition for commuters at public two-year colleges, officials at the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges do not expect attendance at these colleges to drop.

They point out that the tuition money involved is a relatively small figure—an estimated $387 next year for a public two-year college. This compares to $2,329 for a private four-year institution, $621 for a public four-year institution, and $1,740 for a private two-year institution.

Another big price hike is the total cost of attending a two-year private college. In September, commuting students at proprietary institutions will pay 10 percent more than last year and on-campus students will face a 12 percent increase.

Seven years ago, commuters at two-year private colleges paid an average of $1,834. Next year they will pay $3,595 in total college costs, or 96 percent more.

In the same seven-year period, total costs to commuter students at four-year private college and universities rose from $2,382 to $4,141, an increase of 74 percent. The smallest increase in that time was a 54 percent rise in the total cost to resident students at those institutions, from $2,974 to $4,568 in 1976.

Since 1970-71, when comparable data was first compiled, the survey has reported increases of almost 100 percent at some institutions.

Day presents art show

Martha Day, a senior art major from Arlington, Virginia, will present her senior art show in the Fine Arts Gallery April 18-May 1.

Her exhibit will consist of examples of many art genres including prints, scratch board, pencil sketches, ceramics, macrame hangings, oil and acrylic paintings. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Poems wanted

THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS is compiling a book of poems. If you have written a poem and would like our selection committee to consider it for publication, send your poem and a self-addressed stamped envelope to:

THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS
P. O. Box 6304
Chattanooga, Tennessee 37401

The Warwick
HOUSE OF GIFTS
Shuffle Desk
Lap Desk with pillow back. Ideal for Dormitory use.
REG. $11.95
NOW
$8.00
WITH THIS AD
MIDLAND CENTER
On The Half square

MC sports

Soccer

The M.C. Soccer Club registered its first victory in two outings Saturday as the Scot booters thumped Walters State Community College 5—3. Will Way gave the opposing goalie plenty to worry about as he scored four goals in a superb performance. Dr. Young added to the scoring punch with a single goal. Doug Campbell and Chip Krug sparked the defensive effort which held-off Walter State's offensive punch.

On April 14 the soccer club dropped a 5—2 decision to UT. Tim Farrel and Mike Osborne scored goals for the team.

Track

The Maryville Track Squad narrowly missed a victory at Mars Hill, N.C. April 12 by a final tally of 74—68. Despite the defeat Maryville had some stellar individual performances.

Steve Harrison had a big day as he took first place in both the 100 yard dash and shot put. Besides combining winning efforts with Mike Osborne, Bill Straher, and Gary Petree to win the 440 yard relay, he placed second in the 220.

Osborne turned in a sterling performance as he swept both the high and intermediate hurdle events, and finished second in javelin competition. Joe Whitehead and Petree also had big performances as Whitehead won the mile run and captured second in the 880. Petree placed first and second respectively in the 220 and 100 yard dashes.

Randy Reagan and Straher added to the tally as they accounted for first place points in the pole vault and 440 respectively. Leading in field events was Alvin Richmond who placed third in both shot put and discus.

Baseball

The Maryville College baseball team is off to a hot start winning seven of their first : eight games

The Scots opened their season April 6 at Bryan College with a convincing double-header sweep. Danny Thomas and Kevin McKinstry were the winning pitchers.

In a solid performance, Thomas gave up only three hits and struck out six as the Scots won 6—3. McKinstry won the nightcap 3—1. Freshman Russell Baker led all Scot hitters batting 4 for 6 and driving in 3. Steve Wright also had a big day with a total of three hits.

April 12 the Scots traveled to Athens, Tennessee to meet Tennessee Wesleyan in a double-header. With Thomas and McKinstry again sharing the pitching chores the team swept the double-header 5—1 and 5—4. Baker and Wright again had the hot bats for Maryville.

The Scots split another double-header on April 13 winning the first game in their biggest win of the season, 12—0, and dropped the second 5—3. Bobby Fitzgerald and Vince Fucci led the hitting barrage for Maryville in the opener. Fitzgerald had back-to-back homers and drove in five while Fucci connected for one home run and collected three RBI's. Mike Flagler was the winning pitcher.

World scene

United States District Cour Judge Oliver Carter has ordered another extensive psychiatric examination for Patricia Hearst before he will pronounce sentence on her. Carter claims he needs more medical information before he can narrow down the punitive options open to him. Hearst is currently under treatment for a collapsed lung.

A bill authorizing mass flu vaccines has left Congress and is on the way to the White House. Ford is expected to sign the $135 million measure.

Welfare costs in the United States rose last year by 21.4%. A record $24.8 billion was paid out to families in 1975. Growing lists of unemployed fathers is reported to be the main cause of the increase.

According to former Defense Secretary James R. Schlessinger, U. S. officials have considered giving military aid to mainland China. This consideration arises out of the fact that the American government supplies technicians and aid to Russia, a major foe, but denies it to China, a "quasi-ally."

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations

The Leader

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.

Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Scott Garren sets to return a shot at a recent practice.

Proffitt aid increased

The Fred L. Proffitt Scholarship Fund for Athletes at Maryville College established in honor of the former treasurer has been changed to the Fred L. Proffitt and Estelle S. Proffitt Scholarship Fund for Athletes. The change was made by agreement of the family since many memorial gifts have been made in honor of Mrs. Proffitt since her death March 14.

Mrs. Proffitt, the former Estelle Snodgrass of Atlanta, Georgia, was a 1908 graduate of Maryville College. She was the first woman member of the Maryville Board of Education, past president of the Chilhowee Club, charter member of the Mary Blount Chapter of the DAR, founding member of the Book Lovers Club, and past member of the American Association of University Women.

Maryville College president, Joseph J. Copeland said, "We appreciate the additional designation of Mrs. Proffitt's name in the light of all the Proffitt family has meant to the community and the college. We are pleased to have Mrs. Proffitt honored in this way through the college and this fund."

Mr. Proffitt served as college treasurer for 29 years. In earlier years when the college staff was smaller, he had responsibility for many operational details as well as the endowment investments and handling of the money and accounts.

Higher education, cont.

That attitude has now reached into the government itself. The Office of Education (under the Department of Health, Education and Welfare,) came out with a policy statement on career education which reflects the criticism currently leveled against American education. The crux of that office's conclusion is that American Education is failing to prepare students for the "world of work."

The policy statement concludes that:

—Too many people leaving the American educational system are deficient in the basic skills required for a modern, rapidly changing society.

—Too many students fail to see the meaningful relationships between what they are being asked to learn in school and what they will do when they leave the educational system.

—American education, as presently structured, meets the educational needs of that minority of people who eventually graduate from college. It fails to give attention to the vast majority of students who will never graduate from college.

—American education has not kept pace with the rapidity of change in our "post-industrial occupational society." As a result, when worker qualifications are compared with job requirements, there are tremendous numbers of over-educated and under-educated workers. The boredom of the over-educated worker and the frustration of the under-educated worker have contributed to "growing worker alienation in the total occupational society."

—The growing need for and presence of women in the workforce has not been reflected adequately in high school or college.

—Insufficient attention has been given to learning opportunities which exist outside the structure of formal education.

—The general public, including parents, business and labor, has not been given an adequate role in the forming of educational policy at all levels.

—American education does not meet the needs of minority or economically disadvantaged students.

—Education after high school has not given enough emphasis to occupational programs being "in harmony with academic programs."

The Carnegie Corporation, a private educational foundation which gave over $13 million in grants last year, also came to the conclusion that higher education has not fulfilled its obligations and is headed for serious trouble. But, contrary to the government's stress on more career-oriented education, the Carnegie report found that there has been too much emphasis on economic and career goals.

The Carnegie study was capped by an essay by its president, Alan Pifer, entitled Higher Education in the Nation's Consciousness. Pifer warned that unless great changes are made, the nation's colleges could end up as an "array of stagnant institutions, plagued by low morale, unable to meet the demands of society."

To counteract this trend, said Pifer, universities "must stop trying to sell higher education to potential students on the grounds primarily of its economic benefits." The emphasis, rather, should be on developing "intellectual abilities, humanistic understandings and aesthetic sensibilities."

Bourroughs rep here

Gary Barone, (the Knoxville Sales Manager) will be interviewing prospective sales representatives for the Burroughs Welcome Company. The interviews will be Wednesday April 21, from 1:30 til 4:00 p.m.

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

PABST	12-OZ.	$1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE	12-OZ.	$1.69
PEARL LIGHT	12-OZ.	$1.59
MILLER "PONIES"	7-OZ.	$1.93

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

THE Highland Echo

Vol. 61 No. 22 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | April 23, 1976

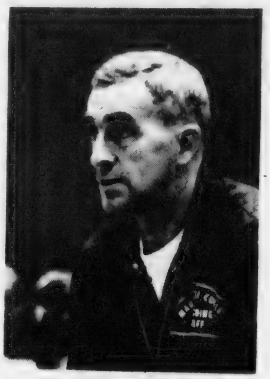
Coach Boyd Baird resigns

Hanging stolen

Sometime this past weekend, a macrame hanging, created by Elaine Parker as a Merrill Commission piece, was stolen from the lobby of the Student Center (Fayerweather Hall.)

As described by Parker, the hanging is composed of three hand-knotted cylinders of solid jute rope, the outer two being natural and the inner one being orange. The base is maple colored and on the bottom are three ceramic beads and one brass bell. It is approximately five feet long and 12 inches in diameter.

Fantasia draws alumni



Over seventy former members of the Maryville College Concert Choir are returning to attend or take part in the performance of FANTASIA ON SHAPE NOTE TUNES, a major work for chorus and orchestra, written by the choir's director, Dr. Harry H. Harter.

The performance will be held on Sunday, May 9, at 3:00 p.m. in Wilson Cahpel, Maryville College. This composition was commissioned by the Tennessee Arts Commission in cooperation with the National Endowment for the Arts as part of the state's bicentennial celebration.

The returning choir members are engaged in a variety of professions, including college and public school teachers, doctors, ministers, social workers, businessmen, government employees, concert artists, and housewives. Sixteen different states will be represented, and some will be traveling over 1000 miles. They will be returning from states on the east coast from Maine to Florida and as far west as Missouri. Twenty members will be returning from Tennessee, six from Georgia, four from Kentucky, two each from Ohio, Verginia, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Florida, and Connecticut,and one each from South Carolina, Maine, New Jersey, North Carolina,Missouri, and West Virginia. Also represented will be a large variety of classes, ranging from the class of 1928 to the class of 1975.

The bicentennial concert will also include Burnet C. Tuthill's "Big River," for women's chorus, soprano solo, and orchestra. "Big River" is a graphic musical picture of the restless Mississippi River, its beauty, power, treachery, and majesty, set to words of John Gould Fletcher. Mr. Tuthill, the composer, anticipates attending the performance.

The Maryville College-Community Oratorio Chorus will be assisted by the Doyle High School Mixed Chorus, under the direction of John Ribble and his assistant, Allan Hoke. David O'Dell, a new member of the music faculty, has been preparing the Maryville College-Community Orchestra. The two compositions selected for the concert, FANTASIA ON SHAPE NOTE TUNES by Dr. Harter and Tuthill's "Big River," are designed to bring East and West Tennessee together.

Coach Boydson Baird

Coach Boydson H. Baird, seventeen year member of the Maryville College faculty and Director of Athletics, announced his resignation Wednesday night in a joint meeting with members of the baseball and basketball teams. The resignation, effective at the conclusion of this term, was made official in a letter to President Copeland delivered Thursday morning.

Reached Wednesday night for comment, Coach Baird confirmed these facts and stated that, although appreciative of the opportunity to make a statement to the college community through the Echo, he wished to delay further comment till a later date.

Coach Baird received his B.A. in history from Maryville College in 1941, and his masters in Physical Education from Indiana University in 1948. He began his coaching career at Ohio Wesleyan, continued at Davidson through 1952, William and Mary, 1952-1959 before coming to Maryville in the fall of that year. During his career here, he has coached baseball, basketball, and football. He has recently served on the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee.

Perhaps Baird's ultimate achievement while a coach at Maryville College was as baseball coach in 1974. This was the year that the team made it to the championships of the Southern Regional Baseball Tournament. The tourney in New Orlean's saw the Baird team capture third place.

Immediate reactions from members of the teams Baird now coaches attending the announcement were varied, but most expressed great concern at Baird's departure.

Several of the team's members were stunned at the announcement. Paul Bailey, junior and third baseman on the first team, stated that, although he and Baird had some differences, he had respect for the Coach and felt that "an institution was leaving Maryville College".

Dr. David Young reacted Thursday morning to the resignation of Baird with a statement dealing with the thought of questioning and the implications for Maryville College.

"The resignation of Coach Baird raises in a most provocative way the dilemma of athletics at Maryville College. It would signify that we have not had a convergence of viewpoints between those who favor an intense athletic program against those who favor a more relaxed atmosphere."

Senior featured

On Friday, April 30, senior organ major Robin D. Dillingham will present her senior recital in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall at 8:15 p.m. Miss Dillingham, a student of Dr. James A. Bloy, is a member of the Highlander Band and is the secretary of Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women. She is also a choir member at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Maryville.

In September 1976, she plans to begin work for the Master of Music degree with a major in church music at Virginia Commonwealth University.

At her senior recital, Miss Dillingham will perform a Handel Concerto No. 5, a Trio Sonata of J.S. Bach, two Spanish pieces by sixteenth century composers, two pieces from Olivier Messian's La Nativite du Seigneur, and Franck's Third Chorale. She will be assisted by a chamber orchestra for the Handel Concerto.

Board meets today

The Maryville College Board of Directors is meeting this week in a session to finalize the budget for the 1976-77 fiscal year.

In addition to dealing with the financial aspects of the college, the Board will meet with various representatives of the community. Each of the administration officials will present a report in the areas of academics, student life, financial operation, fund raising, and religious life. Various committees, both standing and ad hoc, will discuss these issues in more depth in between the regular sessions.

The Board of Directors is the official body of Maryville College dealing with the purpose and policies of the college. It is the corporate body having the responsibility and final determination of the financial life of the college. The Board functions through nine major committees dealing with the total life of the community: academics, religious life, student affairs, and the financial operaion of the physical plant.

Student representatives will have met with the Board in the form of ACC representatives on Thursday. Suzanne Phillips will present a report on the major actions of the ACC to date; James Yancey, the newly elected co-chairman, will inform the Board of expected action for the coming year; and Dr. Russell Parker will speak on Reflections of Participatory Government. These reports are part of the ongoing evaluation of the All-College-Council.

MC celebrates E-Day

by Trippy Banner

I imagine most of us can barely remember the first Earth Day or those following it. Earth Day was the culmination of a movement towards creating a healthier and gentler respect for our earth. It is a bit frightening that since the first celebration there has been a lack of interest in its goals.

This can be demonstrated by asking the question, "How many Earth Days have you celebrated?" In the past two years there have been a few people on the campus who have attempted to express their concern over our life styles and their impact on the environment. Tomorrow these people are going to express their concern by the celebration of Earth Day.

Beginning at 7:00 a.m., the Alternative Life Styles Group (ASG) will begin their celebration which will be centered around the project which the Alternative Energy Class began last term in the Willard House garage. The purpose of the project was to test the practicality of building and utilizing several different types of alternative energies. The garage has been renovated into a well insulated, carpeted, and livable space.

The celebration hopes to be more versitale than the topics covered by the project. The day is planned like that of a county fair. There will be booths set up to give people a better understanding of some of the alternative energies available. Solar energy and methane generation will be demonstrated. A solar oven has been built and ASG hopes to do some cooking in it.

There will be a booth on energy conservation which could benefit everyone, especially in the pocketbook. There will be homemade food for sale.

In the afternoon a blue-

continued on page 2

Open letter to the Board

To the Board of Directors of Maryville College,

In line with the current evaluation of higher education by the popular media, by the institutions themselves, pollsters, parents, government, graduates, and students, the Highland Echo feels that a close evaluation is now due to its constituents. For this to take place, all matters directly and indirectly related to the school must be brought into the open for close scrutiny by the Board, the administration, the faculty and the students.

The crisis that has been building around small liberal arts colleges since the awareness of the 60's has slowly begun to creep into the academic atmosphere of Maryville College. It is a crisis that is constructed upon a foundation of factionalism, financial instability, and the temporary loss of direction within the liberal arts education. Placed upon this is the growing diversity of individuals to seek goals that for all intents and purposes serve only the individual.

This letter is in no way intended to scar and maim the relationships between those who run the institution, those that build the institution, and those that carry on the ideals of the institution through the use of both the human and physical resources found within. Instead of typical "negative student reaction," examine the issues at hand:

Academics: A strong and self perpetrating academic arena is needed by any college if it hopes to maintain a reputation with its counterparts. Presently, the feeling that exists among many is the academic community is slowly losing its grip on maintaining a reputation. Self service through careerism is replacing scholarship.

Academics versus Athletics: It was discussed in a recent Echo of the widening split between the academic community and the athletic community. In this article it was emphasized that the split could occur anywhere within extracurricular; however, it was also mentioned that the trend seemed to be showing that athletics was the purpose for some students to venture into a collegiate career. As might be said, the academic community is becoming farther away from athletic community which is becoming not a class in itself, but a class for itself.

Chaplincy: In February a committee of students, faculty, and administration met to discuss the "chaplincy issue." Since that time the committee has neither met nor been consulted about this issue. While the subject of "Why a chaplin fulltime?" was only briefly raised in this meeting, it has not been considered. Most will agree that a chaplin is not needed.

The fact that this committee was established and then suddenly unconsulted by the administration leaves a credibility gap in an area that is not considered as vital as it once was.

Alcohol: The current policy on alcohol is this: the administration has a policy on alcohol, the faculty and staff has a policy on alcohol, the head residents have a policy on alcohol, and the students have a policy on alcohol. It goes without saying that all of these policies are observed. The ultimate consideration of what exactly is the alcohol policy rests in the hand of the Board of Directors. Careful thought should be given to the enforcement of the existing guidelines and policy. It should be noted which (?) such policy is designed to be followed.

Tuition and Budget: Education costs a premium these days and sometimes the dollar does not go far in covering the costs. Regretfully, some of the cost must be passed on to the student in a tuition raise, but it is essential that the reputation of the academic processes be maintained and if possible, constantly improved.

Recognizibly this is a considerable amount to cover point by point in a forum such as a newspaper, however, these are the very issues that confront the members of the institution each day. The exceptance of them as status quo is frightening. Recognizing them is a step in the direction towards recognizing the future of Maryville College.

Many of these issues, thoughts, and concerns are national trends, granted. Many of these issues also boil down to the word "communications "–a word that is heard and discussed frequently, more often than not the results are only listening and talking. In the evolution of colleges, the on going feast of scholarship and academics, if it is ever to bear the wholesome fruit it is capable of, must open the lines of communication to the culmination of action.

Timothy Wilson Rahn
Editor, The Highland Echo

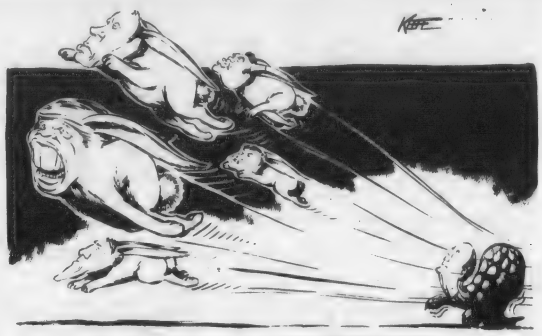
The Echo would like to interview seniors who have gained academic recognition either while at Maryville College or in their application for jobs or further study. If a need can be established, we would like to make this a regular feature of the spring term.

staff/policy

Editor–Tim Rahn; Assistant Editor (Photography)–Ed Loper; Assistant Editor–Ruth Wilbanks; Layout Editor–Debbie Huffman; Business Manager–James Dewhirst; Circulation Manager–Alan Regenbrecht; Reporters–Scott Denny, Karen Amos, Charlie Craven, Debbie Welch, Trippy Banner, Sophia Shomaker; Proof Readers–Karen Gerdetz, Lisa Wilson; Photography–Joe Showalter; Faculty Adviser–Elizabeth T. Fowler.

Echo Philosophy: The Highland Echo is the campus community newspaper of Maryville College. The primary concern of the staff is to communicate the news and issues of the campus to all concerned. This is to be achieved through objective news reporting, investigative reporting, and feature stories. Further representation is through the use of creative efforts–poetry, prose, photos and two dimensional art.



Recognizing the concept of responsible and objective journalism, the ECHO will publish rebuttals in either story form or as letters to the editor to all issues raised. These may be addressed to the editor through Box 2820, typed, double spaced, no later than noon Tuesday.

All type for the ECHO is composed by Kathy Lane in the College Print Shop, then Printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Erratum

In last week's Echo we erroneously reported that Mike Osborne had scored against UT in soccer. It should have read Dan Osborne.

grass band will be picking in the shade around the garage. To climax the day, at 6:30 p.m. there will be a vegetarian dinner held in Pearsons dinning room. The charge will be $1.00 for those under 12 or with a MC I.D., and $2.00 for adults. The dinner will hopefully be a living example that soybeans along with meat are not the only sources of protein. After dinner there will be discussions about the events that occurred on Earth Day. Dr. David Young is willing to initiate a discussion on the philosophy of alternative ways of living and their effect upon the future. A slide show may also be shown illustrating the construction during the project along with other types of alternative energies being practiced in the world.

'RUN FOR YOUR LIVES! IT'S HUBERT HORATIO TORTOISE!'

World scene

The United Rubber Workers struck the rubber industry's Big Four Wednesday despite a last-minute Firestone Tire & Rubber offer that included an unlimited cost-of-living adjustment.

Several streets were closed and at least two persons were treated at a hospital in Boston after a gang of 100 black youths stoned cars in the city's racially mixed Mattapan section.

Switzerland placed a limit Tuesday on the import of all foreign currency to protect the Swiss franc. Wealthy Italians are attempting to protect themselves against an unstable economy by changing large amounts of their money into francs.

The United States Parole Board decided to parole former Harvard psychology professor Timothy Leary, once known as the "high priest" of LSD. Leary is currently serving a 10 year sentence for illegal transportation of marijuana.

A group of commercial airline pilots and two public interest organizations have petitioned the federal government to ban cockpit smoking as a "particular hazard in aviation." The petition to the FAA also recommends to prohibit smoking by nay crew member eight hours before flight time.

Editor wanted

Applications are now being accepted for the editorship of the 1976-77 Chilhowean. All interested persons please pick up the application forms in Mr. Beasley's office, the theatre.

Letters to the Echo

To the editor:

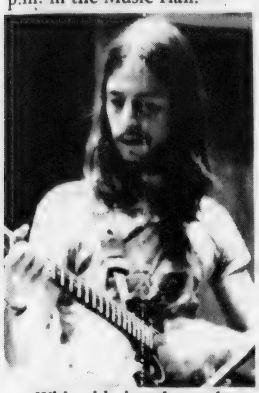
Too few times we as individuals are given the chance to see and have a product from the special creative part of our world. The Merrill Commission Program allows for this by giving local artists, and more importantly, artists on campus, the chance to create something for a specific purpose, and then have it hung or placed on campus where it halps to beautify and enhance our environment. One result or outcome of that program was a carefully and beautifully crafted macrame piece that for a short time graced the entrance lounge of Fayerweather and for the time it hung made that place a more bearable one.

Sadly enough, some individual decided he liked it so much, or else felt it was worth a quick seventy five bucks, and robbed the macrame from its place of being. That one action, which probably took less than 15 minutes to "pull off", has cheated every person on this campus for years to come. We've had stolen from us an expression of creativeness that could have helped to give us all a little joy now and then.

At the outset of my letter I said that too few times we're given the chance of seeing the beautiful. It's "stunts" like the one I've referred to that make those times even fewer. I am disappointed.

Sincerely,
Keith Frederick

I'd like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who come out to support the baseball team. One can really feel the atmosphere change on campus when there's a winning team. And one of the reasons that the baseball team is winning is because of the fans. Believe me, the fans do make a difference. The team travels to many different schools and I've never seen fans as faithful and as rowdy as ours. It's almost like fielding an army to play the opposition. I'd like to say that as long as you keep coming out to the games, we'll give our all to please you. Come on out and join Delco and the Hooters.



Keep it up!

Paul Bailey

Composer's eye view

By Deborah Huffman

Although one of those persons on the Maryville campus who needs no proverbial introduction, that long-haired whiz on the yellow bicycle with a red frizbee tied to the back, who is highly organized and always polite, known for setting up the excellent sound systems you've often enjoyed at concerts and CIV's, is Daniel Whiteside. Daniel, a composition student of Victor R. Schoen, will present "Time Song Changes: A Seasonal Offering in Memory of Peter David McNabb", his senior recital, on April 29 at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Hall.

Whiteside in rehearsal

Performing with Daniel in the program are Peggy Leatherwood - flute, Jim Grey - drum set, Don Barnard - percussion, Mark All - electric guitar, Steve Maggio - 12-string accoustical guitar, Rich Battaglia - bass, Stan McCleave - trumpet, Mike Jacobus - synthesizer and piano, Tom Williamson - dance, and Pup Cortez - sound. Daniel will perform vocals, synthesizers, Arp string ensemble, piano, prepared piano, and electric and accoustical guitars.

The piece, written in a style the composer describes as "rock and roll/jazz/avant garde" and in a medium "live" "tape and live", and "tape and multi-media" was begun last summer. It was composed for the Maryville College community: the style is popular, as opposed to the more esotaric composition Daniel has just finished for the Maryville College Band "Concert Piece for Band, Piano and Electronic Strings".

"Time Song Changes: A Seasonal Offering in Memory of Peter David NcNabb" is a song cycle which is based on abstractions of seasonal themes. The work is not a programatic text painting which reconstructs aurally the physical aspects of the seasons, but a cycle which espressed the feelings of the seasons. Regarding the cyclical nature of the work, Daniel stated "The beginning is the end and the end is the beginning."

Daniel's approach to his composing has changed from the way he worked last year when he prepared for his junior recital. He wrote and then played the music last year, and now he conceives (plays) the music, then writes it. This change adds greatly to the spontaneity of the music, Daniel feels, as does the inclusion of improvised solos by Dan, Don, Mike, and Mark.

The Music

Daniel welcomed the opportunity to give the college community some background to this piece, because he does not intend to do so during the concert. "Time Song Changes: A Seasonal Offering in Memory of Peter David McNabb", which is approximately one hour long, is constructed in four parts.

Part one is "Fall Suite", which includes three songs: "Autumn" for solo piano, "Indian Summer" for two guitars and bass, and "September Changes" for electric ensemble, is a description of the death of summer. The feeling that life is still present and the glory and joy of the death of nature, with its promise of returning life, are prominent in this section.

The second section is titled "Hsiu Yueh" (Season of Destruction). As indicated by that title, it is organized around the Chinese philosophy of indeterminancy and is, indeed, an "indeterminant" piece. "Hsiu Yueh" is scored for tape, prepared piano and dance.

"Seasons and Circles", with lyrics by Mary Gray Proffitt, is scored for a jazz ensemble (piano, trumpet, bass, vibes, drum set, and vocals). Representative of the third season of the cycle, spring, it emphasizes the renewed hopefulness of this season and the more hopeful aspects of life.

The final section of the piece "Dusk in New Hope, Pennsylvania" opens with the specific description of an evening in August in New Hope. A separate song, "Time Song Changes" is a summation of the entire work and is the most joyful music Daniel feels he has ever written.

These separate parts of the construction are held together by a dirge theme, which originated from a piece Daniel wrote for his friend Peter David McNabb, for whom the recital and piece are dedicated.

"Peter David McNabb was a good friend of mine I grew up with, who was killed in a car wreck last Christmas Eve. He was 19 years old, but had lived more in those years than I probably ever will. He was a genuinely happy person and this piece is a joyful eulogy to him, which I think he would have really liked. He was a very supportive and encouraging influence for me."

Education

Charles R. Hurt, director of the Maryville College Band, which will perform the previously mentioned piece Daniel has composed for that organization in its concert May 6, says of Daniel: "Dan is an outstanding student with an appreciation of different musical styles. He has the maturity and ambition to pursue his own direction and tastes while assuming the responsibility of not only writing his own music, but making all the preparations necessary to see that it is performed. I think Dan's most outstanding attribute, other than his obvious musical skill, is his tolerance of those who do not share his musical views and his consideration and appreciation of his fellow musicians."

Rich Battaglia, Jim Grey, Peggy Leatherwood, and Daniel

Despite what he feels are some distracting policies and administrative ethics at Maryville College, Daniel has some very positive feelings about his education here. His appreciation of the facilities as compared to larger local schools, is great. "I have had many instruments, including four organs and two concert pianos with which to work and the program has given me a lot of room to work and grow." He has his own studio in the FAC in which to work and keep his electronic instruments and equipment and a late pass to the building which allows him to work as he needs to, privileges he feels are not generally available at most schools. Daniel stresses the fact that he has been privileged to work with some fine student musicians who have been consistantly supportive "to an incredible degree" of his work. These sentiments echo those of Dr. Harry H. Harter, Chairman of the Department of Fine Arts, who states: "Dan is the first composition major in the Bachelor of Music degree program who has specialized in this type of music—multi media. I'm pleased that we can offer the facility and flexibility to allow this type of development"

Daniel feels that a liberal arts background, including visual arts and literature, is valuable to him as a musician because of the inter-relationship of the arts. Since he began his career here as a biology major, he has also picked up some education in the sciences, which he appreciates.

Citing Chick Corea's organization as an example, Daniel would eventually like to work with other musicians in a supportive effort to produce individual and group music, and hopes someday to set up such a studio. With no intention of going to grad school, Daniel's immediate plans are to keep composing and play tennis.

Lit-mag goes to press

Impressions, the literary magazine of Maryville College, will be distributed (to those wanting copies) on campus within the next several weeks.

After approximately seven months work, the magazine was sent to a Knoxville printer April 14. Acting editor Lisa Wilson described the Impressions as 32 pages of creative works from members of the campus community. Poems, prose, and visual art will be featured.

Wilson went on to express satisfaction that the trial publication met the demand for giving the opportunity for creative efforts to be expressed. Wilson assumed the editorship of Impressions when Tim Rahn took on the editorial responsibilities of the Echo.

Impressions was intiated by the Communications Committee of the ACC last October as a trial publication with the hope that it would stimulate response in the area of the arts.

Hartman's Flowers
204 S. WASHINGTON ST.
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Mom's favorite Gifts are Here!
PHONE 982-7500

The Tree House
All Varieties of Tropical & House Plants
983-4698
In South Haven Plaza

Like To Play Around?
Come to CHILD'S PLAY
Receive 15% off All Games
With This Coupon
OPEN MON. - SAT. 10-5:30
983-7136
Midland Center
In the Half Square

Poems wanted
THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS is compiling a book of poems. If you have written a poem and would like our selection committee to consider it for publication, send your poem and a self-addressed stamped envelope to:
THE TENNESSEE SOCIETY OF POETS
P. O. Box 6304
Chattanooga, Tennessee 37401

31
Can You Top The Matterhorn?
7 scoops of ice cream, topped with whipped cream, nuts and a cherry.
Buy 1 - Get 2nd one ½ Price With This Coupon
BASKIN-ROBBINS
MIDLAND SHOPPING CENTER
OPEN TILL 10 DAILY

MC Sports

Sports compiled by:
Robert Boone

Tennis

In the past several weeks, tennis has been on the upswing for the MC Women's Tennis Club.

Recent action shows that Lisa "Hurricane" Harrawood, was the club's only triumphant winner on April 2, when MC met Carson Newman. The next week saw a steady improvement among club members as Betsy Bauer joined Lisa as a winner in singles. Lee Henderson and Kathleen Doughtery, along with Bauer and Harrawood, also captured the number one and two doubles when MC again met Carson Newman.

The organization of the club has recently been altered in an effort to achieve a winning season. It was agreed among the club members that in order to give the team a more balanced attack, the ladder set up would be established. Before this particular change was inacted, all eleven players were allowed to play in the matches. Now only the top six will play, allowing for challenges in between matches.

While the Maryville College Tennis Team claims no superstars, a strong team effort has given the netters an 8—1 conference record thus far.

Team captain Craig Larsen, Sutton Brown, and Mike Webster hold down the top three seeds for the Scots. Scott Garren, a junior transfer and presently suffering from an ankle injury, has added depth to the squad.

In Garren's absence, Dillion Davis has been filling in quite adequately. Davis, a freshman, was the number one seed for Maryville High School last year. Joe Rigell and George Reigelsperger hold down the final spots on the team. Rounding out the team are Curt Leonard, Dave Carrick, Arlene Ignico, and Glen Cunningham.

Coach Donald Wyatt said that the team's improvement was the practice and conditioning gained by playing in Florida during the spring break. Wyatt also remarked that the reason for the lack of home matches is the severe shape of the courts.

Soccer

The Maryville College Soccer Club traveled to Lookout Mountain on April 17 where they battled Covenant College to a 3—3 deadlock.

Doug Hardy saved the Scots with a second half penalty shot. Emerson Henderson fired up the slow starting booters with a goal in the first half. Stuart Easter punted Maryville's second tally to open the second half scoring and bring the Scots to within one.

A stingy Maryville defensive unit checked Covenant's offense for the second half. Dave Haimbach and Doug Campbell played an inspired game for the Scots.

Goalie Campbell had perhaps his best game to date. His performance Saturday was highlighted by three diving saves and stopping a penalty shot.

In action April 21 the Soccer Club was defeated by UT by a 5—2 margin. Maryville goals were scored by Emerson Henderson and Dan Bergner.

Baseball

The Maryville College Baseball team, coached by Boyd Baird, opened its '76 home season April 17 by splitting a double-header with Lincoln Memorial University (LMU).

The Scots dropped the first contest 12—6. Kevin McKinstry was the losing pitcher. Nonetheless, the Maryville bats were hot as Danny Thomas, and Steve Wright both turned in excellent jobs at the plate.

The second game was all Maryville as the Maryville hitters warmed up for three home runs, including a grand slam by Todd Kohlbusch. Vince Fucci and Thomas were the other two Scots to homer. Thomas picked up the win to put his record at 3—0.

LMU was the Scots opponent April 20 in another double-header. LMU swept both games, 8—4 and 4—2. Apparently the Scots found the LMU crowd rather hostile in their reception.

Dave Greenwalt, Dave Dolly and Barry Mathais pitched well, but to no avail. Steve Savage knocked in two RBI's for Maryville.

Kevin McKinstry hurls ball toward L.M.U. in Saturday's action.

Track

The Maryville College Track team narrowly missed second place in a triangular meet at Sewanee, Tennessee with Sewanee College and Mars Hill on April 14.

The Scot thinclads lost by one point to the Mars Hill team while Sewanee swept the meet placing two or more performers in most events.

Maryville, however, was awesome in the field events. The big men of Sewanee and Mars Hill were no match for the muscle of the Scot's Lee Taylor and Mark Keahon.

Keahon took first in the shot and Taylor grabbed first in the discus with his best throw of the season. Steve Harrison finished second in the shot and Tom Duling second in the discus.

Mike Osborne and Randy Reagan remained Coach Dick Taylor's most consistent winners. Osborne breezed to firsts in both the high and intermediate hurdles and Reagan vaulted his way to victory in the pole vault.

Joe Whitehead and Gary Petree were second place finishers in two events: Whitehead in the 880 and mile and Petree in the 100 and 220.

There was an interesting note concerning the meet. Apparently the Sewanee coach made a decision to limit the number of performers placing in an event to two. It came as no surprise that Alvin Richmond nailed down third place in the shot—a useless effort.

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

PABST	12-OZ.	$1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE	12-OZ.	$1.69
PEARL LIGHT	12-OZ.	$1.59
MILLER "PONIES"	7-OZ.	$1.93

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

COUNTRY AIGS
fresh - - - fertile 65¢ Per the dozen
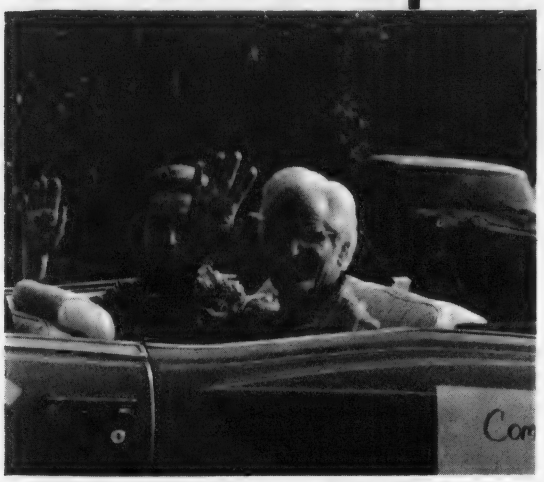
Call: Jerry at the Library

THE BOOK RACK
506 W. Broadway
Thousands Of
Used Paperback Books
Buy at ½ price or trade 2 for 1
of some types and prices.
HISTORIES FICTION NON-FICTION CLASSICS SCIENCE FICTION
Mon. - Sat. 10-6 983-Read



We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations
The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

THE Highland Echo

Vol 61, No. 23 Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee May 3, 1976

Board ups cost $400

Copeland retires; budget approved

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland during 1974 Homecoming Parade.

A balanced budget of $3,553,639 was adopted by the Maryville College Board of Directors at the regular spring meeting April 22 and 23. This represents an increase of more than $320,000 over this year's budget.

The Board also approved an increase in costs for students in the coming academic year amounting to $400. Of this, $255 is a raise in tuition and $145 is for room and board fees. A letter to students and parents with more detailed information was sent out last week.

The Board announced the request of President Joseph J. Copeland to retire effective June 30, 1977. In a talk with the Echo, Dr. Copeland explained his intention in announcing his retirement at this time: "There are three major sectors of the Maryville Community that need our attention. They are in the areas of admissions, proper adjustment to receive the maximum quality under the budget, and fund raising. I intend to address them aggressively and boldly in the next year. I would hope that my announcement would free me to handle them this way. In addition, the board and the college community needs at least a year to secure my successor . . ."

Dr. Copeland went on to say that the new budget was "realistic." It was the result of careful planning by the faculty and staff, the administration, the Board's budgetary committee, and finally the entire Board. No further cuts were necessary to balance the budget beyond those that have already been incorporated.

In other action the Board:

Heard a report that an ad hoc committee adopted a job description for a chaplain. A chaplain will most likely be selected and here at the beginning of the next academic year.

Reported an increase in non-governmental giving from $441,000 to $574,000.

Reported an increase in deferred giving of a half a million dollars since October, 1975.

Voted to conduct a feasibility study regarding a major gift campaign for the college.

Decided to hire Stuart Weiner and Associates to analyze and train the admissions department in developing a higher student fo faculty ratio. They will begin the 17 month analysis this week.

The Board of Directors functions through nine committees which cover the total life of the college.

"Travel and rest" says Copeland

Dr. Joseph J. Copeland announced in a letter to the Board of Directors his intention to retire from the position of president of Maryville College on June 30, 1977.

On this the completion of my 15th year, I hereby request of the board my retirement from the presidency as of June 30, 1977 . . . .I express to you board members individually my appreciation for your understanding of Glenda and me as persons." The Copelands expect to travel and rest for a time following leaving office.

In his letter, Dr. Copeland stated his availability to continue service with the college if a harmonious relationship could be worked out with the new president. He also promised to continue to attack the problems that Maryville College faces and to move forward in the coming year. The letter was made public to students and faculty on April 23.

Dr. Dan McGill, chairman of the Board, accepted the notice with "deep regret. He has added luster to an already illustrious institution."

Dr. Copeland has been president of Maryville College for 15 years, succeeding Dr. Ralph Lloyd in 1961. Before that he served on the Administrative Committee of the Board of Directors. Since he was elected to the Presidency he has achieved a record of accomplishments that have included the following:

Ph. D. holders in the faculty have increased from 22 percent five years ago to 62 percent now.

A new college governance system, The All-College-Council was established and has been widely copied.

More than $7 million in new plant facilities have been constructed including the new Sutton Science Center, two new dormitories, a physical education building, and the remodeling of Pearsons Hall after a fire in 1972.

Born in Ferris, Texas, May 23, 1914, he received a B.S. at Trinity University in San Antonio in 1936 and a B.D. from McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago. He also holds two honorary degrees, A doctor of Divinity from Trinity, and a Doctor of Laws from Maryville College. Before coming to Maryville he was the pastor of Second Presbyterian Church of Knoxville.

AN IMPORTANT REMINDER:

Independent Study Dates for Spring Term

352 typing extention requests due May 7.

Graduating seniors' 352 papers due May 14.

351 projects/papers due May 21.

352 final drafts due May 28.

Requests for "Incomplete" in 352 due May 28.

352's granted typing extentions due June 18.

Boyd article published

The 1975 independent interim research project of Kimberly Boyd of Bell Buckle, Tennessee, was considered of such quality that it has found publication in two forums—the Bedford County Historical Quarterly and the Webb School Alumni Bulletin.

Kim attended the Webb School at Bell Buckle in her junior and senior years and became interested in William R. (Swaney) Webb, the founder (in 1886) and first headmaster of the school. Her interim research was centered on Webb's political career; he served briefly as U.S. Senator (Tenn.), filling the seat of Robert L. Taylor, who died in office. Major resources were Webb's letters, the Congressional Record, and newspaper accounts. Dr. Russell Parker of the History Department supervised the project.

ACC meeting

The All-College-Council, meeting in regular session on April 28, heard a petition concerning the summer hot water schedule in residence halls.

Bill Gannon, freshman representative, read a petition signed by 40 residents of Dorm III complaining about the hours that students receive hot water in the dorms. The newly appointed hours provide water from 6:30 a.m. until 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. un til 6:00. The petition considered these hours too narrow and attempted to offer possible alternatives realizing the necessity of limits that the boiler plant is in operation.

Neil McDade expressed an interest to remedy the situation if that need exists. The college would be reluctant to alter the posted hours unless this action represents a clear consensus of the student community. Gannon and McDade will meet with representatives of the dorms and with Hugh Crawford in order to determine need and mediate a solution.

The co-chairmen of the council gave a report on the actions of the Board of Directors last week. Suzanne Phillips spoke about the meeting of the officers of the Council with the Board on Thursday.

Dr. Copeland delivered a report on the major actions of the Board in the areas of academic, financial and student life of Maryville College. Of major note was the fact that the college has retained the services of Stuart Weiner and Associates, a firm specializing in the area of admissions and marketing analysis.

They will evaluate the program of Maryville College and

continued on page 8

Will we know? KSU question

(CPS)—Almost six years after four students were shot to death by National Guardsmen at Kent State University, students on the campus are still very interested in the May 4th, 1970 tragedy, a recent study has shown.

About 75 percent of the students surveyed said they felt they did not know enough about the event and wanted to learn more. Students believed that most undergraduates at the school desired to learn as much as possible about the shootings.

Dr. Jerry M. Lewis, an associate professor of sociology who conducted the survey, said that the results of the survey point out a major responsibility of the University's administration and faculty to educate students about May 4th.

"The University administration can't make this event go away. It must socialize it," said Lewis.

The four Kent State students were shot during a demonstration condemning the American invasion of Cambodia. National Guard officers and University officials have been acquitted in a suit filed against them on behalf of the dead students.

Fund raising successful

Fifty volunteers—students, faculty, and alumni—are conducting a nationwide telephone solicitation of 2,500 alumni and friends of Maryville College who have not given to the college since July 1, 1975. The campaign began Tuesday, April 27, and will continue for three weeks. Calls will be made Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings.

The telephone campaign is a final major effort to encourage gifts to the college by the end of the fiscal year on June 30. It follows a successful community campaign in which 330 local friends and alumni of the college gave or pledged more than $130,000.

Bill Mooney, Director for Financial Advancement, is urging all workers in the local campaign who have not reported on completed contacts to do so prior to Monday, May 3, when the Tennessee phase of the phonothon will begin.

Alumni of the college need $70,000 in gifts from 1,100 donors to meet their goal for the year.

Art show set

Two senior art majors, Debby Carrick and Garry Lewis, will present their senior art exhibits in the Fine Arts Center Gallery from May 2 to May 15. A reception will be held on Sunday, May 2, from 2:00 to 4:00 p.m. Gallery hours are from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Carrick, from Maryville, Tennessee, and Lewis, from Westminster, Colorado, will both display mixed media, including painting, pen and ink, prints, and ceramics.

Health course

Health Science (HPER 101 and required of all Maryville students) will be offered during the first and third terms of summer school. Introduction into Physical Education and Recreation (HPER 102) will be offered during the second term.

Students wishing to take these courses should register now.

Summer jobs available

Orson Secrist, a marketing consultant, is looking for students to conduct surveys this summer for the West Knox Fire Department.

Anyone interested in this job should write Secrist in care of the fire department giving both a name and a phone number. Secrist will be in touch with those interested within two to three weeks when he is in this area

For more information, it is requested that people check with the Career Planning and Placement Office.

Down the senior trail

Graduate schools everywhere can expect to see upcoming Maryville graduates join their ranks in the Fall of '76. Even in competive situations, M.C. alumni find open doors and good opportunities. Bruce Guillaume, Emerson Henderson, Beth Widner, Kathy Kirkhart, and Penelope Lopez are five of many seniors that will be in graduate school this fall. The Echo recognized their successes and asked for a short summary of their future plans and a quick comment about Maryville College's role in those plans.

Bruce, a psychology major, so far has the opportunity to choose from three schools of Social Work at the University of Tennessee, Virginia Commonwealth University, and the University of Kentucky. When asked about Maryville's role, Bruce talked about the preparation for the Graduate Record Exam. He said, "Maryville College prepared me to take them. They didn't do a good job, nor did they do a bad job. I was prepared to do "ok" on it."

Emerson, a political science major accepted at three law schools, intends to go to Emory University in Atlanta. He believes Maryville's greatest contribution has been to "provide me with the opportunity to become involved in many activities which I feel was a very important factor in my being accepted into law school."

With a U.T. Non-Service Graduate Fellowship of $2200, Beth joins the University of Tennessee master's program in the school of Library Science. She plans to use her elementary education major by emphasizing children's library work. Beth stated, "I feel that my courses at Maryville will prove to be a solid background for graduate school, especially the independent study, which taught me the meaning of in-depth research, organization of materials, and persistence."

Kathy, a psychology major, will begin work in the department of Clinical Psychology at Kent State University.

Penny, majoring in mathematics, has received a Teaching Assistantship for $4000 at the University of Kentucky. She believes that the continued support by the mathematics department here at M.C. has been priceless. She said, "The interest Mr. Nichols and Dr. Dent have shown in me as a student has been an invaluable experience. With the same token I am grateful for the many hours Dean Blair has shared with me in my search for a satisfying career."

There can really be no comparison between Maryville and graduate school, but Bruce sums it up when he says, "I feel my background from M.C. will enable me to do well."

by D. L. Welch

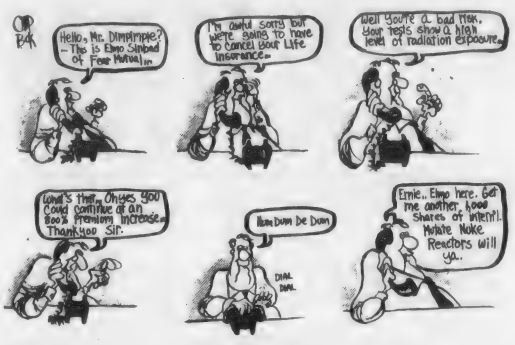
Religion registration reminder

Please bear these two things in mind when you register for Fall classes. One, if there are any Juniors and Seniors who would like to enroll in a 300 level Religion course, they are welcome. However, if such students want this course to count as the religion core requirement, they must have the permission of the instructor, before registering for the course.

Two, Humanities 101 is to be offered only twice more: the first term of Summer School, and Spring term (D Hour), 1977. If you need this course for graduation, you must take it one of these two times, or you will be very unhappy.

David Cartlidge

Editor sought



The Communications Committee of the ACC is now open to applications for next year's Yearbook editor. Qualifications are few and benefits are high. No experience is necessary, but the current editor, Lynn Houlberg, says that "it wouldn't hurt to have some high school experience or have worked on past college staffs."

The benefits are aesthetic and monetary. Besides a feeling of accomplishment, the editor receives a one half tuition grant in payment of services.

While the editorship requires no specific hours, it does demand a devotion and organizational ability, plus a interest in design. The job begins in September and ends March 1st, the last deadline with Taylor Publishing Company.

It is requested that every applicant have a definite theme and a tentative staff in mind when he applies. A staff must include assistants for layout and plenty of photographers.

Lynn offers this advice: "The job can be a lot of fun and not a burden if one plans in advance and organizes his staff and materials."

Student reaction to tuition raise

In recent action by the Maryville College Board of Directors, a combined increase in tuition and room and board costs of $400 was approved for the next academic year. The Echo interviewed several students about the increase and the effects it may have on the future of their education.

Sandra VanArsdall, a freshman psychology major from Venice, Florida, is paying for her education by herself, her parents, and grants.

VanArsdall is opposed to the increase, but can realistically see where it would be necessary. She also feels that she is receiving her money's worth of education, even with the hike.

As with all the students interviewed, VanArsdall stated she could not afford to come here next year if she had to rely on herself.

David Boyd is a freshman biology major from Newport, Tennessee.

Boyd does not know where he is going to get the money for the next year, but he feels that the education is worth $3300 and plans to come back. He could not come back if costs were raised again.

Boyd feels that the school "needs to find viable alternatives to the raising costs each year."

Brooks Lacy is a sophomore chemistry major from Nashville, Tennessee.

Lacy's education is being paid through Vanderbilt University, but he is not sure that the education received here is worth the extra $400 a year. He thinks that the quality of education is decreasing while the price for it is increasing.

Lacy added that "the whole institution will be lost if it stops students from entering because of financial difficulties."

Stanley McCleave is a sophomore music major from Haddon 'eights, New Jersey. McCleave feels that "Maryville is hanging itself." He does not see how any new students can be attracted by the new cost figure.

McCleave also feels that he could get as good an education elsewhere, but he could come back again anyway because he finds many encouraging things happening here.

McCleave also asked the very pertinent question: "Where is the money going?"

Jim Grey is a junior music major from Birmingham, Alabama. Grey feels he is getting an excellent education here and is not upset by the extra $400.

Edwyn Bryant is a junior chemistry major from Long Island, New York.

Bryant realizes that costs are rising all over, but wishes that the school had raises costs $200 last year and $200 this year.

Bryant also feels that M.C. is healing its fiscal outlook on a short term basis. He suggests that M.C. look into long term investments, such as insulating buildings and improving heating. Bryant states that he hopes some of the money is going into the food service.

Bryant, however, does feel that he is getting a fine education. He also added, "If I begin to feel that my pursuit of learning is being hindered, I will leave and not look back."

James Yancey is a junior political science major from Charlotte, North Carolina.

Yancey feels that the increase is probably necessary, but thinks it will effect a lot of students returning next year.

Yancey also feels he is getting the best education he can for the money, but he too, wonders where the money is going. He also stated that he was expecting a raise in tuition of some kind.

Most of the students interviewed felt that the increase in costs for next year is necessary. Most of them, however, agree that it will discourage new recruits. The $3300 tuition fee is yet to be tested by time.

Band presents honors concert

The Maryville College Band, under the direction of Charles R. Hurt, will present a Spring Concert Thursday,May 6, at 8:15 in the Wilson Chapel on the Maryville College Campus.

The program is the 1975-76 Honors Concert for Tau Kappa Chi, the music honorary society, which will induct its new members during intermission. The concert is also a CIV.

Military March by Beethoven, Suite of Old American Dances by Robert Russell Bennett, Chicano by James Richens, Sinfonia Nobilissima by Robert Jager, and Festival by Clifton Williams are some of the numbers to be featured on the program.

Concert Piece For Band, Piano, and Electronic Strings will receive its premier on this concert. The Maryville College Band in connection with the Fine Arts Department commissioned Daniel Whiteside, a Maryville College music composition student of Victor Schoen to write this piece to encourage the practice of giving more young American composers the opportunity to write music and hear it performed. This piece utilizes the "Arp," an electronic instrument which duplicates the sound produced by the string section in an orchestra. Peggy Leatherwood, a senior music education major, will be the conductor for this piece.

Betty Carol Zinavage, a sophomore from Waynesville, North Carolina, will be the Guest Artist performing Ballade in A-flat Major for piano by Chopin. Ms. Zinavage was the featured soloist on the Maryville College Community

Charles R. Hurt

Orchestra's concert this year and in addition has been the recipient of the Philip Steele Award and the Fine Arts Competition Award. She is a member of Chi Beta, Delta Omicron, and the Maryville College Band.

The Maryville College Jazz Ensemble will be featured in a medley of popular jazz tunes. The group is composed of William Ziegler, piano, Jim Gray, drums, Steve Lowery, bass Rick Carl, trumpet, Curtis Leonard, alto saxophone, and Charles Hurt, trombone-director.

Solar power opted for Texas town

(CPS)—Texas Power and Light Co. finally pushed the rural town of Bridgeport too far. The 3,600 residents decided not to go along with the latest rate increase, and opted to have their electricity cut off within three years instead.

As an alternative, the city fathers have decided to have a solar electricity generator built for the city. The generator, designed by a Nevada company, will use solar collectors to heat water. The hot water will then heat liquid silicon which will run a hydraulic engine and generator for the city.

Day show glows

by Laurie Allen

Martha Day is a creator, a molder of pigments, and an experimenter of media, form, and design. She has taken her creations of color and textures and put them on display for the sheer enjoyment of a frontal attack on the senses.

Her show is bright, colorful, and imaginative. It is a show of movement. Her paints literally leap into the mind with all their primitive intensity. "Sunbeam," one of her creations, best exemplifies this intense movement of subject and material. Light streams through trees and pounds into the brain in such shocking hues that sunglasses almost become a necessity.

"Sunsets", with their rich play of orange and blood lights against sand and palm, give the cool serene feeling of late evening breezes and far off gulls. Every color has been mixed and brightened, yet they have not diminished in their purity from palate to canvas.

Color, however, is only a part of the show. Her real brilliance is demonstrated in her ability to create in many mediums with both color and black and white. Neither canvas, nor rope, nor photography, nor clay escapes her touch.

Her "constructions" are a most enjoyable aspect of the show. Seemingly mundane objects, ordinary boards, and appliances are shaped and combined to form pictures that are seen uniquely in themselves rather than in the material that created them. White nails hammered into a black background emerge as a self portrait deserving second notice.

The show literally holds something for everyone—be they lovers of macrame, textile design, silk screen, or scratchboard. Each piece is treated with the artists distinct style. Each display has a story and mood of its own, brought to life by the person viewing it. No critique could give the show or the art work a true or accurate description. The works have to be seen and experienced personally, individually. Only when art work is viewed and discussed, only when a person reaches into his realm of experience for a mood or emotion can the work be truly appreciated.

Tuition skyrockets

(CPS)—The financial burden of a college education may grow unbearable for some students next year as total costs at some schools exceed $7,000 for the first time. Tuition at some of the nation's leading private institutions will climb over the $4,000 mark.

Total costs, including room, board and expenses, may increase from 5 to 12 percent at individual colleges and universities, according to a survey recently released by the College Entrance Examination Board.

The survey showed that the average cost for a resident undergraduate will be $4,568 at a private institution and $2,790 at a public institution.

But at certain highly selective institutions, students will have to pay far more than the average costs, due to especially high tuitions at those schools. Tuitions at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Stanton, Stanford, Brown, Dartmouth, Cornell and other prestigious schools will exceed $4,000. At lease one school, Bennington College in Vermont, will charge more than $5,000 for one year's tuition, exclusive of other major costs.

There has been growing concern from many critics that the cost of attending leading private schools will get so high that education will some day become the privilege of the rich and clite. At the same time that tuitions at private schools are rising, the budgets of many state schools are being stripped back to the bare minimum, leaving many poor and middle-income students out in the cold.

In New Jersey, for example, the total cost at Drew University, a private school, will be $5,455 next year. At the same time, the cost at Rutgers University, New Jersey's state university, will increase to $3,200.

In New York City, where students at Columbia University will pay $4,000 in tuition for being there, the City University of New York has been forced to close down several colleges in the system, including a bilingual college serving predominantly minority students.

"The answer has to be greater Federal support for

continued on page 6

Whispering Charlie's
609 Broadway
Across from Charles-Watt Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy a lot For A Little!

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations
The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Parks & Belk
Just follow College Street for College Fashion
Open 9:30 - 5:30 Daily
Thurs. & Fri. Till 9:00
The place to go for brands you know
Ladies Sportswear by Bobbie Brooks Wiggle Worm Peddle & Saddle
Men's Clothing by Levi Arrow Munsingwear
Maryville College Students Welcome
983-1020
Downtown Maryville

The Tree House
Remember Mother with a Living Gift Plants
983-4698
In South Haven Plaza

The Warwick
HOUSE OF GIFTS
Choose your gift for Mom and have it wrapped and packaged for mailing while you wait.
983-5637
MIDLAND CENTER
On The Half square

Thoughts-- past, present, future

For the most part the recent decisions by the Board of Directors and two of the more prominent members of the campus community have passed into the part of the mind that labels most things history and covers them with a thin layer of dusty forgottenness. There is a significance to these events, however, that cannot allow them to pass too quickly or to pass without comment.

Chronologically the events are the Boyd Baird resignation, the actions of the Board of Directors, and the retirement of President Joseph Copeland. They are three rather important occurences. The reason for this is that none of these actions occur without a large part of the community—or the total community—feeling the results.

The resignation of Coach Baird no doubt came as a shock to a large portion of the college. It represents one man's frustration to all the problems that confront an administrator of any type on a college campus. (See letters to the Echo.) In this case it stands particularly representative of much of what has happened and is happening at Maryville College.

Coach Baird will be missed. As an individual he has put much of himself into an institution that he thought was important and viable in the best way that he knew how—athletics.

The decisions of the Board of Directors stand in a different light. They affect each and every member of this institution in every aspect from money to athletics to curriculum to policy. Their actions should be carefully scrutinized by all. The many actions of the Board at their April 22 and 23 meeting is exemplary of how a board of directors can act in the best interests of all and the future of the institution. What reamins now is that the administration in Anderson Hall must effectively carry out these decisions in the year to come.

(I would like to note that hopefully in the future students cannot only see the results of Board meetings, but also the Board members themselves.)

The final note is the announced retirement of President Copeland.

As with Coach Baird, Maryville College represents a major part and concern of Dr. Copeland's life. They both have professed a loyalty to this college that is somewhat unique. In the case of Dr. Copeland, however, it is different in magnitude and consequence.

It has been Dr. Copeland's strong leadership over the first ten years of his presidency that has given Maryville College a good and modern liberal arts curriculum on which to build. His abilities as a fund raiser are also incalcuable. And last, Dr. Copeland has been unwavering in his support of the rights of individuals. This is perhaps one of the more significant offerings, far more than the ability to procure funds, to Maryville College.

The community for the most part does not see this part of the history of Dr. Copeland. Instead, it is the actions of the past several years while the administration was feeling many internal changes due to monetary difficulties that are remembered by the people who inhabit Maryville College. Unfortunately these tarnish the reputation of Dr. Copeland.

Dr. Copeland has spoken that he wishes to "aggressively and boldly" tackle several of the more important issues of Maryville College. If he is to hope to solve or rectify the problems that he sees in the year to come, the members of the community must forget the problems that surround the administration. They have passed and a stigma may exist, but if Maryville College is to move into the future and select a new president with dignity, they must also serve a man who has in his way dignified the college.

Tim Rahn

staff/policy

Editor—Tim Rahn; Assistant Editor (Photography)—Ed Loper; Assistant Editor—Ruth Wilbanks; Layout Editor—Debbie Huffman; Business Manager—James Dewhirst; Circulation Manager—Alan Regenbrecht; Reporters—Scott Denny, Karen Amos, Charlie Craven, Debbie Welch, Trippy Banner, Sophia Shomaker; Proof Readers—Karen Gerdetz, Lisa Wilson; Photography—Joe Showalter; Faculty Adviser—Elizabeth T. Fowler.

Echo Philosophy: The Highland Echo is the campus community newspaper of Maryville College. The primary concern of the staff is to communicate the news and issues of the campus to all concerned. This is to be achieved through objective news reporting, investigative reporting, and feature stories. Further representation is through the use of creative efforts—poetry, prose, photos and two dimensional art.

Recognizing the concept of responsible and objective journalism, the ECHO will publish rebuttals in either story form or as letters to the editor to all issues raised. These may be addressed to the editor through Box 2820, typed, double spaced, no later than noon Tuesday.

All type for the ECHO is composed by Kathy Lane in the College Print Shop, then Printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

To our readers

The staff of The Highland Echo is concerned chiefly with bringing you the news, issues and events of Maryville College on a quality basis. Last week, however, numerous technical problems developed with the production of the paper which inhibited its being printed by last Friday.

As usual, there will be an Echo this Friday.

The Highland Echo

Fear comes clothed in different Garb.
In the beginning it wears a shell
That hatches inside the soul. And What da ya know - You have given
Birth to a monster, who inhabits
The empty void and feeds on Darkness.
How wonderful to be without Barrenness, to be fulfilled
To think, your monster has swallowed
The darkness and has given you light.

But the light glares and blinds and Gives you no rest. Evil is the main Focus. It is draped in the clothing
Of brilliance and vitality. But for
How long does it sustain and
Was it's initial gift one of love
Or deceit?
Friend, if I had power, I would Still your flood of restlessness and Give you a present of calming rain.
But when I speak of myself
I can equate what have with power. All I can Do is respond to your inner Scream for the important thing-
Love; The thing that you give so Freely, but have never received
In the same abundance
Your vigor revives my soul.
Your eagerness makes you Vulnerable . . . beautiful. Your Fear makes me cry. I am not A healer. I wish I was, and
So I dream. I love your innocence
I despise your tears. Your bunger
Is great. Your sustenance sparce,
Your fear destructive. Our Friendship is living water in a Dry land.

Meredith Leach

What to look for

As the Maryville College Community now well knows, Dr. Joseph J. Copeland has submitted his letter of resignation/retirement to the Board of Directors effective June 30, 1977. This particular announcement places Maryville College in a somewhat unique position: that of having an adequate amount of time to select a successor to the Presidency of this college. It is not my intent to criticize the actions of Dr. Copeland's administration, I am only trying to make a few, hopefully intelligent suggestions for criteria in the selection of a new president.

Maryville College is known to suffer from a serious communication problem. With this fact in mind, I feel very strongly about the necessity of having a highly qualified administrator to fill the office of President of Maryville College. In the past history of the school, there has been a definite precedent set for selecting Presidents with a background directly related to the Presbyterian Church. However, in the near future, Maryville College will once again have the services of a chaplain. We don't need another chaplain in the President's Office, we need a president.

In the past several months, Maryville College has been in the midst of a program to change its image. Hoepfully the Board of Directors will recognize this fact and will place a great deal of emphasis on the need to select a younger person for this position. Also, Maryville College could join the nation wide trend of appointing women to important offices in the Academic world.

In conclusion, I would like to stress once again that Maryville College needs a person the President's Office who can pull it all together. This school is going through a very critical period economically and academically and the necessity for a leader with a great of objectivity, creativity, and strength is more than apparent.

Perhaps the Echo should start running an advertisement which run somewhat like the following:

HELP WANTED: PRESIDENT OF SMALL LIBERAL ARTS COLLEGE: SALARY: NOTHING TO GET EXCITED ABOUT: QUALIFICATIONS: SUPERMEN/WONDERWOMEN ONLY CONSIDERED.

Ruth Wilbanks

An open letter to Hank Thoreau

Dear Hank,

I know you detest letters, so I'll keep this one short. The other day I saw the truth of one of your observations from a new perspective; I thought you might like to hear about it.

Other than as a suspicion, I had never really subscribed to your notion that "the old have no very important advice to give the young . . . their lives have been such miserable failures . . ." Having invested heavily in an institution where I am, in effect, paying for the advice of the old, or at least the older than myself, it seemed to negate the value of my investment to ignore that advice, or "knowledge" as they call it here.

But the suspicion was confirmed very heavily the other morning as I was leaving a musical program, an African xylophonist. Had this program been held later in the day, evening perhaps, I might have found it quite enjoyable. However, not sharing your affinity for the early morning, after the program had not quite reached its end my attention was focused more on the prospect of my upcoming first cup of coffee than on the final pieces being performed. When the program ended and sufficient applause had been given, I joined the lines leaving the auditorium. As I left, heading with purpose toward that long-awaited cup, I passed two professors who were discussing the content of the performance. I have found that a professor's thoughts are usually more valuable when they are uttered outside the classroom. There is less temptation to attempt profundity in order to "teach". As I passed the pair I turned a curious ear to their conversation, hoping for one of those stray, revealing thoughts. What I heard was a bit more revealing than I anticipated.

The first professor was a man of indeterminate age with long grey hair and matching beard. He was wearing an Indian shirt and blue jeans as was his style, his sole purpose in life seemingly being to appear "cool" long past his time. If that attempt ever faltered, he had a well-polished cynicism to fall back on. He was expounding, with great strength of ego, that he had just heard "really quite advanced music, but they," meaning the very students he tried so hard to imitate, "just don't understand and won't see it."

His temporary travelling companion was a spinster of advanced years and status, with as substantial a reputation for "enlightened" scholarship as she had figure. Her reply revealed some deep-rooted academic and racial prejudices, "Well of course, Plato tells us that music was their (the Africans) original thing."

Afraid that I would hear serious consideration given to natural rhythm, I quickened my step lest I should interrupt their conversation with a vulgar assessment of their ancestry. Shortly afterwards, coffee in hand, I resumed my annual ruminations on the ultimate pragmatism of dropping out of college. You were right, Hank, "those things for which the most money is demanded are never the things the student most wants." I wonder how many of the "facts" that I've paid to hear have been less than true, tainted by similar dislike of the young and other prejudices more subtly stated. Come to think of it, what I've paid out already would have bought many cups of coffee and would have freed me to engage in more of that "far more valuable education (gained) by associating with the most cultivated of . . . contemporaries (for which) no charge is made." I wonder if I can get a refund?

Michael Johnston

Letters to the Echo

Dear Editor:

"Wake up, you assholes!"

"You ain't so goddamn cool 'cause you live in that dorm!"

"Stick it up your ass, you bitch!"

Appalling though they may be, these are some of the expressions to which we awaken in the wee hours between Saturday nite and the dawn of Sunday in Davis Hall. They are uttered from passing cars and sometimes from people just walking around.

Ordinarily, this would be a disturbance of the peace , but one acquires a sense of toleration with his/her "education" on a college campus—toleration of the imbeciles who poison the learning atmosphere with their inconsiderate idiosyncracies. For two weekends too long we have "tolerated" this behavior, but we have reached our breaking point. (Strange, "education" did not rid us of that!)

Some of us like the crisp freshness of the night air and sleep with our windows open; these flagrant obscenities make that air stale. Even when we close our windows the stinking odor of these expressions seeps through the cracks. To those who would deprive us of peaceful sleep, please keep that dragon in your mouth until you find a recently used outhouse in which to yell. You will not be able to differentiate between its odors and those of your mouth.

Pat Johnson
Resident, Davis

Dear Editor,

When I received a certain memo in my post office box Monday afternoon I couldn't help but laugh as I read it. It was from Dr. L.A. Boroviak, Chairman, HPER and Athletic Department. It stated simply enough:

> "It has been brought to my attention that you have not been willing to comply with college policy when utilizing the facilities in the Physical Education Building. Regarding this policy: REGULATIONS ARE POSTED AND IGNORANCE IS NO EXCUSE."

Well, I couldn't believe what my eyes were reading! And that last line (IGNORANCE IS NO EXCUSE) really hit the ole funny bone. If ignorance is no excuse, then I wonder where this ridiculous newfangled policy originated. I'm certain that any student who has stepped foot inside the P.E. building during the last few months has been confronted with this new policy. This is the policy that is responsible for all those people running around with those little red tags pinned on their person somewhere visible. I don't know about you, but this seems like one of the most idiotic things I've ever heard of. It kind of reminds me of signing out to go to the bathroom when I was in grammar school.

I always thought that the one tradition that was impeccable at MC was the sense of individualism and freedom that we were supposed to develop and maintain while here furthering our education. Even without this little idealogical belief of mine, I still see no justification whatsoever for tagging us like some kind of experimental animal before we can use the P.E. facilities. I didn't pay $3,000 plus to attend college here and be inconvenienced and nagged every time I want to shoot a few innocent baskets and later have my priviledges threatened if "further noncompliance" results. Well, I'm sorry, but I fail to see where I have that many priviledges to be deprived of in the first place. All those little midgets running around over there in Olga Korbet costumes have more priviledges than I could even imagine having. They aren't required to wear little red tags and the few that I've had the pleasure to talk with revealed that they don't even pay tuition. That's a whole story in itself that I understand will soon be remedied. Alright!

I feel confident that I'm speaking for the majority of the student body whom are familiar with this childish policy. This is not a personal attack on anyone, but rather it is an honest attempt to remedy a situation that I feel would be greatly applauded if ti were canned. So, think about it policy makers (whoever you are) and spend a little more of your time tackling more immediate problems and trying to show us students a little respect and concern.

signed,
Lee Struble

continued on page 6

Meeting the demands

I have heard it said that the student of the 1960's is dead and nothing has come along to take his place. Individuality and free academic reign has taken its toll. Average grades have risen and many feel that quality of student scholarship has fallen. In the middle of the 1970's we are in the midst of an academic crisis.

Education has become another commodity in the competitive market. Our society has brainwashed our youth to believe that a college education is the only way to get ahead in our world; it is not. In fact, I could almost say that it is a handicap—but not quite. The truth of the situation is that our society is educating more people than ever before and has no place for these people to go. I have reached the conclusion that our society no longer has as much of a place for good scholarship as it once did; the scholarship market is saturated. Once I cease to be a paying member of the academy, there is no real place for me as a scholar—inside or outside of the academy. The fact that I most likely will never work in my field of preparation does leave me feeling bitter and hurt. It is not the fault of the academic institution but of society as a whole. We have been had. Four years of study in the great ivy halls is no longer the magic key to success. We live in a dynamic world: Nothing ever remains the same and the academy is no exception.

Students have changed. A housemother of over forty years once remarked that boys had changed over the years. It seems that they have lost any concept of academic purpose or understanding. Freshmen seem to be unequipped to deal with the rigors of serious academic life; secondary schools just have not taught their students the necessary discipline. She found them to be bitter toward the older generation in general and authority in specifics. Boys just are not the same as they used to be.

I agree. Academics and students have changed, and not for the best. The whole thing is just too easy anymore. Instructors have compensated for the ill preparation of their students by easing up on the grading scale. Less work is now expected for the same amount of credit. Admission standards have relaxed because the quality of incoming students has relaxed. The academic world knows that it cannot operate unless it has warm bodies in its classrooms; so, many times it has to take what it can get. Programs have to be geared down accordingly—and the stress of the whole situation is starting to show.

Perhaps the great moral issue on our campuses these days is the decline of scholarship. As time goes by, more and more students are less and less able to deal with the mechanics of academic study (the addition of English 104 courses is witness to this), and with this loss of academics comes a loss of academic discipline. Without disciplined thought, everything falls apart. If we are to survive we need that type of thought and a strong academy to foster it. I see little in the way of trends developing in that direction.

It seems to me that a loss of academic discipline fosters an acute lack of awareness and that is featured in the student of today. The protests of the last decade are dead but the issues are still here; yet, nothing is said about them. There seems to be little in the way of interest in acute national affairs. We hear little murmurings every once in a while but no action. I heard one former student remark that she was greatly disturbed because workshirts and jeans have ceased to be any kind of a moral statement. In other words, no one, particularly students, is speaking to the moral issues of our time. People have all but forgotten the Barrigan brothers let alone what they stood for. It worries me when values drop out of a society—namely scholarship and awareness—and no one even notices.

Ed Loper

Echo primary

Vote for ONE candidate only (not one in each party).

Democrat		Republican		Other
Humphrey	☐	Reagan	☐	Party _____
Udall	☐	Ford	☐	Candidate _____
Jackson	☐
Wallace	☐
Carter	☐
Harris	☐
Brown	☐

Please check "yes" or "no".

	Yes	No
Do you favor a federal law legalizing the private use of marijuana?	—	—
Do you favor passage of the Equal Rights Amendment?	—	—
Do you favor the continuation of busing as a means of integrating school systems?	—	—
Do you favor more congressional control over the activities of the CIA and other federal investigative organizations?	—	—
Do you favor repeal of the abortion law?	—	—
Are you a registered voter?	—	—
Do you plan to vote in the 1976 Presidential Election?	—	—

Area of the country you consider "home" or where you were reared

Northeast Midwest Southeast
Southwest West

Urban Small Town Rural

Age_____ _____

Fill out, tear out, and return to box in Post Office marked "Echo Primary" by May 7. Results will be published in the May 14 edition of the Echo.

Research reveals the roots of reefer madness

by Carl Strange

(CPS)—"Reefer Madness," the once popular concept of marijuana that misled a generation's beliefs about the drug, began with an obscure tax bill hearing nearly 40 years ago, according to a legal researcher.

Charles H. Whitebread of the University of Virginia's law school traced the history of marijuana laws from the passage of the first state prohibition of the drug by Utah in 1915.

Whitebread, who began searching records in 1968 to discover where the idea started of making marijuana usage criminal, said 27 states had made the drug illegal when Congress passed the Marijuana Tax Act in 1937.

Congressional hearings on the bill lasted only two hours, Whitebread said. "Their key witness was Enslinger, the head of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, who testified that marijuana created in its users 'insanity, criminality and death.' "

The Marijuana Tax Act, an extensive measure that included prohibition of marijuana and hemp production, passed Congress without debate against protests from the American Medical Association. "Now no medical bill could pass Congress without the approval of the AMA," Whitebread said. "Why did it then?"

Birdseed manufacturers who were using marijuana seeds in their mixed seed products were exempt from the act because, Whitebread said, "they tried other seeds, but none other made the bird's coats so shiny or made them sing so much."

The 1937 act set the stage for "Reefer Madness," Whitebread said, but the real origin was the sensationalistic newspaper coverage of five major criminal trials in the early 1940's in which murderers were acquitted on criminal insanity resulting from marijuana use.

A prominent physician testified in one of the trials that he had tried smoking marijuana himself, Whitebread said. "After two puffs on a marijuana cigarette," the doctor said, "I turned into a bat and flew around the room for five minutes, landing at the bottom of a 200-foot inkwell." A terrified audience believed him.

Whitebread said he holds no high hopes for national legalization of marijuana because the public confuses legalization with promotion. He believes that suppression of marijuana usage poses graver dangers than legalization.

"We simply have more to lose as a nation from that intrusion than from practice, whether it be smoking marijuana, reading pornography or using contraceptives," Whitebread said.

World scene

Jimmy Carter swept a victory in the Pennsylvania presidential primary election Tuesday night, stopping the Democrats who had tried to stop him, and gaining new momentum in his campaign for the Whitehouse. Carter now feels he has the chance to win the nomination on the first ballot.

The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence activities urged Congress Monday to adopt measures that would severely limit covert action in foreign policy. The bill would set specific limits on methods of gathering intelligence information.

Tuition, continued

the scholarship aid of students from low and middle-income families," said Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, chancellor of the 170,000-student State University of New York, which recently announced tuition increases ranging from 12 percent.

The two-year community colleges, attended primarily by commuting students, will be the least expensive institutions of higher education, as they are now. But there is pressure in many states to increase the tuition of community colleges. In any case, students from most community colleges must still transfer to a four-year instituion in order to get a bachelors degree, exposing themselves to the rising tuitions they were able to avoid earlier.

The difference in the total cost between a private college and a public college depends largely on the differences in tuition, since other expenses are roughly the same for both kinds of schools. According to the College Board survey, the average cost of room and board next fall will be $1,304 at a public college, and $1,371 at a private college. Transportation, personal expenses, books and supplies will also cost about the same at both kinds of institutions, according to the survey.

Letters, continued

Dear Sir:

This letter is in response to the recent decision by Coach Baird to resign from all teaching, coaching, and administrative positions which he presently occupies.

This resignation came as a total shock to many administrators and, unfortunately, these individuals should have been aware of the situation within the Athletic and Physical Education Departments. As a result of this oversight Maryville College stands to lose a coach whose integrity and love for this institution is second to none.

Undoubtedly many of the reasons for Coach Baird's resignation were the frustrations he encountered while attempting to function as an Athletic Director who had to answer to the Chairman of the Physical Education Department. This resignation adds to the list of instructors and coaches who have entered that department over the past five years, suffered frustration, and since departed. This problem requires correction.

We the undersigned feel the administrative position of Athletic Director should be made seperate and equal in authority to the chairmanship of the Physical Education Department. The Director of Athletics should have equal control of the physical facilities of that department after academic hours, he should have total responsibility for the athletic budget, and he, like any other department chief, should have to answer only to the administration of the college.

Action must be taken to counter this delicate situation. Most individuals connected or concerned with this department desire a redefinition of the duties of the Athletic Director. The guidelines presented here can be utilized to bring about a mutual agreement between the two departments, however, the positions of Athletic Director and Chairman of the Physical Education Department require segregation, not consolidation.

Sincerely,
Keith Goodwin (Football)
Randy Lambert (Men's Basketball)
Terrie Topham (Women's Basketball)
Craig Larsen (Men's Tennis)
Betsy Bauer (Women's Tennis)
Wayne Risko (Wrestling)
Mark Keahon (Track)
Paul Bailey (Baseball)

Editor wanted

Applications are now being accepted for the editorship of the 1976-77 Chilhowean. All interested persons please pick up the application forms in Mr. Beasley's office, the theatre.

Deadline: May 9

MC Sports

by Robert Boone

Track

The Maryville College Track Squad revenged two previous losses by swamping Mars Hill 83—49 April 22.

Gary Petree, Senior Mike Osborne, and Steve Harrison provided most of the points for Maryville in the meet. Petree collected a total of 16¼ points for the Scots. Petree had first places in the 100 and 220 yard run, the long jump, and a share in the 440 relay winning team including Harrison, Straher, and Osborne.

Senior Team leader Mike Osborne was impressive with a couple of first places in 120 highs and 440 intermediate hurdles and a third in the javelin.

Tom Duling and Steve Harrison displayed strong competition in winning the shot put and discus throw. Mark Keahon, Alvin Richmond and Lee Taylor were inches behind to get second and third places respectively

Other outstanding track performances came from Joe Whitehead, Randy Reagan, and Ronnie Lasley.

Joe Whitehead worked overtime Thursday by entering and placing in three events. These included One-mile run: first, 880 run: second, and the three mile run: third. Randy Reagan took first in pole-vaulting with a pleasing 13 ft. vault, and Ron Lasley had a fine javelin throw of 162 ft.

Upcoming Freshman Phil Lloyd has shown plenty of promise in recent events. Hurdling for the first time ever Lloyd finished second in the 440 intermediates behind Osborne. He was also fourth in the triple jump.

Coach Dick Taylor's '76 Track Squad threatened to reopen the record book Thursday. Knoxville native, Steve Harrison, portrayed much potential with a shot toss of 44' - 10½". The present school record is 47'9" set in 1968 by Dennis Shockley. Freshman Randy Reagan, who has been steadily climbing up the pole, reached the 13' mark in Thursday's meet. He is close behind Malcolm Westbrook's 13'6" mark set in 1971. Present members Tom Duling and Mike Osborne already have school records under their belts. Duling holds the discus record at 132' 10", while Osborne maintains the best time in 120 high hurdles at 14.6 and 440 intermediate hurdles at 54.3 which he set in 1974-75.

The Maryville College Track team traveled to Centre College April 24 for a meet with Centre, Berea, and Pikesville.

Mike Osborne had the biggest day as he broke the ribbon twice to finish ahead of competitors in hurdle competition. Steve Harrison, Phillip Lloyd, and Randy Reagan also joined efforts to produce Scot points. Harrison finished third in the 100 and 220 dashes, Reagan third in high jump, and Phil Lloyd fourth in the triple jump. Maryville's mile, and 440 relay teams were third.

Maryvillians Keahon, Taylor, and Harrison were again successful in field competition. Each anchored either second and third places on the deck.

Soccer

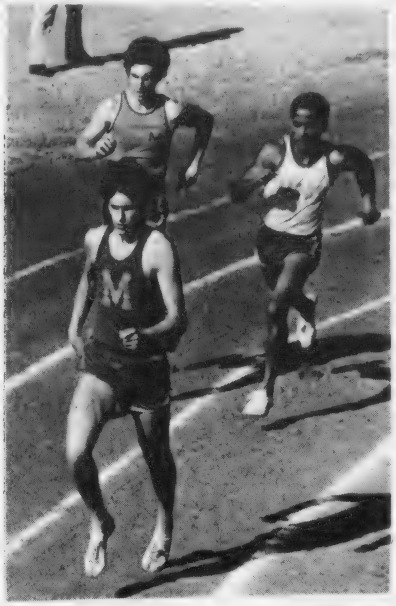
The Scots soccer club dropped a 5—2 decision to arch rival U.T. at Robert Shaw Field April 21 in Knoxville.

With one game remaining on the roster the Scots slate shows a record of 1-3-1.

Maryville was checked to a single goal by a sticky volunteer team, which led 3—1 at the end of the first half.

Emerson Henderson got the unassisted goal for Maryville. The Scots final goal came on a penalty shot late in the contest by Dan Bergner.

Dave Haimbach, a steady defensive performer was the top player for Maryville.



Men's Tennis

The Maryville College varsity tennis team sports a undisputed 9—0 record after a 6—3 victory over Covenant College at Lookout Mountain April 21.

Maryville netters captured four of the six single matches and two of three matches in doubles competition.

Sutton Brown, Mike Webster, George Reigelsperger and Joe Rigell were individual Scot victors.

Scot doubles who were triumphant were teams of Larsen-Brown and Webster-Leonard.

Joe Whitehead kicks and pumps his way past MC opponents.

Osborn stretches to clear another hurdle.

Women's Tennis

The Maryville College womens Tennis squad whitewashed Covenant College of Lookout Mountain April 21, 8—1.

The Lady Scots' victory upped their record to 2—2. Maryville had defeated Tusculum College of Greeneville, 8—1 April 20 to get into the win column.

The second session of doubles was the only loss of the day for Maryville which gave a solid performance.

Betsy Bauer, Lisa Harrawood, Leigh Henderson, Kay Munn, Holly Eckert, and Debbie Ackerman swept all six singles events.

Maryville teams of Harrawood-Bauer and Munn-Eckert were victorious in doubles Competition.

Jordan releases schedule

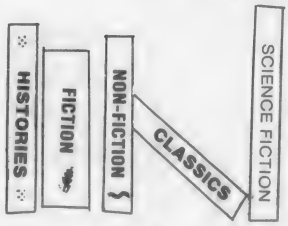
The Maryville College 1976 football schedule has six home games and three new opponents.

New teams on the Scots schedule for next fall include Lane College of Jackson; St. Leo of Florida and Guilford College of North Carolina. Jordan dropped Franklin, Randoph Macon, and Bridgewater.

Head Coach Jim Jordan said Maryville College will play at St. Leo, Fla. in 1978.

"We'll probably make that one of our last games of the season and take the team to Disney World while we're down there," Jordan said.

Mom's favorite Gifts are Here!



MARYVILLE JEWELERS

Complete Watch and Jewelry Repair

MIDLAND SHOPPING CENTER 982-8565

THE BOOK RACK

506 W. Broadway

Thousands Of Used Paperback Books

Buy at ½ price or trade 2 for 1 of some types and prices.

Mon. - Sat. 10-6 983-Read

THE FLAVOR TREE

Delicatessen sandwiches—hot or cold

Philadelphia-style Hoagies

Imported and Domestic Cheeses and Meats

Church Avenue Professional Bldg.

404 Church Avenue, Suite #9

Phone 983-7914

Sports

Baseball

The Maryville College Baseball diamond-men had plenty of recent action with eight games played within a span of seven days.

Coach Boyd Baird's Baseball Squad met Cumberland College April 22 as the Scots triumphed in a nightcap 7–6 after losing the opener 3–1.

Bob Fitzgerald chases another one.

Maryville centerfielder Steve Savage, scored Maryville's lone run in the first game after Steve Wright singled him home. Danny Thomas was the losing pitcher going the distance. The Sophomore hurler struck out five and allowed just two earned runs.

Winning form returned in the second game for Kevin McKinstry and the Scots. Maryville's Vince Fucci poled a three-run homer for a key hit in the sixth inning. Other key men were Bill Fitzgerald, Joe Moffett, and Thomas who had two rbi's.

The Scots met Tennessee-Tech in Cookeville, April 23, for a twinbill with Maryville losing the opener 7–6 and coming back victoriously 12–11. Barry Mathis and Moffett paced Maryville in the victory. The latter went six for eight at the plate and connected on a two run homer.

April 24 afternoon the Scots upped their record to 11–7 against Milligan College before splitting with the Buffaloes 6–2 and 7–2.

Big names for Maryville Saturday were Joe Moffett and Dave Greenawalt. Moffett's hot bat led to five hits for the afternoon and five rbi's while strong-armed Greenawalt saw action in both games.

Greenawalt struck out six Buffaloes and went all seven innings for his victory. Rick Brand, Todd Kohlbusch, Danny Thomas, Risko, Fitzgerald, Fucci, and Steve Wright all played a major role in Saturday's win with key hitting.

The Maryville campus was the setting Tuesday for the Scots first doubleheader sweep since April 12, over visiting Tusculum College 6–2, and 10–9. Both winning hurlers Danny Thomas and Kevin McKinstry pitched a complete games. McKinstry upped his record to 4–1.

Sophomore right fielder Steve Wright provided the Scots winning hit in the third inning of the first game by tallying home Moffett, Risko, and Savage on a deep double.

Todd Kohlbusch's key hit in the nightcap led the Scots to victory in the nightcap. Kohlbusch plastered a two-run home run to deep centerfield in the fifth with Greenawalt on base.

Other than Kohlbusch the Maryville batting attack was led by Moffett, who contributed three hits in the opener and tripled home Fucci and Wayne Risko.

Vince Fucci slashes out at another mean pitch.

Baseball Schedule

May	3	Tenn. Wesleyan	H
	4	U.T.	H
	6	Tenn. Tech.	H
	8	Emory & Henry	A
	10	U.T.	A
	12	Emory & Henry	H

ACC, continued

make recommendations as to how the admissions program might be improved. They will deal with the area of the image of the college, admissions techniques and marketing research in an attempt to efficiently recruit and attract the type of student that would best fit into the program at Maryville. The cost of this consultation as funded by Title III, is $27,000 for a 16 to 18 month period.

World scene

Twenty-two years after racially segregated education in public schools was ordered stopped, the Supreme Court faces a decision on whether private schools must be desegregated. Private schools have long been a method of wealthy families to avoid integrated public schools.

A newly released government study has determined that the world wide decline in the birthrate has fallen below the decline in the death rate for the first time in many years. This is due to the effectiveness of national birth control programs.

India has proposed talks with Pakistan to resolve a 25 year strained relationship between the two nations. This comes in the wake of a newly negotiated treaty with China and is representative of India's recent trend to move from the policy of nonalignment.

The Volkswagen company has decided to combat rising import costs by manufactoring cars in the United States. It is expected that 5,000 jobs will be created for American workers.

Looking for something special?
The Store of Fashions

FOLLOW YOUR HEART TO TIPTON Jewelers

982-8341 — 113 E. Broadway, Maryville, Tenn. 37801 — HOUSE OF DIAMONDS

- ROLEX WATCHES
- BULOVA WATCHES
- ACCUTRON
- GIFTS

"EASY CREDIT TERMS"
C. R. TIPTON, owner

- DIAMONDS REMOUNTED
- ASK ABOUT OUR NEW ..... RING OF RADIANCE THAT WILL INCREASE THE VISUAL SIZE OF A CENTER DIAMOND 6 TIMES.

Coulter Florists
& Greenhouses
2100 Sevierville Rd.
Maryville, Tenn.
To Mother with Love
Phone
982-9300

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

PABST	12-OZ.	$1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE	12-OZ.	$1.69
PEARL LIGHT	12-OZ.	$1.59
MILLER "PONIES"	7-OZ.	$1.93

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

Flowers JUST FOR MOTHER
From Horne's Florist
982-2690
215 W. Broadway

THE Highland Echo

Vol. 61 No. 24 Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee

Fantasia premiers

On Sunday, May 9, a special Bicentennial Concert will be held at 3:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel, Maryville College including two large works: FANTASIA ON SHAPE NOTE TUNES by Dr. Harry H. Harter, and Burnet Tuthill's "Big River" for women's chorus, soprano solo, and orchestra.

FANTASIA ON SHAPE NOTE TUNES, a work for chorus and orchestra by Dr. Harry H. Harter, was commissioned by the Tennessee Arts Commission in cooperation with the National Endowment for the Arts. Dr. Harter will conduct the Maryville College-Community Oratorio Chorus and Orchestra for the performance. The Doyle High School Mixed Chorus, under the Direction of John P. Ribble and Alan S. Hoke, will also participate in the performance.

Doyle Chorus

The Doyle High School Mixed Chorus in make up of 75 students selected in extensive tryouts each year. The choir has sung throughout East Tennessee and has made concert appearances with the Maryville College Choir and the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. It has received superior ratings at all of the vocal festivals it has attended. The repertoire of the choir consists of music from the early Renaissance to the latest popular music.

In past years the choir has performed the world premiere of Yardumian's "Story of Abraham" and has recorded Honegger's "King David" with the Maryville College Choir and Orchestra.

Harter Composition

FANTASIA ON SHAPE NOTE TUNES was commissioned by the Tennessee Arts Commission in cooperation with the National Endowment for the Arts. Two of the tunes are called "Maryville" and one "Knoxville" and were found in old song books, one published in Madisonville (then called Pumpkintown) (1840) and the others in Maryville (1837). Also incorporated in the composition is a variation on "Judgment Anthem" by Justin Morgan found in the 1837 publication. Harter edited the tunes in the seven shape note system used by the Harp Singers of East Tennessee.

The Directors

Harry H. Harter, born in Alameda, California in 1916, pursued music composition as a student of Roy Harris and Normand Lockwood. His first large work for chorus, solo and orchestra, REQUIEM for Fallen Ninevah, was performed in 1959 as part of the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra's twenty-fifth season. This was followed by performances of his MY HOME TOWN suite, LYRIC PIECE for orchestra, and a ballet, DELUSIONS.

Dr. Harter received his B. A. degree from San Jose State College, M. Mus. from University of Nebraska, and S.M.D. from the School of Sacred Music, Union Theological Seminary. At Maryville College since 1947, he is currently Professor of Music and Chairman of the Department of Fine Arts.

Mr. David O'Dell received his B. A. and M. A. degrees from Eastern Washington State University. He has performed professionally and symphonically, has conducted professional orchestras, and has been teaching at all levels for several years. He is his first year on the Maryville College faculty and second campus appearance.

About Tuthill

Receiving the A. B. and M. A. degrees from Columbia University, Burnet C. Tuthill, composer of BIG RIVER, was a businessman and amateur musician until becoming general manager of the Cincinnati Conservatory. At Cincinnati he also received the M.Mus. in composition. Moving to Memphis in 1935, he became Director of Music at Southwestern University. Dr. Tuthill has conducted many distinguished choral and orchestral groups, and has had compositions in all media published. He anticipates attending Sunday's performance.

Ribble, a 1958 Maryville graduate, did graduate work at the University of Tennessee. He has taught music from fifth grade through high school level. Since the opening of Doyle High School his choral groups and ensembles have earned more than twenty superior ratings in state festivals.

He is a former president of the East Tennessee Vocal Association and served for several years as the director of the Knoxville Smokeyland Chorus of SPECSQSA, Inc., was the original musical director for the Knoxville Nativity Pageant, and has served as choral director for the University of Tennessee Summer Choral Camp. He is presently minister of music for a Knoxville church and during his free time acts and sings professionally.

Hoke, member of the music faculty at Doyle High School, was interim director of the Maryville College Concert Choir while the director, Dr. Harter, was on leave. He also directed the annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah." Several of his compositions have been performed by the Maryville College Concert Choir.

Saprano Beatty

Sarah Beatty, soprano, will be the soloist in Tuthill's "Big River," conducted by David G. O'Dell, director of the Maryville College-community Orchestra. Beatty performs as soloist in the Chicago area and has appeared with the Music of the Baroque Series, the Elgin Symphony and Choral Union, and the Joffrey Ballet, among others. Last year she participated in the Santa Fe Opera's apprentice program.

The Kentucky-born soprano made her solo debut with the Chicago Symphony orchestra's 1974-75 season when, on one hour's notice, she was chosen from the Chicago Symphony Chorus to substitute for ailing Wendy Fine in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" under the direction of Sir Georg Solti.

Pictured form left to right are Suzanne Schoen, sophomore music education major, who copied the orchestra parts from the manuscript; David G. O'Dell, conductor of Tuthill's BIG RIVER; and Dr. Harry H. Harter, composer and conductor of FANTASIA ON SHAPE NOTE TUNES.

Beasley accepts post

Blair Beasley, assistant professor of Theatre and Speech at Maryville College, has been chosen over 200 other applicants, to join the faculty in the College of Arts and Sciences at Winthrop College in Rockhill, South Carolina. Beasley's contract is terminated with Maryville at the end of the present academic year.

Winthrop College, a state school with approximately 4000 students, just went coed last year and now sports a 3 to 1 ration of females over males. Beasley reports that the campus is beautiful and very similar to M. C. in many respects with the main exception being that beer is sold in the Winthrop Student Center.

Entering the combined Department of English and Drama, Beasley will have a course load of 4 courses, 3 classes and stage responsibilities. He tentatively plans to direct the spring show—Winthrop giving only two shows since they are on a semester system—which at present, is scheduled to be a Greek Classical drama presented outside in the large amphitheatre.

Beasley terms his move as a "fine opportunity." Winthrop's theatre facilities rate just below that of Maryville, but plans for future expansion are forseeable because of good backing from faculty and administration. One of Beasley's major responsibilities will be to develop and expand the theatre program. Possibly the best advantage at Winthrop lies in the attitude that the theatre is there strictly for an educational adventure and advancement. The productions are not considered as financial ventures.

Beasley emphasizes his reluctance to leave Maryville College believing that it has been very good to him. He likes the small college situation and will miss the strong personal relationships with the students knowing that in this respect 35-40 student per class will be a real handicap. Beasley also expressed, "We're leaving Maryville with mixed feelings and disappointment of leaving friends, but we're excited about the new challenges being presented by Winthrop. It's a bittersweet situation."

Leaving is less difficult as Beasley looks at Winthrop as a growth step. He is looking forward to next year knowing that he will be doing what he does best—the theatre without speech and forensics.

Leonard receives grant

In the Fall of '77, Peggy Leonard, a graduate of the Philosophy-Religion department here at Maryville College, will enter Vanderbilt Divinity School in Nashville, TN. with a full scholarship for her first year.

Originally a Psychology major when she transferred to Maryville, Peggy changed her emphasis to Philosophy and Religion after meeting Claude Stewart. Her work at Vanderbilt will combine the two areas as she will arrange her schedule around pastoral counseling. She justifies this area of study with her interest by believing that theology and psychology often say the same thing. Her own experience tells her that many people have religiously based problems.

Peggy, also accepted by Boston University's School of Social Work, chose the Divinity School because she feels that theological and/or ethical questions must be asked "in the crazy world we live in." She believes that the question and answer to "What's an authentic search for meaning?"—and other survival questions—is imperative. She says, "I chose Divinity School because I find myself wondering 'Where are the ethical questions being asked?' The answer—they're not."

After completion of Divinity School, Peggy plans to direct her counseling toward women in group therapy, a concern of hers.

Peggy's plans for the upcoming year involve getting married, living and working in Maryville, and just plain relaxing. She feels a need to take a break from school, a need to play for a year.

This attitude closely connects with her mixed feeling about Maryville College. When asked if Maryville had prepared her for graduate school, Peggy replied, "The department with

continued on page 4

Committees need direction

This was the week for sign up on All-College Council committees. During the week it was hard to avoid the earnestness of the new Council members as they attempted to recruit people for the various committees.

In passing conversation it was mentioned to someone that this was happening. The reply was an emphatic "Yuk!" Perhaps this is the best one-word assessment that can be given to the current situation with the committee set-up.

The committees of the ACC are what give the ACC, first, the opportunity for a great deal of input that is necessary towards a full understanding of the college. Secondly, they provide the ACC with the strong backbone that it needs if it is going to survive as the governing body of the college.

For a large part, the individual committees do not function to their optimum ability. Some, in fact, criss-cross the aims of other committees to the extent that several committees have been deemed unnecessary. While this situation may not be "Yuk" it certainly approaches the absurd.

Especially when one committee functions under the title of Social/Recreational while another is called Cultural Life. These are two synonomous words and two synonomous objectives—the only difference is on paper, one to monitor, the other to plan.

Other committees have similar problems. The Ways and Means Committee is practically non-existent. It is suffering from financial problems and a powerless facade of "committee structure." The Elections Committee is in need of re-direction as has been said in this paper before. Several other committees are also in need of reform.

The Communications Committee, while an extremely capable committee, is operating with guidelines that to some extent require re-vamping. Committees such as the Food Committee are somewhat ludicrous in that they rarely function in their capacity throughout the year.

The Residential Life Committee is another necessary committee, yet it too suffers from an aura of misunderstanding that results from poor communication.

All committees are not failures. The Instructional Program Committee for one has stood up to the tests, time and time again to prove its validity. The worship committees have actively attempted to establish programs that answer to the religious conscience of the college.

On the whole, however, there is drastic need for redirection with many of the committees. If the ACC is to succeed in its capability to serve the community as it is best able, it needs to examine the committee structure with a careful and objective eye.

The ACC might begin by first combining committees whose paths cross and thereby eliminate the confusion that several committees have encountered. Then a full scale evaluation should be given to the purposes and even the necessity of the existing committees.

As these pages have stated before the ACC needs to closely re-evaluate its aims. Perhaps one of the better places to start would be the very committees that supposedly give the ACC its unique ability.

Tim Rahn

World scene

Ronald Reagan moved ahead of President Ford in committed delegate votes by winning three key contests in Indiana, Georgia and Alabama on Tuesday. Reagan's campaign has become a serious threat to the president who must now prove his strength in the primaries. Carter gained strength in Indiana and Georgia. losing Alabama to George Wallace.

Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz said if farmers get good weather over the next few months, food prices may be held to their smallest increase in five years.

The Supreme Court, in two decisions, appeared to limit the freedom of state prison inmates to challenge their convictions in federal court. A prisoner now cannot complain to a higher court unless he objected during his state trial.

The Italian government of Aldo Moro collapsed last Friday. A new Parliament will be elected later in June with the Communist party expected to make substantial gains.

Forty-five states face loss of $123.4 million in federal matching funds this fall because they have failed to meet goals for reducing errors in the nation's family welfare system.

Letters to the Echo

O tempore, o mores, "the times times they are a-changin'." A few years ago the teachers were hassling the students because the "kids" were wearing such things as "Indian shirts and blue jeans."– attempting to appear "cool." Now the students are rousting and verbally mugging the teachers because the profs have "long. . . hair and matching beard. . . wearing (you guessed it)." Tell me, O sages of the Soc and Psych departments, is this what is called "role reversal?" The only common denominator of these eras seems to be that when a person is over thirty he is "long past his time."

"A man who has at length found something to do will not need to get a new suit to do it in; for him the old will do, that has lain dusty in the garret for an indeterminate period. . .Only they who go to soirees and legislative halls must have new coats, coats to change as often as the man changes in them. . . I say beware of all enterprises that require new clothes, and not rather a new wearer of clothes." (Hank, Walden)

Sincerely,
Dave Cartlidge

P. S. Hay, Hank! Is age-ism more virtuous than racism?

Dear Students,

Well, Mike Johnston really knows how to hit the nail on the head! For twenty years now, I've done my best to be "cool" in dress, cynical on the surface, egotistical, and above all of indeterminate age, in an attempt to relate to students, But you can't fool all of them all the time, can you Mike!

Just to set the record straight for accuracy's sake, I told Arda that I couldn't comprehend the intricacies and subtleties of the African rhythmic complexities, and I doubt that "they", the students, probably could either. The "probably" still leaves room for a few like you, Mike. (Remember Elliot Carter's "Canaries" for four timpani?)

Of course Arda was misquoted/interpreted too, but I'm sure she can speak for herself in regard to that problem.

But back to my first paragraph, I'm really sorry I don't have the good rapporr that I thought I had with Mike. I don't dress in a more sophisticatedly stylish manner because, loving students and teaching as I do, I remain at Maryville College, which can't afford to pay me what I think I'm worth. "Cynicism" is the coward's definition of honesty. "Egotism" is an essential ingredient of all in the arts, and especially the stage arts. (Mary will agree with me in particular.) My indeterminate age is 46, and "Yeh!" for anyone who might have thought me younger. Would you have me dye the hair and beard to bamboozle students any further?

And lastly, congratulations to Mike, who has successfully joined my ranks by leading me to believe that he was my friend.

Vic Schoen

Dear Mike:

On the basis of quarter-truths gleaned from your open letter in the Echo, it is obvious that the conversants whom you reported you overheard after the program on African music were Mr. Schoen and myself. This letter was the product of partial-attention and a straining to make a point. In the interest of truth, I am taking time to answer what I otherwise deem unwrothy of reply, for this is a splendid example of the ability of writers to falsify, distort, and thus victimize their readers.

I accept your unkind assessment of my physical appearance and perhaps of my age. I will not accept your assessment of my scholarship as based on the false evidence and facts arrived at by partial listening. Had you come in on time, stayed to the end, and listened to the conversation in its entirety with open mind, you would have discovered the following:

1. The conversation was opened with my remark on the multiplicity of rhythms that master African drummers can manage, as I had observed on my 10-week African heritage study tour. In this seminar, we engaged in an intensive study of African culture, much of which concentrated on music. My specific remark was that master drummers had demonstrated to us that they could keep as many as eleven rhythms going at the same time. The remark was prompted by extreme admiration and enthusiasm for the program as well as by the many hours I had listened to African music in African Universities and among African peoples in the streets, festivals and religious ceremonies. Mr. Schoen's reply, contrary to your report, was that be (not the Maryville College students) did not profess to understand it. Not once did we refer to Maryville College student response to the program, which, incidentally I considered admirable and receptive.

2. You would also have heard, had you listened instead of invented your own point, that the reference to Plato was to the greek experience (not, as reported, to the African), the point being that mu-

continued on page 3

THE Highland Echo

Tim Rahn—editor
Ruth Wilbanks—assistant editor
Deborah Huffman—lay-out editor
Alan Regenbrecht—circulation manager
Ed Loper—assistant editor (photos)
Debbie Welch—news editor
James Dewhirst—business manager
Elizabeth T. Fowler—advisor

Reporters Scott Denney, Charles Craven, Robert Boone, Bonnie Holsinger, Janice West
Photography Trippy Banner, Joe Showalter
Ad manager Karen Amos

All type for the Echo is typed by Kathy Lane of the Maryville College Print Shop. Then the Echo is printed by The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

The Highland Echo is the official news paper of the community of Maryville College. The paper normally appears 28-30 times an academic year. The Echo Room is located in the second floor of Fayerweather Hall (the Student Center). All letters to the Echo should be submitted typed and double spaced to—

The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN 37801
Member of the College Press Service(CPS).

MC prep school opens

Fall of 1976 will bring many new changes for Maryville College and the surrounding community. One of the newest and most exciting programs for the coming year is under the auspices of the Fine Arts Center. Beginning in September of 1976, the Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts will be open to serve pre-college students in the East Tennessee area.

Questionnaires were circulated in the area last fall to determine interest and need for a preparatory school for the arts. Overwhelming favorable response confirmed this need, enabling Maryville College to obtain funding for the program from the federal government through the Title III program.

Under the direction of Rosemary B. Ahmad, a member of the Maryville College faculty, the aim of the program is to provide quality instruction in fine arts to the youth of East Tennessee. Instruction will be available in all orchestra and band instruments, as well as private and group lessons in piano, voice, organ, guitar, brass, woodwind and percussion instruments, and the visual arts. Ahmad hopes the projected curriculum will also include courses in music theory, ear training, music appreciation, and a children's theatre group.

In addition to the obvious advantages to be gained by East Tennessee students, the new preparatory school will also provide benefits for Maryville College. The program will serve as a demonstration school for practice teachers and will provide specialists in the previously mentioned areas which might not otherwise be possible without federal funding.

Because of the great interest shown by parents in the East Tennessee area, Ahmad feels that the new program will begin and endure successfully, providing beneficial knowledge of the fine arts to Maryville college and the surrounding community.

Rosemary B. Ahmad

Hitler's house for kids

(CPS)—Fittingly enough, the house where Adolph Hitler was born is to be coverted to a school for retarded children, according to the deputy mayor of Braunau, Austria. In the past the six room building has been a library and a technical school.

When officials broached plans to turn another of Hitler's childhood homes into a museum Socialist Party leaders protested strongly enough to convince them to keep the building in its current use—as a funeral parlor.

Gash, Carl present recital

On Thursday, May 13, Robert Carl and William Gash will present their Junior Recital in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall at 7:00 p.m. Immediately following the recital, a reception will be held in the Fine Arts Center Lounge.

Mr. Carl, a junior music education major from Wilmington, Delaware, plays trumpet in the Maryville College Band, Orchestra, and jazz ensemble. He also has played in the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra. He will perform Invocation by Rob Starer, Concerto by Wayne Bohrnstedt, and a Corelli Sonata. He will be accompanied by pianist Carol Paris.

Mr. Gash is a senior music education major from Pisgah Forest, North Carolina. He is a member of the Maryville College Band and Concert Choir. In addition to performing J. S. Bach's Dorian Toccata, he will also play a Mendlessohn Sonata and Franck's Piece Heroique.

Letters, cont.

> sic is fundamental to the human experience. Whatever prejudices were evident in the threesome involved— the two conversationalists and the "overhearer"— were apparantly yours.

My request is that you re-read as objectively as you can what you have written. Ask yourself honestly: What are the motives that prompted me to write the article? Did I listen carelessly and hear what I wanted? Did I distort to make a preconceived point? Were any prejudices present in my attack on individuals? Did I employ insufficient evidence to attack the entire faculty as I did?

Sincerely,
Arda Walker

STANDINGS

	Wins	Losses
Bicentennial Babies	4	0
Grandslammers II	2	0
Welch's Grapes	2	1
Diamond Girls	1	2
Knuts	1	2
Frumpettes	0	3
Bionic Women	0	3

Women's intermurals results

It's Intramural Softball time again for Maryville College Women. Many of you have probably noticed Cris Curran dragging the equipment bag back and forth from the gym to the golf course and with good cause. This year the MC women have turned out in full force with seven teams. Softball fever has definitely struck at the college nestled in the Smokies.

Evie Wills and her Frumpettes are off to a slow start this season failing to capture their first victory.

The Knuts (Newts) featuring Joan Wiseman, took their first contest 14-7, against the Frumpettes. Fine pitching and hitting by Kathy Ryan was the influential factor in their first victory.

Robyn Leng's Bionic Women are still struggling for a victory. However, they did manage to give the Diamond Girls a good battle before falling 13-11.

Diamond Girls, complete with coordinated uniforms, have one victory under their belts.

continued on page 4

Bushing initiated in to TKX

On Thursday, May 6, new members were inducted in Tau Kappa Chi at the Maryville College Highlander Band Honors Concert. Tau Kappa Chi is an honorary music society at Maryville College. Members are elected by the faculty and active members of Tau Kappa Chi. Members must have a grade point average of 3.25 or better, and qualifications may be satisifed by a performance in a student recital, vocal or instrumental concert, or competent organization and direction of a musical event.

This year, the only student who met the qualifications for membership in Tau Kappa Chi was Kathy Bushing. Miss Bushing is from Maryville, Tennessee, and has studied voice under Dr. Dan Kinsinger.

'Marigolds' to bloom

"The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds", the spring production of the Maryville College Playhouse, will open at the College Theatre on May 13th at 8:15 p.m. "Gamma Rays", by Paul Zindel, is a winner of the Pulitzer Prize, the Obie Award, and the New York Drama Critics Circle Award as Best American Play of the season. One of off-Broadway's greatest successes, "Gamma Rays" is a powerful and moving study of an embittered, vindictive widow and her two young daughters; it has been hailed as one of the most significant and affecting plays of our time.

The east is made up of Nancy Miller in the role of Tillie, a plain and almost pathologically shy girl with an intuitive gift for science. As Ruth, Sally Smith portrays a pretty but high-strung girl subject to convulsions. RuthAnn Wilbanks plays Beatrice, a woman who can only main when she needs to love, and deride when she wants to praise. Tortured, acerbie, slatternly, she is as much a victim of her own nature as of the cruel let which has been hers.

Nanny, portrayed by Holly Hutcheson, a boarder with Beatrice and her daughters, is a foil character. Jill Mihalow is playing the role of Janice Vickery, the condescending daughter of a wealthy family who competes against Tillie in the science fair.

The production runs through Friday and Saturday night. Tickets are two dollars for adults and one dollar for students. They may be purchased at the door or by advanced sale at the Speech-Theatre Office. Due to the mature subject matter of the play, parental discretion is advised.

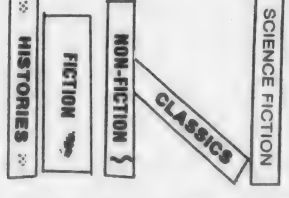
Guards wanted

Maryville College is looking for lifeguards for summer lifeguard duty.

Those interested and having either a lifesaving or water safety instructor certificate are asked to contact Mrs. Largen in the Physical Education Building as soon as possible.

Looking for something special?
The Store of Fashions

FOLLOW YOUR HEART TO TIPTON Jewelers



983-0343
113 E. Broadway
Maryville, Tenn. 37801

• ROLEX WATCHES
• BULOVA WATCHES
• ACCUTRON
• GIFTS

"EASY CREDIT TERMS"
C. R. TIPTON, owner

HOUSE OF DIAMONDS
• DIAMONDS REMOUNTED
• ASK ABOUT OUR NEW ..... RING OF RADIANCE THAT WILL INCREASE THE VISUAL SIZE OF A CENTER DIAMOND 6 TIMES.

THE BOOK RACK
506 W. Broadway
Thousands Of Used Paperback Books

Buy at ½ price or trade 2 for 1 of same types and prices.

Mon. - Sat. 10-6
983-Read

MC Sports

Track

Mike Osborne qualified for the NCAA Division III National Track and Field competitions at the Tennessee Invitational in Clarksville during the last weekend.

Osborne had an excellent time of 14.4 seconds in the high hurdles to break his previous school record of 14.6 set in 1974. This year marks the second time in a row that Osborne has entered national competition.

The championships for Division III are to be held in Chicago later this month.

Coach Dick Taylor's squad finished third in the college division behind Carson-Newman and David Lipscomb, but he received an excellent effort from the team.

It was remarked earlier that several performers on this year's track squad were close to breaking some school records. That feat was accomplished April 30 and May 1 at Clarksville.

Tom Duling shattered his record in the discus with a toss of 134-4, which topped his old mark of 132-10. Despite his effort, Duling was only to finish second.

Also, Steve Harrison tied the 100 yard dash school record with a 9.9 time. Again, competition was stiff as Harrison's performance was fifth.

In other results:

Lee Taylor finished in third place with a discus throw of 128-6. Also grabbing third was Scott Cook with a 11-6 pole vault, Alvin Richmond with 44-4 shot put, and Osborne's run of 57.0 in the intermediate hurdles.

Mark Keahon placed fifth in the shot put at 43-8. Randy-Reagan finished second in the pole vault at an even 12 feet.

Osborne placed fourth in the javelin with a 160-4 toss. The Scots also took fourth in the 440 relay with Gary Petree, Bill Straher, Osborne and Harrison combining for a time of 44.2.

One disappointing factor was the absence of Maryville's distance man, Joe Whitehead. Whitehead was sick and missed the trip to Clarksville.

Soccer

The Maryville College Soccer Club downed Bryon College junior varsity at Dayton, 4-1, May 1, to end its spring season at a 2-3-1 mark.

Three of the Scot's four goals came unassisted. They marched to a 3-0 lead during the first half as Dave Young and Will Way each scored unassisted goals. Tim Farrell helped the scoring attack with a goal assisted by Emerson Henderson.

Dan Bergner wrapped up Maryville's scoring for the day on an unassisted tally during second-half action.

Coach Young, who will be leaving Maryville in June, paid credit to the awesome play of fullbacks Tim Kelly, Chip Krug, David Kemp, and Andy Weissing.

The later had suffered an ankle injury which kept him sidelined against Tennessee last week, and was considered doubtful for Saturday's contest; however, Weissing's injured ankle improved enough to allow him to make a vital contribution.

Baseball

The Maryville College Baseball team dropped both ends of a doubleheader to Cumberland College in Williamsburg, Ky, April 27, 10-2 and 9-8.

The baseballers were off par in what they defined as a disappointing effort against Cumberland. In the opener Cumberland totally outplayed the Scots while the second game proved to be almost as frustrating.

Maryville led, 8-4, going into the last of the seventh but the Indians scored five runs to edge the Scots.

Joe Moffett had a big day at the plate to lead the locals. The junior shortstop hit three doubles during the game that constituted much of Maryville's final tally.

Maryville game home standing fans a treat May 3 by trouncing Tennessee Wesleyan twice in 4-1 and 5-1 affairs.

Successful Scot hurler Danny Thomas, now 5-1, pitched a four-hitter overshadowed Thomas' feat with a two hitter to win his game 5-1.

The May 3 opener was tied at 1-1, until Steve Wright singled in Russ Baker for the initial go ahead run. Wesleyan was unable to sustain any more scoring threats.

Paul Bailey and Dave Greenwalt had Maryville's hottest bats; Bailey ripped Wesleyan hurlers for four hits and Greenwalt finished with three safeties.

Johnnie Walker added a home run in the second game to secure the Maryville win.

Maryville lost out on its upset bid to pin a loss on the visiting Vols of U. T. by a 4-1 tally, May 4.

If it were not for some "ifs" and "buts" it would have been a whole new ballgame. Maryville played well defensively but Rick Honeycutt's hitting and better than usual Tennessee pitching hampered the Scots' hopes.

Honeycutt, one of the better hitters in the Southeastern Conference had 4 hits at five trips to the plate which included a home run and a triple-both of which cleared the 400 foot mark.

Another bad break for Maryville came when two runs crossed the plate as Dave Greenwalt crashed into the left field fence while chasing a deep fly ball. Had the outfielder made the catch it would have definitely been a tighter ball game.

An excellent performance came from Barry Mathis, who pitched his best game of the season against tough Vol hitters. The Maryville native went all nine innings for Maryville in a sparkling performance.

Designated hitter, Vince Fucci, scored Maryville's one run in the fourth inning when he slammed a home run.

Women's, cont.

Grandslammers II, another play-off choice, are 2-0, beating the Knuts 26-1, and Bionic Women 17-3. Pat Willin, Libby Lowry, and Betsy Bauer were the big guns for victory, living up to the teams name.

America's favorites, the Bicentennial Babies, under the leadership of General Arlene Ignico are definitely bound for the MC play-offs. Employing the "Bomb Bat", Jean Erhardt, Chris Curran, Margaret Fitch, Jill Holcombe, Kathy Kirkhart, and Lisa Harrawood have homered in leading the team to four victories. Starting with a 13-0 win over the Bionic Women, the Babies went on to defeat Welch's Grapes 14-5, Diamond Girls 6-2, and the Knuts 25-zip.

Leonard, cont.

Dr Cartlidge and Stewart has been great and very rewarding. I love and admire both of them. As for the college as a whole, I'm left empty. It's lost in the past, and frankly, I'm bored with the whole subject right now."

Peggy did express hope that after her year off from school she would be able to see Maryville in a different light with more appreciation.

AMF

BICYCLES AND SPORTING GOODS

OPEN MON.-SAT.
10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

10-Speed BICYCLES

Columbia
NISHIKI
AZUKI

SALES•SERVICE•PARTS

Complete Line Of SPORTING GOODS

• Tennis Equipment
• Uniforms • Sh[illegible]Warm-Ups

Wilson Tennis Balls $2.68 Can

Hutch M1000 Ball Glove $25.00

Dudley Softballs $27.00 Doz.

2001 Old Knoxville Hwy.

983-7921

THE FLAVOR TREE

Delicatessen sandwiches—hot or cold
Philadelphia-style Hoagies
Imported and Domestic Cheeses and Meats

Phone 983-7914

Church Avenue Professional Bldg.
404 Church Avenue, Suite #9

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations

The Leader

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.

Tallest And Closest To The Campus

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

PABST	12-OZ.	$1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE	12-OZ.	$1.69
PEARL LIGHT	12-OZ.	$1.59
MILLER "PONIES"	7-OZ.	$1.93

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

THE Highland Echo

Vol. 61 No. 25 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 14, 1976

Ruth Wilbanks and Nancy Miller from a scene in The Effect Of Gamma Rays on Man on the Moon Marigolds appearing this evening in the Maryville College Theatre. For a review see page 5.

Certificate awarded/Farmhouse delima continues

A Certificate of Merit came this week to twenty-five Maryville College students who have been active in efforts to save the Thompson-Brown House.

"This certificate, awarded by the Tennessee Historical Commission during Historic Preservation Week, is in recognition of...the students' dedicated efforts to preserve one of our state's historic structures," wrote Executive Director Herbert L. Harper, in a letter accompanying the award.

Harper continued: "We commend you on your efforts to promote better understanding of the cultural heritage of Tennessee and your community, and to educate the community to the benefits of histiric preservation."

Among those cited, either for research or actual manual labor on the site, are Bill Allen, Trippy Banner, Sheri Bone, Dianne Burger, Lisa-Kim Dulce, Stu Easter, Jeff Ference, Karen Gerdetz, Keith Hender Henderson, Kurt Markgraf, Eric Macbeth, Ann Merrill, Charlotte Orange, Suzanne Phillips, Tim Rahn, Linda Savage, Kinsey Shilling, Amy Smock, Linda Swackhammer, Cheryl Thompson, Paul Van Alstyne, Joe Whitehead, Amy Whitley, Rose Wing, and Pete Xiques, Priscilla Book. Karen Wiley, and Dee Ann Dunwoody.

Working with the students in this effort are Drs. Sarah McNiell, Katherine Nelson, J. W. Nichols, Arda Walker, and Jerry Waters. The Maryville College work is one of 23 preservation projects across the state receiving certificates.

As spring term nears an end, work on the Thompson-Brown House has slowed. Students and interested parties in the community are awaiting permission from the Blount County Quarterly Court to proceed with plans to create an historic wayside park and restore the house on its site.

At the April meeting, the Court referred this proposal to its Building Committee for study. No Action is expected until the County receives final approval from a federal agency for its plan for a new Health Center. This approval could come at any time, but is expected no later than June 30.

Since work began on the site in February, a number of individuals and several organizations have offered to aid the student effort to preserve the log house. Blount County Chamber of Commerce effort to preserve the log house. Blount County Chamber of Commerce has endorsed the concept of a wayside park; Blount County Board of Realtors through its "Make America Better" committee has offered to work with other groups to implement restoration; Maryville-Alcoa Homebuilders are considering offering their services.

All in all, the signs are favorable, but should the propo-

continued, page 7

CIA influence

by Allan Rabinowitz

(CPS)—The CIA currently has "clandestine relationships" with thousands of college administrators, professors, graduate students and academic foundations, according to the recently-released report of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

The committee, chaired by Frank Church (D-Idaho), has shown that the CIA has long maintained intimate ties with academicians at hundreds of universities, using them on a "massive" scale. The names of specific individuals and institutions were deleted from the report.

All covert connections between universities and the CIA which were established after 1967 are in direct violation of a presidential order handed down by Lyndon Johnson.

Most of the contacts are limited to asking professors about their travels. But professors are also used to consult on areas of expertise, to provide data while traveling abroad abroad and to write books used for propaganda in foreign countries. Since 1969, said the Senate report, the CIA has produced about 250 books abroad, dealing with everything from wildlife to T. S. Eliot to capitalism.

In at least one case, at Washington University in St. Louis, a faculty member was used by the CIA to provide information on his colleagues.

The CIA also exerted heavy influence in funding academic projects, funnelling money through philanthropic organizations. Between 1963 and 1966, the CIA helped fund nearly half of 164 grants in the field of international af-

continued, page 2

Title IX is evaluated

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 prohibits sex discrimination in any education program receiving federal financial assistance. In order to demonstrate compliance with the regulations issued under the Title, each institution of higher education is required to complete a self-evaluation by July 21, 1976.

Dr. Joseph S. Copeland has appointed Raymond Brahams to coordinate the evaluation which is already under way through appropriate administrative officers. In order to have wide campus community participation in the evaluation, a representative committee has been formed including Sharon Brown, Bob Layman, Elaine Spurlin, Dr. Jerry Waters, and Lisa Wilson. They will be receiving the reports from various administrative areas and approving the final report.

From now until May 29, the Committee will also receive written comments from any interested member of the campus community; students, faculty or staff, who has a concern which might come under Title IX. These written comments should be turned in to Brahams in Anderson Hall.

In addition, if there appears to be enough general concern, the Committee will hold one or two open meetings.

A working paper prepared by the American Council on Education will be used as the basis for the evaluation and final report. The topics covered in the paper, and to be reported on, are: Admissions, Education Programs and Activities, Housing, Comparable Facilities, Access to Course Offerings. Counseling, Financial Aid, Student Employment, Health and Insurance, Marital and Parental Status, Athletics, Textbooks and Employment.

Anyone wishing to review a copy of the working paper on these topics may do so at Brahams' office in Anderson Hall.

Showers predicted

Residents of the dormitories at Maryville College will have hot water available on a newer, more convenient schedule beginning this week.

The revised schedule pushes the time hot water is available later into the day on Saturday and Sunday. The boiler plant will be in operation from 9:00 a. m. until 11:00 a. m. During the week hot water will be extended one additional hour in the evening until 7:00 p. m.

Freshman ACC Representative Bill Gannon, responding to a student and dorm parent petition from Dorm III, worked with Neil McDade and Hugh Crawford on establishing a new schedule. The schedule was a composite of suggestions from residents of the affected dorms.

Huffman to edit annual

Deborah Huffman has been selected as the editor of the 1976-77 Chilhowean by the Communications Committee of the ACC yesterday.

Huffman was selected as editor over three other applicants. Presently she is the secretary of the Fine Arts Center however, in the fall Huffman hopes to return to Maryville College as a full-time student in the art department.

On the inside

A senior reflects on four years of living and learning — page 4

Several surprises in the Echo Primary — page 3

A review of Dr. Walker's history of the February meetings — page 3

The Nordic Folk Dancers

Nordics perform at U.T.

America's outstanding Swedish fold dance group, the Nordic Folk Dancers, will perform in Knoxville on May 15, at 7:30 p.m.

Also performing are the Knoxville Country Dancers who will present traditional morris and contra dances from England and New England along with several Appalachian dances. The performance will be held at the Laurel Theatre on 1538 Laurel Avenue.

The Chicago-based Nordic Folk Dancers come mostly from Scandinavian backgrounds, although there are some members of different nationalities. Their purpose, besides enjoying themselves dancing, involves cultivating Scandinavian culture through folk dancing, music, and friendship.

Paul Thenstedt, instructor and group leader, has taught and performed Swedish dances for twenty years. A foundry specialist in chemicals, he is a third-generation Swede.

Thenstedt stresses the authenticity of the costumes as well as the dances. . "Each of our costumes is as authentic as the costumes once worn in a particular Swedish province... Some of our group members have gone to great extremes to obtain a costume from their own ancestral province."

Thanstedt also expresses the group's interest in Swedish culture. "The majority of all the Swedish folk dances have deep historical roots and meaning which emphasize the character of the Swedish people through the ages. I enjoy dancing because I see it as a means of sharing our Swedish heritage in America."

The group has performed for Swedish midsummer celebrations throughout Illinois and the Christmas Around the World Festival at the Museum of Science and Industry.

The Knoxville Country Dancers, organized five years ago by Jon Sundell, are currently being led cooperatively by several of the dancers. Although there is a core group of performers, anyone is welcome in learn dances with them on Monday nights at the Epworth Jubilee Center from 7:00 to 11:00. Their reportoire includes morris dancing, which is an ancient ritual dance from England, along with the more well-known traditional country dances from England, New England, and Southern Appalachia. Area musicians will accompany the dancers with live music, including old time American and English dance tunes. Their past performances include local schools and folk festivals in Knoxville, Cosby, and Cumberland Gap.

A pot-luck dinner at 6:00 p.m. will precede the Saturday night performance and will be held at the Epworth Jubilee Center (one block from the Laurel Theatre). Cost for the dinner is a pot of food. The performance will cost $2.00. Those interested in attending workshops in Swedish dancing on Friday night and Saturday morning and afternoon ($1.00 each or $4.00 for the entire festival) can contact Bruce Lowry at 637-4729.

Senior musicians perform

Coram

Janet Susan Coram, senior piano major from Knoxville, Tennessee, will present her senior recital May 18, at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

A student of Sallie Schoen, Coram recently performed as soloist with the Maryville College-Community Orchestra. She is the first vice president of Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women, and is also a member of the Maryville College Concert Choir and the Knoxville Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Coram is the organist-choirmaster at Knoxville's New Covenant Presbyterian Church.

For her senior recital, Coram will perform a Scarlatti Sonata in C major, Longo S.2; a Beethoven Sonata in Eb major, Op. 31, No. 3; a Prokofieff Sontat, No. 1, Op. 1; and a Chopin Scherzo, Op. 39. She will also perform Encounter at Paladin for prepared piano, echo, reverberation, and amplitude modulation, written by Daniel Whiteside, senior composition major at Maryville College.

The prepared piano, popularized by John Cage, is a symphony of percussive devices at the control of the pianist, achieved by means of wood, rubber, plastic, and other articles inserted in the strings of the piano. The interest in Encounter at Paladin lies mainly in its timbre and rhythm, and is quite unconventional by the incorporation of a technician's score.

Peirce

On May 20, soprano Jane Pierce will present her senior recital in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall at 8:15 p.m.

A native of Knoxville, Tennessee, Miss Pierce is well-known to the Maryville campus through her Messiah solos and vocal roles in other productions.

A student of Harry H. H Harter, she is a member of the Maryville College Concert Choir and has received Fine Arts Competition Awards in voice.

At her senior recital, Miss Pierce will sing operatic selections, including arias from Wagner's Tannheuser and Menotti's Old Maid and the Thief. Songs of Scarlatti, Brahms, Strauss, and Gronodas have been programmed, and the recital will close with a group of English songs by Samuel Barbar. Miss Pierce will be accompanied by Rosemary Ahmad, instructor in music at Maryville College.

O'Shaughnessy/ Frost

Colleen J. O'Shaughnessy, trumpeter, and J. Frederick Frost, baritone, will present a Junior Recital at the Fine Arts Center Music Hall May 21, at 8:15 p.m.

Miss O'Shaughnessy, a senior from Chicago, Ill., has received the Presser Foundation Scholarship in music and Fine Arts Competition Awards in trumpet. Her fraternal affiliations include the Maryville College Band, Orchestra, and Concert Choir; in addition, she is a member of Tau Kappa Chi, Honorary Music Society at Maryville College, and the treasurer of Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women.

Miss O'Shaughnessy will perform "Prayer of St. Gregory" by Hovaness, G. F. Handel's "Concerto for Trumpet," and "Brass Trio" by Frankenpohl, in which she will be assisted by Charles R. Hurt and Milton Bush. She will be accompanied by pianist Betty Carol Zinavage and organist David Adcock.

Baritone J. Frederick Frost will be honoring the nation's bicentennial by performing all American music. He will sing songs by Charles Ives, Aaron Copeland, "If You Can't" by David Diamond (based on a poem by e. e. cummings), "Velvet Shoes" by Randell Thompson (based on a poem by Elinor Wylie), and an aria from Douglas More's folk opera, The Devil and Daniel Webster, with the words by Stephen Vincent Benet.

Mr. Frost will be accompanied by pianist Carolyn Phibbs.

Win, Place, Show

This Saturday night at 8 o'clock in the Dining Hall, you are invited to participate in a night at the Races. Admission is $1.00, and prizes donated by area merchants will be auctioned off. One such prize being offered will be a Non-Alcoholics Champion breakfast for four including steak, eggs, and hash browns. This prize is being offered by Saga.

In return for your $1.00 admission fee, you will receive a $10.00 pack of play money. You will use this play money during the evening to try your luck at the track.

The evenings events run similar to an actual race track. You are allowed to bet on any horse in as many of its six races as you can afford, with each ticket being purchased for one play dollar. Also included is a Daily Double run in the fourth and fifth race, and a Quinella being run in the third race.

Because there is no possible way of knowing the outcome of the race before it is run, there is no chance of a race being "fixed", or of cheating.

Praying with pot

(CPS)--The U. S. Supreme Court is being asked to rule that the cultivation and use of marijuana is protected by the First Amendment when the drug is regarded as a "holy sacrament" by members of a religious sect.

The case is brought by four members of the Church of Plenty, a group numbering less than a thousand. The church members claim their rights to freedom of religion were violated when they were convicted and sentenced to prison for growing and using marijuana at their spiritual commune in Summertown, Tennessee.

"It takes character and integrity to get high on marijuana," stated their petition to the court."

CIA, cont.

fairs. Only the three biggest foundations—Rockefeller, Carnegie and Ford—did not participate.

The CIA has connected itself to universities almost since the agency's inception in the late forties. In 1951, for example, the CIA helped establish a research institute at a major American university. The institute was set up to study world-wide political, economic and social changes.

During the fifties and sixties, the CIA turned increasingly to covert action in student, cultural and labor matters, according to the Senate report. The CIA's view was, said the report, that "the struggle with communism was seen to be, at center, a struggle between our institutions and theirs."

Covert links between the CIA and the American academic community first came to the public eye in 1967, when Ramparts magazine proved that the intelligence agency was connected to the National Student Association (NSA).

Besides providing the NSA with secret funding, the CIA used students in the organization who were traveling overseas to report on communist or third world personalities, and to observe Soviet security practices.

In the wake of the Ramparts expose, President Johnson set up a committee to investigate CIA connections with the academic world, headed by Nicholas Katzenbach, Under Secretary of State at the time.

Katzenbach, however, recently admitted that his committee's purpose was not only to investigate CIA-university ties, but to head off a full-scale congressional investigation. The real intention, said Katzenbach, was to shield the CIA. All covert relationships were to be excluded from the committee's report. Katzenbach also testified that he wanted his investigation to specifically exclude all relationahips between the CIA and American businesses abroad.

Even before the 1967 revelations, CIA covert activities through student and cultural groups were being curtailed. The CIA felt, said the recent report, that the student and cultural organizations used by the CIA were still too independent, and therefore could not be fully relied on.

"The clandestine operator," said Richard Helms, CIA director from 1966 to 1973, in Senate testimony, "is trained to believe that you really can't count on the honesty of your agent to do exactly what you want or to report accurately unless you own him body and

continued, page 7

From converts to consciousness

100 years of February meetings

By Dave Cartlidge
and Ed Loper

There are "teasers" in Arda Walker's history of the February Meetings. They will keep you awake at night, if you have any curiosity. What in heaven's name was the content of a commencement speech entitled "Ultramundane Math"? Was the speech "Conservation of Energy" an early (1900) spasm from an ecology freak, or was it a student warning his classmates of all-night term paper sessions to come? What were the criteria by which the Maryville Times adjudged that, after the 1912 Meetings, "Still 1400 people in and around Maryville are lost"?

It is not Dr. Walker's fault that these questions remain unanswered. She has done her homework. Walker has gathered quotations, lists, dates, hymn titles, and stories about MC whenever. They are useful for term papers, Independent Studies, and trivia games at the Sportsman. What's more, she has weaved this material into an informative and entertaining history not only of religion at MC, but of the evolution of American culture. For, as Walker points out, "upon numerous occasions, student editors pointed out that the success of the meetings depended upon the nature of the student body more than upon the leader." (p. 42) As an illustration of these changing moods in our culture, the list of address topics in the appendix is a gem. Some of the material is humorous (The faculty announced, in 1912, "Washington's Birthday will be moved forward only a few days.....It will be a holiday." Thus the MC faculty was several decades in advance of Lyndon Johnson.).

The reader is told of stirring scenes in which speakers gave impassioned pleas for "life with Jesus." Scores of students made the decision. Pious hoopla abounded. More than one speaker left Maryville with the entire student population escorting him to the railroad station to the tune of "Onward, Christian Soldiers" and "Howie-how for Jesus."

But the book does not limit itself to the old-timey meetings. Dr. Walker carries her discussion to the contemporary era. The periods of discontent and those of enthusiasm, the long-ago critics and the contemporary detractors, and the deep changes in the style and purpose of these meetings are well documented. The history attempts to cover a great stride of time and it does so with success. From Homer Hammontree and the "American Four Quartet" ("Sharks for Christian Work", they called themselves) to a rock band is a long way, baby.

"From an 'Ingathering of Souls' to 'Who Speaks for Man?' " is fun. What's more it introduces us to our beginnings and our immediate past. The book is one buck at the chaplain's office. As such, it is about the best bargain on campus.

New ACC members take over

The 1975-76 All College Council met for the last time this year on May 12 to turn their responsibilities over to the incoming Council members.

The old council met for the first part of the meeting to complete their actions along with some discussion over new business.

Dr. David Cartlidge introduced an idea to do away with the present Cultural Committee due to overlapping with the Social Recreational Committee. This was turned over to the committee for more discussion.

Dean Carolyn Blair presented a plan to provide for more equal representation of the specific academic areas on the Instructional Program Committee.

The new Freshman Orientation Program was also presented to the Council. The program will involve a structured week whereby incoming students will have the opportunity to learn as much about the institution as possible. The Council gave the program a warm reception, however, there are several minor budgetary problems that will have to be worked out.

The hot water issue was rediscussed and freshman representative Bill Gannon along with Hugh Crawford explained the situation as it now stands.
(See story on page one.)

Several other minor items were discussed and attention has given to the selection of people to serve on next year's committees beforew the Council turned the meeting over to the new Council members.

Echo Primary results

by Emerson Henderson

Arizona Congressman Morris K. Udall and President Gerald Ford scored convincing victories in the Highland Echo primary elections. Udall soundly defeated his Democratic contenders by capturing 40% of the Democratic vote.

Udall's closest opponent was California Governor Jerry Brown who received 30% of the vote. Democratic frontrunner Jimmy Carter received a surprisingly low 18%, followed by Senator Hubert Humphrey with 6% and Senator Henry Jackson with less than 5%.

Congressman Udall's victory can be attributed to his strong showing in the Southeast. Udall received 33% of the vote in what most political observers consider "Carter Country." Another factor in Udall's victory was Carter's inability to gain support in the Northwest where Udall support is strong.

However, the biggest surprise of the primary was the strong showing of Brown. A late-comer to the campaign trail, Brown's 30% showing indicates he is gaining recognition and support. Realizing that Congressman Udall has very little chance of defeating Carter in the race for the party's nomination, it appears that many voters have turned to Brown in hope that he can stop the Carter "bandwagon." The same media that made Carter a well-recognized national figure is beginning to do the same for Governor Brown as the number of candidates declines.

In the Republican race, President Ford easily defeated his Republican challenger, Ronald Reagan by receiving 93% of the votes.

In addition to voting for a presidential candidate, voters were asked their opinions on various issues. Of those responding, 65% stated that they favored a federal law legalizing the private use of marijuana.

When asked whether they supported the passage of the Equal Rights Amandment, 83% said yes. On the issue of busing, 70% of those responding stated their opposition to busing as a means of integrating school systems. When asked if they favored more congressional control over the activities of the CIA and other federal investigative organizations, 70% of the respondents said yes.

On the question of abortion, 72% of the voters stated that they are not in favor of repealing the current abortion law as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

Of those participating in the primary, 75% are presently registered to vote.

Clinic opens

Today the State of Tennessee Health Facilities Commission granted the Chattanooga Women's Clinic a certificate of need, which permits them to operate as a legal abortion clinic in the Chattanooga area.

The approval came after the inspection of the facility by the a commission review committee which consisted of commission members and Doctors of Planned Parenthood Association of Nashville.

The review committee unanimously reported that the Chattanooga Women's Clinic provides quality service to the community.

Team invited

Coach Donald Wyatt recently received invitations to the 1976 NCAA Division III Tennis Championships at Millsaps College, May 19-23.

Presently Maryville is unsure if they will accept the invitations because the committee limited Maryville to two single matches participants. Maryville has three top seeded players, Craig Larsen, (8-5), Sutton Brown (11-3), and Mike Webster (10-4)-all seniors who would like to finish out their colligiate careers participating in the championships.

Whatt and the team will travel to Western Carolina May 15.

Mainous selected as apprentice

Martha Mainous, Maryville College speech-theatre major, has received an apprenticeship for the summer at the Barter Theatre in Abingdon, Virginia.

Miss Mainous will begin May 28 as an apprentice in lighting and other technical aspects of stage productions with "Three Penny Opera." Four plays will be presented during the summer season.

Productions Miss Mainous has worked on this year include "Nutcracker," "Swan Lake," "The Real Inspector Hound," "Landscape," and "Pursuit of Happiness." She is currently working on "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds" which will open Thursday, May 13, at 8:15 p.m. at the Maryville College Theatre.

Miss Mainous, who is completing her sophomore year at Maryville, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford G. Mainous, 1253 Virginia Ave., Norton, Virginia.

THE FLAVOR TREE
Delicatessen sandwiches—hot or cold
Philadelphia-style Hoagies
Imported and Domestic Cheeses and Meats
Phone 983-7914
Church Avenue Professional Bldg.
404 Church Avenue, Suite #9

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations
The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

TAS-T-O's
Donut & Sandwich Shop
Glazed Donuts
$1.25 Doz.
Hot Dogs
4 for $1
With This Coupon
TAS-T-O'S IS GOOD DONUTS
Midland Center

Living and learning

Maryville College. Four years of study. Four years of learning. Years of making friends, making decisions, of accomplishment, of discouragement. Doing good things, doing bad things, kicking up my heels, settling in. Maryville College.

I think of my four years at Maryville, and I think of many things, but mostly, I think of learning (which is different from studying!). I have been taught and incredible amount during these years here, even though it may not show. Skills such as research, communication through writing and through speech, have all been part of the program, although you may never see it in the catalogue. To think through a problem by myself, to discover new paths to places I've never been, to decide for myself what I want for myself – these are the tools that have been given to me by the people I have come into contact with at Maryville.

These things I have gained in part, and this is what I think the four-year college should provide. I was struck forcibly the other day when a friend asked me if I was going to graduate school since I have taken no education courses. When I said no, she said, "That's too bad you'll never get a job in your major (history)!" I couldn't help thinking that she was so very wrong, and so is everyone else who thinks that they came to college for career orientation. College is not supposed to deliver you, diploma in hand, to the world which in turn will give you a list of jobs headed "Jobs for the History Major", etc.

College, for me, is not a stepping stone to a career, but rather a stepping stone to the world. . . to life. Huge words, both of them, world and life, and four years ago I would have never been able to face the thoughts of either one of them. Now, after a sort of preview of life, I can face them...with a little fear and trembling, certainly, but I can face them.

As a freshman, I thought I had come here to learn facts and pick a major. As a sophomore, my job was to learn trends and do well in my major. As a junior, I questioned the validity of learning anything in the college atmosphere. But as a senior, my perspective has deepened and changed. I realized that I was not here to learn only in the classroom. I could look back and see that I had actually spent four years learning about people, different kinds of people. I learned about tolerance, intolerance, getting along and taking stands, wild parties and loneliness, boys and girls, changed hopefully to men and women.

Graduate school seems to me to be the place where you learn facts and theories. But college is where you learn where to go to find things out, where to look for the answers whether they are inside yourself or in a book. College is the starting point for all the questions to come, and Maryville College has prepared me not only to ask the questions, but to look for the answers for myself.

Delberta Coppage

World Scene

FBI Director Clarence Kelley apologized to the nation last weekend saying that the Bureau was "truly sorry" for abuses and lawless tactics. Kelley, for the first time, put the blame on the late J. Edgar Hoover, past director.

Secretary of Agriculture, Earl Butz, has predicted that Gerald Ford will receive the Republican Presidential nomination and Hubert Humphrey will be selected to oppose him.

A key Senate Intelligence Committee has discussed that the Internal Revenue Service opened its files to investigation from both the CIA and FBI. Although not spelled out, the investigations were labled illegal and improper.

James Earl Ray was turned down this week by a federal court in his bid to withdraw his guilty plea in the murder of Martin Luther King. Ray said he was coerced to enter the plea by his lawyers.

Military meat inspectors testified to a Senate Committee that they accepted bribes to accept less than quality meats for the military at premium prices.

In a lengthy expose in Rolling Stone Howard Hughes, Richard Nixon, Thomas Dewey and many important members of the Mafia have been linked together as the people behind many of the assasination attempts—in and out of the United States—since World War II. This includes the assasination of John Kennedy and the assasination attempts on Fidel Castro.

Letters to the Echo

Dear Editor:

Well, its happened again. No sooner had our doubles tennis match started, than we had to leave because of tennis (men or women) practices or matches. The fact that both teams need to practice and play matches is acceptable; however, the fact that their scheduling is not posted presents a problem. Sure. the courts to play on. In fact, coming from a high school with 3500 students and only four tennis courts, I think its great that a school of this size has three courts. However, I feel that the hours for play can be greatly increased with proper scheduling.

Can the tennis teams post the dates for their matches? Can we, the tennis duffers, know the hours of their practices? It seems to me that the Echo would be a fine place to print them. I know the people on the Echo have many things to do, (school work, work, and their work putting together the newspaper), but can somebody address themselves to this problem? How about some representive of both tennis teams supplying this information to the Echo? Any help in this matter would be greatly appreciated.

I also want to add my two cents in on Maryville College building more tennis courts. I know that this is on the agenda for some time in the future. As I understand it, this will take four or five years. The delay has something to do with letting the grass grow and the ground settle in the site of where Memorial once stood.

I would like to suggest that the College scrap this idea since our need is urgent right now and in all likelyhood we'll experience the same old tennis courts. As I understand it, the College has spent a lot of money on repairing the old courts. We can see the and results.

Another problem is that the courts are "way over at Carnegie." There's also a problem with the angle of the courts. The sun gets in people's eyes boty in early morning and late evening. This results in many problems such as in the process of serving.

There are many spots on Maryville's campus that would be better suited for building tennis courts. How about somewhere around Dorm III or in the field that is across the road from Dorm I. Have alternate areas been checked out or has the attitude been just to let things stand as is. If this is the case than we might as well prepare ourselves for more headaches cracking that we know on the (monetary as well as physically) in the future.

Sincerely,
Harry MacCall

Notice from the Financial Aid Office

1. Plan ahead for expenses at the end of the school year. Please do not expect to take out an Emergency Loan for these expenses.

2. If you need financial assistance you must submit a Parent's Confidential Statement. This should be done at once.

3. If you qualify for a Basic Grant or a state grant you must apply for them. If you do not this amount will be deducted from your assistance package from Maryville College.

4. If you will not be at home this summer, please make arrangements for your mail to be forwarded.

William Ribble

The Highland Echo

Tim Rahn—editor
Ruth Wilbanks—assistant editor
Deborah Huffman—lay-out editor
Alan Regenbrecht—circulation manager
Ed Loper—assistant editor (photos)
Debbie Welch—news editor
James Dewhirst—business manager
Elizabeth T. Fowler—advisor

Reporters Scott Denney, Charles Craven, Robert Boone, Bonnie Holsinger, Janice West
Photography Trippy Banner, Joe Showalter
Ad manager Karen Amos

All type for the Echo is typed by Kathy Lane of the Maryville College Print Shop. Then the Echo is printed by The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

The Highland Echo is the official news paper of the community of Maryville College. The paper normally appears 28-30 times an academic year. The Echo Room is located in the second floor of Fayerweather Hall (the Student Center). All letters to the Echo should be submitted typed and double spaced to—

The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN 37801

Member of the College Press Service(CPS).

A junior through the looking glass

Graduation time is right around the bend, and while the Seniors are anxiously planning their futures, the thought that I am next scares the hell out of me. Three years at "Peyton Place of the Smokies" has left a rather nasty taste in my mouth.

My initial goals and expectations seem quite trivial now. If I have not lost them for good. Now I must face the dilima of a lost existance and discover why it happened to me-of all people.

When I first became interested in attending Maryville College, it's size was the deciding factor. Now I realize that the element of smallness which held so much attraction for me has turned into a sickening menance. Smallness seems to attract our arch enemies, rumor and gossip, faster than anything I've ever faced before. I seem to spend all my time setting the record straight and defending mu integrity.

Forced community does not work. When you operate under a system which does not allow for exceptions of any kind you end up choking to death. Maryville College is entrenching itself deeper and deeper into a hole for which there is no pleasant way out. I am one of the victims. Hypocracy, back stabbing, slander, and lies are ruining my academic career and my image of Maryville College.

Where do I go from here to pick up the pieces? I know I am trapped into coming back next fall, financially I can't afford to transfer. Two years were fine, the third has been a bit tramatic to say the least, and the fourth, well I guess I'll just have to face the music.

Ruth Wilbanks

Sally Smith and Ruth Wilbanks in 'Marigolds.'

Gamma Rays glows

by D. L. Welch

The sterile atmosphere of the halflife in The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds is, on the Maryville College stage, alive and growing. This Playhouse production opened last night with the best overall cast the M. C. stage has seen in a long time.

The variation on the Cindella theme deals with mental illness, alcholism, old age, and pride all in a dream world, while one small foot enters the real world with timidity, but with a real desire for it to be bettered.

Nancy Miller, a freshman and newcomer to the M. C. stage, portrays Tillie, a young girl whose science project is the effect of gamma rays on Man-in-the-Moon marigolds. Despite a slight need for speech clarity, Nancy plays her role well as she demonstrates a grow growth out of the vicious circle of a nightmare.

Jill Mahalow, portraying Janice Vickery, a would-be foil for Tillie at the Science fair, represents the cruelty and lack of concern in the outside world.

Music sets a receptive mood for the theme of the play as it seems to demand a hope and a despair. A tune sings of a "gift to be free" and a "valley of love," but then abrustly changes to an unknowing, melancholic quality.

Ruth Ann Wilbanks, the sophomore, picks up this quality, skillfully playing Beatrice, Tillie's mother. She is slightly remeniscient of Amanda in The Glass Menagerie, but much more real and crude in her nightmare that is only heightened, not shattered. She finds out that she can no longer con herself much less the world.

The part of Ruth, Tillie's half-crazed sister, is portrayed by Sally Smith who has the ability to make us believe that she is crazy with her smooth changes of mood.

As for Nanny, Holly Hutcheson was meant to be the classic old lady. Though she never says a word she is priceless with her frail frame.

The drab, but appropriate setting, enchances the atmosphere of sterility, a sterility that is very believable as Beatrice finally announces that she hates the world.

Paul Zindel has written a play for anyone who is the least bit different—a category that leaves out no one—and who is not afraid to see see it on stage.

Please be aware of the fact that the mature subject matter suggests discretion where children and overly sensitive adults are concerned.

Back to old time religion

(CPS)—Something has gone wrong, George Lindbeck believes. Reverent Moon is in his heaven, Maharaj Ji is pulling the religious strings from his mansion in Malibu. The Asian bandits are everywhere, but what has happened to American religious leaders?

Lindbeck looks down from his perch as professor of theology at Yale and observes—with a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation—that religious education isn't what it used to be. Half the students filling the major divinity schools are there on a lark, studying theology because they think it might be "interesting," but never intending to continue. This is not the stuff of which fire and brimstone are made.

The divinity schools, for their part, have been encouraging this dilettante approach to divinity. The courses they offer are less likely to be aimed at honing scholarly competence in religious traditions. More often the courses deal with "welfare expertise," social change and only generalized education in religious lore.

The problem deserves more than bemused interest, Lindbeck asserts in his recently released report. Historic religions could be slipping off into obscurity under the weight of social relevancy and over-generalized religious training.

Already traditional religions are becoming less and less an influence in determining how people live, Lindbeck laments. And it's not unrealistic to think that "the historic religions are in the process of disappearing," he claims.

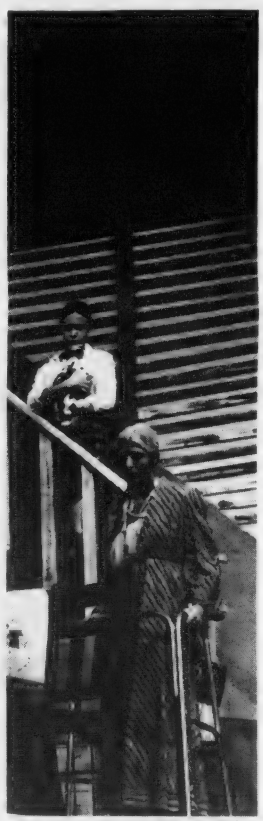
What is called for are more stringent course requirements for divinity students and a re-emphasis on studying particular religious heritages. The shift in religious education, Lindbeck advises, should be back to traditional theological training. Social relevancy should take the back seat while divinity schools develop closer ties with churches.

There's the rub

And that's where Lindbeck steps into one of the most fashionable theological debates of this decade. That debate involves the proper social role of churches, the Asian Menace and the Self Realization Syndrome.

Professor Max Stackhouse of Andover Newton Theological School points to the "tension" between the "social relevancy" school of theology and traditional religious training. One view states that changing individuals through religion will result in changes in society. The contrary view is that institutions have to be changed first to minimize man's viciousness while maximizing his virtues.

Because institutions are distrusted these days, Stackhouse says, people tend to turn to developing individual character and churches shy away from taking on social change.



The wild card is the presence of Eastern mystics and religious leaders like Reverend Moon and Maharaj Ji, as well as self-realization gurus like Werner Erhard. These sects and cults, according to Harvard Divinity instructor Harvey Cox, "sometimes lead people into a privatized notion of self-development, which has no ethical or social dimensions."

These movements "trade on disillusionment. They say in effect that you can't do anything but change your own consciousness," adds Harvard graduate student and researcher Steven Tipton.

Churches should step into this vacuum and become a moral voice in social affairs, according to those favoring an emphasis on social relevancy in religious training. This is no time for divinity schools to tame down the relevancy of their programs, they say.

Lindbeck, however, asserts that he isn't calling for an end to socially relevent religious training. A more conservative, traditional curriculum, calling on America's rich religious heritage could be "stimuli to change" and provide "sketches of alternative futures," he maintains.

But most importantly, he says, the country needs itw own generation of religious leaders competent enough to spread the faith.

Holly Hutcheson with Nancy Miller as Tillie

'Fantasies of the creators'

by Laurie Allen

The creation of art work, in some cases, is done with one of two purposes in mind: to illustrate a story, leaving the plot, mood. and theme to the artist totally, or to illustrate an abstract thought, to create simply for the piece and thus let the observer create the story. In the gallery of the Fine Arts Center both purposes are presented in rich contrast; Gary Lewis and Debby Carrick have taken the basic media of paint, pen, and clay and molded two entirely different shows in one room.

While these two diverse elements might be thought to clash, they do, instead, form a perfect example of the importance of personality in any work. The personality of any given artist creates total individuality out of identical materials.

Gary Lewis is a creator of abstracts. His paintings literally swirl and explode leaving the audience the opportunity to create the mood or feeling. Many of his paintsings are untitled, further creating a more personal union between creation and observer. The observer can fix his own title to the colors before him. One painting is an intense swirling array of colors, while another appears as shimmering silver and blue. One painting gives the impression of traveling through the limitless galaxy, weightless, unrestrained, while on the opposite side rests a silent cold crystal mountain fall, deep and confined in a murky forest shrouded in green light. These painting are not confined by lines and preconceived patterns; they are bold swatches, they are rhythm. These paintsings are the personification of sound and dancing light. They, like the painted galaxy, are limitless.

Debbie Carrick weaves a totally different tale, for her paintings convey a story. Her paintings carry a touch of Eastern influence and the thick solid colors and one dimensional characters of the highly sofry oriented Medieval church painting. Through reproductions of style and artist, Biblical stories come to colorful life.

Three Marys at the foot of an unseen crucified Christ are rich in Byzantine influence, the color portraying their beauty, the lines portraying their grief. The copy of a Syrian painting depicts the primitiveness of the style on an almost frescoelike texture. "Abraham and the Angels" has a tapestry effect, the thick application of paint giving a heavy weave sensation. On a totally different sphere "Mary and Joseph," a pen and ink line interpretation, has the stiff angular lines of Picasso's pen.

The senior art show now on display is a definite must for those interested in the diversity of artists. There is more than just paint and pen on display; hung on the various pegs, tacked to the various boards are the personalities, the emotions, and the fantasies of these two creators.

Mother may I?

soul."

After Johnson's 1967 directive, the CIA continued its covert relations and contracts with university sources. In many cases nobody but the individual professor, administrator or student is informed. But at some institutions, at least one university official is aware of the CIA connections, said the Church committee.

Although the Senate committee warned academics that covert activities with the CIA may "undermine public confidence" in "those who train our youth," the committee did not urge Congress to prohibit the CIA—university connections.

In fact, the committee emphasized how ijportant academic resources were to CIA activities, arguing that the CIA "must have unfettered access" to university expertise. The committee stipulated only that the assistance "should be openly sought and openly given."

The committee also recommended that high university officials be made aware of any CIA connections with anyone attached to the school (President Ford already ordered this in his own intelligence directive), and that scholars sent to study abroad on a government fellowship not be used by the CIA.

Farmhouse, cont.

sal for an historic wayside fail, an alternate plan exists to move the house intact onto the College campus.

Meanwhile, with Suzanne Phillips, Dr. Sarah McNiell, and Dr. J. W. Nichols spearheading the effort, work continues to research the house and its families, and to add to the $1200 plus already accumulated in the Log House Restoration Fund.

Sports, cont.

two matches, but they are now sporting a 3-2 record.

In the April 24 action, Maryville walked away with four of the six singles matches and two contests in doubles action.

Singles winners for Maryville were Betsy Bauer, Kay Munn, Lisa Harrawood, and Debbie Ackerman.

Men's Tennis

April 27 proved to be an unlucky day for the men's tennis squad as they dropped their first match after winning nine games in a row in regular season action to visiting Western Carolina University 6-3.

The only two Scots to leave winners in singles were again Brown and Mike Webster, who prevented the Scots from a sweep of doubles by teaming with Craig Larson to win the opening match of that category.

The men's tennis team was handed their second consecutive loss May 3 by homestanding Georgetown 6-3 in Georgetown, Ky. The Scots were only able to take two of the six singles events and one in doubles.

Mike Webster and Sutton Brown scored all of Maryville's points as each won his individual match in singles before joining efforts in a lone doubles win.

The Maryville squad, directed by Don Wyatt, has an 8-3 worksheet.

Counselors wanted

Camp Calvin of Hampton, Georgia is in need of four more counselors to fill summertime positions.

The camp will be open from June 9 until August 15. Room and board is provided for counselors along with a salary of $500.

Those desiring more information should contact the Career Planning and Placement Office.

Student wages investigated

by Curt Koehler

(This story was originally prepared for NSA Momentum, the newsletter of the National Student Association.)

(CPS)—What's the starting wage for the student worker who checks out library books, answers the phone at the student union or cleans tables at the campus dining hall?

At most schools, students receive the federally legislated minimum wage of $2.20 an hour. Yet student workers at some 540 schools earn only $1.87 an hour for the exact same jobs. What's the catch?

The poorly paid students receive the "subminimum" wage, a legally sanctioned pay policy for full-time students working up to 20 hours per week. Students at these schools forego 15 per cent of the wages they would otherwise be legally entitled to simply because they are students.

Schools aren't the only ones who rely on discount student labor to get their work done. Retail and service establishments—such as fast food chain restaurants—along with agricultural employers are also authorized to pay full-time students the subminimum.

In recent testimony before the House Labor Standards Subcommittee, National Student Association President Clarissa Gilbert branded the subminimum "discriminatory" and urged its abolition.

"Students work because they have to," Gilbert said. "We are asking for fair treatment for these student workers in their battle to stay even with the skyrocketing costs of education and the debilitating effects of inflation."

Rep. James O'Hara (D-Mich) and the National Student Lobby Co-Director Steve Pressman also testified before the House subcommittee during hearings on an O'Hara bill that would virtually abolish the subminimum.

Proponents of the subminimum have argued that substandard wages spur the creation of new student jobs by offering employers an incentive to hire students. They contend that even even broader application of subminimum wages than currently authorized would encourage employers to hire "less competent" young people to receive "on-the-job training," thus reducing the unemployment level for this age group.

These hopes have not panned out with the subminimum laws currently on the books, Rep. O'Hara told the subcommittee. Instead, the subminimum "has depressed wage standards, gutted the basic principle of the Fair Labor Standards Act, and feathered the economic nest of the large and politically powerful fast-food chains."

O'Hara argued that youth unemployment cannot be solved by subminimum wages for students or anyone else. "Lower wages do not create more jobs," he said.

"Instead," O'Hara added, "meaningful reductions in unemployment rates for all American workers—younger or older—can only be achieved by the adoption and vigorous implementation of national goals, policies and programs that promote a sound and expanding full employment economy."

Responding to an argument that those who pay the subminimum need an incentive to "teach" young and unskilled workers job skills, one opponent of the subminimum noted that the "great youth employers of this country" want "hash slingers and hamburger servers, not learners."

On the other hand, proponents of the subminimum have claimed that authority to pay reduced wages is necessary to prevent the loss of already existing student jobs.

In response, NSL's Pressman argued that students are hired, not out of some altruistic desire to give students money, but to do a job that needs to be done.

"We must get away from the notion that paying a student a subminimum wage to work in a dining hall carting dishes or in a library stacking books is doing that student a favor," Pressman said.

NSA's Gilbert noted that many of these 540 schools also paid subminimum wages to College Work-Study students.

The Maryville Summer Playhouse is looking for five (5) students to sell advertising space in its Tenth Anniversary program book. A commission of 15% will be paid for each ad received. Interested students should contact Prof. Tom Jones at the College Theatre or Phil Der-Pilbosian at 983-7914 for further information.

Alcoa Highway
At John Sevier Rd.

Fish or Flounder Dinner, with Hushpuppies, Clam Chowder, French Fries or Baked Potato....$2.75

Each meal is prepared when ordered

31

Buy 1 Banana Split Get 2nd One ½ Price
With This Coupon
BASKIN-ROBBINS
MIDLAND SHOPPING CENTER OPEN TILL 10 DAILY

Looking for something special?
The Store of Fashions

FOLLOW YOUR HEART TO TIPTON Jewelers

902-9141
113 E. Broadway
Maryville, Tenn. 37801

HOUSE OF DIAMONDS

- ROLEX WATCHES
- BULOVA WATCHES
- ACCUTRON
- GIFTS

"EASY CREDIT TERMS"
C. R. TIPTON, owner

- DIAMONDS REMOUNTED
- ASK ABOUT OUR NEW ..... RING OF RADIANCE THAT WILL INCREASE THE VISUAL SIZE OF A CENTER DIAMOND 6 TIMES.

Parks Belk

The place to go for brands you know

Ladies Sportswear
by
Bobbie Brooks
Wiggle Worm
Peddle & Saddle

Men's Clothing
by
Levi
Arrow
Munsingwear

Open 9:30 - 5:30 Daily
Thurs. & Fri. Till 9:00

Just follow College Street for College Fashion

MC Sports

Baseball

The Maryville baseballers traveled to Lower Hudson Field May 11 to meet Tennessee; the Vols came out ahead of Maryville 14-0 in a single contest.

Starting pitcher, Dave Dolly, learned from the first pitch, which zinged off his leg, that he and Maryville were in for a long afternoon. He was relieved in the third inning by Barry Mathis, who was later in the game relieved by Dave Greenwalt.

Scots who led Maryville with singles included: Jeff Genualdi, Joe Moffett, Dave Greenwalt, and Paul Bailey.

Tennessee had a big day at the plate. Among their numerous hits were four homeruns. Rick Honeycutt wrapped up his playing days for Tennessee with a deep shot over the centerfield fence.

The Scot's won the nightcap of a doubleheader 10-5 at Emory and Henry College May 8, after they suffered a 10-3 setback.

Danny Thomas went all the way for Maryville to gain his sixth victory of the year, Saturday.

Joe Moffett had Maryville's biggest hit in the fifth inning on a three-run homer. In all, the Scot's put six runs across the plate in that frame.

Russell Baker drove in the winning run for Maryville in the third inning when he punched a two-run single.

In the first game, disaster struck, as the Wasps exploded for 9 runs during the fourth inning. Dave Dolly, who was credited with the loss, put the cuffs on the first two Wasp batters, before the home team created nightmares for Maryville. Bad fielding on Maryville's part led to nine unearned runs.

Maryville led the contest 1-0 in the second inning when Bobby Fitzgerald cleared the leftfield fence with a long homerun.

The Scot's other two runs came during sixth inning action as Dave Greenwalt singled to score a pair of runs.

McKinstry relieved Dolly in the fourth inning and concluded the game for Maryville. It was runaway time May 6, but but unfortunately, it was not Maryville who was doing the running.

Tennessee Tech struck Maryville with two losses 10-0, and 15-1, Thursday as the Scottie Dogs had one of their poorest showings in quite awhile.

Maryville could only manage one run all day which came in the fifth inning of the nightcap. Consequently, both decisions ended before the seventh inning as the NCAA 10-run rule went into effect. Maryville was out of the opening game after six innings, while time ran out in the final after five innings.

Dave Greenwalt started for Maryville and pitched four and two thirds innings before Todd Kohlbusch finished for the locals. The loss gives Greenwalt a 3-3 mark.

Kevin McKinstry was the starter for Maryville in the final contest. "Bapper" had a rough time early in two innings. He gave up a total of 11 runs, including 8 in a frenzy second inning that watched 12 batters come to the plate. Kohlbush again saw action when he relieved the starting Maryville hurler.

The occurance of Maryville's lone run came in the fifth inning when Dave Greenwalt singled with one away before Vince Fucci doubled him home.

The Maryville College Baseball club split a twinbill 6-1 and 4-5 with Emory and Henry College May 12, to conclude regular season play. The Scots, 19-15, lost a bid for their twentieth victory and possibly lost a chance to participate in Division III Regionals.

Coach Baird said, "The NCAA called me this morning and wanted to know our record, which is 19-15. They've got till May 17 to decide whether we go. We just got to sit and wait and see what happens." He also emphasized what a great game and season his team had given him.

Joe Moffett and Danny Thomas were big factors in Maryville's first win. Ace, Danny Thomas, tossed a 4 hitter enroute to a 6-1 win for his seventh victory, and Joe Moffett had a big game with 3 rbi's. The locals ripped a total of 9 hits and 6 runs.

Paul "Beetle" Bailey, who had one of his best days in a Scot uniform, ignited the Scot's scoring attack with a brilliant hook slide following a Dave Greenwalt bunt. Joe Moffett then drove in Russ Williams who had singled and advanced to 3 rd. on a Greenwalt sacrifice bunt.

Vince Fucci led off the fourth inning with a homerun over the leftfield bleachers to up the count 3-1. Joe Moffett then matched Fucci's feat with a fifth inning homer, which scored Dave Greenwalt, who had doubled.

Steve Wright, Todd Kolbusch Kolbusch, and Russell Baker all had hits in the final frame. Baker drove in Wright to conclude Maryville's scoring.

Maryville's bid for a second victory failed as the Wasps tagged the Scottie Dogs with a disappointing 5-4 loss. Kevin McKinstry went the distance for Maryville in the last home contest.

Lisa Harrawood

Paul Bailey again scored Maryville's first run. He led off in the third inning with a single before advancing to second on Russell Baker's hit. Again "Beetle" came home on a Greenwalt sacrifice bunt.

McKinstry had a rough fourth inning as Wasp batters collected 3 runs off 4 hits to take a 3-1 lead. A wild fifth inning saw Maryville recapture the lead 4-3, as total of three runs crossed the plate. Todd Kohlbusch hit a triple and came home on a sacrifice by Russ Baker. Dave Greenwalt singled and moved Baker to second before a wild pitch brought both Baker and Greenwalt home. Maryville failed to collect any runs in the bottom of the seventh and thus ended their season.

Women's Tennis

The Maryville College Women's Tennis team won their fourth match in a row April 28, 7-3, at the expense of visiting Tennessee Wesleyan College.

The rapidly improving tennis squad, coached by Sharon Brown, overpowered the opposition by winning five of the six singles matches before taking two of the three events in doubles.

Winners in singles for Maryville included Holly Eckert, Shada Overton, Betsy Bauer, Lee Henderson and Debbie Ackermen. Bauer and Lisa Harrawood combined for a winning effort in the first doubles match before Lea Adcock and Lynn Rogers followed with a second match victory.

The latter match was an exciting affair and was finally settled in sudden death in favor of Maryville.

The Maryville College Women's Tennis Team defeated Covenant College April 24, 6-3 at Lookout Mountain for their third consecutive win of the season. Coach Sharon Brown's squad started the season on a sad note by dropping the first

continued, page 7

The Book Rack
Thousands Of Used Paperback Books Buy at ½ price or trade 2 for 1 of some types and prices.
506 W. Broadway
Mon. - Sat. 10-6
983-READ

bank of maryville
Setting the Pace In Blount County
Nowtown • West Maryville • Alcoa • Airport • Broadway • Chilhowee • Sky City
A FULL SERVICE BANK
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

BYRNE REXALL DRUG COMPANY
For All Your Needs
Downtown Maryville

Giff's Sporting Goods
2-Locations to serve you better
2421 Old Knoxville Hwy. 984-7575
Broadway at Morganton Rd. 983-2166

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway
PABST 12-OZ. $1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE 12-OZ. $1.69
PEARL LIGHT 12-OZ. $1.59
MILLER "PONIES" 7-OZ. $1.93
Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

THE Highland Echo

Vol. 61 No. 26 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 21, 1976

Student uprisings renewed

(CPS)—The student activism of the sixties had a brief revival last week as students at five universities did battle with their school administrations over issues ranging from racial prejudice to tuition hikes.

Several hundred students at Spelman College in Georgia, a predominantly black women's college, held the board of trustees hostage for 26 hours. They were protesting the election of a black male president as well as the search committee's procedures, which they said denied full faculty and student participation.

Demanding that the trustees set up a new search committee, representing faculty and students, that would find a qualified black woman to head the college, the students tied ropes around the door to the room where the trustees were meeting.

The lock-in ended when the trustees agreed to reconsider their selection. They are expected to meet in a few days to decide whether to institute a new search committee or stand by their previous appointee.

At Concordia College in Minnesota black students boycotted classes for a week, charging the school with racial prejudice. Approximately 30 students handed the administration a list of 17 demands, including the establishment of a minority-studies department, a black recruitment center and a black student publication, hiring more black faculty and administrators, "ending racism in the athletic department," and "the immediate removal of racist professors."

Students have returned to classes. Their demands have been referred to appropriate committees, a college official said.

Students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst also presented the administration with a list of demands. In an orderly demonstration, about 300 met with administrators to continue their protest of a trustee decision to use $364,000 in a dorm trust fund for the purchase of land.

The students are demanding that charges be dropped against two students who were arrested in a previous demonstration against the fund transfer. They are also asking that the $364,000 be returned to the dormitory fund and that room fees not be increased next year. The students also demanded that charges be

continued on page 4

Thomas S. Kleepe, Secretary of the Interior, will speak to this year's graduating class at commencement May 31. Next week the Echo will publish a list of the activities during Commencement and graduation weekend.

Weiner study underway

The Board of Directors of Maryville College has retained the services of Stuart Weiner and Associates, a consulting firm, to examine and evaluate the admissions program at the college.

Weiner and Associates aims to help the college solve problems in the areas of increasing the number of students enrolled and retained, increase the quality of students, and to build a positive image that will help all areas of the college. They intend to do this through extensive research of the Maryville Campus and recommendations of suggested change.

A representative of the firm will spend a considerable amount of time on campus during the next three months observing the admissions procedure as it now stands, combing through records of the last five years in an attempt to correlate attrition and matriculation rates, and trying to synthesize an image of Maryville College through interviews and observation. This data gathering will be the basis of any recommendations that Stuart Weiner might make.

At the end of the three month period, the representative will make an oral and written presentation to the administrative council of the school with any recommendations and suggestions that he might have. At this time he will also present an analysis of the communications/public relations system of the college.

After this initial presentation, the consultant will work with the admissions staff in an attempt to work out a suitable program for Maryville College. They will work on staff training, market potentials and geographic areas of concentration, as well as staff efficiency. The degree of action taken will depend upon the attitude of the school itself.

The retention of con services comes with a gr... deal of concern over the attrition rate at Maryville. The school has a difficult time attracting and keeping qualified students. The analysis and recommendations of Stuart Weiner and Associates is expected to put Maryville College in a position of attracting and keeping students suited to her particular liberal arts program.

Three recitals to end season

Thomson

On Monday, May 24, soprano Pam Thomson will present her senior recital at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall. She is a senior music education major from Bales Ferry, Conn.

Thomson has directed the Maryville College Madrigal Singers for two terms as an independent study project. She is a member of the Maryville College Concert Choir and Band, and a member of Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women. She has received Fine Arts Competition Awards in voice and is presently the children's choir conductor at New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville.

She will sing songs of R. Vaughan Williams, Schumann, and Santoliquido, and a duet from Gounod's Faust. Miss Thomson will be assisted by Tom Banfield, tenor, Mrs. Gerry O'Dell, violinist, and Peggy Leatherwood, accompanist.

Schanck

On Tuesday, May 25, flutist Janet Schanck will present her Senior Recital at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

A senior music education major from New Jersey, she is a member of Delta Omicron, National Professional Music Society for Women, and the Student National Education Association.

Schanck's musical activities include the Maryville College Band and College-Community Orchestra, in which she is the principle flutist.

The program will include

continued on page 2

Class officers elected for 76-77

Senior, junior, and sophomore elections for class officers were held this past week, and the results were tallied and posted by May 19th.

The new senior class president is Libby Lowry, a Math major from Madisonville, Tennessee. Her partner, or vice-president, is Keith Goodwin, an English major from Ft. Meyers, Florida.

The last office, that of secretary-treasurer, is held by Vicki Parsons, a History major from Charleston, West Virginia.

The upcoming juniors for 76-77 have elected Steve Wright for their president, with Jim Dewhirst as vice-president. Wright is a Physical Education major from Jefferson City, Tennessee, and Dewhirst is a Business major from Knoxville.

Carol Davis was also elected as secretary-treasurer, and she is an Elementary Education major from Sunrise, Florida.

In the sophomore class, elected for president is Sharon Youngs, a Physical Education major from Gainesville, Georgia, and Karen Amos as vice-president, with her major as Economics, and her home in Lenoir City, Tennessee.

The office of secretary-treasurer will be held by Margaret Fitch, another Physical Education major hailing from Jacksonville, Florida.

Geology course to be offered

Geology Field Study, a study of the Smoky Mountains area geologic history, will be offered at Maryville College June 27-July 9. The course is being offered in cooperation with the Department of Geology, Wright State University.

The mountain area geologic history and processes will be studied by direct observation of field evidence and maps. The unique introductory course includes studies of streams, minerals, rocks, landslides, folds, faults and other geologically significant features. Discussions and lectures held in the field will include the significance of geology to society, mining and environmental issues.

Guest lecturers, field trips and a few laboratory exercises will be included. No previous geology background is necessary.

The course carries three semester hours credit; tuition is $146. Further information may be obtained by calling the Registrar's Office, 982-0912.

Hot water schedule

The hours of boiler plant operation will be as follows:

Weekdays
6:00 a.m. until 8:00 a.m.
4:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m.

Weekends
9:00 a.m. until 11:00 a.m.
7:00 p.m. until 9:30 p.m.

Search committee selected

Dr. Dan McGill, Chairman of the Maryville Board of Directors, has announced the formation of a Search Committee to find and evaluate prospects for the Presidency of Maryville College.

The committee consists of Dr. Herman E. Spivey of Knoxville as Chairman, Dr. Edward Brubaker of Wichita as Vice-Chairman, Mrs. Joe Beals of Knoxville, Alcoa vice-president Arnold Kramer of Pittsburgh, Dr. William Walker of Kentucky, Mr. Archibald Pieper of New York (president of the national alumni association), Dr. Dan McGill of Philadelphia (ex-officio), Dr. Gale Rhodes of the Maryville chemistry department, Dr. Arda Walker of the Maryville history department, and Mary Catherine Williamson, Maryville rising senior.

The first meeting of this committee is scheduled for May 29 on the Maryville campus. Dr. Spivey has indicated that the committee will welcome at all times suggestions from the faculty, administration, students, alumni and friends of Maryville.

An essay on rights

'Couched in our indifference'

> . . . a spiritually impotent pseudocommunity enslaved by perpetual obscenities of mental concupiscence; an omnivorous social hypocrisy, vomiting vitalities of idealism while grovelling before the materialization its own deathwish: a soi-distant free society, dedicated to immeasurable generosities of love; but dominated by a mere and colossal lust for knowing, which threatens not simply to erase all past and present and future human existence but to annihilate (in the name of liberty) Life Herself.
>
> e e cummings

A week from today most of us will be on our way to dissolving into the summertime mania of jobs, swimming pools, and the Fourth of July. Others of us are about to embark on the journey to fulltime employment or continuing academic study. Nonetheless, this community will pack its bags and batten-the-hatches for vacation.

Before the time comes this editor would like to reflect on that oft used (and oft misused) word "community." From The Winston Dictionary comes the following definition:

> 1, a body of persons having common interests and privileges, living in the same locality and under the same laws; 2, joint participation, sharing, or ownership; 3, likeness: common character; 4, the people in general: usually with the community chest, a fund collected locally for the support of qualified local charities.

There are few scruples or bones to pick with this definition as it pertains to Maryville College. Yet, while the college community may follow this definition, the dictionary definition leaves something to be desired. That is the nitty gritty understandings that hold the true concept of community together.

In the last edition of the Echo an editorial by Ruth Wilbanks ran on the editorial page under the headline "A junior through the looking glass." In this editorial, this definition of community was dealt with indirectly—in a rather vague way. The essence of the editorial, however, sticks out like a sore thumb. It also sings in no uncertain terms of many of the inconsiderate things that have occured to individuals on this campus in recent weeks.

On a whole the editorial pointed out the difficulties of "forced community" on a campus of this size. Ms. Wilbanks was right, the idea of "forced community" does not work on this campus. Too many little things happen to people that pose a dibilitating aspect of community.

While on one hand many people show too much "concern" about another persons' problems others just plain don't give a damn and reject the idea that other people are human beings themselves therefore deserve at least some respect.

> Couched in our indifference,
> like shells upon the shore;
> you can hear the ocean roar.
>
> Paul Simon

This is the particular attitude that these people seem to emulate through various means —intimidation in the cafeteria, a total disregard for the properties and rights of others in the cafeteria and dorms, and a lack of respect for the academic—classroom situation.

This is not in the spirit of community. Neither is the backstabbing and rumor mongering that is perpetrated behind-people's-backs. While it may appear as though my statement is directed towards the idea that some sort of totally homogenously community should exist—it is not. Instead as a community, a closely gathered, small community developed for the pursuit of higher education, we should realize our differences, then accept them for what they are and leave the prejudices and seamy little details be.

It all points towards the basic concept that as individuals in the American society we are endowed with certain rights. Part of the unwritten code that goes with these rights is the idea of responsibility and respect.

These same rights are also expressed in the Maryville College Catalog:

> [Maryville College] seeks to establish a community in which all activities—intellectual, religious, social, cultural, physical—are coordinated so as to prevent distracting fragmentation. It seeks to establish a community in which each member may grow in integrity, ever striving to understand and make a unified pattern of his experiences, but learning to contemplate, with reverence, the mystries of the universe. The total college experience is designed to prepare the student for effective participation and leadership in the larger community of mankind.
>
> "Purpose and Objectives"

In this Maryville College is presented as a microcosm of the "outside world" complete with the diversity and complexity that one encounters in the place of humanity. As it exists in reality it should also exist in principals of the rights and responsibilities of man. The "Purpose and Objectives" continues recognizing the difficulties but in turn providing for these same difficulties:

> Although the ideal set forth here may be beyond mans grasp, the Maryville students and faculty are united in the belief that they can do no less than work toward it, making the pursuit of truth a dynamic process involving continued redefinition of goals, reorganization of curriculum and community life, and reevaluation of teaching and learning methods.

Tim Rahn

The Highland Echo

Tim Rahn—editor
Ruth Wilbanks—assistant editor
Deborah Huffman—lay-out editor
Alan Regenbrecht—circulation manager
Ed Loper—assistant editor (photos)
Debbie Welch—news editor
James Dewhirst—business manager
Elizabeth T. Fowler—advisor

Reporters: Scott Denney, Charles Craven, Robert Boone, Bonnie Holsinger, Janice West
Photography: Trippy Banner, Joe Showalter
Ad manager: Karen Amos

All type for the Echo is typed by Kathy Lane of the Maryville College Print Shop. Then the Echo is printed by The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

The Highland Echo is the official news paper of the community of Maryville College. The paper normally appears 28-30 times an academic year. The Echo Room is located in the second floor of Fayerweather Hall (the Student Center). All letters to the Echo should be submitted typed and double spaced to—

The Highland Echo Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN 37801

Member of the College Press Service(CPS).

The final edition of the Highland Echo will appear next Friday morning before C hour. If we do not see you again until next year have a safe trip. The Echo staff.

The great face beyond

Sunday Vespers

Readings on wonder

pure poetry & prose

with

3 voices

7:00 Little Chapel

Echo workshop planned

Photographers, staff writers and editors will be needed to round out the 76-77 Highland Echo staff.

If you have any inclinations towards working on the Echo staff or just learning (to some extent) how to write in journalistic style see one of the editors during the next week.

Presently the staff has planned a workshop for the beginning of the next academic year. This workshop will include learning the principles of good crisp journalistic style, some photo procedure, layout technique, and a full understanding of newspaper production.

With the assistance of the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times and some other local resources the work shop will get under way September 8.

World Scene

Presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan's campaign lost some of its edge on Tuesday as President Ford won easily in Michigan and Maryland. Ford won 65% of the vote in Michigan. Jerry Brown defeated Carter in Maryland with 48% of the vote. Political speculation suggests that a significant stop-Carter movement has the chance of becoming a real threat.

J. Earl McCall will be inducted into the Scots' athletic Wall of Fame this weekend at Maryville College.

President Ford has asked Attorney General Levi to find a suitable test case to use as a vehicle in reappraising the administration's stand of busing. The President has recently given support to antibusing groups in Boston.

A federal appeals court upheld the conviction of John Erlichman and G. Gordon Liddy in the case of the Ellsburg breakin. Erlichman contended that he was acting on orders of the president of the United States to investigate security leaks.

Letters to the Echo

Editor:

After five years at Maryville College, I still find it impossible to believe that the Administration still forces its ideology on the so-called "campus community." The closing of buildings on Sunday evenings is one example. Another was the proposed free concert (in connection with the Senior Class) to be held Sunday evening after vespers. We had intended a nice, quiet evening under the stars with the soft guitar music of Randy Hunter (75) and another local acoustic group. This was to be held in the arcade of the Fine Arts Center (now to be held at the Market Place). All plans went well until they reached Dr. Copeland. We were then told by Dr. Copeland that Sunday was the day of freedom...to worship, sleep in, study...freedom from structure. So—no concert. Is vespers not structures? If we had told him it was a gospel group, I bet there would have been no problem. I sincerely hope that the next president at Maryville does not try to force his religion on others and that he realizes that to some of us Sunday is just another day.

Daniel Whiteside

Recitals, cont.

Caprice by Arthur Pryor, Sonate by Paul Hindemith, Danse De La Chevre by Arthur Honegger, a Vivaldi concerto, and B. Molique's Andante.

Burns

Pianist Kathy Burns will perform a Junior Recital on Thursday, May 27, at 7:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

A native of Maryville, Tennessee, Miss Burns is currently studying under Rosemary Ahmad. In addition to playing in the Maryville College Band and singing in the annual production of Messiah, she is also a member of Delta Omicron, National Professional Society for Women, and the Student National Education Association.

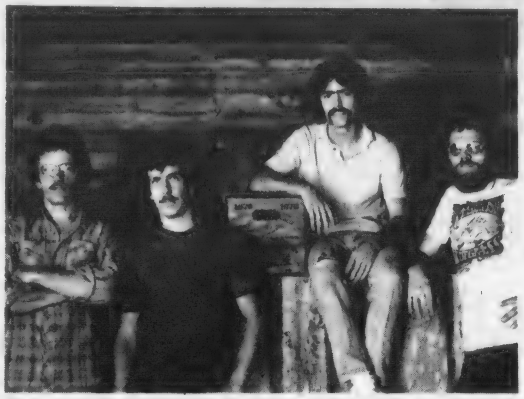
Miss Burns will perform a French Suite of J. S. Bach, two Debussy and two Scriabin preludes, and Bartok's Allegro Barbaro.

Bluegrass, carrot cake, crafts

Market Place has it all

This article, despite all first impressions from the headline and photos, is not a living, three column advertisement for a specific business establishment in downtown Maryville. It is, rather a reverse advertisement for campus artists, craftspersons, and musicians, and contains a few incidentals regarding the purchase of healthy Norfolk pines.

Paul and Dan Holman purchased an empty former hardware store at the corner of Broadway and Court Streets late last fall, after a visit here to a bluegrass festival in their traveling acoustical instrument shop, Ramblin' Music. They felt Maryville provided a perfect place for permanent residence for themselves and their business, and contacted their friend Barry Duveen to be manager of the complex.



The Market Place was originally intended to be not only for sales of musical instruments and lessons, but primarily as a meeting ground for musicians to perform and learn from each other informally. Both purposes have been fulfilled and in the process, a blossoming group of businesses, both related and unrelated, have emerged: a photographers studio (run by Dan Holman), a health food restaurant, a pinball gallery, a gift shop, and a plant shop (run by Paul). Soon to come is a downstairs bar and blue-grass soft rock/folk cabaret.

A stop by the Market Place is a pleasant experience. The original interior of the warehouse shaped room has been stripped and new dividers have been erected to the specifications of the tenants. The space is airy and open. A constant sound of soft, blue-grass and related types of music, from a variety of instruments and musicians, professionals and beginners, is present and makes the purchase of a plant, a photograph or lunch an easy, relaxed experience.

The owners are considerate and eager to meet new clientele, and the various shop owners and managers go out of their way to help any customer who enters, regardless of his/her specific interest.

Ron Jeske, whose feelings about music are very compatable with the Holmans', is opening the bar and cabarate "Down Yonder" in the basement of the building shortly. The main purpose of the creation of this new business is to promote performing of bluegrass and other music. All musicians are welcome to audition for "open-mike" performances or the Friday and Saturday night performances. "Down Yonder" will open soon for Friday and Saturday nights, only, but should expand quickly into a 6 night a week business with a restaurant. Jeske is setting up an excellent P. A. system and wants quality entertainment. For readers information, Jeske mentioned that, due to Maryville laws, no dancing will be allowed at the Down Yonder - beer licenses and dancing do not mix in this town.

Artists and craftspersons can also find an outlet for their talents at the Market Place. Mike and Virginia Collins, who own the Blue Goose gift shop, will welcome art works on consignment for their shop. They are open from 8:30 to 6:30 6 days a week and will take 20% off the top of the price set by the artists.

(L to r) Owners of the Market place Dan and Paul Holman, Ron Jeske, owner of "Down Yonder," and Barry Duveen manager of the building.

Scholars lose inside dope

(CPS)—The world's largest collection of dope literature was destroyed in a recent fire that caused thousands of dollars worth of damage.

The Fitz Hugh Ludlow Memorial Library in San Francisco contained over 10,000 books, records, journals, engravings, comic books, and other material related to "psychoactive" drugs.

Valuable material lost in the blaze included a first edition of Jack Kerouac's On The Road, Allen Ginsberg's original Uncle Sam hat, a copy of Lenny Bruce's book, Stamp Help Out The Pot Smokers and Alice B. Toklas' original recipe for hash brownies.

The library was opened seven years ago, according to its director, to serve "the needs of research scholars."

Sound on Sound

Sound on Sound, from the University of Tennessee, will appear at Maryville College on Saturday, May 22, at 8:00 p.m. in the Wilson Chapel.

It has been reported that Sound on Sound plays the Beatles so well that you will not be able to tell the difference between the two. The price of admission is $.50.

Guitar major offered

Are you interested in studying guitar? With the establishment of the Maryville College Preparatory School for the Arts as a division of the Department of Fine Arts, it is now possible to offer lessons in guitar in the following ways:

1. Class lessons (a minimum of 20 per class) which will meet approximately one and one-half hours one day a week, the specific day and time yet to be decided. This will be offered on a non-course credit basis to college students and adults in the community. The course will emphasize contemporary finger style technique. Instruments may be available on a rental basis.

2. Private applied classical guitar will be offered to college students upon completing satisfactorally an audition. This may be available, as other private applied music studies (piano, voice, etc.) for a special fee for those who desire to accumulate an elective course credit in the same manner as other private applied lessons.

3. Private applied classical guitar may be available in the same manner as stated above for students interested in majoring in music as a guitar major or as a music education major with major instrument in guitar.

If you are interested in any of these offerings, please contact the Fine Arts Center for further information.

THE FLAVOR TREE
Delicatessen sandwiches—hot or cold
Philadelphia-style Hoagies
Imported and Domestic Cheeses and Meats
Phone 983-7914
Church Avenue Professional Bldg.
404 Church Avenue, Suite #9

One man's opinion; a review

An "intense love for sheep?"

by Gary Sloboda

It appears that the policy of this paper, in terms of critiqueing senior art shows, is to write a favorable review even if the show stinks. An outsider reading the paper would think that this college is overloaded with budding geniuses. Fortunately, this is not the case with Charlie Blair and his show currently appearing at the Fine Arts Center.

When one steps into the gallery he or she is immediately struck with the impression that Charlie has done nothing but drink for four years. His entire collection, from the pottery to the macrame, to the paintings, reeks of psychosis and anal compulsion. I asked Charlie if it were true that all potters have a repressed urge to squeeze droppings of small animals. He replied, "No, I have never repressed the urge!"

With his three paintings, Charlie shows his mastery of the paintbrush. It is obvious that he can hold the brush, unfortunately he can't do a thing when there's paint on it.

His major concentration during his college years has been in pottery. He has close to one hundred pieces in his show and each one reveals great care and technique. The glazes, although earthy in color, are quite beautiful. Potters, as all artists do, put a bit of themselves in their works. Charlie, in his pottery, has unveiled a part of himself that most people who know him would never suspect—talent.

His macrame is undoubtedly above and beyond any seen in previous art shows. It should be, he bought all of it! But, he does show great choice in selection. Upon gazing at the yarn riddled novelties, one gets the strong impression that Charlie is trying to symbolize something. Perhaps it is his intense love for sheep?

Many of you may remember Charlie from his comic strip, "Rabbit Blues", which appeared in past issues of the Echo. He has collected every comic and arranged them into a college for display. But, who cares Chuck? They were not funny then and they are even less funny now.

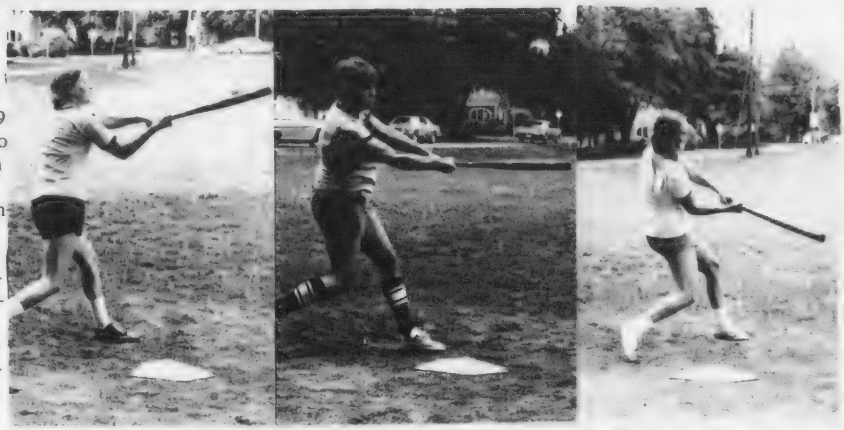
Actually Charlie has put together a rather impressive art show. It is a fine example of how you can get away with just about anything in the art department if you put your mind to it. The best part about his work is that there is not more of it. The show will be on display from May 16 to May 28. So if you are bored and have nothing else to do, go down and throw up on it.

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations
The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Looking for something special?
The Store of Fashions
FOLLOW YOUR HEART TO TIPTON Jewelers
983-6141
113 E. Broadway
Maryville, Tenn. 37801
HOUSE OF DIAMONDS
• ROLEX WATCHES
• BULOVA WATCHES
• ACCUTRON
• GIFTS
"EASY CREDIT TERMS"
C. R. TIPTON, owner
• DIAMONDS REMOUNTED
• ASK ABOUT OUR NEW ..... RING OF RADIANCE THAT WILL INCREASE THE VISUAL SIZE OF A CENTER DIAMOND 6 TIMES.

MC Sports

Men's tennis



Three Maryville seniors, Craig Larsen, Sutton Brown, and Mike Webster left May 19 for Jacksonville, Mississippi to represent Maryville College in the NCAA Division III National Collegiate Tennis Championships.

The three top seeded players, Webster, Brown, and Larsen will enter singles competition while Larsen and Brown will team in a doubles. These seniors will wrap up their collegiate careers at Jacksonville

Maryville, whose finances necessitated budget cuts, wishes to extend a note of appreciation to an alumnus Mrs. Michael Zifcak of Jacksonville. Mrs. Zifcak is providing housing for the three Maryville seniors during the tournament.

This year's varsity tennis team had one of the best seasons in several years. The netmen in route to a 9-5 season, won eight consecutive games at one point and finished 8th in the TIAC Tennis Tournament in Nashville.

This was a big improvement over last year's squad which went 8-7.

Women's Intramurals: Libby Lowry, Chris Curran, and Terri Topham swing away.

Bent Nails lead series

The Bent Nail Syndrome beat the Transfers 4-3 in extra innings May 19 in the first game of the Tournament Championships of Men's Intermural Softball.

Bent Nail, 15-11 captured first place in the loser's bracket after defeating Handy Curb 8-7 May 18 in another extra inning game. Handy Curb finished the tournament in third place.

The Transfers won the winner's bracket with a perfect 4-0 record before bowing to the Bent Nails. The Transfers walloped the Bat-a-dats 25-6, beat Sig Revised 6-3, nipped Handy Curb 11-10, and stopped Bent Nail 14-4 in route to their first place finish.

To win the tournament, the Bent Nail Syndrome must win another victory from the Transfers. If the Transfers win the second game, a Softball W World Series will be palyed between the first tournament winners, Bent Nail, and the Transfers. If Bent Nail beats the Transfers no series will be necessary.

NEXT WEEK:

special senior edition

Stupid kids blamed for SAT scores

(CPS)—Armed with statistics showing slumping SAT scores, parents have turned on "permissive education" and television, blaming both for the comparative mental rut their children find themselves in.

A University of Michigan professor has another explanation. The reason for lowered scores, according to Dr. Robert Zajonc, is that there are more stupid children running around these days.

Zajonc reports that a 12 year study of the scores has shown first born children usually fare best on the tests. Zajonc concluded that the last child born into a family, as well as an only child, are at an automatic disadvantage in taking SAT tests.

But there's hope for the future. A high percentage of children born between 1947 and 1962—the students now taking the SATs—were born into disadvantageously sized families. Zajonc predicts that the trend should continue until 1980 before reversing itself.

Uprisings, cont.

brought against the campus police force and that its director be fired.

Proposed tuition hikes at the University of Oklahoma gave about 150 students cause to march on the administration building. The university president met with students outside the building and kept them outside by posting guards and locking the doors.

The Oklahoma students demanded that the increases proposed by the university's regents—which would raise the tuition an average of $6 per undergraduate credit—be rescinded.

About 25 Columbia University students and 75 community residents held two rallies protesting the university's announcement that it would eliminate a high-school-equivalency and tutorial program it offers to people in the New York City neighborhood.

Free Concert

Sunday May 23 8:00

New Bar - "Cottonmouth Saloon"

under the Marketplace 102 Broadway

Variety of music featuring:

Randy Hunter

John Nuckols-

house band

Rusty Winchester, Rich Battaglia,
Steve Maggio, Gena Saylor

Whispering Charlie's
300 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy-a lot For A Little!

Alcoa Highway
At John Sevier Rd.

Fish or Flounder Dinner, with Hushpuppies, Clam Chowder, French Fries or Baked Potato....$2.75

Each meal is prepared when ordered

The Book Rack
Thousands Of Used Paperback Books
Buy at ½ price or trade 2 for 1 of some types and prices.
506 W. Broadway
Mon. - Sat. 10-6
983-READ

AMLET
BICYCLE SHOP, INC.
OPEN MON.-SAT. 10 A.M. TIL 6 P.M.
SALES • SERVICE • PARTS
AUTHORIZED DEALER

NISHIKI • AZUKI
COLUMBIA
983-7921
EVERYTHING FOR EVERY CYCLIST
2001 OLD KNOXVILLE HWY.
MARYVILLE, TN.

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

PABST	12-OZ.	$1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE	12-OZ.	$1.69
PEARL LIGHT	12-OZ.	$1.59
MILLER "PONIES"	7-OZ.	$1.93

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

THE Highland Echo

Vol. 61 No. 27 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | May 28, 1976

ACC Drops ways and means

The All-College Council for 1976-77 met for the first time on May 26 to finish old business and establish the operating procedure for the beginning of the next academic year.

A major move by the Council accepted a proposal by the Ways and Means Committee that the committee be dropped. This move by the Council was agreed upon with the understanding that the need for the committee, while questionable to many now, may be needed in the future.

A second proposal from the Ways and Means Committee delt with the possibility that the Co-Chairman of the Council receive a partial tuition grant due to the time envolved with the position. For the time being the Council tabled the matter.

It is hoped by Council members that this possibility for a tuition grant to aid the Co-Chairman will be investigated more fully over the next year. To evaluate the amount of need that the Co-Chairman should receive he or she will have to keep accurate time of the number of hours the position requires.

President Copeland, in conjunction with this, raised the issue about the current half tuition grants that go to the editors of the Chilhowean and Highland Echo. Dr. Copeland stated that these people should perhaps have their aid determined on the basis of financial need. This is the current policy of the college: that need be the purpose for a person to receive aid.

It has been reported to the Council by the Instructional Program Committee that there are currently plans underway to develop a major in ballet at Maryville. At this time certain budgetary problems need to be investigated. Dean Carolyn Blair expressed her optomism, however, and passed on that the IPC had been "enthusiastic" over the development of this major.

Necessary revisions were made to the committee lists for the next year.

Baird honored

Boydson Baird and Maryville Athletes were honored May 31 at the annual Athletic Banquet. Also highlighting the ceremonies was the induction of six members to Maryville's Wall of Fame.

Departing Coach Baird was honored with three plaques along with a card signed by Maryville athletes. Baird was also selected by the baseball team as most valuable player. Not to be left out was his wife Nancy who was also presented a plaque by the basketball team.

Baird will conclude a career of 17 years at Maryville College after this year. Slides were shown of Coach Baird during his years at Maryville, both as an athlete and as a coach.

Maryville athletes honored included: most valuable, Jill Holcombe (volleyball), Chris Curran (women's basketball), Don Surrency (football), Bob Valentine (wrestling), Randy Lambert (basketball), Mark Keahon (track), Sutton Brown, Mike Webster, and Craig Larsen (men's tennis); most improved: Mark Thedford (wrestling), Kathy Kirkhart (volleyball), Libby Lowry (women's basketball), Joe Moffett (baseball), Jeff Draper (men's basketball); best offense, Chip Krug (football), Vince Fucci (baseball), and best defense, Ken Hanna (football).

Walker outstanding teacher

Dr. Arda S. Walker was awarded the annual Outstanding Teacher award at the faculty luncheon May 26, 1976.

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler and Dr. Robert "Skip" Williams were the two runners up.

The award is monetary and is contributed by an anonymous donor. The first place award is $300.00, while the runners-up receive $100.00 each.

Nominations are taken from members of the senior class; the student members of the Instructional Programs Committee talley these votes and make the final decision as to who receives each award.

Criteria such as knowledge of subject matter, interest in the course material, and ability to motivate students are taken into consideration, as well as popularity with students.

Baccalaureate and commencement

Stewart, Kleppe to speak

The 1976 Baccalaureate and Commencement exercises will be lead by James T. Stewart, possible candidate for Maryville College's open position of chaplain, and Thomas S. Kleppe, 41st Secretary of the Interior.

Stewart, who has both a Bachelor of Divinity and a Masters of Sacred Theology in Biblical Studies from Drew University, has entitled his sermon, "Meet at the Corner of Faith and Knowledge." He is expected to be on campus during most of the upcoming weekend in order to get a full view of Maryville College. Students are encouraged to seek him out to discuss his qualifications for the chaplaincy. His experiences that relate to the job description include a campus ministry at Chico State College in Chico, California and employment with the University Christian Center in Beirut since 1967. The Center is a United Campus Ministry that is ecumenically sponsored by 14 different denominations including the Presbyterian Chruch. Because of the war in Beirut, the Center is under closed down operations.

Dr. Copeland suggests that Mr. Stewart be critically appraised by the college community during the weekend, but hopes that the spirit of worship traditional to the Baccalaureate services will not be superseded.

Commencement speaker, Thomas S. Kleppe, has been Secretary of the Interior since October 17, 1975 following a unanimous confirmation by the Senate. Before the appointment he was Administrator of the Small Business Administration and a Congressman from North Dakota. His son, Tom, attended Maryville College in 1972.

Kleppe comes to Maryville intending to speak on "Energy and Independence." After being nominated to the Secretaryship, Kleppe expressed a love for the prosperous American nation and its resources, but said, "We must strike a delicate balance between resource use and resource protection, and keep in mind that the economic penalty for an error in the direction of overprotection can always be corrected, while the damage from resource abuse may be irreparable."

Baccalaureate Services are Sunday at 8:00 p.m. Commencement Exercises begin at 10:30 a.m., Monday, May 31, 1976.

Pot stigma slips

(CPS)—Jack Ford is not the only one helping to remove the stigma from marijuana smoking. Slowly but steadily, legislation which would decriminalize the weed is gaining wider support.

The ultra-conservative Oakland, California Tribune became the country's first major newspaper to endorse the complete legalization of marijuana. In addition, the Board of Governors of the California Bar Association agreed to sup-

continued, page

Schedule for Alumni and Graduates

Saturday, May 29
12:00 Noon	Alumni Class Reunion Luncheons
3:00 p.m.-5:00 p.m.	President and Mrs. Copeland's Reception for Seniors and Their Families
6:30 p.m.	Annual Alumni Dinner
Sunday, May 30
4:00 p.m.	Senior Fine Arts Hour
8:00 p.m.	Baccalaureate Service
Monday, May 31
10:30 a.m.	Commencement Conferring of Degrees

And it came to pass

And it came to pass.
Early in the morning toward the last day of the semester,
There arose a great multitude smiting the books and wailing.
And there was much weeping and gnashing of teeth,
For the day of judgment was at hand
And they were sore afraid, for they had left undone
Those things which they ought to have done,
And they had done
Those things which they ought not to have done
And there was no help for it.
And there were many abiding in the dorm
Who had kept watch over their books by night,
But it availed them naught.
But some there were who rose peacefully,
For they had prepared themselves the way
And made straight paths of knowledge.
And these were known
As wise burners of the midnight oil.
And to other they were known as "curve raisers."
And the multitude arose
And ate a hearty breakfast.
And they came unto the appointed place
And their hearts were heavy
And they had come to pass,
But some to pass out.

And some of them
Repented of their riotous living and bemoaned their fate,
But they had not a prayer.
And at the last hour there came among them
One known as the instructor; and they feared exceedingly.
He was of the diabolical smile.
And he passed papers among them and went his way.
And many and varied
Were the answers given,
For some of his teachings had fallen among fertile minds.
Others had fallen among the fallows,
While others had fallen flat.
And some there were who wrote for one hour,
Others for two,
But some turned away sorrowful, and many of these
Offered a little bull
In hopes of pacifying the instructor.
And these were the ones who had not a prayer.
And when they finished,
They gathered up their belongings
And went their way quietly, each in his own direction,
And each vowing unto himself in this manner:
"I shall not pass this way again."

------Author unknown

Letters to the Echo

Editor Highland Echo,

I was under the impression that the purpose of a paper was to keep people informed. Was I wrong? Here I am, your local, loyal townie. I faithfully read my Echo (beginning to end) every week and watch all the notices in the Post Office. I was very surprised and more than a little angry to find that class officers had been elected last week. I didn't even know the election was being held; somehow I don't feel it was my fault. We townies do want to participate in campus life, but it's rather difficult to when we aren't informed. Simply because we don't live in a dorm is no reason to deny us participation in campus activities. I deeply resent the fact that the elections weren't publicized so that I could vote.

Rose McConnell

Impressions
the literary magazine
on sale the echo room
50 cents

The Highland Echo

Tim Rahn—editor
Ed Loper—assistant editor (photos)
Ruth Wilbanks—assistant editor
Debbie Welch—news editor
Deborah Huffman—lay-out editor
James Dewhirst—business manager
Alan Regenbrecht—circulation manager
Elizabeth T. Fowler—advisor

Reporters Scott Denney, Charles Craven, Robert Boone, Bonnie Holsinger, Janice West
Photography Trippy Banner, Joe Showalter
Ad manager Karen Amos

All type for the Echo is typed by Kathy Lane of the Maryville College Print Shop. Then the Echo is printed by The Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

The Highland Echo is the official news paper of the community of Maryville College. The paper normally appears 28-30 times an academic year. The Echo Room is located in the second floor of Fayerweather Hall (the Student Center). All letters to the Echo should be submitted typed and double spaced to—

The Highland Echo Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN 37801
Member of the College Press Service(CPS).

PG Evergreen & Sun

Two poems by Dr. David Young

Leaves Are Forever

Raking leaves:
the necessary work of autumn fun.

Putting away the memories
—without which winter has no room—
of springs unfolding and long summer evenings and supple afternoons of tans.

The grass never looks so good as then,
like first day first graders, hair combed teeth brushed faces shining pencils sharpened hopes untarnished.

The blisters of the raking always vanish as do the blisters of too much sun on the 4th.

I've raked
a lot of Maryville leaves and have memory piles too rich to compost.
There are enough leaves to take another lifetime to sort—a river of ideas and loves and hugs and sharings and tears of smiles and pains and roots that will always find water no matter the number of cloudless days.

— a river that has often flowed over the banks onto the flood plains to replenish the soil for the next season's growth.

Someone else will rake the leaves tomorrow and collect the memory piles that
I won't be able to read because years change
alphabets like trees change leaves.

But trees grow everywhere
there are people and fireside mantles are made for stockings
on Christmas Eve:

Thus it is that many leaves have been added to my soul and hung with celebration on the mantle of my experience.

I tip my hat,
my rake,
my life,
my love, and
my thanks.

Thank you people for being who you are and
for giving so much.
It has been good to have been in love at
Maryville.

The grass never looked so good, because of you.

Thanks.

5/19/76

Sky Seeds

There's a sky above
the sky.
How high
do we have to leap to get a tan?
Where do we put our sandals when walking barefoot on clouds?

Chicken Little Luddites cry the technological sky is falling.
So t'is.

But instead of holding our hands above our heads to protect,
Let's get it together and pull the sky down so we can use it to grow new life
to reach toward new sky.

The old sky is the one we fell in love under,
But if we want the children of our union to grow up in the Equilibrium, we must do that
Which we know
we must and which we cannot do any other way.

Where will the tomorrow
come from?
How about the seeds from yesterday's pie in the sky
that were planted
but never watered.

Yes, there's a sky above
the sky,
Reach and love
give birth to sky seeds.

5/16/76

1975-76 Awards and scholarships announced

Alexander English Award—to the senior with best 4-year record in English—Linda C. Davis.
Bates Bible Award—This award is given annually for proficiency attained in Bible study. The award this year is divided between—M. Kimberly Darden and Margaret S. Leonard.
The Bates Forensics-Drama Award is given in alternate years to the most outstanding junior or senior in Forensics and Drama. The award this year goes to—William Michael Johnston.
The George A. Knapp Mathematics Award—to the junior or senior adjudged the most outstanding and most promising student majoring in Mathematics. The award this year is divided between—Penelope S. Lopez and David P. Reinauer.
The Verton M. Queener Scholarship Awards go to the outstanding junior in Political Science and to the outstanding junior in American or English History—Milton M. Bush, Political Science; and Robert E. Layman, History.
The Davies Fine Arts Scholarship Award—to a junior majoring in Fine Arts—Linda G. Savage.
The Elizabeth Hillman Chemistry Award—to a woman student for excellence in Chemistry—Mary W. Gundlach.
The Susan Allen Green Scholarship Award—to the most outstanding junior majoring in Biology—Warren A. Banner, III.
The Russell Edwards Award—to the most outstanding junior in Physics or Mathematics—Kenneth A. Dickens.
The Alpha Delta Kappa Scholarship Award—to the outstanding junior in Education—Linda L. Stritter.
The Barraclough Choir Award—to the senior who has been a member of the Choir for at least two years and has been most outstanding in service to the Choir, an active Christian leader, and a successful student—Mary Lee Apetz.
Phi Epsilon Rho Award—for leadership in campus activities and maintaining an overall average of 3.0—Pamela Lynn Patton.
The Blount National Band Award of $50.00 goes to the senior doing the most excellent work in Economics and goes this year to—David P. Lundell.
The Bank of Maryville Scholarship Award goes each year to the rising senior economics major who has the highest overall grade point average at the end of his junior year—Kevin Lee McKinstry.
The Alpha Gamma Sigma Scholarship Award goes to the student who has the highest scholarship record at the end of the first two years at Maryville College. For the year 1975-76 the winner of this award was—Milton Bush.

RECIPIENTS OF AWARDS SHOULD GO BY THE FINANCIAL AID OFFICE

Senior FA hour

Senior Fine arts Hour will be held on Sunday afternoon, May 30, at 4:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall, and will feature graduating art and music students. The program will be followed by the unveiling of an oil portrait of Miss Katharine Currie Davies, painted by William Swenson.

Miss Davies received the B. A. degree from the College of Wooster in Ohio and is a 1924 graduate of the American Conservatory of Music. She received the B. Mus. degree from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music in 1928 and was a student of Isidor Philipp, Paris. She received a Presser Foundation Scholarship to attend Fontainebleau in France in 1929. In 1938, she received the M. Mus. degree from Eastman School of Music, and in 1955 she attended the Royal Academy of Music in London.

Miss Davies came to Maryville College in 1936 to establish the Fine Arts Department and served as chairman of the department until her retirement in June of 1964. In addition to starting the department, Miss Davies also developed the music major program and library in six years to gain membership in the National Association for Schools of Music. She led the fine arts faculty and administration in the planning and building of the Fine Arts Center which opened in 1951. It was felt appropriate to have the portrait of Miss Davies unveiled at the Senior Fine Arts Hour which closed the school year marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of the building. Mr. William Swenson, the artist of the oil portrait, is Assistant Professor in visual arts of the Department of Fine Arts.

MC Sports wrapup

by Robert Boone

As the year closes, many seniors come to mind who will be missed next year in the respective sports. We wish to thank those seniors who provided leadership, fired up their teammates, and gave it everything they had to win. Seniors, thanks for giving 110% every time you participated.

Coach Jordan's football team lost all of its games last fall, but six seniors stuck it out when the going was tough. It took a special breed to give 100% to win when everything was going wrong. Mark Keahon (OG), Tom Hyne (SE), Don Surrency (TE), and Jim Lester (QB and P) were seniors who led the offense. Surrency and Hyne was captains, also Surrency was chosen as the most valuable player. The defense was led by linebacker Steve Howard and free safety Mike Osborne.

The Baseball team, 19-15, had an outstanding year, and narrowly missed another trip to the Regionals. Coach Boyd Baird will resign after this year at Maryville as head Baseball and Basketball coach as well as Athletic Director. It will be difficult to replace Baird, a man who inspired his players to work hard and to become fine Christian athletes. Baird, a legend in his own time, will be personally missed by students and athletes who have known him.

Vince Fucci led the team with eight home runs and was followed by Bobby Fitzgerald and Joe Moffett. The pitching staff was headed by two veterans, Dan Thomas, 7-1, and Kevin McKinstry 5-3. Coach Baird was pleased with the number of freshmen out for this year's team and praised fielding efforts of Paul Bailey, the third sacker. It appears that next year may be the Scot's year if the team maintains its present talent.

Maryville's 75-76 Basketball team was dominated by four seniors, three who were Blount County natives. Center Randy Lambert was the captain and leading scorer for Maryville this season.

Lambert averaged better than 25 points a game and was rated 16th in the Small College scoring statistics. Lambert also made the coveted 1000 Point Club for

continued, page 4

Five receive Steele awards

Five Maryville College music majors have been recognized as recipients of the Oscar Philip Steele award for 1975-76: freshman Thomas Banfield, tenor, of Chesterland, Ohio; junior Scott Denney, organist, of Green River, Wyoming; sophomore Suzanne Schoen, flautist, of Maryville, Tennessee; and freshman Judy Thweatt, soprano, of Winchester, Virginia.

The award was established by Philip Steele who wan an affiliate artist at Maryville College from 1970-73. Mr. Steele has continued to present these awards in honor of his father since the time of his affiliation with the college terminated. The purpose of the award is to give public recognition for high standards of performance to Maryville College students and young musicians of pre-college age in the community. The recipients are selected from a committee from the Fine Arts Department.

The Lowell A. Bunge Scholarship has been awarded to Miss Nadine Robinson, who will be an entering freshman music major from Pine Planes, New York. The scholarship is given in recognition of superior academic achievement to either a present student or entering freshman who will major in music.

The Barraclough Choir Award has been given to Mary Apetz, a senior elementary education major from Turnersville, New Jersey. This award is made possible through a gift by Dr. and Mrs. Henry Barraclough of Philadelphia, Pa., and is given annually at commencement to that senior who has been a member of the college choir for at least two years and has been selected on the basis of outstanding service to the choir, has displayed Christian leadership in everyday living, and has proven to be a successful student.

The Book Rack
Thousands Of Used Paperback Books
Buy at ½ price or trade 2 for 1 of some types and prices.
506 W. Broadway
Mon. - Sat. 10-6
983-READ

AMLET
BICYCLE SHOP, INC.
OPEN MON.-SAT. 10 A.M. TIL 6 P.M.
SALES • SERVICE • PARTS
AUTHORIZED DEALER
NISHIKI • AZUKI
COLUMBIA
983-7921
EVERYTHING FOR EVERY CYCLIST
2001 OLD KNOXVILLE HWY. MARYVILLE, TN.

Looking for something special?
The Store of Fashions
FOLLOW YOUR HEART TO TIPTON Jewelers
113 E. Broadway Maryville, Tenn. 37801
HOUSE OF DIAMONDS
• ROLEX WATCHES • BULOVA WATCHES • ACCUTRON • GIFTS
"EASY CREDIT TERMS"
C. R. TIPTON, owner
• DIAMONDS REMOUNTED
• ASK ABOUT OUR NEW ..... RING OF DIAMONDS THAT WILL INCREASE THE VISUAL SIZE OF A CENTER DIAMOND 6 TIMES.

Whispering Charlie's
909 Broadway
Across from Charles West Chevy
Saturday Nite
PITCHER $2.25
Enjoy-a-lot For A Little!

Wrapup, cont.

Maryville. Lambert was also chosen as the most valuable player by his teammates.

Another local, Mike Morton, has started the last three seasons for Baird. Morton was an excellent defensive man, with quick hands. The final local was forward Kenny Talbott who also started three seasons for Baird. Talbott followed Lambert in scoring statistics. Junior College transfer Larry Walko rounds out Maryville's seniors. Walko, a smooth player, was good at hitting clutch baskets in tight game situations.

Although the track squad won only one meet, Coach Dick Taylor was pleased with his team results in the TIAC. Coach Taylor, in his first year as track mentor has some excellent results from this year's team. Two school records were broken and another was tied at Nashville in the TIAC. Senior veteran, Mike Osborn, will leave May 27 for Chicago to compete in the Nationals. Osborne has been top man of the track squad for three consecutive years. Another senior, Mark Keahon, who was this year's recipient of the Robert Thrower Award, was an enthusiastic leader and did much to help the team. Scott Cook, a pole vaulter, is another senior on the track squad. Coach Taylor will have his hands full trying to replace the three seniors.

The tennis team was headed by three seniors: Sutton Brown, Mike Webster, and Craig Larsen. They won nine straight matches before losing five to tough competition. The three top-seeded seniors, combined for a 29-12 record during the regular season. They also competed in the Division III Championship in Jackson, Mississippi. Craig Larsen captained the 1976 tennis squad. He, Webster, and Brown have concluded excellent college careers and will be missed by Coach Wyatt next year.

The Scots soccer club finished the season with a 2-3-1 record. This year's team was led by captains Craig Larsen and Dan Bergner, and player coach Dr. Dave Young. Other seniors who provided leadership included Doug Campbell, Andy Weissing, Dan Osborne, David Kemp, Sutton Brown, Scott Cook, Stu Easter, Charles Blair, and David Haimbach.

The Lady Scots basketball team, 13-11, led by Coach Sharon Brown and Captain Terrie Topham, had its first winning season in several years. Topham and Jean Erheardt will not be back next year, but Coach Brown has several starters returning. Sharon Youngs, Libby Lowry, Chris Curran, Betsy Bauer and Kathy Kaplan should play big roles for Coach Brown next year.

Coach Don Elia has a very successful wrestling season with the highlight coming as two wrestlers, sophomore Wayne Dunn and freshman Bob Valentine was named most valuable wrestler and led the team in pins and victories. Coach Elia is expected to field a strong team in the upcoming wrestling campaign.

The M. C. Women's Tennis Squad, 4-2, improved more with each game. Some of Coach Sharon Brown's individuals who sparked this year's team included Betsy Bauer, Lisa Harrawood, Lee Henderson, and Debbie Ackerman. Shada Overton is the only departing senior on the squad.

The Scots fielded a women's volleyball team for the first time ever this year. Senior team leaders were Barbara Kerr, Kathy Kirkhart and Jean Erhardt. Kirkhart was also chosen as most improved player.

Pot, cont.

port decriminalization in that state. California has already drastically reduced pot penalties, but the bar association's proposal goes one step further. It would remove all penalties for cultivation or possession of marijuana.

Minnesota has become the most recent state to decriminalize grass.

World scene

Judge Robert L. Taylor, of Knox County Federal District Court, denied an injunction against the Tellico Dam. The injunction was sponsored by environmentalist groups and was based on an attempt to save the snail darter, an endangered species living in the Little Tennessee River.

President won a significant tactical victory Tuesday by winning primaries in Tennessee, Oregon and Kentucky. It was previously thought that Ronald Reagan would take at least five out of the six contests. He did win in Arkansas, Idaho and Nevada. Ford maintains the lead in the delegate count. Carter won Tennessee, Kentucky and Arkansas with Brown winning in Nevada and Church in Idaho and Oregon.

Twenty new members were elected to the Vatican's Sacred College of Cardinals on Monday. Among them was Joseph Marie Cardinal Trin Nhu-Khue, Archbishop of Hanoi, whose appointment was kept secret for nearly a month. One other Cardinal has been elected and his name has not yet been made public.

The Supreme Court has ruled that no state can prohibit a pharmacy from advertising prescription prices.

The Superintendent of West Point has appointed a review board to look at new cases of cheating. As many as 90 cases are being examined.

Thirty years after the end of World War II Japan has agreed to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

E-Z CURB
8 - 11 MARKET
715 East Broadway

PABST	12-OZ.	$1.69
OLD MILWAUKEE	12-OZ.	$1.69
PEARL LIGHT	12-OZ.	$1.59
MILLER "PONIES"	7-OZ.	$1.93

Hot Dogs
Homemade Sandwiches
Hot Sandwiches
Hot Tamales

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8 - MIDNIGHT

THE FLAVOR TREE
Delicatessen sandwiches—hot or cold
Philadelphia-style Hoagies
Imported and Domestic Cheeses and Meats
Phone 983-7914
Church Avenue Professional Bldg.
404 Church Avenue, Suite #9

We Invite You to Visit Us at Eight Convenient Locations
The Leader
BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE
Downtown
Airport
Alcoa
Broadway
Chapman Hwy.
Farrport
Townsend
Walland Hwy.
Tallest And Closest To The Campus

Alcoa Highway
At John Sevier Rd.
Fish or Flounder Dinner, with Hushpuppies, Clam Chowder, French Fries or Baked Potato....$2.75
Each meal is prepared when ordered

THE MARKET PLACE
102 Broadway
Downtown Maryville
7 Shops Under One Roof
IS ADDING
Beer!
Planned opening early June
Bar will feature Bluegrass
So come in and clap your feet and stomp your hands
Have A Good Summer